RECALLS THE TRADITION OF WILLIAM TELL

Kingston Graduate Wounded at the Front—More Transfers of Canadians to British Regiments

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Feb. 11—Second Lieut. M. W. Brown of the Leicestershire Regiment, whose name appears in the list of wounded to-day, graduated at Kingston in 1912.

An accident recalling the traditional feat of William Tell occurred a few days ago at Lavington, when a number of sick men seeking diversion tried shooting at an object over a man's head. Driver James Dribble was holding his hand to mark the spot for a moment, when Sergt. Keane fired, with the result that Dribble had his fingers shot off.

Several battalions quartered at Tidworth, on the west side of Salisbury Plains, will remain for the purpose of instructing the second contingent.

Contrary to a statement made that no more transfers would be allowed, Gunner Eric Holbach, of the 4th Battery, Second Brigade of Field Artillery, and a former member of the Montreal Gazette's staff, has been gazetted a second lieutenant of the Royal Regiment of Artillery.

A useful preventive against typhoid is the new water cart issued to the Canadian troops, which is constructed with suction pipes, which also filter the water when used to draw it from the river.

The introduction of electricity for power in the South African gold mines has reduced the amount of tuberculosis among the miners.

To stop a skidding automobile a drag has been invetned which can be thrown under the wheels by a handle within reach of the driver.

GERMANS' SUPREME EFFORT TO STEM RUSSIAN TIDE

Both Sides Mass Troops At Strategic Points

The Bombardment of Laboiselle and Soissons

Great Portions of Both Cities Have Been Demolished by the Persistent Shell-fire of the Germans---German Aviators Again Getting Active

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Another bombardment of La Boiselle and Soissons is in progress. A great portion of both cities have been demolished by the persistent shell-fire of the Germans, but they have been unable to make any progress with their infantry. Indications to-day point to an attempt to renew a general offensive at Arras and along the Nieuport line. The German forces there have been increased by a number of fresh battalions sent from Northern Belgium.

The German aviators are again very active in the north and have dropped bombs near Furnes and in the suburbs of Dunkirk.

In the Argonne region the artillery duels continue with both sides throwing bombs especially in the vicinity of Bolante and Bagatelle. In general, over the entire war theatre, there has been a sudden cessation of activity, while both sides mass troops at strategic points.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The lack of infantry actions of importance and severe artillery fighting continue to characterize the operations in France and Flanders, according to the official communique of the French War Office.

The only infantry fighting of any moment has been in Lorraine, where quiet has prevailed for some time until the Germans launched an attack northeast of Manonville, but were easily checked and forced to flee, with the French Hussars in close pursuit.

The French have taken a leaf out of the German book of tactics and with still more success than the enemy has had in this particular kind of fighting, by exploding mine chambers on three successive days near La Boisselle and then using the resulting excavations as trenches from which they easily rolled back German counter-attacks.

The Germans are becoming active in the Lorraine districts. The preliminary skirmishes between outposts are likely to develop into a heated engagement, as the Germans are said to have a large force coming up to the support of their Lorrainian positions.

"What a Slaughter Europe Is to See in the Spring"

Great Events Are Coming---Both Sides Are Preparing for Offensive Movements---It Will Be Most Stupendous Effort in History of World.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, France, Jan. 30, by mail to New York—"What a slaughter Europe is to see in May."

Frederick Palmer, who will accompany the Allied armies when they begin their drive against the Germans made the above remark to-day. He had just talked things over with several of the chiefs of the General Staff and knew what the plans are. His opinion later was echoed in another way by General Foch, who said:

"Great events are coming. Then will come peace, but we will put sentiment aside and make peace on our own terms."

From the neutrals who have been in Germany, it is learned that the same thing is being said there. Both sides are holding their own during the winter months and preparing, preparing, preparing.

The great armies of Europe, therefore, are to meet in the spring, and each will be on the offensive. It will be the most stupendous effort in the history of the world. Battles so gory that those recorded so far in this war will fade into insignificance, are certain. Like a great fireworks show where half of the total supply is retained for a grand finish, so competent onlookers believe this great war is destined soon to go out.

It will be exhaustion and demolition of the last "common-fodder" of participants.

So when May comes, or spring, to use a more elastic term, the mud-stained troopers will come out of their holes in the ground and once more tread on the flower carpeted fields of France, Belgium and Germany, in a terrible bloody encounter that is to go down to history as the worst of all.

Will it be decisive? Experts here say it must be.

ALLIES MASTERS OF BELGIAN DUNES

Germans' Defensive Work Also Proves Useless

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BOULOGNE, Feb. 11—From a very reliable source I am in a position to state that the Allies are now absolute masters of the dunes. Little by little the German offensive movements changed, and after a short defensive they gave way before the allied troops.

With regard to the district about Ostend, the Germans have become greatly alarmed at their position. Large reinforcements arrive daily at Ostend from Bruges.

The health of the German troops is becoming extremely grave. At Mons over 80 per cent. of the garrisons are in the hospital suffering from typhoid fever. At Antwerp 12,000 soldiers are in the hospitals suffering from fever.

65 CANADIANS MET DEATH AT SALISBURY

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Feb. 11.—In reference to reports of heavy losses from disease among the Canadian troops encamped on Salisbury Plains the War Office today issued a statement to the effect that only 65 Canadians have died in this camp, and that the total loss from meningitis has been 24 men out of 40 cases reported.

It had been reported that an entire Canadian battalion was suffering from meningitis, and the inference had been drawn that the epidemic was due to bad camp conditions. According to the War Office, however, the disease was brought with the contingent from Canada.

In reference to the report that 70 per cent. of the Canadian horses are suffering from mud fever, the War Office declares that only 10 per cent. of the Canadian horses are sick and that only a proportion of these had mud fever.

FRENCH DESTROY SIGNAL BALLOON

PARIS, Feb. 11.—A semi-official note says:

"In the region of Cagny one of our aviators has destroyed a signal balloon. A German aeroplane has been brought down near Verdun. The pilot, Lieut. Von Hidelen, had in September thrown bombs on Paris and proclamations inviting Parisians to surrender.

Battle In Carpathians Is Without Precedent

In This War or In Any Other—Fighting is the Fiercest in the World's History—Great Masses of Men Face Awful Fire

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 11—From Petrograd, Berlin and Geneva come reports, official and otherwise, telling of the supreme efforts being made by Germany in the eastern theatre of the war to stem the Russian tide which, divided, is flowing towards Koenigsberg in East Prussia at one end and over the Carpathians into Hungary at the other end.

It is agreed that the fighting at the southern end of the great battle line is the fiercest, not only in the history of this war, but without precedent in any other.

Great masses of men, German and Russian, in turn are charging with the bayonet upon what ordinarily would be impregnable heights of the Carpathians, in the face of withering artillery fire from heavy guns and machine guns, in the face of bombs and the bayonets. They are attaining the positions to hold them only for a little time, when the other side jams forward again and retakes the heights and the decimation is repeated. These scenes are not confined to one pass, to one height, but are enacted at many places simultaneously. The waist-deep snow, the extreme cold and nightfall daunts neither the Russians nor the Austro-Hungarian-German allies.

Change in German Plans.

The change in German plans for a direct drive on Warsaw, made necessary by Russian success in crossing the Bzura, prepared the Russian forces for attacks from a new quarter. It was known that the forces along the Vistula were being transferred on the night of February 6th, and it was expected that Marshal Von Hindenburg would develop a new attack in East Prussia to flank the Russian movement toward Koenigsberg. It only became known in unofficial circles yesterday that 300,000 of the German first line had been shifted to the south to reinforce the Austro-Hungarians, who were seeking to wrest the Carpathian passes from the Russians, thus forestalling a descent into Hungary at this season of the year.

The fiercest fighting now is at Baligrod, which is 30 miles south of Sanok, in Galicia. It is there that the German reinforcements have made their appearance and assumed the initiative, while their officers have taken command. Petrograd advices say that repeated attacks on the part of German troops were finally repulsed by the Russians, an the German dead lay in great numbers in front of the Russian positions. The losses are described as enormous, and unquestionably the fighting was waged with the uttermost ferocity by Germans and Russians alike.

BRITISH USE HAND GRENADES TO CAPTURE GERMAN TRENCH

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The British "eye witness" attached to Field Marshal French's headquarters sends another narrative of events at the front. As issued yesterday by the official press bureau it tells of severe fighting and trench warfare in the region of La Bassee.

"The Germans again attacked south of La Bassee Canal, but not in such strength as on previous occasions," the narrative says. "Fighting began in the early hours of the morning with an assault on a small trench close to the canal. This was successful, two local counter attacks carried out by us failing to regain the ground lost.

"When daylight came, however, our artillery opened such an accurate fire on the enemy that their position became untenable. A stronger counter attack then was delivered and our men, dashing forward, not only drove the Germans from the trench they had captured, but seized another post on the enemy's side of it on an embankment of the canal. There was a succession of German posts on this embankment and we now had established ourselves in one of them.

"Our supports then came up and, passing through our firing line, holding the first of the enemy's posts, dashed on to the second, driving out the garrison at the point of the bayonet. Thence our men were enabled to take in the flank one of the enemy's trenches to the south. Along this they fought their way, throwing hand granades until they had dislodged the Germans on a considerable length. We thus established ourselves firmly in an advantageous position on the canal bank and in adjoining trenches. During this action we captured fourteen prisoners, many wounded and two machine guns. Our losses were not severe, but the enemy suffered heavily, especially from our artillery fire."

Speaking of three "singularly gallant but unsuccessful" attacks on the French south of the Bethune road the "eyewitness" says the Germans reached the French trenches and there literally were almost wiped out, seventy-five bodies being counted in front of the defenders' line. It was reported that not more than two or three of them escaped. He continued:

"The enemy's losses in La Bassee area appear to have been very heavy. The reason for their activity along the canal was that they had suffered severely from an enfilading fire brought to bear upon them by one of our machine guns from a post they attacked. In two days one of their companies had lost thirty men from shell fire alone."

Giving some instances of the force of modern explosives, the "eyewitness" says a mine which the Germans fired under one of the British trenches hurled a piece of rail weighing twenty-five pounds a distance of more than a mile, while the detonation of one of the British lyddite shells threw a German soldier across the railway and canal.

U.S. NOTES TO GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The State Department announced this forenoon that it probably would make public to-day the text or general outlines of this government's notes to Great Britain and Germany.

These notes, forwarded ever night, were withheld through diplomatic courtesy until received in the foreign capitals.

Meantime, however, it became known that the English note sought to prevent a too frequent use of the American flag aboard the British vessels. The German notes purpose was to ascertain what protection Germany will guarantee American commerce in her proposed war zones. It was generally considered the ground work for a real protest should Germany fail to guarantee the desired safety measures.

This Government is understood, too, to have warned Germany that destruction of American commerce or lives, without following the usual course applied to neutral merchant vessels in time of war, would be considered a serious step.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

But Bad Anse Havey only answered in an embarrassing voice, "I reckoned it might be a little jingly, so I had a feller come up from Lexington, and tune it."

She went over and struck a chord, then she came back and laid a hand on his coat-sleeve.

"I'm not going to try to thank you at all—now," she said. "But you go home and come back this evening, and we'll have a little party, just you and I . . . . with music."

"Good-bye," he said. "I reckon ye haven't noticed it—but my rifle's standin' there in your rack."

It was a night of starlight, with just a sickle moon overhead, and the music of the phippoorwills in the air when Anse presented himself again at the school. He knew that he must break off these visits, because while she had been away he had taken due accounting of himself and recognized that the poignant pain of locked lips would drive him beyond control. He could no longer endure "the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin." Now the sight of her set him into a palpitating fever and a burning madness. He would invent some excuse to-night and go away

Then he came to the open door and stood on the threshold, transfixed by the sight which greeted his eyes. His hat dropped to the floor and lay there.

He thought he knew Juanita. Now he suddenly realized that the real Juanita he had never seen before, and as he looked at her he felt infinitely far away from her. He was a very dim, faint star in apogee.

She sat with her back turned and her fingers staying over the keys of the piano—and she was in evening dress! The shaded lamp shone softly on ivory shoulders and a string of pearls glistened at her throat. Around her slim figure, the soft folds of her gown felt like gossamer draperies, and she was flawlessly beautiful.

She had followed a whim that night and "dressed up" to surprise him. She had promised him a party and meant to receive him with as much preparation as she would have made for royalty. But to him it was only a declaration of the difference between them, emphasizing how unattainable she was; how unthinkably remote from his own rough world.

Then as she heard his steps and rose, she was disappointed because in his face instead of pleasure she read only a tumult whose dominant note was distress.

"Don't you like me?" she asked, as she gave him her hand and smiled up at him.

"Like you!" he burst out, then he caught himself with something like a gasp. "Yes," he said dully, "I like you."

For a while she played and sang and then they went out to the porch where she sank down in the barrel-stave hammock which hung there and he sat in a split-bottomed chair by her side.

He sat very moody and silent with his hands resting on his knees, trying to repress what he could not long hope to repress.

She seemed oblivious to his deep abstraction, for she was humming some air—low, almost under her breath.

But at last she sat up and laughed a silvery and subdued, yet a happy little laugh. She stretched her arms up above her head. "It's good to be back, Anse," she said softly. "I've missed you—lots."

He dared not tell her how he had missed her and he did not recognize the new note in her voice—the heart note. There was a strange silence between them and as they sat, so close that each could almost feel the other's breath, their eyes met and held in a locked gaze.

Slowly as though drawn by some occult power over which he held no control, the man bent a little nearer, a little nearer. Slowly the girl's eyes dilated, and then with no word she suddenly gave a low exclamation, half gasp, half appeal, all inarticulate, and both hands went groping out toward him.

With something almost like a cry, Anse Havey was on his knees by the hammock, and both his arms were around her and her head was on his shoulder. Then he was kissing her cheeks and lips, and into his soul was coming a sudden discovery with the softness and coolness of the flesh his lips touched.

It lasted only a moment, then she pushed him back gently and rose, while one bare arm went gropingly across her face, and the other hand went out to the porch post for support.

In a low voice and broken she said, "You must go."

"No," he exclaimed, and took a step toward her. But she retreated a little and shook her head.

"Yes, dear—please,' 'she almost whispered, and the man bowed in acquiescence.

"Good-night," he said gravely, and, picking up his hat, he started across the ridge. But now there were no ghosts in his life, for all the way over that rough trail he was looking up at the stars and incredulously telling them over and over again, "She loves me!"

CHAPTER XXXIV.

In a small room over the post office in Peril an attorney, whose professional success had always been precarious, received those few clients who came to him for consultation. The lawyer's name was Walter Hackley; but he was better known as Clay-heel Hackley, because he never wore socks and his bare ankles were tanned to the hue of river-bank mud. His features were wizened and his eyes shifty. He was a coward, an intriguer by nature and inclination. It was logical enough that when the verdict of the directors' table that Bad Anse Havey was a nuisance filtered down the line, the persons seeking native methods for abating the nuisance should come to Clay-heel Hackley.

One day in August this attorney-at-law, Jim Fletcher, and a tricky youth, who enjoyed the distinction of holding office as a telegraph operator at the Peril Station, caucused together in Hackley's dingy room.

In the death of Bad Anse Havey this trio saw a joint advantage since the abating of such a nuisance would not go unrewarded .

"Gentlemen," said the attorney, his wizened face working nervously, "this business has need to be expeditious. Gentlemen, it requires, in its nature, to be expeditious. A few more failures and we are done for."

"Well, tell us how ye aims ter do hit," growled the telegraph operator.

"Jim Fletcher has the idea," replied the lawyer impressively. "Quite the right idea. How many men can you trust on a job, like this, Jim?"

"As many as ye needs," was the confident response. "A dozen or a score if they're wanted."

"Enough to make it sure, but not too many," urged Hackley. "We should set a day, precisely as the Court would set a day for—er—an execution. The force you send out should simply stay on the job until it's done. If Anse Havey can be gotten alone, so much the better. But above all —" the lawyer paused and spoke with his most forceful emphasis — "don't just wound this man. See that the thing is finally and definitely settled."

"I'll be there myself," Jim Fletcher assured him. "Now, when is this day goin' ter be?"

"This is Monday," reflected the attorney. "There's no advantage in delay. It will take a day or two to get ready. Let the case be docketed, as I might say—for Thursday."

* * *

After the evening when Anse Havey had taken Juanita in his arms he had not come again to the school.

Juanita had not understood this strange absence at such a time, but in a fashion she welcomed it. The occurrences of that night were still unaccountable to her, and she wanted time to think the thing all out and to take an inventory of her life. When she had sworn that there was no sentiment between Anse and herself, she had believed it. While she had been away in the East she had found herself looking about always for a face that she missed, the face of Bad Anse Havey. But she had not yet diagnosed that as love. That night had been one of unaccountable hypnotism and moon-madness. Of that she felt sure and she would tell him that it must all be forgotten.

If it were a real awakening to love it was still too sudden to be trusted and must be tested by time. Yet even now at the thought of his compelling eyes something new and powerful stirred her.

Anse Havey had gone to Lexington. Never again did he mean to hold against himself the accusation of "the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin." He knew that she loved him. He knew that there was something out of which resistance would come, because in her voice after that moment in his arms, there had been a pain and a wistfulness. She had asked him to go and he had gone, feeling that it would have been unkind to question her. But in his mind had been only one question and now that was answered. She loved him.

Any other difficulty that the world held he would sweep aside. When next he went back he would not ask her to marry him, he would announce to her that she was going to marry him.

In Lexington he had bought a ring and at Peril he had gotten a marriage-license. His camp-following days were over. He had one youth and he knew that if his enemies succeeded in their designs, this might at any day be snapped short with sudden death. It did not seem to him that one of its golden hours should be wasted.

As he came out of the Court-house with the invaluable piece of paper in his pocket, two men, seemingly unarmed, rose from the doorway of the store across the street and drifted toward their hitched horses.

Young Milt McBriar had ridden over to Peril that day, with several companions, and Anse Havey went back with them. So it happened that quite accidentally he made that journey under escort. The men who rode a little way in his hear cursed their luck—and waited. And though they lurked in hiding all that afternoon near Anse Havey's house they saw nothing more of their intended victim.

Anse was keenly alive to each day's impending threat and when he had recognized the face of Jim Fletcher, in Peril, as he came through the town he had read mischief in the eyes, and recognized that the menace had drawn closer.

Ends Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly

A Simple, Home-Made Remedy, Inexpensive but Unequaled

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant-tasting home-made cough syrup has caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It gives almost instant relief and will usually overcome the average cough in 24 hours.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any drug store, pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy at a cost of only 54 cents or less. You couldn't buy as much ready-made cough medicine for $2.50. Easily prepared and never spoils. Full directions with Pinex.

The promptness, certainty and ease with which this Pinex Syrup overcomes a bad cough, chest or throat cold is truly remarkable. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes a painful cough in a hurry. With a persistent, loose cough it stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the annoying hacking.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its splendid effect in bronchitis, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

To avoid disappointment in making this, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MRS. MABEN WAS MADE WELL

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Wants Other Suffering Women To Know It.

Murfreesboro, Tenn. — "I have wanted to write to you for a long time to tell you what your wonderful remedies have done for me. I was a sufferer from female weakness and displacement and I would have such tired, worn out feelings, sick headaches and dizzy spells. Doctors did me no good so I tried the Lydia E. Pinkham Remedies—Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. I am now well and strong and can do all my own work. I owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and want other suffering women to know about it."—Mrs. H. E. MABEN, 211 S. Spring, St., Murfreesboro, Tenn.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Why Lose Hope.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Constipation, Indigestion and Horrible Backaches

Searched for a Cure for Years—Advised to Try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Was Cured.

Where there is poison there is pain. This is a provision of Nature to warn you against conditions that are likely to prove serious.

PROF. SMITH.

Constipation of the bowels is undoubtedly the greatest source of disease and suffering. By using one of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at bed-time as often as is necessary to keep the bowels regular you can cure constipation and the consequent indigestion, and remove the cause of backache, rheumatism and other painful diseases.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the greatest law of health. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you to form this habit, add to your years and bring comfort in old age.

Professor A. T. Smith, 1 Mt. Charles street, Montreal, and formerly of Boston, Mass., writes:—"I suffered for many years from bad digestion, constipation and horrible backaches. I have been treated by many doctors, without any results. One day a friend in Boston advised the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. After using two boxes I noticed great improvement, and after the fourth box I was completely cured. My digestion is good. I never feel any pain in the back. My head is clear, and I feel like a young man. I think Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are one of the best medicines on earth."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Australian Wells.

Until the settlers in the rolling downs in western Queensland found out that they could get water by means of artesian wells they were seriously thinking of giving up their farms and ranches on account of many successive years of drought. Now there are several hundred such wells in Queensland, from which the settlers get an unfailing supply of water. The deepest well, which is at Bimerah, has a depth of 5,005 feet. The shallowest well, at Manfred Downs, has a depth of ten feet. The well at Charleville is 1,971 feet deep and produces 2,000,000 gallons a day, the largest flow in the state. The daily flow from all the artesian wells of Queensland is estimated at over half a billion gallons.

There With the Answer.

In a public school one afternoon the teacher was instructing a class in physiology, and finally, in order to test the memory of the youngsters, she closed the book and began to ask questions.

"Willie," said she, addressing a bright faced boy near the head of the class, "can you give me a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?"

"Sure!" was the confident rejoinder. "My uncle Jake gained fifty pounds in less than one year, and his skin never cracked."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Buffalo's Hump.

The hump of the buffalo is not a mass of fat, as some people suppose, but is formed by neural spines in length fully double those of domestic cattle, and by the huge muscles which lie alongside and fill up the angle between these neural spines and the ribs.

Hair Dressing.

Wise Girl.

"Is she going to marry the young man who saved her from drowning?"

"I think so."

"But is the sure that he is able to support her in the style to which she has been accustomed?"

"Yes, she looked him up in Bradstreet's before she fell in."—Houston Post.

Had Heart Trouble FOR YEARS.

Weighed 87 Lbs. Now Weighs 128 Lbs.

Miss Beatrice Loughead, Staples, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had heart trouble for quite a few years. I doctored for it, and altogether my bill amounted to $600, and still no cure. One day when very sick I was lying on a couch close to where some almanacs were hanging. I took one down, and was reading about what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured, and thought I would try them. I got six boxes to start with; have only taken three boxes and I never felt so well in my life as I do now. I only weighed 87 pounds when I started to take them, and now I weigh 128 pounds. I hope all poor sufferers will be benefitted by them as I have been."

Wherever there is any weakness of the heart, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will strengthen it and build up a strong healthy system.

SCHOOL REPORT FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY

How Pupils at Keene School Stand—Envoy Brown's Interesting and Helpful Meeting

KEENE, Feb. 10. — Messrs. John Wedlock and William Brown spent Friday last in Peterborough.

We are pleased to report that Mrs. William Carter, who has been convalescing at Bradesford since an operation three weeks ago, was able to return to her home on Friday last.

Mr. Harry Cruikshanks, who spent a few days the past week at the home of Mr. William Campbell, has returned to his home at Toronto.

Envoy Brown of Oshawa, closed a successful series of meetings in the village on Monday night. On the closing night he gave his life's story, "From the Prize Ring to the Pulpit," which was much appreciated by a large audience. Mr. Brown, by his pleasing and sincere manner, made many friends during his stay here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Robertson were given a surprise party on Tuesday night by about 50 of their friends. Cards and dancing were indulged in until a late hour. A splendid time was reported by those present.

Dr. W. J. Harrison was in Peterborough Friday last on business.

Mrs. F. A. Easson was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss E. Bathgate, of Peterborough, was in the village on Tuesday.

We regret to report little Miss Minnie Edwards ill with the measels.

Miss Josephine Kenneally returned home on Saturday from Hastings, where she spent a few days the past week.

Four rinks of the Keene Curlers took part in the bonspiel at Peterborough the past week. They were in [illegible] to finish and deserve great credit for staying up against such big odds.

The rinks attending the bonspiel were as follows:

H. Cruikshanks	R. Nelson
Wm. Campbell, skip.	G. Howson, skip.
J. Drummond	N. Dorris
J. McCartney	M. Kenneally
F. Easson	Wm. Wedlock
R. McCamus, skip.	J. J. Moore, skip.

We are pleased to state that Messrs. William and Alfred Fletcher, Privates at Kingston, who have been quite ill, are getting along nicely.

Mrs. Andrew Rennie and little son, Roland, returned home on Thursday from Toronto, where Mrs. Rennie visited her sister, Mrs. Joseph Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Burley were in Peterborough on Saturday.

A game of hockey will be played on Friday night between Keene Seniors and Cold Springs, on Friday night of this week.

Following is the report for the month of Jandary, in order of merit:

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Beautify Your Hair! Make it Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

BEST LAXATIVE FOR BOWELS—"CASCARETS"

When Constipated, headachy, bilious, breath bad, stomach sour

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep —never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

AEROPLANES AND WIRELESS

Wireless telegraphy for communicating between an aeroplane in flight and its headquarters is now adopted for urgent reports. A light apparatus weighing 80 pounds is carried on the machine for this purpose, and the necessary electric current is provided by a small petrol motor which develops 3½ horsepower. The aerial wire by means of which messages are sent from the aeroplane is unwound from a reel situated beneath the landing chassis. It trails for a length of sixty to a hundred yards, and a weight is attached to the end of the copper cable, so that it hangs vertically below the machine when in flight. In the event of the aeroplane having to make a forced landing a winch is provided so that the cable may be wound up out of the way. If there is not time to do this before the machine touches the earth, the wire is severed by means of an aerial cutter fitted to the side of the winch, and it falls clear of the aeroplane and does not catch in trees or entangle the propeller. The keyboard by means of which messages are sent from an aeroplane in flight is generally strapped on the knee of the aviator, so that he can manipulate it easily with his free hand.

It is very difficult to send a message to an aeroplane when in mid-air, not that the wireless waves fail to reach the machine, but that the noise of the engine is so terrific that it makes the faint signals inaudible. Aviators flying many hundreds of feet in the air find it a comparatively simple matter, however, to keep up communication with observers on earth by means of wireless, and in this way messages have been sent over a distance of one hundred miles.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use feed the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

U. S. Senate Deadlocked.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — After the insurgent Democrats and Republicans had made a vain effort to break the continuous session of the Senate on the Government ship purchase bill at 6 o'clock last evening, tired legislators settled down for another all-night debate in the historic struggle.

When the end would come no one would predict. Administration leaders declared the session might last for a week without interruption.

Muzzled Press Protests.

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 10.—That matters in Austria-Hungary are much worse than is allowed to appear on the surface is proved by the fact that over 150 commercial and political organizations have just sent in a protest to the Austrian Minister of the Interior against the press not being permitted to discuss the very serious economical situation of the dual monarchy.

To Stop Sunday Concerts.

MONTREAL, Feb. 10.—It is stated that the Lords' Day Alliance intends to take action in an effort to put an end to Sunday amusements in Montreal. His Majesty's Theatre, where a series of Sunday musicales is being put on, has been singled out for attack and on the result of the proceedings may hang the fate of all Sunday entertainments in Montreal.

French Bring Down Aviator.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—At a point between the Oise and the Aisne French artillerymen have been successful in bringing down a German aeroplane. The incident is stated, occurred within the German lines.

This announcement was given out officially in Paris yesterday afternoon.

OMEMEE SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTION

Interesting Address by Well Known Sunday School Workers—Omemee Items of Interest

OMEMEE, Feb. 10.—The annual Sabbath School Convention of the Township of Emily and Omemee Association, which was held in the Methodist Church on Thursday, Feb. 4th, was a decided success. The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock with the president, Mr. F. G. Sandy, in the chair. Devotional exercises by Rev. E. R. James followed by a few remarks from the president. The congregation then sang a rousing hymn, after which reports of the different schools were given, most of which proved very beneficial. An address was then given on "Our Seven-Day Opportunity" by Mr. Preston G. Orwig, of Toronto, which delighted every one present. This was followed by music, after which the Rev. Mr. McInnes gave a short interesting talk on "Decision Day in the Sabbath School." This address caused much discussion, as also did the "Home Department," taken by Mr. William Harrison, of Bethel. The afternoon session was brought to a close by the singing of a hymn.

The evening session opened with music, followed by devotional exercises by Rev. Mr. McInnes.

ADDRESS BY MRS. LEWIS.

Mrs. Margaret Lewis, of Peterborough, gave a very interesting and helpful talk on "Primary Work in Sabbath Schools," having with her many illustrations and helps for primary teachers. Misses Vera and Mary Lowes then rendered a beautiful children's piece, which was very suitable for the occasion.

Rev. Mr. Down gave an address on "Sabbath School Ideals," followed by an address by Rev. Mr. James on "Why Every Teacher Should be a Man of Prayer."

Mr. Preston G. Orwig, of Toronto, then pleased the audience with a short talk on "Our Teen Age Teacher," which brought the programme to a close, only too soon.

The Lakarrow Quartette rendered two selections during the evening, which were very much appreciated.

Mr. James Chambers, of Peterborough, was in town on business during the past week.

Mrs. Walker, of Janetville, is the guest of Mrs. Bradburn in town.

Mr. Sam. Mills was a visitor to Lindsay on Saturday.

Miss Maude Crown, of Bradboro, was the guest of her friend, Miss Nora Nichols, last week.

Mrs. D. H. Cornell and son, Mr. Roy Cornell, are the guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. M. C. Cornell, of Beeton.

Miss Carrie Stinson, of Peterborough, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stinson, over the week-end.

Mr. J. Taylor, general agent for the Dominion Carriage Co., made a business trip to town last week.

Mr. Jackson, of Mount Horeb, was a visitor in town during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williamson and family returned home last week from visiting at the former's home at Sharbot Lake.

Miss Maye Franks is the guest of her friend, Miss Nellie Ford.

Mr. Charles Richards, of Millbrook, was a visitor to town during the past week.

Miss Ruby Cunningham, of Peterborough, was the guest of her friend, Miss Olla Earle, over the week-end.

Pte. Shepard, of Valcartier, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Brooks, during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lamb are the guests of Peterborough friends.

Miss Lee, of Toronto, is visiting her sister, Miss Ada Lee.

Straw For Hats.

The greater part of the straw employed for making summer hats comes from Italy. To obtain suitable straw for this purpose the wheat is sown as thickly as possible in order that the growth of the plant may be impoverished as well as to produce a thin stalk.

The Italian wheat blooms at the beginning of June and is pulled up by the roots when the grain is half developed. Should it be allowed to remain in the ground a longer time the straw would become too brittle for its purpose.

Uprooted straws to the number of about five dozen, the size of the compass of the two hands, are firmly tied together in little sheaves and stowed away in barns. After that the straw is again spread out to catch the heavy summer dews and to bleach in the sun. When the product has been sufficiently bleached it is put into small bundles and classified.

The last step is to cut it close above the first joint from the top, when it is again tied up in small bundles containing sixty stalks each and is then ready for the market.—Chicago Herald.

WHO IS "EYE-WITNESS"?

Official Despatches Sent From Continent by Col. Swinton

Not a few extraordinary stories have gone the rounds as to the identity of "Eye-Witness," the one correspondent in the fighting line whose graphic descriptions of the great war are only equalled in interest by the despatches of Sir John French.

The truth is that this chronicler of military matters—whose articles are passed so readily by the censor—is Colonel Ernest Dunlop Swinton, D.S.O. of the Royal Engineers, who holds the high sounding appointment of Assistant Secretary and Librarian of the Imperial Committee of Defence. Colonel Swinton belongs to a military family, his brother having been killed in one of the Indian frontier campaigns. Another brother is in the Indian Medical Service, while Colonel Swinton himself first entered the army as a cadet at Woolwich Military Academy, afterwards joining the Engineers at Chatham.

During the South African War Colonel Swinton did some valuable work with the Engineers, and incidentally found material for a number of military books as thrilling and entertaining as they are valuable for the information they contain. Under the pseudonym of "Ole Luk-Oie," the secret of which had been kept until quite recently, Colonel Swinton wrote stories and sketches which are regarded on both sides of the Atlantic as masterpieces of military writing. One of the finest stories he ever wrote—"Full Back"—which tells of deeds in the air, was written some considerable time before the war broke out, and, in view of the magnificent work of the army aviators in France, the prophetic instinct displayed by the writer in regard to the conditions of the present war is truly remarkable.

A TITLED AVIATOR

Lord Carberry Has Had Some Thrilling Aerial Adventures

Lord Carberry, the titled war aviator, took up flying just for the sport of the pastime, and proved his pluck by "looping the loop" in his monoplane. Shortly before the war a little aeroplane dashed down from the clouds into Hendon aerodrome, collided with a fence and turned upside down. The onlookers rushed to the spot, and as they neared the machine they heard a plaintive voice asking to be let out. They lifted the machine and a dishevelled figure crept out. It was Lord Carberry, who had flown from Paris and turned his machine over on top of him by landing at too great a speed. He was quite unhurt, and his main concern was whether he would be arrested for violating the air rules by flying over England without notifying the authorities.

If she learns this lesson, the sacrifice will not have been in vain.
—Spencer, in Omaha World-Herald

PROVED THE PILLAGE

Imperial Officers Looted and Rioted in French Chateaux

The French committee visiting the districts where atrocities were reported to have been committed by the Germans inspected the chateau of Baroness de Raye at Sermaize, in the Department of the Marne, which Crown Prince William is accused of having pillaged. The committee found unmistakable signs that the chateau had been pillaged. Glass cases, in which Russian jewelry and gold medals were displayed had been smashed. The room of the Baroness, the committee reports, "must have been occupied by a person of the highest rank, for on the door was inscribed in pencil the word 'K. E. Hoheit,' meaning 'Imperial and Royal Highness.'

"No one," continued the committee's report, "was able to inform us of the identity of this 'Imperial and Royal Highness.' A general who lodged with Municipal Councillor Houllier told the latter that the chateau had sheltered the Duke of Brunswick and his staff of the Tenth Corps." The Duke of Brunswick, formerly Prince Ernst of Cumberland, is the son-in-law of the Kaiser, having married the Princess Victoria Louise.

The committee also reported that the Chateau Beaumont, near Montmirial, belonging to the Duke de Rouchefoucauld, was pillaged and left in a filthy condition. Desks, safes and jewelry boxes were smashed open and the doors were inscribed in pencil with the names of Major von Dibobar nd Graf von Waldersee.

FLANDERS, December, 1914.—The present war has abolished all that which until now ent to the resistance, to the retaliation, and the abdurance of men a kind of grandiose splendor—has thrust to one side the fine array of troops that one sees in the ancient battle pictures; the variegated lines, the groups of staff officers going to the height of a plateau, the movements of the armies, the galloping of the cavaliers clothed in brilliant costumes, the beatingiof the drums—all that which created the ardor, excitement and courtesy of the combat. Warfare was gallant because it was made between adversaries who were in view of each other. What would such men as Napoleon, Murat, Lasalle, Wellington and many others think about this clandestine [illegible]

Formerly a campaign consisted of one or two great combats of half a day, sometimes a whole day; then a joyous entry into the towns conquered. Good fortune and intrigue held in these wars as much a place as did the encounters of the enemy.

"It is as impossible to recount a battle," affirmed Wellington, "as to describe a ball."

But without wishing in the least to diminish the valor of the ancients, we must recognise that one of their battles would be merely a pleasure excursion for our soldiers of to-day. If Napoleon exacted from his "Grognards" (Growlers) such discipline of iron, such impersonality, so contrary to the temperament of our race, and which the modern tactics force; if he had attempted what is indispensable at the present time—to transform their natural impetuosity into abnegation—the formidable grenadiers would have found the task too hard and would have said without dissimulation that it did not please them.

To-day a hole in the ground, ordained silence, immobility under the rain that falls and the shrapnel that descends, under the sounds of the cannon that roar; battles of forty days' length, without a single instant free from the deafening noise of the artillery, more or less near. On a front of four hundred miles in extension the soldiers of the Allies arrange things, and the French soldier accommodates himself with as much cheerfulness, gayety and good humor as our ancestors acquitted themselves in their light and rapid adventures of former times.

Let us judge of it.

* * *

The trenches are long narrow ditches, on the front border of which is arranged an embankment or parapet formed by the earth from the ditch. "The trench for the firers (riflemen), seated or lying" has a depth of a little more than a yard and a parapet of at least half a yard. The trench "for kneeling" has a depth of nearly a yard. If there is the time to make a trench for "standers" it must be a yard and a half deep. That is not all. If one can, one covers the trench with a slight shelter: doors, planks and pieces of wood cover the ground, providing that one has time to place them.

These rudimentary shelters afford a means of protection, the importance of which one does not at first imagine. In fact, the shooter, seated more or less comfortably at the bottom of his trench, laughs at the rifle shots that brush the ground in their strident flight above his head. But he must take care not to show his head higher than the shelter; not even an arm must be seen. As for the shell, it makes much noise, but does very little damage to the soldier in his trench. A shell of forty kilos (88 pounds) produces a tunnel shaped hole of six yards at the point where it falls, but only a lucky stroke can reach a trench. The combatant who is not exactly at the point where it burst runs no other danger than that of being covered with earth or mud.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the most difficult "trump card" is for the artillery to reach this thin outline scarcely visible on the ground. The soldiers go so far as to even paint the shelters the color of the earth around, and, when time affords, to make some false trenches that constitute an excellent ruse of war. The organization of the battle field comprises also an ensemble of defence. Trees cut down and piled up and stockades are excellent use if the surrounding land is woody, where trees can be procured, and when they are lacking tangled barbed wire constitutes an accessory defence. The effect of the artillery is null: on this enclosure of network; it cannot be passed through except by the monelite or the shears. Also we have inaugurated the war of strongholds in the open country. Everybody invisible or nearly so, the least movement possible. It is observed. Word of order. To hold the front that one occupies. It is manifestly the same on each side. The service is also regulated: three days in the trenches of the first line, three days in the reserve trenches, three days of repose.

Trenches! We have made them over a distance of hundreds of kilometres (a kilometre is a fraction more than three-fifths of a mile), and our lines from the front resemble molehills that are cut out in galleries. One can live there, and some men remain for two or three months in these moist ditches. The courage necessary to resist day and night the inclemency and the assaults continues. One sleeps little, one eats badly. How can such a life be described with enough power to make comprehensible the incalculable grandeur of its meaning?

Night, cold. Toward the morning a thick white frost falls on us. The sun rises. British, French and German begin their daily routine. From behind a crest a German captive balloon slowly rises. Opposite it a French balloon appears little by little. There! All is in place; the scenery changes not until the evening. But to pass days and weeks adorning these holes in the earth becomes monotonous. We busy ourselves in organizing to render the trenches more comfortable; each day brings an improvement. There have been some attempts to heat them. A brick and a foot warmer are tried by turns, for one must not dream of having anything with smoke, for that would be a alien for the enemy.

These modern trenches advance irregularly, in zig-zag fashion. They are carrefours (where two or more trenches cross), some places (squares), impasses (blind alleys). This makes altogether an improvised town. In order that the soldier may refind his trench they have baptised each one. There is the "rue Poiscaré," "King street," "rue de Russie," "rue de Bruxelles," "Place de la Liberté." Next, each "refuge" receives a name graven on a brick. There is the "Palace Hotel," "Savoy Hotel," "Royal Hotel," &c., with the name of the proprietor. At the edge of the wood opening on the enemy's lines is an enticing notice—Entrance to the Ciacmatograph.

Taking the left of the "Passage Albert I.," we arrive at the bathing establishment, —— Regiment, Third Company. "Salle de douches," says a label. Some dressing gowns and some towels hang on bayonets fixed in the partitions of earth; these also serve as hat and coat rails. The water falls from a hose. It was the captain who had this idea. A shell had hollowed out a large hole at this place. A large flagstone was placed at the bottom and a roof put on the top. It is a reservoir fed by rain water. A tap is put at the end of a hose to conduct the water; this hangs above a tub, and in turn one takes a glacial douche. With vigorous rubbing a healthy reaction is quickly produced. It must not be thought that this is either luxury or amusement; this instalment is very precious to all the regiment. And the regiment is clean. This cannot be said of those opposite, for our prisoners captured are in sad plight.

Certain trenches are only thirty-five yards from the enemy, and from each burrow talking can be heard. French and Germans look each other in the eyes, without hatred, but there remains the inevitable necessity of killing each other piously. And the war takes a new character. What a pity that there are not archers in the armies! An arrow had virtue in its parabola, penetrating more profoundly in the trenches, closer than a rifle shot can be sent. Soon we will come up with each other, knife between the teeth. Yet one does not feel the sentiment of a great combat—the struggle is too personal, too isolated.

Yes, we who have kept the enemy at bay for several weeks have the impression of doing nothing. We are reduced to writing the "Journal of the Trenches." These one reads the pleasantry of the war. "Yesterday evening Messrs. the Germans offered us an exhibition of fireworks from nine to ten o'clock," or "Two foreign nobles wearing officers' caps paid a visit to the west trench; they were received with a volley and honors due to their rank." Our men provide beet roots for the artists of the trenches. The latter carve a caricature of the head of a German, generally a commandant in chief of one of their army corps. Recently I sent you some sketches of them. Some of the beets are hollowed out and filled with bulletins of French and Russian victories and are projected toward the lines of the Germans. Or they are sent over with madrigals together with hand grenades. One went "How many are you in there?"

For a distraction shots are exchanged. At so short a distance they cause frightful wounds. This evening an officer who knows all the finesse of the German language made a proclamation to the neighbors. "Soldiers of Germany, I owe it to the truth to inform you of some sad news. Your officers know it but they have hidden it from you"—and then the entire official communique was read to them. He terminated by wishing them "Good evening" and promising them "more" the following day. At this moment a fusillade broke out. "There, that is how we are thanked," laughingly exclaimed the French officer.

One night in certain German trenches was received the order to manifest an overflowing gayety. One evening we heard them yelling the "Wacht am Rhein," accompanied by the growling accents of an accordion. The French began at once to sing "Allons enfants de la Patrie," punctuated by a fusillade that closed the fête.

We are so close to one another that the cannon of neither side can fire on us for fear of striking their own. The proximity of the adverse trenches is such that it is dangerous to remain in observation. Some have placed a mirror above and behind, so that by its help what passes in front can be seen while remaining in the trench.

* * *

In each hole there is an inventor who has triumphant relief opposite—they had killed all or put them to flight. Then furiously broke forth our fusillade, instantly followed by a rush with bayonets, and in ten minutes the German trench was ours.

Another night, profiting by the fog, to get a knowledge of what was in front, our men found at a little distance a trench where were the tools and weapons of its occupants. They possessed themselves of the weapons of the Germans, filled up the trench and returned with a smile on their lips, quite gay at the joke they had played on the Germans.

Between the enemy's trenches and ours rose a birch tree. The Germans coveted this birch. One of them during two nights went to this tree and, despite our fusillading, patiently tried to cut it down. At length the birch was on the ground.

even a cattle pen, where grass several cows. Lately men celebrated the birth of a calf, and each day at dawn and twilight some men leave their hole to milk the cows. "Never should I have believed that there were such good milkmaids in all Flanders," said a soldier to me, admiringly. And then I asked why it was that the Germans did not fire on the cows. He replied, scandalised:—"Fire on our cows! They had better not. In the first place, it would not be long before we repaid them. They have their cows, too, and we let them alone." Thus politeness is rendered in the midst of slaying.

Our soldiers and the Bavarian soldiers procure water from the same well situated in the neighborhood. At first they went separately, but by degrees they accustomed themselves to go at the same time, exchanging a few words, giving packets of tobacco & other objects in exchange for those of a different color or nature. Sometimes they even take their coffee in common. However, the hostilities continue. For instance, the Germans are out upon destroying a work of defence every evening that we have patiently built at all day, according to orders give. On our side we no less systematically pull down a redoubt that the Germans were untiringly reconstructing.

One day, at an hour when by acit accord the troops made a truce, two German officers came out from their trenches without weapons and their hands raised. They advanced toward our trenches, from where we in our turn came out. The officers explained that it was absurd to demolish every day the two pieces of work that both sides had been given orders to construct. He offered to abstain from touching ours if we on our part would leave theirs alone.

The agreement was concluded, some newspapers were exchanged, then at the moment of leaving us one of them announced that their period of sojourn at the front was drawing to an end, that he did not know what troops would replace them, but perhaps they would be Prussians. "Be on your guard with them," he said. "When we know we will notify you by hanging some pieces of blue paper from the wires that defend our trenches." So it goes without saying that the Bavarians, at least, do not love the Prussians.

ter responded with precision and riddled their bottles and tins. A little later our corporal pulled the ropes; from the Germans another volley, nearer than the first. Silence; then again the dance of bottles. We could hear the nervous orders; evidently the enemy did not comprehend this sudden invulnerability of the wire cutters. During half an hour they attacked each jingling with an intense fusillade. Cleverly the corporal diminished the effects and decreased gradually into silence. One guessed the

The man wanted to drag away his booty as far as his entrenchment; this time a ball struck him. Two of his comrades boldly tried to replace him; they arrived at the tree and dragged it some yards. They were killed. There came still two others, and after these two more. This fighting for a birch tree lasted several hours. The tree [illegible] length taken away. It had [illegible] Germans twenty-three men.

The Comforters

"What's the Use of Worrying?"

By EDWARD BOLTWOOD
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

In the kitchen beneath Jernigan's bedroom the clock whirred and began to sound the hour. At the first jangling stroke Jernigan lifted his head and became aware, with a quick throb of gratitude, that he had been asleep. The question was, for how long? There was no daylight at the curtained window, but he was sure that it must be nearly sunrise, and in alert anxiety he counted the strokes of the clock.

Nine, ten, eleven—and silence. Jernigan groaned wearily. He had been in bed only thirty minutes, after all.

Through the doorway of the adjoining room, where his wife slept with the two children, he blinked at the white, dim hammock of Lizzie's back and listened to her placid breathing. Noiselessly he drew on some clothes, found a pair of slippers and glided swiftly down the dark stairway.

With a hand on the knob of the front door he turned and peered into his narrow parlor. The blue glare from an arc lamp in the street faintly illuminated the parlor table, revealing the desk book on it and his private account book and the sheets of paper covered with penciled figures. He hastily secreted them before he went out of doors.

* * * * * * *

Jernigan was the bookkeeper for Mr. Ellice at the Rydale mill, as his father had been before him. He was a skilled and honest accountant. The tormenting figures had nothing to do with his employer's affairs. They represented his own endeavor to deal with the terrible fact that during the past two years he had diminished by nearly $1,000 the modest capital which he had inherited from his parents.

He looked morosely down the deserted street toward the huge mill. Its windows glowed: its looms chanted their endless, ceaseless hymn of prosperity. On a hill near by was the stately, old fashioned Ellice mansion, with its tall columns of white stone. Mr. Ellice was evidently entertaining an evening party there. The lamps of motorcars shed their golden beams over the lawn, and Jernigan heard a vagrant strain of dance music.

His vague plan was to stroll as far as the office of the mill before turning back.

Behind the building he halted in bewilderment. A light gleamed from a rear window. Somebody was in the office!

Now, it was impossible for Jernigan to believe that any one had rightful business there by night without his knowledge, so he crept close to the window. He saw a man standing beside the office table. On the table were books of account and sheets of paper covered with penciled figures. The man bent over them, then paced the room, then returned doggedly to the table, then paced the room again. Jernigan caught his breath, for the man was John Ellice.

The bookkeeper stared, as if in a theater, at a counterfeit presentment of himself pacing his own parlor. Ellice's unbuttoned coat showed a loose pajama jacket; he wore slippers, and his hair was ruffled like that of one driven from his bed. His face, as he bent at the table under the light, was drawn and white.

Jernigan interpreted the picture swiftly. Indeed, there was only a single possible meaning for him, and this was a meaning which swept everything else out of his simple soul as a gigantic and appalling torrent sweeps a humble valley. The sight of an Ellice of Rydale in the torment of financial worry was to a Jernigan what the sight of a collapse of the great pyramid would have been to an ancient Egyptian. Other affairs of life for Jernigan were totally obliterated by awe stricken consternation and a sympathy almost reverent.

Ellice mapped off the electric lamp, pushed the papers into a drawer of the table and locked it. He decided that his daughter's dance would be over, and he wondered if he could sleep. Then he smiled grimly, knowing well enough that it was not dance music which had kept him awake. His neck contracted sharply, as if something was perched on his shoulder.

His thoughts whirled back to the papers in the table drawer. Had he forgotten to jot down the loan from the Sammon Trust? Of course he had! He began to compute the interest for the coming term. And what, in heaven's name, would be his next month's balance with the Atlas people? True, he might tide over this year, but— He threw open the outer door with a gesture of hopeless desperation and descended the steps.

"Who's that? Not Jernigan?"

"Yes, sir," faltered Jernigan. "If—if you can spare me a minute?"

"Why, certainly!"

Ellice managed to pull himself together. He glanced at his clerk's upturned coat collar and tremulous chin.

"You're not ill, Albert?"

"No, sir; just out for a little air."

"Quite right," approved Ellice. "Best thing in the world after a hard day's work. We're all right busy at Rydale now, eh? By Jove, it's fine to see the old concern more prosperous than ever! Well, what can I do for you?"

Jernigan was not deceived by his employer's labored nonchalance. The vision at the window had been too overpowering to allow of that. He cleared his throat diffidently.

"It's this way, Mr. Ellice. I have money, sir, to invest. Not much, of course, not over $12,000 or $15,000, but it's all my capital, and I—I'm worried about it, sir."

"Worried, Albert? You worried?"

Ellice darted a quick, suspicious glance at Jernigan's face, but the bookkeeper was gazing solemnly at the huge, clattering factory. The trustful look in his clerk's eye reminded Ellice of a confident child. For the moment Jernigan resembled a devotee in the presence of a benevolent idol.

"Your father, I understand, made safe investments," resumed Ellice. "Why not stick to them?"

"They don't suit me, sir," said the bookkeeper. "I was wondering if Rydale mill could use the money for awhile. I could step it over to you tomorrow, and then I wouldn't have to worry any more."

Although conscious of an insane desire to laugh, Ellice was nevertheless curiously relieved. In his present mood, eager for any morsel of solace, he could convince himself that Jernigan knew almost as much about the financial condition of the Rydale mill as he did. And here was the bookkeeper desirous of placing all his money at the disposal of the plant. Ellice bit his lip. Was it possible that his own anxiety was ill founded, imaginary?

"Then I wouldn't have to worry any more," repeated Jernigan.

"No," Ellice murmured, "no, I suppose you wouldn't. Got plenty of faith in the old concern, have you, Albert?"

"Faith to burn, sir, as the boys say. Why, think of all the faith in the old mill there is in this town, Mr. Ellice! Think of the hundreds of men and women and children that trust in the mill, the same as they do that the sun shines! Gather all that trust in a lump, and a fellow would have a regular rock of comfort to stand on, wouldn't he?"

Ellice started queerly.

"I didn't know you were such a mystic," he rejoined in a changed voice.

"Excuse me, sir. I have notions, but that's only common sense. And about that money of mine?"

Without answering Ellice turned away thoughtfully, and the two strolled in silence to the wooden bridge that spanned the mill stream. They halted on the rail, looking over the river. An hour ago Ellice had leaned on the same bridge rail and stared for a long time into the beckoning depths of that restful river. At the evil remembrance of that black hour he shuddered penitently and touched Jernigan's elbow beside him.

"Let your money stay where it is," he advised. "I can't believe that you have a right to worry, Albert. You've got the trust of your family to serve you, just as I've got the trust of my mill hands and the village. We ought to stand on that trust and fight for it, both of us, oughtn't we? That's enough to keep us busy. Worrying's no good!"

"What bothers me," ventured Jernigan, "are the years to come—the future."

Ellice poised a silver from the rail and tossed it lightly on the surface of the shadowy current.

"That's the way the future takes us, I guess," said he. "It's up to us to keep afloat, that's all, and to hold the best course we can. The future? It's a big river, Jernigan, a big, big river. There's no map. Worrying won't help us to travel it."

"No, sir," muttered Jernigan.

For another minute they watched the stream as it glided steadily away into the mysterious darkness. Then Ellice glanced across the bridge at the great mill.

To the fancy of Ellice, with Jernigan's words ringing in his mind, the mill became a thing of life, a personal entity, radiant of confidence and trust. He felt, with a joyous thrill of regained manliness, that he would be worthy of its friendship and of the friendship of his people. He straightened his shoulders happily, as if they had been released from a painful burden.

"Good night," he said, "and thank you!"

"Thank me, sir? Why?"

"For a match," improvised Ellice, producing cigars from his pocket. "Will you smoke?"

"I think not." Jernigan declined. "It's late. Good night, sir!"

* * * * * * *

Although the street was quiet and deserted, while Jernigan hastened homeward under the elms it seemed to him alive with the mighty heart of all humanity, beating in unison with his own, vexed by the same solicitudes and conquering the same fears. As he passed each lowly cottage he thought of the humble men and women therein, who faced the future with no different bravery from that required of kings and queens. If John Ellice could subdue anxiety over large affairs with such self reliant courage surely Jernigan could likewise surmount his infinitely smaller cares.

Unlatching his gate, he whistled a tune.

"Al Jernigan, where in the world"—

Lizzie paused to shield the flame of the candle as her husband opened the door.

"Why, I'd forgot to do an errand at the office. I meant not to disturb you, dear."

"But I didn't know what might happen, and I've worried like anything," she explained, smiling.

Jernigan yawned luxuriously.

"Never lend yourself trouble about what hasn't happened yet, Lizzie," said he. "What's the use of worrying?"

Publicity With Tendon.

Lieutenant de Lapel of the French army has endeared himself to his command by a most unusual exhibition of what they are pleased to term "old fashioned French gallantry."

Accompanied by a few men, Lieut. de Lapel succeeded in surrounding a German detachment occupying the station at Mesieres. The lieutenant on searching the premises came upon the German officer hiding behind a stack of coal. Both men leveled their guns and for a moment faced each other.

"After you," finally said the Frenchman courteously. The German fired and missed, and Lieut. de Lapel killed his man.

The French soldiers cheered their leader, and he has been praised everywhere for his action.

Men and Angels.

The judge had listened wearily for hours while many and eminent counsel had wrangled on a single matter of law. One member of counsel for the defence remarked that the speculation of the learned counsel for the prosecution was as idle as the medieval inquiry into the question of how many angels could stand on the point of a needle.

"Well, gentlemen," remarked the judge, taking notice, "so far as the court is aware, that matter was never settled by a decision. We do not know how many angels can stand on a point of a needle, but the court holds that these proceedings here infallibly establish the fact that a great many spites can find a halting place on a point of law." After that the case moved on to a finish.

Old Curfew Laws.

Curfew memories are revived by these new official orders for "lights out" in London. There are places where the new decree will seem less drastic, because the old law of early Norman times is still observed, so far, at least, as the ringing of the curfew bell. The little Surrey village of Chertsey, for instance, still re-echoes to the ringing of curfew at sundown from Sept. 29 to March 25. Londoners, though few of them seem to know it, may hear curfew tolled every night at nine o'clock in Lincoln's Inn, and Gresham's bells still ring out the curfew as they did centuries ago.

An amusement tax is among the Tasmanian Government's financial proposals in connection with the war, the revenue from which is to be devoted to the upkeep of the hospitals.

Have You That TICKLING IN THE THROAT SENSATION?

This trouble is most distressing, and comes from a cold which has settled in the throat. How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat? The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

What you want to cure the cold is Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This valuable preparation is composed of the most soothing and healing ingredients herbs and barks with which is combined the virtues of the world famous Norway pine tree.

Thousands of testimonials prove that what we claim is true. All we ask you is that when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup see that you get "Dr. Wood's," and not some no-account substitute.

Mr. Charles S. Chase, Shelburne, N.S., writes: "Coming to Nova Scotia from the State of Maine, I caught a severe cold which persisted for many weeks, and was accompanied by a bad cough and a constant throat irritation. After trying many remedies, a friend handed me part of a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It helped me so much I bought another bottle which completely cured the cough and allayed the irritation. It is certainly the best cough medicine I have ever tried."

The price of "Dr. Wood's" is 25c and 50c.

B. C. Mills Asked to Tender For 500,000,000 Feet of Lumber

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 11.—British Columbia mills are now tendering on one of the largest lumber contracts ever opened for world-wide competition. Through the British Government the Chamber of Deputies of France is asking for a supply of 500,000,000 feet of lumber to be used in the construction of 100,000 two-roomed houses. These small homes are to house the section of France's population which has lost its all through the ravages of war.

It would not be surprising if one of the British Columbia mills secured the contract. This would be one of the greatest booms the lumber-cutting plants of this province had ever received. Owing to the fact that the French Government will want the lumber as early as possible, it will most likely mean that the firm which secures the contract will have to let sub-contracts.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The guimpe that went with this dress was made of white China silk, buttoned in the front, with a little turnover collar and small cuffs. In the contrasty style, that is with a long waist, was a little small child's dress of wool mixtures, having collar, cuffs, belt and shield of white flannel. The blouse crossed in surplice fashion and the skirt was plaited. While navy color is too light to be very serviceable, this design is adapted to the darker shades, like blue, brown or red, or the dark mixtures. The contrasting color should be lighter; it need not necessarily be white. The pattern for this little dress, which is illustrated here, is No. 6,071, and can be obtained in sizes 4, 6 and 8 years.

One may well ask if children's dresses are no longer to button in the back. The front closing seems to be more prominent for the time being, perhaps because Russian tunic effects are so popular, but there are many little frocks that fasten in the back notwithstanding. Party dresses are sure to do so and they have sashes that end in flopping bows, quite as formerly.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

FAIR DIRECTORS EXPECT ONE THOUSAND MEMBERS AND BEGIN CAMPAIGN

Industrial Exhibition is a Success But the Present May Be a Critical Year—Present Mr. Garbutt With Big, Comfortable Chair—"Are We Downhearted! Certainly Not" is Directors' Slogan.

The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition have decided upon a membership campaign. Intimation of a reduced Government grant is the immediate impetus to a proposal that has been standing for the past year or two with everything ready but to throw in the clutch. The local Fair is an established success. The favourable opinions of the rural and city communities reflects that fact. Sceptical sentiment, a few years back, is now openly encouraging. Farmers, particularly, who were inclined to hold aloof, are apparently eager to throw in the high speed now that the rough spots in the road have been left behind. The Directors have felt this changed attitude and they are going more than half way to round up as many members as possible. Mr. John Gillespie has hopes of enrolling two thousand. Mr. E. Denne declares that with a membership of one thousand the Peterborough Fair will be second to none of its class in Ontario.

The whole question was brought up at the Directors' regular meeting in Hooper's Palm Parlours on Wednesday evening. Mr. John Cox presented a report of the annual meeting of the Agricultural Societies held recently in Toronto, in which he said Hon. J. S. Duff held out small hope of the Government grant being more than half of last year's.

The local directors had already begun a membership campaign, but the prospect of a curtailed grant instead of being accepted as an obstacle for this year's Fair, had the opposite effect of mustering greater enthusiasm. Directors who have been canvassing, reported that the farmers were decidedly eager to become members. Mr. Roberts of Otonabee, for instance, gathered in twenty-five without any difficulty. Mr. Denne stated that his experience was that farmers felt they should have been approached before the present, and he found them quite willing to join the Society. With the fee only a dollar, and the membership ticket admitting the holder to the grounds, the ticket actually cost only fifty cents if the farmer attended two days, and but twenty-five cents if he attended on all three days. Besides, the farmers are realising the value to them of a good Exhibition, and are ready to lend their support. Hence the Directors will comb their respective neighbourhoods for members, at the same time soliciting the aid of others. With $1,000 received from members the Directors would worry but little over the proposed decrease in the Government's annual aid.

Presentation to President.

The Directors staged a little surprise for Mr. J. H. Garbutt. Mr. Denne, acting as Chairman for the moment, called upon Mr. R. M. Glover to read the following address:

J. H. Garbutt, Esq., President of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Dear Sir,—We, your fellow officials, have arranged this meeting in the interests of discharging a debt of gratitude which we feel we owe to you, and which becomes due on the occasion of your entering upon the fourth year of your occupancy of the office of President.

You have held this position for three years, and because we did not believe in the principle of "three times and out" you have been again placed in the office. And not for this reason alone. Your past services have been such that it was felt the interests of the Association and the interests it represents, would be as well served in the year to come as they have been in the past three years. During these three fruitful years you have given ungrudgingly of your time and efforts at no doubt some sacrifice of your personal interests, and with the most satisfactory results. Three highly successful exhibitions under your Presidency, with three substantial surpluses, have been, we feel, very largely due to your painstaking work and intelligent interest. The Society has achieved a stronger position than ever before, the public interest has been largely enlisted and a gratifying improvement made in both the character and quantity of exhibits.

We regret that even in its prosperous position, the finances of the Association will not permit the offering of a salary that would be commensurate with the work you have done, and the sacrifices you have necessarily had to make. In default of that we feel that a frank and hearty recognition of your services will be to a man of your public spirit and interest in the Association and what it stands for—a grateful action. There are things that money cannot buy, and there are services that money alone will not adequately reward.

We, therefore, take advantage of this occasion to express our high appreciation and our earnest thanks for the excellent services you have rendered, with the certainty that they express the sentiment of the members of the Association and of the public at large.

As you are entering upon the fourth year of occupancy of the President's chair and, as we feel that in view of the arduous duties of the position, it may be coming to be a little hard, we desire to provide you an easier seat, and, therefore, ask your acceptance of this easy chair; and without disparaging the maker's skill, we wish to supplement it with the upholstery of our good wishes, with the hope that you may enjoy its use for many years of a happy life and continued career of usefulness and public service, such as has marked the past years of your life.

Easy Chair Presented.

Mr. Cox, on behalf of the directorate, presented Mr. Garbutt with a fumed oak Morris chair, deeply upholstered in leather, and the assembly sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," as the President sank back in its comfortable depths.

MR. J. H. GARBBUTT

President of the Directorate of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition —The directors presented him with a big, restful chair last night in appreciation of his efforts as president during the past three successful years.

Mr. Garbutt's Reply.

Mr. Garbutt replied that he found it difficult to express his appreciation of the presentation. He did not feel worthy of the handsome gift. "While I have had the interests of the Industrial Exhibition at heart," he said, "the success attained was not due to my part of the work. Looking back five years, we had two good years when the late Mr. Leary was President. While the past three years have been successful, last year was not quite up to the mark. It has been a satisfaction to me to work with the directors, whose object is the advancement of agriculture and the Industrial Exhibition. I do not take any credit to myself for any success that has been made, but I accept this gift in the spirit with which it is offered, and while sitting in it will always remember my fellow Directors."

Mr. Garbutt spoke of the present movement termed "Patriotism and Production," and stated that it was the farmers' duty to stand behind the men in the trenches by supplying an increased supply of foodstuffs for the Empire's needs. They have taken up the idea seriously and possibly an increase of twenty-five per cent of fall wheat has been sowed. Mr. Garbutt expressed the hope that the 1915 exhibition would be a success, and felt that with continued enthusiasm and with the new blood in the Board of Directors it would be successful.

A telegram was read from Mr. G. A. Gillespie, from Brockville, regretting his absence and conveying his pleasure in the Board's presentation.

Committees Appointed.

Moved by Mr. F. Wise, seconded by Mr. Glover, that the Executive be dispensed with.—Carried.

It was pointed out that the whole Board is an Executive.

The old Finance Committee was also discarded as the result of new arrangements.

The following Committees were appointed:

Light Horses. — Messrs. Denne, Cruikshanks, A. B. Mann and Cox.

Heavy Horses.—Messrs. Storey, Ball Millburn and Roberts.

Cattle, Beef and Dairy—Messrs. C. E. Moore, T. O. Gibbs, Tom Brown, Bert. Duffus, J. Gillespie, Jos. O'Reilly.

Sheep and Swine—Messrs. Brown, Ball and A. B. Mann.

Poultry — Messrs. Jas. Baptie and Duffus.

Agriculture and Horticulture — Messrs. Kitney, Wise and S. Oke.

Dairy—Messrs. Geo. A. Gillespie and Hooper.

Plants and Cut Flowers — Messrs. F. Wise and F. Whitney.

Fine Arts—Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. E. B. Clegg, Miss Bennett and J. J. Turner.

Amusements, Printing and Advertising—R. M. Glover and T. H. Hooper.

Subscriptions—Messrs. Cruikshanks, Storey, Cox, Glover, Turner, Denne, and Garbutt.

Concessions—Messrs. Glover, Brown, and Turner.

Grounds—Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, Denne, Glover and Garbutt.

Reception Committee — Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., W. H. Bradburn, Turner, Garbutt J. H. Burnham, M.P., Judge Huycke and Mayor Buller.

The first named is chairman of each committee.

Mr. Garbutt reported on his attendance at the Eastern Ontario Association of Fairs which it was decided to become affiliated.

Mr. Cox reviewed some of the important points brought out at the Provincial Association. Upon application to the Department the number of directors may be increased by six to twenty-one.

By all means have three lady directors, reported Mr. Cox.

"Did you tell them we are up-to-date?" Mr. Wise asked.

"Get a district representative on your board."

"We have G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., so we count on that point," some one remarked.

"Keep the roadsters clearly separated from the carriage class of horses."

"Have some prizes for boys 16 and under handling colts, etc. If you get the boys entering, you will have the old folks with them."

Mr. Denne said that there are too few colts halter broke and that on exhibition they should be shown on a halter.

Mr. Cruikshanks remarked that all good horses are sold on halter and they should be halter broke.

The directors feel that ther is an opening for the awakening of the interest of youths.

"List horses the same as cattle," was another of Mr. Cox' notes.

For instance the prize list has been:

Brood mare and foal.
Foal of 1915.
Filly or gelding, 1-year-old.
Filly or gelding, 2-year-old.

Mr. Cox says the meeting urged the following:

Filly or gelding, one year old, under two.
Filly or gelding, 2-year-old, or under 3.

The advantages of this will appeal to exhibitors.

Mr. Cox brought home a bag of ideas, and they will be dealt with from time to time.

Among those present last night were: J. Gillespie, T. Brown, J. Cox, R. Denne, T. H. Hooper, R. M. Glover, F. Wise, F. J. A. Hall, Smith Millburn, Frank Kitney, T. Cruikshanks, Ormie Bull and Mr. Roberts.

On behalf of the Directors—

G. A. Gillespie,
First Vice-President.
F. J. A. Hall,
Secretary-Treasurer.

The City of Dates and Poetry.

Basra, which has been so gallantly captured by an Indian expeditionary force, is now noted chiefly for its dates, which are among the best in the world, but the city has seen better days. Founded in 636 A.D. by Caliph Omar II., it was, until the twelfth century, the home of Arabian poetry and learning. Its decay dates from the Turkish conquest, but as late as the middle of the eighteenth century the city had 150,000 inhabitants. In 1854 the population had fallen to 5,000, but, thanks chiefly to English commerce and enterprise, the number has now risen again to 24,000.

He Was a Kicker.

"Is dat a kickin' mule?" asked Erastus Pinkley.

"Does you want to buy him?" inquired Uncle Rasbury cautiously.

"Nah."

"Den whatis de use o' comin' erroun' here axin' useless questions an' temptin' me to spoil my reputation foh truth an' modesty?"

HERE IS A SHORT SHARP STATEMENT

It Shows That Dodd's Kidney Pills are no Faith Cure.

Patrice Cote had Kidney Disease—He Sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills Just to Try Them—They Made Him Well.

Petite Vallee, Gaspe Co., Que., Feb. 10.—(Special.)—Patrice Cote, well known here, makes the following statement:

"For five months I suffered from Kidney Disease. I sent for two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills to try them. They made me well."

Mr. Cote's experience is similar to that of scores of others in their neighbourhood. They had Kidney Disease, they tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and they found health. They have proved for themselves that no matter how far advanced the Kidney Disease is, the cure is the same—Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no faith cure; neither are they any cure-all. Thousands of sufferers have tried them who had little faith in them. They found the cure just the same.

Dodd's Kidney Pills simply cure the Kidneys. To be sure you hear of them curing Rheumatism, Dropsy, Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Gravel and other diseases, but that is because these are all diseases of the Kidneys or caused by sick Kidneys. The natural way to cure them is to cure the Kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys.

Infantry Training

The Matter in This Column is from the Official Manual 1914 and is Published According to Orders of the Home Guard

8. In action, in high wind, and at all times when indistinctly heard, the battalion commander should indicate his orders by signal, where possible; such signals should be repeated by as many officers and non-commissioned officers as may be necessary to ensure the transmission of the order.

9. In battalion movements the orders given by the battalion commander are printed in CAPITALS; those by company commanders in black type. The cautions may be applied to either the right or the left flank.

10. Where battalion and commands are given for formations to, or from, one flank only, the same rule applies when forming to, or from the other flank, which will also be practised.

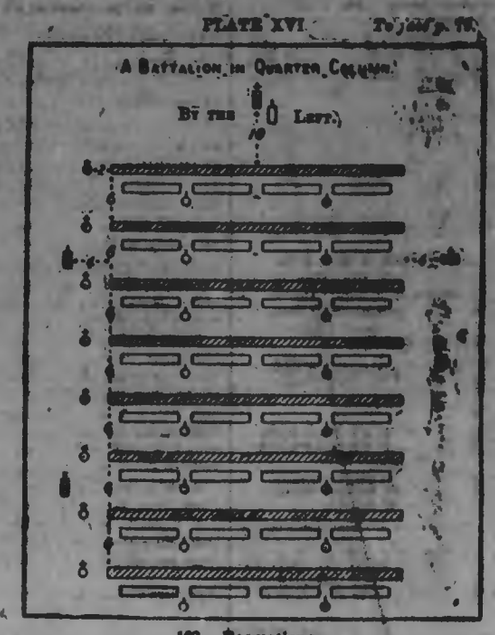
Unless otherwise ordered a battalion will assemble and move by the left in column and quarter column.

11. Fire action should be practised as directed in Sec. 94, 95.

12. The principles laid down for company drill apply equally to battalion drill.

13. Companies will be renumbered by their commanders when a change of formation alters their relative positions.

PLATE XVI. To face p. 75.



142. Formations.

1. The following formations will be employed in battalion drill:
   - i. Quarter column. (Pl. XVI.)
   - ii. Column. (Pl. XV.)
   - iii. Line (or Lines) of company columns.
   - iv. Company column or column of squads.
   - v. Column of fours.

2. Movements in the following formations will also be practised, especially with a view to the development of fire in close order against an illarmed enemy:—
   - i. Line. (Pl. XVII.)
   - ii. Rallies. (See Secs. 109-113.)

143. A Battalion in Quarter Column.

1. The companies of a battalion after having been inspected on their private parades, will form up in quarter column as shown in Plate XVI. If the quarter column is ordered to be by the right, the company commanders, senior majors, and third field officer if mounted will occupy corresponding positions on that flank, while the serjeant-major will be on the left flank.

2. On the battalion commander's order TELL OFF BY COMPANIES, the companies will be numbered from the leading company. When the companies are numbered, the battalion commander will divide the battalion thus:—

No. 1 to No. — RIGHT HALF-BATTALION.
No. — to No. — LEFT HALF-BATTALION.

If the number of companies is uneven, the right half-battalion will be strongest by one company than the left.

3. The machine guns, drums and band, mules, wagons and stretcher bearers will usually be on the outer flank of the battalion, as when in column, see Plate XV (cyclist sections, if present, will be in rear of machine guns).

144. Movements in column.

1. Advancing in quarter column. The battalion will advance quick—march.

The whole will step off together.

The squad commander on the directing flank of the leading company (i.e. on the left, unless otherwise ordered), selecting points to march on.

2. Inclining. RIGHT—INCLINE. LEFT—INCLINE.

The whole will incline in the required direction, the squad commander of the leading company on the flank to which the incline is made selecting points to march on.

The battalion will resume its original direction in quarter column.

3. Moving to a flank in fours. FORM FOURS—RIGHT (or LEFT)—WHEEL. RIGHT (or LEFT)—TURN.

The whole will move in fours in the required direction.

Any company, as desired, may be ordered to direct, the remainder being led by the leading squad commanders on the flank nearer the company of direction.

The battalion will resume its original direction in quarter column.

4. Wheeling. CHANGE DIRECTION RIGHT (or LEFT)—WHEEL.

On the command RIGHT—WHEEL, the battalion, excepting the leading company, will make a partial turn to the outer flank, the leading company will glance towards the inner flank on which they will wheel, the outer flank will direct, but when companies are of unequal strength they will retain the same relative positions they had before the wheel. Each man will move round on the circumference of a circle of which the inner squad commander of the leading company is the centre. The mounted officer on the outer flank in regulating the pace must watch the squad commander of the outer flank of the rear company, who will continue to march at a full pace throughout the wheel, and on whose movement the march of every man in the quarter column should be made to depend. When the battalion has circled round to the required angle, the command FORWARD will be given. This may be preceded by MARK—TIME should all the companies not be in their correct positions.

Note. A quarter column moving in fours will wheel as above, the leading section of fours of each company wheeling in the same manner as the leading company above, the sections of fours in rear making a partial turn outwards and following round after the leading fours, the leading squad commanders changing to the inner flank if not there already.

145. Movements in column.

1. Advancing in column from quarter column. ADVANCE IN COLUMN.

I. On the command ADVANCE IN COLUMN, the leading company will be moved off by its commander; the other companies will follow in succession at company distance by order of their commanders, and will conform to the movements of the leading company.

The position of the company officers and section commanders will be as when in company, the company commanders taking position in front of their companies on the command ADVANCE IN COLUMN.

Note. A battalion in column will move either in fours or by the diagonal march, on the same principles and on the same words of command as when in quarter column.

2. Closing to quarter column. AT FOUR PACE—QUARTER—COLUMN.

The leading company will be at once halted by its commander. The remaining companies will continue to advance, and will be halted successively by their commanders on reaching their position in quarter column, company commanders and others resuming their places as for quarter column.

Note. This movement may be made on the march, the word of command being QUARTER COLUMN, REMAINDER DOUBLE—MARCH, when the leading company will continue in quick time.

3. Changing direction. CHANGE DIRECTION—RIGHT.

The commander of the leading company will give the command Right-Form, and, when the company is formed in the new direction, Forward.

Each company, on reaching the point on which the leading company has changed direction, will be formed similarly in succession, the word Forward being given as soon as each is formed in the new direction.

FIERCE ARTILLERY DUELS IN THE WEST

GERMANS SAID TO HAVE EVACUATED LODZ

AEROPLANES BOMBARDING LINES ON BOTH SIDES

Entire Artillery Strength of North Forces is Being Utilized ---Villages and Towns Behind the Lines Are Suffering Greatly

SPECIAL CABLE:

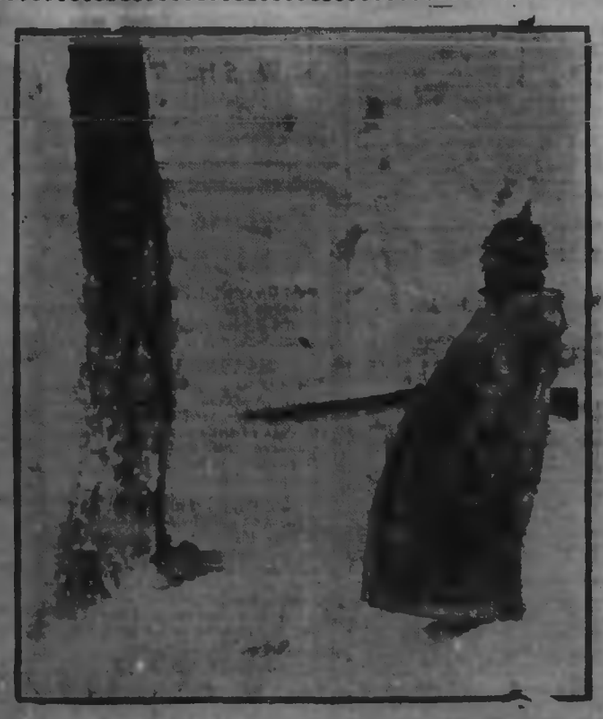
PARIS, February 11th.—(3 p.m. Official.)—Bombardments of positions from aeroplanes were reported to-day by both sides all along the battle line in the north. This modern method of warfare has been resorted to to aid the artillery duels, which continue without interruption. All along the entire front from the sea to Champaigne region both sides are to-day reported to be utilizing their entire artillery strength, and many of the villages and towns behind the actual fighting line are suffering greatly.

The Germans attempted an attack in force in the Mesnilles-Hurins region, but were repulsed with heavy losses, their advance guard being smothered by the fire of the French guns. In the Champaigne region the fighting which began yesterday in the Marie Theresa region, is increasing in intensity, and additional troops are being brought into action by both sides. In the Argonne region the allies are maintaining their positions, while in the Vosges active operations are hindered by a fog.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Discussing the question whether under the terms and interpretation of the Monroe doctrine, the United States would consider herself warranted in interfering should Germany, Austria or Turkey send an offensive expedition against Canada, William Howard Taft, ex-president of the United States, at a special luncheon of the Canadian Club today, said that as Canada was furnishing substantial aid to Great Britain and the allies, Mr. Taft did not consider that under the Monroe doctrine the United States would object to Germany's taking counter measures and carrying the war into Canada. What could be done consistently was to insist that when the war was over—if Germany were successful—that she could not take over the territory of Canada and overthrow Canada's government and establish her own there, or take any oppressive measures that would have a similar effect.

AMSTERDAM, February 11.—Advices from Berlin say that the Kaiser has summoned the leading financiers of Germany for a secret conference to plan the floating of a new German war loan of one and a quarter billions. A large part of this proposed loan is to be taken up by the Krupps.

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Feb. 11.—Military guards were stationed at the Canadian end of the International Bridge over the Niagara river to-day to prevent any attempt to wreck the structure, and the railway officials were notified to-day that hereafter bridge passes will not be respected, and even employees of the company must be identified.



The Long Watch—A German Officer doing sentry duty in the deep snow in Russian Poland.

Miss Carrie Davies—English domestic, who on the evening of February 8th, shot and killed her employer, Mr. C. A. Massey, at the entrance to his home. Her reasons for the shooting have not yet been found.

LOCAL DEPUTATION WILL WAIT UPON MR. J. T. ARUNDEL

To-morrow in Respect to the Passenger Service—Will Ask for a Fast Train and Readjustment of Time Table

MEMORIAL PREPARED

A local deputation will leave for Toronto to-morrow to wait upon Mr. J. T. Arundel, General Superintendent of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. Arundel will be presented with a memorial setting forth the reasons why Peterborough should receive a better passenger service over the company's lines. The memorial claims that the new lakeshore line is provided with a much better service than the Peterborough line despite the fact that the territory through which the Peterborough line passes, possesses a prepondering population. It has been pointed out that what this city needs is a through time-table, which requirement includes a fast train both east and west so as to facilitate connections at the continuing points.

Ten Clauses.

Among those who will make up the deputation is Mr. T. F. Matthews, Mr. Basil Hall, President of the Board of Trade, Mr. W. C. Ackerman, of the Ackerman Harness Company, also a representative form the Retail Merchants' Association.

The memorial which was endorsed at a public meeting held some time ago, embodies ten clauses. Among other things it asks for a fast train, both ways, a standard sleeper to Montreal, parlour and cafe cars on all through day car expresses and parlour cars on local expresses to Toronto, also a readjustment of the time table.

PROPOSE LICENSE FOR GUN OWNERS

Owing to Needless Slaughter of Useful Birds in Ontario

A great many complaints have been received by the Game and Fisheries Branch of the Public Works Department against the killing of insectivorous birds. Many people, particularly foreigners, seem to have little or no regard for their value. The Department is urged to take some steps to stop this heedless slaughter. It is suggested that a fee be charged everyone who wishes to keep a gun.

At the present time the Government, owing to the general financial stringency, is finding that many of its sources of revenue will not be as productive as in other years and it is possible that a fee of one dollar will be charged everyone having a gun in Ontario. This will not include revolvers, but will include guns of such small calibre as the "22" gun. The revenue from such a tax would be considerable, probably between $100,000 and $200,000, and it would also put a stop to the promiscuous purchase of guns and the resultant idle shooting of many birds of value to the Province. The subject will probably be brought before the Game and Fisheries Committee at the next session of the Legislature.

GOVERNMENT REFUSES TO PAY GARBAGE TAX

On Local Government Property —City Council Will Be Asked to Deal With the Matter

LEGAL OPINION

Considerable interest is evinced in the decision that has been handed down by His Honour Judge Huycke in respect to the garbage collection tax. As the matter now stands churches, as well as schools and factories, will have to pay the tax whether or not they avail themselves of the service. Some of the churches have been withholding payment pending the decision of the Division Court regarding the action of George Street Methodist Church. Now that the civic by-law has been confirmed it remains for these institutions to comply with the Act. Some of the churches contend that as they have not availed themselves of the service they are not entitled to pay the tax, which amounts to one mill on the dollar. Few of the churches have any garbage to collect, and what ashes might accumulate can be removed once or twice a year at a cost of five or ten dollars, dependent upon the size of the church. It is altogether likely that many of the churches will now have the garbage collectors call each week in accordance with the by-law or, if permitted, whenever the ashes accumulate to such an extent as to warrant their removal.

GOVERNMENT PROPERTY.

According to the legal opinion of one well-known local lawyer, government property is liable for garbage tax under conditions similar to those which apply to churches, schools and factories. So far, the government has refused to pay this tax so that it will devolve upon the City Council to decide what action will be taken to collect it. The tax in question is levied on the Post Office, Customs House and other public buildings. According to the Provincial Act governing the collection of garbage in municipalities, government property is not referred to as being in any way exempt. The Act is a new one, coming into force last year for the first time.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., who represented the Trustee Board of George Street Methodist Church, in their recent action against the City, informed the Examiner that he has not decided what further course he will pursue in connection with the matter. As the case stands, the church will have to pay to the City the sum of eighty-four dollars as levied for garbage collection.

Has Entered An Appeal

Hamilton Man Will Appeal Against Decision of Local Court

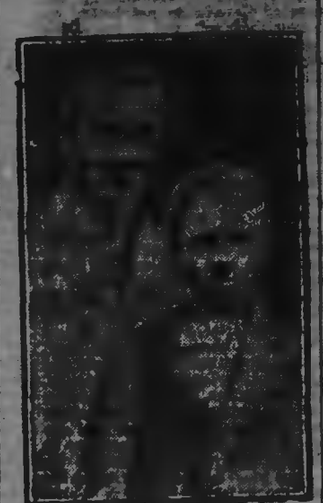
Frederick Stares of Hamilton, has entered an appeal against the decision awarding Samuel Currie of Peterborough the sum of fifty dollars for alleged slander and false arrest. Twenty-five dollars was allowed on each count. The presiding judge reduced the amount to twenty-five dollars for slander upon the grounds that Currie had previously secured damages for false arrest and could not be awarded damages twice on the same count.

Lewis, Arrell and Schwenger of Hamilton are appearing for Stares and Mr. G. N. Gordon of this city for Currie.

On the 19th of January last, Currie was attending a funeral at the Little Lake Cemetery, and Frank Stares, it is alleged, arrested him and took him to the police station, claiming that Currie had stolen his overcoat.

POTATOES WILL NOT EXCEED 60c. A BUSHEL

Householders are somewhat assured that the price of potatoes will not rise much higher than sixty cents. Last Saturday three prices were quoted. Some asked 60c., others, 65c., and a few wanted 70c. The efforts to boost the market were not very successful, and there is not much prospect of conditions forming that would create a bull market. There is no export trade reported and the long haul to the west makes shipments of questionable success. Hence it is probable that the home supply will have to be consumed here and with a good crop last year there is a more than ample supply on hand.



Grandson of the Founder of Massey-Harris Co., Murdered. — The late Mr. C. A. Massey, a member of a prominent Canadian family, who was shot at the entrance to his home in Toronto on the evening of February 8th by an English domestic named Carrie Davies, who was employed by him. His son, Albert, also appears in the picture.

WILL PARALIZE ALL COMMERCE OF GERMANY

Premier Asquith Announces That the British Government is Considering Drastic Measures Along This Line

SEMI-WEEKLY REPORTS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 11. —In the House of Commons this afternoon Premier Asquith announced that the British Government was considering drastic measures to paralize all German commerce. He stated that the recent "flagrant breaches of rules of international warfare" made such steps necessary. While it was not disclosed what action is contemplated at this time, it is understood that the suggested "submarine blockade" by Germany will be followed by an actual blockade of all of the German coast by the British fleet.

Fully sixty per cent. of the British wounded have recovered, Premier Asquith announced.

The allies see no likelihood of any opening which would lead towards peace at the present time. This was emphasized in the House of Commons this afternoon by Sir Edward Grey, in reply to a question propounded by J. W. Wetts, Labourite member.

The Premier state that in order to relieve anxiety, the Government has decided to publish twice weekly from now on reports from Field Marshall French, showing what is transpiring on the continental battle line.

Mother Inquires For Absent Son

E. E. Cuddon Has Not Been Heard From For Four Years—Came to Peterborough

Chief of Police Thompson is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. E. Cuddon, 31 Ridley Road, Dalston, England, asking if he could locate her son, Earnest Edward Cuddon, from whom she has not heard for four years.

E. E. Cuddon is described as having fair, curley hair. He was in the Post Office in London, England, until March, 1911, when he came to Peterborough, Canada. His mother has not heard from him since.

Anyone who might assist in locating this young man would be doing a kindness to the mother by communicating with Chief of Police Thompson.

THE RUSSIANS AGAIN IN POSSESSION OF LODZ

Despatches From Petrograd Say That the Germans Have Been Forced to Evacuate Polish City—Headquarters of German Army Removed to Kalesiz.

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, England, February 11.—Despatches from Petrograd say that the Germans have been forced to evacuate Lodz, and that it has again been re-occupied by the Russians. It is stated that the headquarters of the German army have been removed to Kalisz. The British official press bureau has no confirmation of the report. Lodz was captured by the Germans on December 6th in connection with the general drive which Field Marshall Von Hindenburg made towards Warsaw.

NEW YORK, February 11.—William G. Shepherd, the correspondent of the United Press, sends by mail arriving to-day a long letter vividly describing the conditions at Dunkirk, France, which is the base for the British expeditionary force. He says:

"Last evening before the secret service men got me I had a chance to look over this much bombarded town. In the past three weeks three sets of funerals have passed through its streets, Dunkirk burying its dead victims of German aeroplanes. Only this morning seven caskets bearing the corpses of children who were killed, when a flock of 24 German flying machines passed over Dunkirk, were carried through the streets of Dunkirk in hearses. Count Von Lichtervelde, of the Belgian war office, who saw the funeral, told me it was the saddest thing he had seen in all the war."

NEW YORK, February 11.—The Kasrsruhe, the German destroyer of the allies' commerce, is back in the German naval base at Wilhelmshaven, according to a letter received here from a sailor on board her.

HAY SCARCE AT $25 A TON

A Few Loads Coming In From Surrounding Country But the Supply is Said to Be Very Limited—Affects Horse Owners.

Hay at $25 a ton is the local market price this week. A small quantity has sold at $24, but the higher price has been general. It is learned that the farmers' barns are practically empty of hay and many of them are forced to buy supplies from City dealers. Firms such as the Fuel and Cartage Co., using a large number of horses, are said to be forced to pay the $25 price, too. One Otonabee farmer sold a load that went over a ton yesterday, for $31. Mr. J. Green recalled the fact this morning that not so many years ago he sold hay at $6 a ton. The farmers are now feeling one of the worst results of last summer's drought, for they have to feed their stock, and very few of them secured even the semblance of a hay crop last year.

W.C.T.U. MEETING.

A special meeting of the W.C.T.U. will be held at the home of Mrs. J. S. Knapman, 604 George street, tomorrow afternoon at 2.30. There will be special prayer service in honour of Miss Francis Willard. Everyone is cordially invited.

A Thaw Is In Prospect

May Be Rain Before Night—Pitchholes Are Numerous

A thaw is in prospect. Probabilities call for fresh south-westerly winds, cloudy and mild to-day and to-morrow. The temperature will in all likelihood go higher than the freezing point. The weather man says the weather has been fair and cold in Ontario and Quebec, while moderate temperatures have prevailed in the other provinces.

This afternoon there was some indication of rain, which to some extent would be appreciated. It would have the effect of reducing the snow level and thereby lessen the flood that must result when the final break-up occurs. The roads in the country would likely suffer, but it might have the effect of reducing the number of pitchholes that are said to be numerous.

Despite an increase in the use of electricity, 25 factories in the United States are kept busy making incandescent gas mantles.

JAGOW'S PARADOX.

Herr von Jagow's statement in regard to the war zones does not lessen the mystery of the German position. There is, he declares, no blockade—talk of such a thing was a total misapprehension. Yet the war zone completely surrounds Britain, and neutral shipping is "urgently warned to avoid the indicated war zone until further notice." That is to say, neutral shipping is warned to keep away from England, yet there is no blockade! The secretary of state is as enigmatic as the other German spokesmen who have tried to explain the paradox.—Springfield Republican.

IN THE SPRING

Spring is coming, the season when all the world takes on new life—a reward that compensates for the winter of our discontent. But on the blasted fields of battle in Europe, the spring will witness a new life of war's horrors. Fighting between massed millions, to whose multitudinous slaughter, the awful carnage of the past will be as pin-pricks, will bring a new horror to the world. Yet, out of the gore drenched-soil, fattened with the blood of uncounted thousands of the best manhood of the agonising belligerents, will spring the fair flower of victory—not the mere trumpery triumph of embattled legions, but the triumph of civilization, the triumph of freedom, the triumph of right, the triumph of the cause of God, in vindication of the rights of man, and the benefits of humanity for all time. The price will be great; but the prize will be greater.

GETTING MONEY'S WORTH.

A Government return shows that the Dominion Government spent last year in advertising in Toronto daily newspapers the following sums—Mail and Empire, $9,561.00; News, $7,657.00; World, $4,732.00; Telegram, $3,639.00; Star, $2.68. That is, out of $27,451.28 expended by the Government in advertising among five newspapers, the newespaper, the Star which, by virtue of circulation and reaching of readers, would give as much, if not more, value as any of the four other papers, got only two dollars and sixty-eight cents worth of advertising; about a fourteen-thousandth part of what was spent for advertising in party organs. This may be all right from a party point of view and according to the practice of partisan distribution of advertising, practiced by all parties in Canada; but it will be all wrong from a patriotic point of view in relation to the "Patriotism and Production" campaign of advertising proposed and entered upon by the Government. Partisanship demands the application of the doctrine—"to the victors belong the spoils": but the motto dictated by patriotism is—"the greatest good to the greatest number"—reach the people with the advertising appeals of the Government. So far as known the Government in its "Patriotism and Production" campaign, is making a new and wholesome departure, by sending its advertisements to papers of both parties. The object is to reach all the people, the people of both parties, with this advertising. This can't be done if the advertising is placed only in the newspapers of one side; for the people of Ontario are pretty evenly divided in political creed. Apart from the intended good of the "Patriotism and Production" campaign; there will be much good done if we are taught to get the greatest possible value for money spent on Government advertising, instead of only geting half value by adhering too closely to patronage lists. A business man pays no attention to the party colour of a newspaper; he looks for the paper with the largest circulation—for the best value for his money. Why should any government do otherwise? Because it doesn't do so in advertising, and follows the same practice in a host of other things constitute one of the reasons why we are badly governed.

BEGINNING OF THE END.

It is no wonder that Germany in the spirit of desperation that has come upon her through her fine procession of failures—diplomatic, military and naval—should try to make use of the sting in the tail of her interned and inert navy, the submarine. Germany has failed in the diplomatic game; she has vainly tried to permeate the people of the United States with the genius of her culture; to provide refractory vision, so that the people of that country should see things as the German eye sees them, see lying distorted into truth; see injustice and wrong as justice and right. She has failed. She has failed in her triumphant march on Paris, and St. Petersburg—which she expected to reach with her armies before the name was changed. She finds her navy bottled in her home harbours, as useless for offensive effectiveness as the parent pipes in their pigeon holes. The cruiser Goeben which, with her consort, the Breslau, was turned over to Turkey for safe keeping—one of her swiftest and strongest Dreadnought cruisers—is lying battered and idle in the Black Sea, thus giving Russia with three big Dreadnoughts ready for launching the naval monopoly of that water, and ready to cooperate with the Allied fleets on the west in forcing the Dardanelles and giving the coup de grace to Constantinople and the sick man. With all these failures, and with no rift in the cloud, it is natural that Germany should fall back upon the submarines as an instrument of piracy, and of continuation of the war policy of outraging all the conventions of civilization and all the laws of humanity. An anaconda in its dying struggles may do a great deal of damage to those within reach of them. So Germany may do a great deal of destruction with her submarine craft; their use is the dying struggle of the monster of militarism—a sign of the beginning of the end.

NO PARTING OF THE WAYS FOR US.

Ex-President Taft is being lavishly lionized by the good Tories of good Tory Toronto, who seem to have forgotten his fatherhood of the phrase, "The Parting of the Ways." These good patriots of Toronto anathematized, to the uttermost, Taft as the designing author of a saying that meant the "thin end of the wedge" of separation of Canada from the Empire. This disruption was to be effected through such base media as untaxed interchanges between Canada and the United States of turnips and potatoes.

But Mr. Taft, if he meant that by his phrase-making, was wrong as well as the political patriots that went off, at half-cock, ever the bugaboo of dismemberment of the Empire by enlarged trade interchange. The connection between Canada and the Mother Country is so largely sentimental and intangible, that it cannot be affected by such material things as food stuffs and such paper pellets as tariff enactments. Mr. Taft and our own patriotic hysterists now see this. They both see a united Canada—both parties as one in straining every nerve, using every resource, in upholding the principles at the base of the unity of the Empire. Canada is a young country with a scattered population. Yet she is spending money at the yearly rate of $12 per head of population in waging a fight that is in one sense not her own; that is her own only on the principle of our adhesion to the Empire, as expressed in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's declaration—"When Britain is at war Canada is at war"—because we are one. We assume the responsibility automatically. There is not a man in Canada who questions the action of Canada in sharing in the waging of this war. We do it as naturally as we close the eye when its sight is menaced. We are making sacrifices, if we can call discharge of duty a sacrifice. Last August we voted 50 millions for war purposes. Yesterday we voted 100 millions more. This is a large sum—more than one year's income of the Dominion. We don't grudge it and we won't be ruined by it. We have great resources, and one year's western harvest will equivalate all that we have voted to help on the war.

The loss of one year's income won't ruin Canada, and more than the loss of one year's income would ruin any one of us—with health and strength remaining. Great Britain in the wars of a century ago was put out of sight almost under a burden of war debt. But now she is free, and has not only completely recovered, but stands as the strongest nation in the world, financially. Her trade policy opened the whole world as a harvest field of wealth. Canada can well afford a hundred or two million, to keep the Empire going. Her back is broad; her resources infinite. We are as proud of the privilege of helping, as we are proud and grateful for our ability to help in the fight for all that makes national life rightly possible and worth living—individual freedom and all that it implies. There is no "parting of the ways" for Canada or any other unit of the united Empire.

The Government Campaign For Increased Production

Governments, like individuals, may make a profitable use of printer's ink. The Dominion Government ascertained this by the response made by the people of this country to the apple-eating campaign inaugurated by Hon. George E. Foster. It might have made a similar discovery had it advertised adequately the advantages of the parcel post system, instead of leaving a thing of its creation to make its way without any assistance. It will have its belief in advertising strengthened by the use which the Department of Agriculture contemplates making of the newspaper press for the purpose of stimulating the farmers of Canada to get better results from their toil, and by increasing the output of their lands perform a patriotic duty for the country and incidentally benefit themselves financially.

The object held in view is indicated by the wording of the initial advertisement of the campaign, which contains the following statement:

The government does not ask farmers to work harder, so much as it urges them to make their work more productive, and to produce those staple foods that the Empire most needs and that can be most easily stored and transported.

Europe, and particularly Britain, will need the following staple foods from Canada more than ever before: Wheat, oats, corn, beans, peas, beef, mutton, bacon and ham, cheese and butter, poultry and eggs, vegetables, such as potatoes, onions and turnips.

The larger the yield of these staple food products, the greater the service to the Empire. Germany in the past ten years has doubled the average yield of the majority of her field crops largely through better seed, thorough cultivation and use of fertilizers. But in making your plans, don't let your enthusiasm and loyalty make you attempt more than you can carry through. Millions of bushels, instead of millions of acres, should be the aim of Canadian farmers, and while the Empire's armies are busy putting down German militarism let us at home appropriate the best of Germany's agricultural methods for the Empire's advantage.

The campaign for increased agricultural production is to be carried on under the direction of Hon. Mr. Burrell, and the space of some 300 newspapers will be made use of. Back of him will be found Mr. J. W. Imrie, the secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Press Association, who has done much to place before the government the obvious advantages and absolute necessity of the movement which has been inaugurated, while the work of handling the campaign, selecting mediums, etc., has been given to the well-known advertising agency of Messrs. McConnell & Ferguson, of London, Ont.

It is to be hoped the effort to reach and instruct the farmers as to the need of more intensive farming at all times, and more particularly as to the absolute need of increased production of agricultural products as a means of enabling the Empire to prosecute the war vigorously, will meet with entire success. It is not altogether to be regretted that comparatively few men from the rural portions of Canada have volunteered for service in Kitchener's armies. Their services are needed in another way, which will not only help to maintain these armies, but will also do much to assist in the speedy return of prosperity to Canada.—Brantford Expositor.

TO DIE IS BETTER.

The Church has always been watered by the blood of its martyrs, and it is a great and wonderful fact that nothing is of any value until some man or woman has died for it. That is why we must believe that at the end of the war there must be a greater Great Britain, a better France, a better Russia—and a better Germany. We at least shall have learned that to die is better than to live meanly, creatures of compromise, trembling at our own shadows.—London Daily Express.

MURDER OF INNOCENTS.

French Government Reports on Sinking of Amiral Gauteaume.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The French Government made public yesterday the result of the inquiry ordered by the Minister of Marine into the torpedoing of the French merchantman, Amiral Gauteaume, on Oct. 26, 1914, and gave to representatives in Paris of the neutral powers copies of the memorandum. The vessel, when struck by a torpedo fired by a German submarine, had on board 2,600 refugees from Belgian and French coast towns.

The report says the attack was committed by a German submarine without daring to show its colors and without warning or stopping. It asserts that the attack was made on an undefended merchantman carrying women and children and old men, who were refugees. The attack, it is contended, was without military or naval utility or strategy, and was only "the murder of inoffensive individuals."

One Robber Shot Dead.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 11.—One robber was shot and killed, and a second captured and $700 in cash recovered after a raid on the Mohawk German Banking & Savings Co. here yesterday. The two robbers entered the bank at noon and ordered Cashier Wm. Cross to throw up his hands.

Instead Cross reached for his revolver. One of the robbers fired at him but missed. Cross got his gun, but not before the burglar had grabbed a handful of currency from a counter and started out of the door.

Cross fired at them, dropping one man in the street, while the other escaped. The man who was shot died before he could be identified.

The fugitive robber was caught later in a cellar and all the stolen money found on him.

Attack on Monterey.

CADERETTA, State of Nuevo Leon, Mexico, Feb. 11.—Carranzista troops, commanded by Gen. Pablo Gonzales, yesterday attacked Monterey the largest city in Northern Mexico. Gen. Villareal's division assaulted and took several suburbs. The artillery bombardment was terrific and parts of the city are in ruins.

A Villaist regiment, commanded by Col. Meras, deserted to the Carranzistas, but the attack was discontinued after the unexpected arrival of reinforcements for the Villa troops.

U. S. Guards For Britons.

LONDON, Feb. 11. — The British Government has arranged with the Government of the United States to appoint quartermasters and paymasters in the American army to act as neutral wardens to British prisoners of war in Germany. The initiation of this plan, however, has been delayed as Germany still has the matter under consideration.

Announcement to this effect was made in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon by H. J. Tennant, Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office.

May Marry By Proxy.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Minister of Justice Briand, with the approval of M. Millerand, the Minister of War, has given his approval to the proposed bill which would allow soldiers who are unable to leave the front to contract marriage by proxy.

NO CHANGE OF HEART.

Roumania Not Frightened by Nearness of German Troops.

LONDON, Feb. 11. — The Daily News has received a telegram from Takeu Jonescu, one of the best known Roumanian statesmen, a former premier and leader of the Conservative Democrats, dated Bucharest, Wednesday. It says:

"I have expressed in the English and French press my strong belief in regard to Roumania's future action on the side of the triple entente. Nothing has occurred to change my former declaration. Indeed, my belief is firmer than ever. The present calm in public opinion springs from a deep belief that action is certain. Naturally, I cannot fix dates, but I may say that the presence of Austro-German troops near her boundaries has not weakened Roumania's determination. Statements in the Austro-German press about a change in favor of Austria and Germany are devoid of foundation."

AVIATORS' OVER TURKEY.

French and British Airmen Drop Bombs on Adrianople.

MITYLENE, Feb. 11.—(Via Paris.)—Several British and French seaplanes flew over Turkish Thrace on Tuesday, according to a despatch from Tenedos. Two of the machines went as far as Adrianople dropping bombs on the forts. The Turks are said to have been unprepared for a bombardment, as they did not expect allied aircraft to venture so far inland.

Mitylene (or Lesbos) and Tenedos, are islands near the mouth of the Dardanelles, which the allied fleets have been bombarding. Adrianople is more than 100 miles inland from there, and almost as far away from the base of operations as Constantinople would be.

Spy In London Regiment?

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The benefit of a "test mobilization" was fully demonstrated yesterday morning when in something like half an hour the whole of the eighteenth overseas battalion lined up on the parade grounds at Queen's Park, all in shape to leave, had such been the orders.

An alleged German secret agent is in the thirty-third battalion's guardroom at Queen's Park awaiting removal to the military prison at Fort Henry. The man had enlisted as a private at Windsor, evidently crossing from the American side. It is said he talked in his sleep and made use of German expressions.

Wait Till War Is Over.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11. — The lawyers interested in the Tremblay-Despatie case while declining to comment to any extent on the decision of the Privy Council that the whole matter will again have to be re-argued before them in London, say it is unlikely that anything will be done in the case before the war is over.

FEEDING AN ARMY.

Method of Supplying Food to Troops on the Battlefield.

How an army in the field gets its food from day to day is told in the Scientific American, from which the following extracts are taken:

The supply train of an infantry division carries two days' field and grain rations. In the late afternoon or at the end of a march or close of a combat the division commander directs the field trains to move up immediately in the rear of the troops and informs the commanding officers of organizations that one day's rations have been ordered to a designated place. An orderly is sent to that place to conduct the wagons to the organization. After being unloaded they return immediately and join the grouped portion of the ration section. That same night or early the following morning the empty wagons are refilled from the supply train, and this latter secures a renewal of its supplies from a designated point on the line of communications or is reloaded from a train pertaining to the line of communications if the distance from the end of that line of the zone occupied by the troops is so great as to warrant the use of a train.

There are two methods of supplying an army in the field:

First.—By consignments of supplies forwarded by the service of the line of communications and distributed as above indicated.

Second.—By utilising the resources of the country.

It is generally necessary to utilise to the fullest extent the food, especially the forage, available in the theater of operations. In former times the invader possessed the right of booty and pillage, the resort to which was most unfortunate for the army, as it embittered the population and compromised the safety of the troops in an enemy's country, and in the event of any real or imagined injury being done them it gave rise to redress and reprisals.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

ETERBORO' JUNIORS OUT OF RUNNING

ere Beaten 12 to 3 at Lindsay Last Night—Scugog Team Was Better all the Way and Showed Class From Goog to Goog

indsay put the Peterborough jun- out of the running and made a rough job of it last night when they the young Petes 12 to 3 in the nd of the home and home games the district championship. Cap pson's team had a lead of two carried over from Monday and never were in the least danger owing that margin overhauled. Out nt 3-to-1 at the end of the first od, they outscored the Petes 6 to the second and 3 to 1 in the third rind up with. They were all over better team, and while the final res hardly represent the margin een the two, the Petes were sound- eaten and have no excuses to ofood as Lindsay looked here on nday they showed a big improve rt again on their own ice cushion 'angles of which they know to per ion. They had speed and stick dling, accurate shooting, a very tive two man combination, and ked it all up by persistent back eking. They looked 100 per cent er last night than on their firs earance in Peterborough, and huck" Carew, the brilliant rover the team, confided the secret after game. While the Petes, feeling tha were out of the running for the on, gave up practice, the Lindsay g, knowing what information they up their sleeves, were confident would get back, and kept on rking. They were out every night week, and the effect of the train was easily apparent in the in vement in their individual and n play. On the other hand the es had but one practice in two ks and the difference was not har indsay outplayed the visitors al ough, with the exception of a few utes in the last period and they the breaks that usually go wit winning team. Two of their goals rned into the nets off Peterbor h players, another was slammed with Referee Jacobi blocking Le view of the rubber, another when hson was knocked out and play uld have been stopped, and still ther when Legros fell just as Fla e shot and the disc crawled int nets. But take away those lucky e and Lindsay had enough count left to hand the Petes a sound ting. Their checking back had visitors pretty well smothered at all times, while the Petes, with the exception of Knapman, failed to check back consistently and the defence had to handle most of the attacks unaided.

For Lindsay, the two Carew boys Flavelle and O'Loughlin, were the best. The Carews showed beautiful combination, as well as brilliant individual ability and their shooting was deadly, the pair being responsible for most of Lindsay's goals. Flavelle, big and a trifle awkward, yet is a most promising defence man. He is hard to get around and is dangerous when he breaks away for a rush. O'Loughlin is a very clever goaler, blocking and clearing in big league style.

The Peter' work was nearly all of an individual nature. Knapman and Rose were the most effective, making many dangerous rushes, while the former checked back in fine style. Jackson did some fine stick-handling and Morrow and Richardson on the defence rushed nicely. Legros kicked out a lot of hard shots and at times was the busiest man on the ice. The teams and summary follow:

JUNIOR CHURCH LEAGUE.

Last night, in the Junior Church League, George Street administered a shut-out to St. John's, 7-0. The play was quite rough but fast. All George Street team worked hard, but Nelson and Graham were especially good, the latter being the chief goal-getter of the team. Fee, the losers, forward and Heard were very prominent. At half time the score was 3-0. Mr. Frank Robbie handled the game well. The teams:

St. John's: Goal, Pidgeon; defence, Seward and Rockbiton; rover, Heard; centre, Parks; wings, Flowers and Coutman.

George Street: Goal, W. Rutherford; defence, Simpson and Hamilton; rover, Nelson; centre, Graham; wings F. Rutherford and Feever.

Knox and Charlotte Street meet to-night at 7 o'clock. This is the last game in the third round of the schedule.

Old Country Football News

There is no greater sportsman than Lord Rosebery, who, besides winning the Derby, marrying the richest woman in England, becoming Prime Minister of Great Britain long ago accepted the honour of being patron of the Scottish Football Association, whose international players have for many years sported his colours, "The Primrose Hoops". His Lordship, besides being a sportsman is the greatest advocate of "Empire," and his latest edict should do much to stimulate recruiting. He wants sport to go on all the same, knowing as he does that there are many who cannot possibly answer to the call.

A Day of Reckoning.

"It may be that the present angry frame of mind of the Football Association will subside, but if not, there will surely be a day of reckoning to pay later on, says the Athletic News. Just now the way in which the Scottish delegates went behind the backs of the other associations after the recent conference has roused very deep feelings of resentment. There should be honour among friends, but what can we in England think of the Scottish defection after their agreement? None of us would have blamed Scotland if she had declined to accept the decision of the other three associations. We are all free organizations, and will not submit to force, though we respect the founded opinions of others.

"This it is which annoys a body of men whose word has always been their bond, and who have in the past honourably kept their compacts with Scotland, Wales and Ireland, even at considerable loss and trouble, for the sake of the sport.

"Put very simply the attitude of the Football Association Council is that if the national interest is handicapped by football it must stop, but that while it asks for no preferential treatment it demands to be fairly dealt with. There is no proof that football is detrimental to national service, and until it is so proved no one has a right to specially select it for attack as a sort of scapegoat. And as long as professional football continues on good sporting lines, the Football Association are bound to stand by and protect the interests of the clubs in membership and of the players who are engaged in an honest calling under their rules and regulations. They could not do otherwise and be honourable men."

Summer Wages.

It looks as if Scottish football players are to be particularly hard hit by the war, not only in having their wages reduced 25 per cen. during the playing season, but in having no close wages. It is understood that the Scottish Football League have decided to ask a conference with the English and Southern Leagues concerning the re-signing of players for next season, and to deal with the question of close season wages. The object, which the Scottish League have in view, is to get each body to decide against the payment of close season wages, and to come to an agreement that players be not signed on until almost the beginning of next season, the league clubs, of course, resolving at the same time that they themselves will have the first chance of signing on those league players whom they desire to keep.

At the Front.

J. Campbell, the international left half-back of the Sheffield Wednesday Club, who is at the front, writes to the directors stating that he is safe and in good health. He thanked the club for the football sent to him. This happened to be the one used in the game which Wednesday lost to Everton at Hillsborough by 4—1. Campbell lent it for a game in which he took part in France, and his side lost by 13 goals to 3.

Benefits Deferred.

But for this great war Newcastle United officials were to have had a busy time with benefits. No fewer than seven players—Low, McCracken, Finlay, Whitson, Veitch, Rudspeth and Lawrence—hold guarantees for benefits during the season 1914—15. In five cases the minimum sum was £50.

LOCAL CURLERS WON IN MILLBROOK WED.

Two rinks of local curlers played in Millbrook yesterday morning and afternoon; returning fourteen up on the day's play. The players were Archie Lang, J. H. Pennyfather, Jas. Skinner, R. M. Waddell, Skip; T. H. Hooper, Percy Fitzgerald, Archie Moore, W. H. Taylor, Skip. In the afternoon the Vice Skips took charge of the rinks, the morning Skips playing lead.

CURLING NOTES.

In the inter-rink curling games, Dickson Davidson has a high standing in one group with Dr. Wightman and Harry Foote very close together in the other. The schedule is beginning to take on a determinate appearance.

Detroit rinks are expected to play here to-morrow if the weather is favourable.

The ladies are completing arrangements for the Tankard games to be held here next week.

Too Much Expense.

"Yes," said Mr. Tyte-Phist, "I was just stepping on the car when the conductor gave the motorman the signal to go ahead, and the car started. My foot went out from under me, and I sat down on the muddy crossing, ruining a twenty-two dollar suit of clothes."

"Then you sat there, swore like a trooper and gnashed your teeth in rage, I suppose," remarked the sympathizing listener.

"No," said Mr. Tyte-Phist. "I may have sworn a little, but I didn't do any gnashing. My teeth are new and cost me $30."

Flies' Eggs.

Eggs of flies are so small that you must use a microscope in order to see their real peculiarities. Each female fly lays on the average of 150 eggs. For her cradle she selects a heap of garbage or refuse. The eggs hatch into minute maggots. In five days the maggots turn into little chrysalids, or pupae, shaped like miniature beans. Within another five days these give birth to flies, which develop with amazing rapidity into adult insects, and then the mischief begins.

Goethe.

Besides his five or six consummate works, which by universal consent are practically above criticism, it may be said that Goethe's songs are the best in the world. He is the greatest of all literary critics, and in subtle and abundant observation of human life and in the number and value of his wise remarks and pregnant sentences he is one of the greatest writers of all time. Goethe may be classed as one of the "greatest men."

Quick Turn.

"Iggs is quite a magician."

"So?"

"Yep. I just saw him save the paper into a sandpaper."—Buffalo Express.

Belgium Will Starve if Relief is Stopped—Germans Till 125,000 Acres of Ground in France

LONDON, Feb. 10.—"The situation remains acute. If the supply of food is diminished Belgium will starve."

The message was cabled to-day by Mr. Charles F. Scott, formerly Representative from Kansas, who is returning after an inspection of relief work in Belgium and France, to Mr. Walter R. Stubbs, erstwhile Governor of Kansas.

While at Mechlin Mr. Scott called upon Cardinal Mercier. He was accompanied by Dassani, the printer that was fined for printing the new famous pastoral letter of the Archbishop. Describing his interview with the prelate, Mr. Scott said:

"Cardinal Mercier lives in a fine old palace. The throne room has a big hole in the roof, and this, with other holes in the walls, to say nothing of broken windows, tells the story of stray shells which fell around the palace. No German soldiers were seen on guard.

"The Cardinal obviously enjoys the dilemma in which he has placed the Germans. His eyes twinkled as he told of his latest adventure. At six o'clock one morning, said the Archbishop, a German officer and two soldiers brought a communication from the commander asking him to deny statements that he had been deprived of his personal liberty. The denial which had been prepared consisted of four or five typewritten sheets.

"Cardinal Mercier said he requested his callers to return in the evening for an answer, but the officer declared they must await a reply in the Cardinal's room. At the Archbishop's request telephonic confirmation of this order was received. Describing his subsequent experiences the Cardinal said:

No Manacles Used.

"'It is true no manacles were used to restrain me, but I was to have performed a service at Antwerp and was not permitted to go there. For three days I was restrained in my palace. Two days later I was asked to modify my letter and wrote another. If the Germans are clever they will publish my first pastoral.'

"The Archbishop smiled as he made the final statement. Asked if he had any message for Americans, he said: 'Nothing except to give the people of your great country assurances of our gratitude. We would have starved had it not been for you. The work of your relief commission had been very efficient.'

"So far as I could see, Cardinal Mercier was free to come and go as he pleases, subject, I presume, to the usual restrictions imposed upon Belgians. Men were at work erecting the walls of the Cathedral and tearing down the parts which must be removed. Although terribly battered, it now appears that the beautiful building will be saved. The damage to it is estimated at $200,000.

"The people in and around Mechlin appeared as depressed as any I saw in Belgium, which is saying more than I can describe. They wander aimlessly through the streets, where bands of wretched, ragged children beg from every one in sight. Elsewhere I was struck with the courage the Belgians show in efforts to rebuild their homes and resume their normal life, but, of course, they are utterly dependant upon supplies brought in by the commission.

"At one of the villages near Mechlin I was told of an insane asylum with two hundred or three hundred inmates which was in the line of German fire. The Belgian priests, nuns and nurses determined to take their charges to a place of safety. The lunatics, cowed and shocked into a condition of apparent sanity, marched out under a fire of bullets and shrapnel with the steadiness of trained soldiers.

Germans Till 125,000 Acres.

"When you have seen Vise with its population of 7,500 now reduced to a hundred odd families existing in almost total ruins; when you have seen once beautiful Dinant now just a heap of jumbled debris; when you see one old woman with a spade trying to till a five acre field; when you see for miles only women working in the field—then you begin to realise what war is.

"With a German general I went by automobile through a large section of France now occupied by the Germans, every foot of which has been fought over. We drove for miles through hundreds of acres of partly harvested wheat. What had been left was trampled under the feet of two army corps. Almost within the sound of firing the Germans have a thousand or more of their own soldiers at work with gang ploughs drawn by gasolene tractors farming 125,000 acres of land which was a battlefield a few weeks ago.

"Throughout this region the Germans have been giving the inhabitants enough bread to keep them alive, but they told me they could not possibly continue the work, for it would be physically impossible as soon as active operations are recommenced. Throughout my trip I saw enough to convince me the Germans are treating the commission with perfect fairness, helping out with absolute good faith. Food is going only to starving Belgians and French. We have done well as a country, thus far staying off actual famine, but more food is essential."

MONTREAL, Feb. 10.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat was much better today, and as cables were stronger at an advance of 3d to 6d per quarter a moderate amount of business was done for March shipment, but exporters state that at the prices accepted they could not replace the wheat. There was also an improved demand for oats on spot, and the tone of the market is stronger the local quotation at an advance of 1-2c to 1c for immediate delivery. The demand for Kilborn and were very heavy; large orders of a number of cars were made for shipment from Chicago. Argentine corn is selling at 97c to 98c, ex-store. Flour firm. Millfeed active and firm. Butter in good demand. Cheese quiet. Eggs weaker, 1c lower.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 839 cattle, 2597 hogs, 340 sheep and lambs and 47 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Good to choice, $7.25 to $7.60; good $7 to $7.25; medium, $6.75 to $6.90; common, $6 to $6.25; choice cows, $6 to $6.25; good, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $5 to $5.25; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $4; bulls, $5 to $6.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs. each, sold at $7 to $7.40; steers, 700 to 800 lbs., at $6.75 to $6; stockers at $5 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Choice milkers and forward springers sold readily at prices ranging from $65 to $90 each, and more would have found ready sale.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were light. Choice calves sold at $10 to $11 per cwt; good at $9 to $10; medium, $7.50 to $8; common at $4.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Light ewes, $5.75 to $6.25; heavy ewes and rams, $4.50 to $5.50; light lambs, $6.75 to $7; heavy lambs, $7.50 to $8; cull lambs, $7 to $7.25.

A few select lambs, 90 to 99 lbs. each, sold at $8.25.

Hogs.

Selected hogs, weighed off cars, sold at $8.25, and selected hogs, fed and watered, at $8, and $7.60 f.o.b. cars at country points to drovers.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Feb. 10.—There was no important change in the condition of the market today, the feeling in most lines being steady, owing to the fact that the supplies were smaller than usual. There were no choice steers, but there were a few loads of good ones, for which the demand was fair at $7.25 to $7.50, while fair stock sold at $6.50 to $7, and the commoner grades at from $5.75 to $6.25 per cwt. The quality of the cows offered was only medium, and they sold at from $4.50 to $6, while butchers' bulls brought from $4.50 to $6.50 per cwt. A lot of common canning stock sold at $3.75 to $4.25 per cwt.

The tone of the market for small meats is firm, owing to the continued good demand for the same, and the limited supplies coming forward. Ontario lambs sold at $8.25 to $8.50, and Quebec at $7.75 to $8, while sheep brought from $4.50 to $5.25 per cwt. The trade in calves was good at prices ranging from $5 to $12 each, as to size and quality. The tone of the market for hogs was steady, and a fair trade was done in selected lots at $8.50 to $8.60, and heavy weights sold at $7.75 to $8 per cwt., weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Cattle—Receipts, 15,000; market weak. Beeves, $5.45 to $9.70; cows and heifers, $3.15 to $7.65; calves, $7 to $10.50.

Used Hand to Remove Furnace Clinkers--Burned

Peculiar Experience of a North End Man Who Momentarily Overlooked the Motto Safety First—Received Severe Burning and Was Held Tight for Half an Hour

While removing clinkers from his furnace with his bare hand, an elderly citizen residing on Water Street, north of Smith Street, some time ago suffered a severe burn as the result of his unusual procedure. The furnace was undergoing its morning grooming, but a few clinkers held obstinately above the grate. The citizen removed his coat, made a pillow of it, stretched himself on the cellar floor and inserted his hand through the lower door, and in the general direction of the grate. He pulled out a number of clinkers. The grate bar dropped on his hand, clinkers above holding it as in a vice. By that time red hot coals had begun to come through. The man called to his wife, but she was unable to render any assistance. She ran out to a neighbour's, and it was not until the coals were shoveled from above the bar that the hand was released. The citizen did not wish to call in a doctor in order to restrict the knowledge of the affair to the smallest possible circle. At any rate, the news has been well hidden, for the hand is almost better. It is reported that one finger is gone. Spartan endurance scarcely surpasses this example, the man having been held in the grate for possibly half an hour.

Envoi—Safety first. Furnace makers never intended the substitution of a hand for an iron poker.

The Battalion will parade at 8 p.m., on Thursday Evening, February 11th.

Immediately after Roll Call the Sergeant-Major will take charge of the parade, forming it into large Companies under competent instructors. Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers will fall into their respective positions under the charge of the Regimental Instructor.

By Order,
F. D. KERR,
Captain and Adjutant.

Inspection of Local Laundries

Reveals the Fact That Fewer Men Are Employed Owing to the War

Sanitary Inspector Spence has completed his annual inspection of the Chinese laundries through the City. He reports that the proprietors of the shirt and collar repositories are living up to the requirements of the sanitary regulations with one or two minor exceptions. It will be remembered that it was about one year ago when the Inspector made his annual inspection, conditions in a great many cases were anything but satisfactory. He issued instructions to have the laundries cleaned up, and in a number of cases, alterations made in respect to the sleeping quarter, etc. The effect of this campaign was evident in this year's inspection.

The Inspector states that there is a marked falling off in the number of employees in connection with Chinese laundries. This is doubtless due to the war.

A Tall Visitor In City To-day

Mr. W. Woodhus, Visiting Friends Here is 6 Feet 9 in. in Height

"If you have a man in this City taller than I am, I would like to see him."

The above remark was from Mr. William Woodhus, who is visiting in the City, and measures 6 ft. 8 in. in his socks. He is truly a giant, and may well claim he is one of the tallest men in Peterborough.

"I have heard of a Mr. Sandy Trotter, who claims to be 6 ft. 9 in. in height, and I want to meet him," said Mr. Woodhus to a reporter.

Mr. Woodhus was born near Ottawa, Ont., and a son of the late A. Woodhus, well-known in Cobalt mining circles. His mother resides in Peterborough, and he is paying her a short visit. For four years he was a member of the Hamilton Police Force, severing his connections there in the fall of 1913.

Mr. Sandy Trotter, well-known about the City, is credited with being 6 ft. 9 in. in height, but he is a little stooped now, as he is a fairly good age, and has been accustomed to hard work. It would be very interesting to see these two men together.

A combination of mirror, comb and identification card to be carried in a person's hat has been patented.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles--Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

A gang of men is still employed in the work of removing the surplus snow from the city's streets. The main thoroughfares have been denuded of the snow embankments and operations have commenced on some of the side streets.

Has Returned.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon has returned from Toronto, where he was conferring with Mr. M. K. Cowan, K. C. ,regarding the aribtration proceedings that are pending between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

Come Early and Avoid the Rush.

City Clerk Armstrong is in receipt of a quantity of photographs depicting scenes at Valcartier camp before the departure of the Canadian contingent. These pictures represent a donation to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The local Association has undertaken to sell a number at one dollar each, the proceeds to go to the Patriotic Fund.

Is Improving.

Assistant City Engineer Hay has so far recovered as to be able to leave the hospital. He will be confined to his house for some time to come.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

Mayor C. McKenzie, recently elected in Fort Francis, has been unseated because his taxes were unpaid when he was nominated, and also on account of corrupt practices.

Has Been Adopted.

The proposed separation between Waterloo County and the town of Galt has been adopted by the Waterloo County Council.

Application Refused.

The Railway Commission hase refused the application of the Fort William Board of Trade for a reduction of 12 1-2 cents per hundred pounds in the C.P.R. rate for shipments west from Port Arthur.

A Donation.

The City Council of Belleville has made a donation of $200 to the Regimental Fund of the 21st battalion.

A Divisional Point.

It is rumoured that the Grand Trunk Railway will make Guelph a divisional point and that a large number of families will move there.

The Mayor's Decision.

By the deciding vote of its Mayor Stratford City Council has decided that the ratepayers shall not have a say as to whether or not gambling shall be allowed on the city owned agricultural park race track.

Will Raise $200,000.

The Hamilton Board of Control, at a meeting yesterday, decided to negotiate privately for the raising of $200,000 required by the Board of Education.

Elected President.

The annual meeting of the Galt Board of Trade was held last evening and Mr. C. G. A. Bowler was elected president.

The report was adopted on motion of Councillors Kennedy and Madill.

The Council then adjourned.

WANT PASTOR ANOTHER YEAR

At the recent meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church on Tuesday a unanimous invitation was given to Rev. J. P. Wilson to remain as Pastor of the Church for another year.

PRESENTATION TO SERGT. HART

A few friends (employees of the C.G.E. machine shop), met on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. W. A. Bayden, 175 Rubidge street. The occasion was in the form of a send-off to Sergeant Hart of the 39th Battalion, and to present him with pipe and tobacco pouch, cigarettes and tobacco. The presentation was made by Mr. Ed. Jones, who, in a nicely worded speech, expressed the feeling of all present. Sergeant Hart, although taken by surprise, very suitably responded. After dainty refreshments had been served, a very pleasant time was spent in speeches, songs and games. The proceedings came to a close in the early hours of the morning, everyone wishing Sergeant Hart a safe and speedy return.

APPROVES OF THE C. P. R. "ECHO"

Peterborough, Feb. 10, 1915.

The Editor, Evening Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In perusing your valuable paper of yesterday I notice an article announcing the issue of the "C. P. R. Echo."

My object in writing this letter is just to congratulate the employees of the C. P. R. Freight Office on the stand they have taken. It is indeed gratifying to a business man to see the spirit holding sway in the young men of our City which prompted Mr. Brooks to take the field with the "Echo" against the "Gazette" by Mr. Herron. It is the spirit of rivalry—of opposition—which makes business, and from what I hear, although I have not had the pleasure of seeing the productions, I think that the young men of both systems are to be congratulated upon their venture.

The producers of the first railroad magazine in Peterborough certainly deserve great credit for his excellent idea in providing a means for putting into expression the literary talent of our railway offices, and all who participate in the turning out of the papers are worthy of our every encouragement.

Thanking you for your valuable space.—Yours truly,

DELIGHTED BUSINESS MAN.

MR. JOS. KELLY PRESIDENT OF POULTRY ASSOCIATION

He Was Elected at Annual Meeting Held Last Evening—Mr. J. T. C. Laing is Treasurer—Enthusiastic Session.

REPORTS PRESENTED

Mr. Joseph Kelly was elected President of the Peterborough Poultry Association last evening, at the annual meeting held in the Labour Hall. The meeting was largely attended by the poultry breeders and fanciers of the city and a very enthusiastic session was held. The appointment of Mr. Kelly is a popular one. Mr. Kelly is an enthusiastic poultry breeder and fancier, and is well known amongst the poultrymen of the city and surrounding district. He has interested himself in the poultry business for a number of years and is considered an authority on the subject.

The reports of the past year were presented and adopted, showing a very successful season for the Association.

Mr. J. T. C. Laing was elected as first vice-president, but later upon his electibn as treasurer, he withdrew, and Mr. Robert Robson was appointed. Mr. George Paxman was nominated and urged to accept, but preferred not.

Mr. Archie Brault was installed as second vice-president

For secretary, Mr. J. J. Cunningham, who ably filled the office last year, was re-elected.

The directors appointed were: Al. Everson, George McClellan, George Buller, W. T. Abbott, A. Mosley, T. Stenton, H. T. Lush, P. Hartley, P. H. Smedmore.

Mr. George Paxman was nominated for honorary president, also Mr. F. Holmes, and were declared elected. The honorary directors appointed were Warden Dr. Kindred of Havelock, Mayor Buller, Arthur Ash, J. H. Garbutt. J. H. Callander and R. J. Kidd were re-elected auditors for the coming year.

DEBATE AT T.A.S. ROOMS ON FRIDAY

A meeting of St. Peter's T. A. S. Literary Society will be held in the St. Alphonsus Lyceum on Friday evening. The chief feature will be a debate on the subject "Resolved that intemperance has caused more suffering than war." Messrs. John New and B. McAvoy will speak on the affirmative, and Messrs V. McCabe and E. Reynolds on the negative.

MARKS BROS. AT THE GRAND.

The announcement of the coming engagement to the Grand of May A. Bell Marks, supporting R. W. Marks, Manager and Proprietor Marks Bros. No. 1 Dramatic Company, which opens with matinee, will be appreciated by all the theatre goers, as they will receive an attraction that is run on entirely different plans than the general line of these attractions. It is Mr. Marks' efforts to elevate his attraction so as it will out-class all others.

In organization, May A. Bell Marks was not satisfied to depend upon the word of man or woman or manager, but devoted the summer in visiting all the principal cities; there securing her supporting cast which she now has and which is one that can be depended upon as being the best that money can obtain. Mr. R. W. Marks also devoted much of his time in securing his plays.

Mr. Marks is somewhat of a crank on producing as he is a great believer in exactness and gives particular attention at every effect from the biggest sensation to the most minute detail. In costuming there is not the smallest ribbon, flag or emblem that is not perfect and in all his accessories are more complete than an original production. Grand Opera House, commencing Monday next, Feb. 15.

The plays that will be seen during the week's engagement will be a sensational drama; a melodrama of intense interest; a story of city life; a romantic drama. In all these plays May A. Bell Marks will be seen to great advantage, as well as her supporting cast, having equally as good chances. Dancing, singing, musical numbers, which are numerous, are nightly changed and interspersed during the action of the plays. Reserved seat sale at Box Office, Friday, at 9 a.m.

HALLAM'S WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Hides, Skin, Wool, Junk.

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

Beefhides are steady to firm, and are coming to market in good supply. Tanners are only buying for present needs. City butcher hides flat 17c. to 18c. per lb. Country hides, flat, cured, 18c. to 19c. per lb. Part cured, 17c. to 18c. per lb.

Calf skins are quiet and unchanged. City skins, green, flat, 18c.; country, cured, 18 1-2c. to 19 1-2c. Part cured, 17c., according to condition and take off. Deacons or bob calf, 90c. to $1.20 each.

Horse hides are in fair demand and in good supply. City take off $4.50 to $4.75. County take off, No. 1, $4.00 to $4.50; No. 2, $3.50 to $3.50.

Sheep skins are in good demand at full quotations for late take off. City sheep skins $1.85 to $2.00 each. Country sheep skins, 90c. to $1.75.

Wool is strong, but only small lots are coming to market. Washed combing fleece (coarse, 28c. to 32c.; washed clothing fleece (fine), 30c. to 33c.; washed rejections (burry, chaffy, etc.), 23c. to 26c.; unwashed fleece combing (coarse), 20c. to 22c.; unwashed fleece clothing (fine), 23c. to 24c.

Tallow market is steady, the better grades in best demand. City rendered, solid in barrels, 6c. to 6 1-2c; country stock, solid in barrels, No. 1, 6c. to 6 1-4c.; No. 2, 5 1-4c. to 6c.; cake No. 1, 6 1-2c. to 7c.; No. 2, 5 1-2c. to 6c.

Horse hair is in fair supply at unchanged prices. Farmer pedlar stock, 45c. to 50c. per lb.

Old rubbers, junk, etc., are unchanged and in fair supply. Rubber boots and shoes according to trim, 5 1-2 to 6c.; auto tires 4c to 5c.; bicycle tires, 2c. to 4c.; lead, heavy, 3 1-4c. to 4c.; tea lead, 2 1-4c. to 3 1-4c.; brass, heavy, 9c. to 10c.; light, 6c. to 7c.; copper, heavy, 11c. to 12c.; light, 10c. to 10 3-4c.; zinc, 2 1-2c. to 4c.

Raw Fur Market.

Raw furs are coming to market in good supply with practically no change in prices. London, England, announces that they will hold auction sales of furs commencing March 22nd, but under certain restrictions. These sales will probably have very little effect on Canadian prices, as many of the best customers of these sales will not attend on account of the war, and owing to the large amount of raw furs which will be placed in the sales, that have been in storage in London since last summer.

HEAD OFFICE - LONDON, CANADA

ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1914 SHOWS UNINTERRUPTED PROGRESS

New Business Written, $10,630,069—an Increase of $1,801, Largest in Company's History

Rate of Interest Earned, 7.01%—an Increase of 20 Points

Mortality Only 41.5% of Expected.

Profit to Policyholders One-Third Greater Than Estimates

The Annual Report Embraces the Following Particulars

New Business	The splendid gain in New Business for the first seven months of the year was held unimpaired to the close and resulted in the largest increase in the Company's history, as noted above. January, 1915, business also shows a splendid increase over that of 1914.
Insurance in Force	The business in force, less reinsurances, amounted to $30,849,326.74, an increase of $3,730,951.72. The lapse rate has naturally been heavier than heretofore, owing to the special conditions existing. Nevertheless the gain in business in force is practically the same as in the best previous year.
Income	The total Receipts amounted to $1,464,819.13, a gain of $168,970.48 over the previous year.
Profits	The present scale of profits—exceeding estimates by one-third—is being continued. The conditions warrant an increase, which for the time being is deferred until the effect of the expected unusual train this year has been determined.
Assets and Interest	The Assets now amount to $5,294,262.70, an increase of $648,567.51. Bonds and Stocks have been taken at a figure much below the prevailing market value. The Rate of Interest earned, without allowance for Head Office rental, was 7.01%.
Liabilities	Seventy-seven per cent. of all the Company's business is now valued on a 3% basis. The total Policy Reserve on the Company's standard now amounts to $4,397,888.
Surplus	On Government standard Policyholders' Surplus amounts to $676,148.54, showing the most satisfactory gain yet made. EIGHT SPIES ON LUSITANIA ON MISSION FOR GERMANY

Were Charged With the Extremely Hazardous Mission of Ascertaining Certain Important Facts About Great Britain's Naval and Military Preparations

NEW YORK, Feb. 10. — The Herald yesterday prints the following:

Among the "inner circle" of the Germans in New York there has been much rejoicing over the safe arrival in Liverpool of the Lusitania of the Cunard Line than over any other war time event since the German fleet's victory off Coronel. The rejoicing is due to the fact that on board the Lusitania were no fewer than eight persons in the volunteer service of the intelligence department of the German Government charged with the extremely hazardous mission of ascertaining certain important facts about Great Britain and her military and naval preparations.

A Daring Spy.

The eight men who went aboard last week were in charge of a man known to hundreds of persons in this city. He is described as a person of superlative daring, and the fact that, although he was born and educated in Germany, he went abroad last week as an Englishman, bearing English official papers, and listed on the passenger list under an English name, indicates that he fears nothing. For years the leader of the party had been in business in the lower part of the city, and with a branch office in Boston. When the war started his business suffered greatly and he abandoned it, so that he might devote his time and means to the service of his fatherland. The seven men who accompanied the leader of the expedition went openly as British subjects, and all expect to return without any trouble from the British authorities. Men connected with the German intelligence bureau in this city were confident that the eight had reached England in safety.

Interferes With Service.

The Kaiser's edict that neutral vessels in the North Sea may be sunk, has caused great indignation and dismay among the men in the local intelligence bureau, because it is likely to result in delay in sending information to Germany from this country. If neutral ships are withdrawn from the service between New York and European ports it will mean that there will be great delay in keeping Berlin informed on important matters gleaned by the Kaiser's agents, who have their headquarters in a certain office building in Lower Broadway. This Broadway office building has "wires" of all kinds reaching to every city in the United States and Canada, and to practically every port in South America and the West Indies, and even most of the German agents in the Far East make their reports to Berlin through the New York office.

Information from Halifax.

The British intelligence bureau in this city has been much chagrined recently, it was learned, that the German agents in Halifax are able, apparently, without the use of the telegraph or cable lines to this city, to deliver information concerning Halifax troop movements with more expedition than the British agents. It is confidently believed by persons high in the British Government service, both here and in Canada, that the Germans are arranging for some kind of a move to be made at or against Halifax. The activity of the dynamiter, Horn, at Vanceboro, Me., last week, added to this feat, it was said.

300,000 Rifles Purchased.

For several months the British agents in this city have been working hard to discover the whereabouts of about three hundred thousand to Germany as long as Great of ammunition which are said to have been bought from a South American country by the New York agents of the German Government. This large purchase of guns and ammunition is believed by the British to have come to this country and to be stored somewhere not far from this port. Just why Germany should buy such a large number of guns which it will be impossible to send to Germany os long as Great Britain retains control of the seas, is a mystery, but it is believed that the purchase was made for the sole purpose of preventing the supply from falling into the hands of the allies who at the time of the purchase were in greater need of rifles and cartridges than Germany.

Uneasiness in Canada?

The suspicion that such a store of rifles is in the possession of Germans in this country had had much to do, it was stated, with the uneasiness along the Canadian border, where for the last three months, there has been constant preparations against an invasion from the American side.

HAD ACCEPTED THEIR DEFEAT

French Ministers Were Ready to Yield to Germany at First Rush

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Certain French newspapers yesterday reprinted, with the consent of the Government censors, an article published in the Democrate de Delemont stating that previous to the battle of the Marne a party existed in France which was ready to sign a peace, at the same time ceding to Germany the towns of Briey and Nancy French Lorraine, the Island of Madagascar, and the protectorate of Morocco, as well as paying an indemnity. The article continues:

"Gen. Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, President Raymond Poincare, and most of the Cabinet Ministers were opposed to the plan, but the situation became so tense as to necessitate the resignation of Adolphe Messimy as Minister of War and the formation of a Ministry of National Defence.

"After the battle of the Marne, Germany proposed peace through ex-Premier Joseph Caillaux, offering to give up the Province of Alsace and Lorraine, with the exception of Stramburg, receiving in exchange a small zone on the North Sea coast extending from Calais to Dunkirk.

"France, in addition, was to acknowledge the annexation of Belgium by Germany.

"The answer to this proposal was the signing of a convention by the allies to make no separate peace. After this M. Caillaux was appointed to an important position in the pay corps, but later was relieved of this post and sent on a mission to Brazil."

BLANK VOTE IS PASSED

British Government Has Now a Free Hand in War Expenses

LONDON, Feb. 11. — After two days of debate, during which many matters in connection with the war were discussed, the House of Commons last night passed without division the army estimates for 3,000,000 men, exclusive of India, and also by a "token" vote provided for the pay of the officers and men. By this vote the Government will receive a blank check for this purpose.

Replying to points raised by members of the House, Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, said that in case of a raid on Britain Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton was in command of a mobile force, which was ready to go anywhere at any time.

There was considerable discussion of the question of inoculation against disease, in reply to which Mr. Tennant declared the sentiment in favor of compulsory inoculation was increasing, and that the Government was considering adopting it. Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War, felt so strongly about the matter, Mr. Tennant said, that he was about to issue an order suspending grants of leave to those persons who declined to be inoculated.

The Under-Secretary added that the suggestion that the War Office should consent to the enlistment of "bantam battalions" was being considered. In the mining districts, he said, there were many men under the regulation height who desire to serve in the army and that some of them already were in training.

Two Human Heads Found.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 11. — Two human heads, two feet and a hand, wrapped in a burlap bag were found yesterday afternoon in an alley behind a bottling works on Beaubien street. Features were almost obliterated by acid. The police believe one of the heads is that of a man and the other is a woman's. A boy searching for bottles made the discovery.

Detectives found a satchel containing clothes marked "M. F. A. Easton," a few feet from where the heads were found. The satchel had been covered with rubbish.

Easton, who formerly conducted a mission on Beaubien street here, died in Detroit two days ago. He once was in charge of a mission on Centre avenue, Chicago.

URGES GOVERNMENT TO FULFIL OFFICIAL PROMISE

Opposition Members Inquire Regarding Military and Other Matters—Se eGrain Needed

OTTAWA, Feb. 11. — With the budget and its proposed tariff changes looming up for to-day in the Commons, yesterday's session was comparatively quiet and uneventful, the chief discussion of the day hinging on the subject of the distribution of seed grain among the farmers of the west.

W. M. Martin (Lib., Regina) moved the adjournment of the House to deal with the urgent need of western farmers for seed grain. This was particularly the case in the southwestern portion of Saskatchewan and the southern part of Alberta, which had been drought-stricken last summer.

A serious feature of the situation, Mr. Martin maintained, was that upon the strength of an official communication from the Commissioner of Immigration at Winnipeg and statements in the Government press throughout the whole west it was believed until last month that the Dominion Government intended to supply seed grain to the holders of patented as well as unpatented lands. He urged that this letter be made good by the Government.

Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, said he sympathized with the farmers of the west, but the policy of the Government was well known. He expressed regret that the commissioner's letter had been open to misinterpretation, but the expenditure involved if the Government acted upon all applications would be eleven million dollars.

The discussion was continued by Messrs. Buchanan, Dr. Neely, Thompson, Warnock, Hon. Frank Oliver, Dr. Michael Clark, Hon. Arthur Meighen, Tarte and H. B. Bennett.

Notice was given yesterday of another batch of questions.

Hon. Charles Murphy inquires as to the amount paid the C. N. R. for transportation, express and all other charges to the Valcartier Camp.

He also desires to know the names and salaries of those employed to administer the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

He requests the fullest information regarding the transports which conveyed the Canadian troops to England, the names of the vessels, the owners, the brokers, the cost, etc.

Hon. Frank Oliver brings up the question of pensions of the dependents of those of the Canadian contingents who may be killed or disabled. He asks what the Government intends to do.

Further questions are being asked regarding the purchase of medical supplies in Ottawa for the troops. Mr. Kyte and Mr. Chisholm desire to know all about J. E. Powell, who received a large order, his place of business, the sums paid, etc., also all about clinic thermometers purchased in Ottawa.

F. B. Carvell inquires if the Government has instituted any proceedings to recover the $24,607 which was overpaid the Southampton Railway.

An abrupt adjournment became necessary during the afternoon when the Parliamentary electric plan went wrong and the lights went out. The members, trooping from the chamber, had to requisition candles and tapers to find their hats and coats, and navigate the inky blackness of the corridors.

3,250,000 Have Been Actually Hit—Germanic Allies Lost

Hillaire Belloc Also Estimates British Allies Have Reserve Armies of Million More Men Than Kaiser

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Hillaire Belloc in his London cable to the American estimates the casualties in the European war and the reserves available in all armies as follows:

Killed and Wounded.

Germans	1,750,000
Austro-Hungarians	1,500,000
Russians	750,000
British	80,000
*French

*No figures available; facts kept secret.

Prisoners Held.

By Germans	600,000
By allies	500,000

Available Reserves.

Austro-German	4,000,000
British	2,000,000
*French
Russian	3,000,000

*Her maximum strength already reached.

The writer says in regard to the number of prisoners held in Germany that it must be remembered the German custom of carrying away into captivity great batches of the civilian population of districts they occupy, and they occupy nearly all the Belgian triangle of nearly 200 miles in length and over forty miles in depth at the widest part and including densely populated industrial districts.

We will not be far wrong if we say that the allies probably hold more true prisoners of war, that is, soldiers, than the Germanic powers hold of the allies' prisoners. The British proportion of losses is about 100,000, counting prisoners; rather over 80,000 counting casualties in list alone.

Question of Reserves.

What can the various powers engaged rely upon for reserves — that is, for new formations to be gradually trained, equipped and put into the field after the end of the first six months? We have both determinate and indeterminate elements. The determinate elements are clear. France and Serbia have no one in reserve. Germany has about two million men who she has been busily training and is about to put forward. Austria has about the same number, but she has already a large proportion in the field; her hasty recruitment proceeding from panic following the first invasion of Hungary, the first breakdown in Galicia and her ignominious defeat suffered in Serbia.

At any rate, the Germanic powers have got over 4,000,000 men as untrained and more or less satisfactory material to add to the original 8,000,000 before their man-power is exhausted.

Great Britain has already produced more than an extra million and will, if the war should last another eight months, produce another million, making an extra 2,000,000. But the process of equipping these new formations is slower than the process of recruiting and training.

Russia Doubtful Factor.

Russia is a doubtful factor. Her actual reserve adult males is enormous. It is equivalent to those of Austria and Germany combined, but the rate of equipment is necessarily much slower by far than that of any of her allies. During the winter months she can obtain little from abroad through her ice-bound ports, and her comparative lack of industrial development causes her to produce less from within by far than France or England. If in the whole course of this year Russia can add 3,000,000 equipped troops to her present effectives it is the maximum.

I suggest, therefore, five millions, not six, will prove, when the history of the war is written, to have been the total effort of this side.

Such are the numerical factors of the campaign so far as I can estimate them from what we know, and from what we reasonably deduce from what we know.

Two More Patricias Killed.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—The following casualties in the Canadian Expeditionary Force were announced by the Militia Department last night:

Killed in action: Pte. John Russell, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Mrs. J. Russell, 1,715 Twenty-Eighth avenue, South Calgary, Alberta.

Pte. John B. Bleakley, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, George Bleakley, 24 St. David street, Toronto.

John B. Bleakley was a single man and lived with his two brothers and two sisters in Toronto. He was born in Enniskillen, Ireland, in 1883 and had been in Toronto one year. He was for twelve years a private in the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, but had never before seen active service.

Arbitration Will Resume

On Monday Next—City Will Take the Initiative

On Monday next the arbitration proceedings between the City and the Peterborough Light and Power Company will be resumed. The Company's side of the case is practically complete and it now remains for the City to follow suit. City Solicitor G. N. Gordon has returned from Toronto, where he was in conference with Mr. M. K. Cowan, counsel for the City, in respect to matters pertaining to the City's side of the case. When the proceedings open on Monday next the City will take the initiative and the brunt of the cross-examination will rest with Mr. W. N. Tilley, Solicitor for the Company. The Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario have placed a couple of their engineers at the disposal of the City. They have prepared reports which will be presented when called upon. The proceedings will likely last three or four days.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The London Daily News editorially suggests that Germany is inviting attack from the U. S.

Lt.-Col. Thomas Scott, former collector of customs and member of Parliament, died in Winnipeg yesterday.

If the New Brunswick Legislature supports the city commissioners, married women in St. John, who own property will be granted the vote in municipal elections.

The damage wrought by the storm which began at Colon, Panama, Tuesday, is estimated at nearly $1,000,000. Over half of the eastern breakwater in course of construction has been destroyed.

Thirty employes of the Barber, Ellis Co., of Brantford, who struck yesterday because their names were placed on envelope boxes, agreed to the conditions of the firm and returned to work yesterday.

Mrs. C. A. Massey, wife of the late C. A. Massey, who was shot on his own doorstep on Monday night, arrived in Toronto Tuesday, having come from Hartford, Conn., where she had gone on a visit.

Count von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the U.S., yesterday gave W. J. Bryan an official copy of the German Admiralty's memorandum, explanatory of the proclamation establishing a war zone around the British Isles.

The death of Stanley Mansfield, well known as a sprinter and soccer football player throughout Canada, is reported from Belgium. He was resident in England at the time the war broke out and at once volunteered for active service.

German Consul Visits Horn.

MACHIAS, Me., Feb. 11.—Werner Horn, confined in the county jail for damage to property at Vanceboro as a result of his attempt to destroy the Canadian end of the railway bridge over the St. Croix river, was visited yesterday by Oswald Kanhardt German consul at Boston and Hannibal E. Hamlin of Ellsworth, former Attorney-General of Maine. They conferred with the prisoner for two hours.

Brave Captain Relieved.

ROME, Feb. 11.—A despatch from Tripoli says that reinforcements have reached Capt. Voglino, whose band of native troops were reported several days ago to have almost entirely deserted him as the result of a rebellion in Libya. It is stated that for several days Capt. Voglino fought bravely against overwhelming numbers but succeeded in maintaining his position and that he will be able to return from the interior to the coast with the aid of the forces sent to his rescue.

Budapest Municipality Buys Hogs.

VENICE, Feb. 11. — It is stated that as a result of the high prices of food in Budapest, and in order to protect the public the municipal authorities of the Hungarian capital have purchased several thousand hogs which will be fattened and killed and the meat sold to the people at the cost price.

The Vienna City Council is said to be arranging to follow the example of the Budapest authorities.

Scandinavian Kings To Meet Again.

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—(By wireless to Sayville.) — The Overseas News Agency says that according to a Copenhagen despatch received in Berlin the rulers of the three Scandinavian kingdoms will hold another conference, this time to discuss the questions of floating mines, Germany's declaration of a sea war zone and the British Admiralty's views as to the use of neutral flags.

BRITISH STILL BURYING DEAD

British Force at Suez Played Havoc With Turks

CAIRO, Feb. 11.—News reaching here emphasizes the fearful character of the execution done by British troops in the two days' battle on the Suez Canal. The slaughter in the Turkish ranks was as terrible as anything in history. The British are still burying dead by the score, where they lie on the dead t.

This is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the enemy advanced in open formation over a very wide front and failed to drive their attack home, thus rendering machine gun fire comparatively ineffectual. Where attempts were made to cross the canal, British machine guns were brought to bear. Pontoons literally filled with dead have been brought to the surface. When all is known it will probably be found that not far short of 10,000 of the enemy were killed.

LED FRIENDS INTO A TRAP

Maritz Said to Have Tricked Germans and Suffered Death

PRETORIA, Feb. 11. — According to a story published here, Lt.-Col. Maritz, who fomented the South African revolt some weeks ago, when recently negotiating with the Union of South African officials for the surrender of his forces, asked that his life be spared. He was informed, however, that no conditions could be granted, and that the Government would be as free to execute him as it would be free to put to death the rebel Wessels.

Maritz left the camp on the understanding that besides surrendering himself he would try to bring in the German artillery. Then followed a German attack on Kakamas, and it is suggested in the newspaper accounts that Maritz led the Germans to Kakamas with the intention of handing them over to the Government forces.

When this treachery was discovered the Germans are reported to have promptly attacked Kakamas, but were driven off with severe losses. Maritz then was arrested, and, it is said, he was probably executed without further ceremony.

EARL GREY FAVOURS INTERNATIONAL POLICE

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Earl Grey, presiding at a meeting held on Monday to advocate an agreement among the nations for the enforcement of international law, said the present conflict probably never would have taken place if the policy of American peacists, that the signatory nations of The Hague conventions should undertake collective responsibility for their enforcement, had been adopted. ment, had been adopted.

"It's almost certain," said Earl Grey "that this logical and necessary complement of The Hague tribunal will be adopted when the nations again meet in consultation. The neutral Powers who signed The Hague conventions missed a great opportunity by not protesting against the violations of the international regulations that occurred in this war, which undoubtedly would have led to a diminution of its horrors."

A resolution was adopted declaring it to be "Imperative that a peace be established which shall secure collective responsibility by all civilized nations for the maintenance and enforcement of international law."

A French novelty is a celluloid memorandum tag to be snapped over the face of a watch where it is sure to be seen.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN TO-MORROW

Will Not Be Visible in Peterborough

To-morrow there will be an "Annular" Eclipse of the sun, but it will not be visible from Canada. The eclipse begins just south of Madagascar, in the Indian Ocean, and trails across the north-west part of Australia and New Guinea and ends in the Pacific Ocean south-west of the Hawaiin Islands. At the time of an eclipse, if the moon is comparatively near the earth, it appears larger than the sun and totally obliterates it, but if the moon should then be at a greater distance from the earth it appears smaller than the sun, and at the time of eclipse it does not completely cover the suns face, but leaves a circle or "Annulus" of light at the time it crosses the central point of the sun's disc, hence the name "Annular Eclipse." Such eclipses are not considered to be of as great scientific value as a "Total Eclipse."

AT HOME.

Under the auspices of the Commercial Travellers' Association, at their rooms on Water street, next Saturday evening. All travellers and friends cordially invited. No invitations issued.

PLUMBING CASE IN POLICE COURT

Conference Was Held by the Powers That Be

LINDSAY, Feb. 11.—At yesterday's session of the Police Court, George Brenton, a Peterborough plumber, was summoned to answer a charge of violating a by-law which does not permit an outside plumber doing work in Lindsay. The charge is preferred against him by Sanitary Inspector R. Douglas.

"One clause in the by-law reads that any plumber who shall not have a place of business in town, or who does not have a residence therein, cannot undertake such work."

Mr. Brenton was engaged on a building being erected by Mr. James Bogue, also of Peterborough.

A conference was held by Police Magistrate Jackson, Town Solicitor Fulton, Sanitary Inspector Douglas and the contractor, in the chief's office. The defendant in the case explained that he was installing the hot water fittings and had not touched the plumbing, but it was pointed out that this work was leading up to the general plumbing. The case was adjourned.

A valve is fitted to the bottom of a new cooking kettle so that water may be drained from vegetables without endangering its use.

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to harden the oil that strikes the mainspring and affects the motion.

People usually wait until something breaks. The other way is the cheapest in the end and a little attention at the right time save the watch.

General Botha Has Quelled South African Rebellion

And Is Fighting Germans

Whereabout of General De Wet a Mystery--Many of Rebel Leaders Have Been Shot---Botha Says It Was Painful Work Against Old Comrades.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—That a strong force of troops of the Union of British South Africa is already operating against the Germans of Southwest Africa, under the direction and personal leadership of General Louis Botha, Premier of the Union and commander-in-chief of its forces, is indicated in mail advices received here from Cape Town.

Following the crushing of the revolt and the capture of the rebel leader, General Christian De Wet, the intrepid guerilla warrior of the late campaign between Boers and British, General Botha retired to his farm at Standerton, in the Transvaal, for a brief period of much needed rest. His untiring activity in behalf of the Union and his masterly tactics which brought the insurrection to such a speedy conclusion have been widely acclaimed not only throughout South Africa, but in the United Kingdom and the other British colonies.

Meanwhile several of the rebel leaders have paid with their lives the penalty of taking up arms against the established government of the Union, while other still remain prisoners awaiting trial. The prison which holds De Wet is kept a secret by the authorities and there has been no information furnished concerning the time and place of his trial. It is believed by some that the "Will-o'-the-Wisp of the Veldt," as he has been called, is incarcerated at the Breakwater, notorious during the South African war as a prison at Cape Town where army defaulters were held.

Many Rebels Shot.

While the extreme penalty has been exacted from several of the Boer rebels, many leaders in the Union government have put forth strong pleas for clemency in dealing with the subjugated followers of the insurrection movement. According to a recent interview General Botha expressed the opinion that the position of affairs within the Union no longer presented a barried to his taking the field against the Germans. That he has already embarked upon an expeditionary movement against the German colony is shown in another despatch.

General Botha considers that the rebellion is over, and that no fear need be entertained of a recrudescence of trouble among the people of the Union. One thing needful, and upon this General Botha lays great stress, is that all sections of the loyal population, Dutch and English alike, should abstain from words and actions which might incite feeling. His advice in effect is that the dead past should be permitted to bury its dead.

"I am sure my English friends will understand what is expedient," said General Botha, "when I tell them that the continued denunciation of the rebels may wound just those whom I know Englishmen have no desire to wound. I mean the Dutch who have been responsible for quelling this rebellion.

"Not many years ago they and the rebels were fighting side by side against England. For the loyalist Boers in these later days it has been an unhappy, indeed tragic, ordeal to have to hunt down the fire upon men, some of them their relatives and many of them their friends, who were once their comrades in arms.

"These men in many cases have already met with their past punishment. Their wrongdoing and their fate are matters of the most acute grief to their kinsmen, and bitterness may unwittingly be provoked if our English fellow countrymen continually emphasize the infamy of acts which they are not alone in detesting.

Their Sense of Honour.

"Dutch loyalists have discharged a painful duty out of a stern sense of honour, and having relatives and friends often among the rebels, they regard the whole rebellion as a lamentable business upon which the curtain should be rung down with as little declamation, as little controversy, as little recrimination as possible.

"To those who call for the infliction of severe penalties upon the ringleaders I wish to say, be sure that justice will be done.

"In due time courts will be constituted to deal with these men.

"For myself, personally, the last three months have provided the most sad experience of all my life. I can say the same for General Smuts, and, indeed, for every member of the government.

"The South African War is but a thing of yesterday, and the feelings of the loyal commandoes when amongst rebel dead and wounded we found from time to time men who had fought in our ranks in the dark days of that campaign, may be imagined.

"The loyal commandoes have had a difficult task to perform, and they have performed it in the cause of law and order, which has been and will be vindicated.

"Let that be enough. This is no time for exultation or for recrimination. Let us spare one another's feelings. Remember we have to live together in this land long after the war is ended."

Turning to the task which lies ahead, General Botha said: "In suppressing the rebellion the government has had the most hearty co-operation of both races. Let us have the same co-operation in German South-West Africa.

"The undertaking before us is a difficult one, but if we all do our duty it will be carried to a successful conclusion. Now that the German territory has become a refuge for Maritz and other rebels, it is more than ever necessary that we should persist in our operations there.

"We cannot tolerate the existence of a nest of outlaws on our frontier as a menace to the peace of the Union."

STORE WAS DESTROYED BY FLAMES

$6000 Blaze at Warsaw Yesterday

The general store of Mr. Thos. Clements, Warsaw, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, the damage to stock and property amounting to about $6,000, partially covered by insurance. Just what caused the blaze does not seem to be known, but at any rate it spread rapidly and nothing could be done to stop the progress of the flames. A small portion of the contents was saved.

$5.00 For a Name

A new name is wanted for the Princess Theatre which is being made one of the handsomest moving picture theatres in Ontario. The management offers $5.00 for the best name. Get on your thinking cap. Send in your name addressed to the Name Editor, Examiner Office, with your address. The prize will be awarded and paid on opening night, which will be in about ten days. Its thinness is in the movement

Guess in your last no where you how a watch, mechanically correct and movement of which rediscovers the size of these ordinary movements square one-half.

Then you will understand how this watch can "do your pocket like a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standard of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this modest thinness in fancy watches is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as shortening the inside dust protection cap in the back case, or putting a ladies' size movement in the centre of a thin edged man's case.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model watch—the Gruen Verithin.

Prices: $25 to $250

HOSPITABLY ENTERTAINED

Peterborough Team Were the Guests of Lindsay Over the Oysters

The Lindsay team most hospitably entertained the Petes at supper after last night's game, and the two teams fraternized over the oysters. The old feeling between the two teams has happily disappeared. Congratulations are due the Lindsay team. They are the best team in the district, and it would have been unfortunate had a combination of circumstances prevented them from representing the group in the second round. They play Kingston Collegiate Institute in Lindsay to-morrow night.

A Bad Example For Trains.

"A train leaves a town," supposes the teacher, "traveling forty miles an hour. It is followed thirty minutes later by a train traveling eighty miles an hour. At what point will the second train run into the first?"

The class seemed at a loss—that is, all except Willie Green, who was standing in the aisle vigorously wagging his hand.

"Well, Willie?" said the teacher.

"At the hind end of the rear car, ma-am," answered Willie.

The Rival Fathers.

"You say your baby doesn't walk yet?" said Jones. "Mine does, and it is not as old as yours. Your baby cut his teeth yet?"

"Not yet," said Bones.

"Oh, mine has—all of them," said Jones. "Does your baby talk?"

"Not yet," replied Bones. "Can yours?"

"Great Scott, yes," answered Jones Then Bones got desperate. "Does he use a safety razor or one of the other sorts?" he asked.

Those Useless Questions.

"Billy, did you ever pick up a live trolley wire with your bare hands?"

"Many a time."

"Didn't it give you a shock?"

"Give me a shock? It killed me dead every time."

Lectures on Book of Revelations

The lectures on the Book of Revelations given by Mr. R. Irving in the Gospel Hall are increasing in interest and attendance. The preacher spoke, among many other things, about the necessity of holding sound doctrine. He handled without gloves Pastor Russell and his anti-Hell preaching. Also this preacher is no believer in soul sleeping after death, as Pastor Russell and the Seventh Day Adventists all teach. He believes with St. Paul for the Christian to be "absent from the body is to be present with the Lord," 2nd Cor. 5-8; and again, "For I am in the strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better," Phil., 1-2-3. He also believes that this word spoken to one sinner of old applies to all who die in their sins, viz., "Hell from beneath is moved to meet thee at thy coming," Isaiah 14, 9.

Come and hear this earnest preacher, who is seeking to build up Christians in their most holy faith, and to warn the Godless and careless to "flee from the wrath to come."

To-night from 8 to 9 o'clock at Gospel Hall, corner George and Brock Streets.

THE LONDON LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

The report published by the London Life, covering the business of the year 1914, is, in view of the existing conditions, a most remarkable statement. Not only has the business been maintained as in former years, but an increase greater than any heretofore made is recorded in the volume of new business written during the year. Furthermore, the insurance in force, assets and income all show exceptional gains over the previous year. The rate of mortality was only 61.5 per cent. of the expected, the rate of interest earned was 7.01 per cent., an increase of 20 points, and the surplus shows the largest gain yet made. More important than all, the company's reputation of paying profits in excess of estimates is maintained, the profits being paid exceeding original estimates by one-third.

The whole report must prove of the utmost satisfaction to all connected with the company and is a credit to the management and field staff alike.

HOTLY CONTESTED BATTLES FOR STRATEGIC POINTS

Anti-American Feeling is Growing in Great Britain

GERMANS CONTINUE TO MEET WITH REVERSES

Enemy Has Made Several Direct Frontal Attacks in Force and Have Lost More Than One Thousand Men in Killed Alone

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The campaign for possession of Vosges Passes and the main road into Upper Alsace has been resumed despite a heavy snow.

The Germans are being bombarded with long range, heavy artillery, brought up during the lull of the last fortnight and an offensive is being initiated that is expected to resolve itself into a series of hotly contested battle that will give the French possession of various strategic points necessary to begin a drive of the Kaiser's forces northward and across the Rhine.

On the other extreme of a long battle line, from the sea to Nieuport, the German offensive which has been developing has suffered a severe check.

Some of the outer chain of German trenches have been demolished by the French, and Belgian heavy artillery and by bomb throwers. From Nieuport to Ypres, around La Bassee positions, and near Soissons, the artillery exchanges continue without interruption. In the Argonne region fighting for roads leading south through Bagatelle, and for the heights of Marie Therese continues.

The Germans have made several direct frontal attacks in force and have lost more than one thousand in killed alone. In the Champagne region, the Germans continue their efforts to retake the wooded hills lying north of Mesnil-Les-Turlus, but so far without success.

BRITISH SOLDIERS HOLD BOXING TOURNAMENTS IN THE TRENCHES

LONDON, Feb. 12.—That the English "Tommies" get the most out of life and throw to the winds the many hardships endured in the trenches has again been shown by the non-commissioned officers and men of the Army Service Corps holding a boxing tournament last week during one of their spells of inactivity on the battle field "Dick" Burge, fight promoter, came into the limelight with another act of kindness by sending across the Channel a dozen sets of boxing gloves by George White, well known sporting journalist, which enabled the soldiers thoroughly to enjoy a couple of hours' exciting sport.

Five preliminary fights were put on before the "star" bout of the programme took place, in which "Baby" Bowdler, a giant weighing 266 pounds earned a creditable draw with "Driver" Mays and further improved his reputation as the "white hope" of the Army Service Corps. The soldiers are not having this grand sport all to themselves, as the sailors aboard the war ship Ajax received a parcel of gloves, also, forwarded by the same donor.

J. W. F. McNaught-Davis, Cambridge University lightweight, who won his bout in the intervarsity competition last March, and Lieutenant Busher of the Oxford University Boxing Club, have both been killed in action. "Nat" Williams and "Dan" Varlo, both Liverpool boxers, have joied the Eighth Irish, while Harry Rudge, well known Halloway fighter, is on active service with the Sixth Inniskilling Dragoons.

"Jerry" Delaney, who recently joined the Sportsman's battalion, has been matched for a twenty-round contest at 135 pounds on February 22 at the National Sporting Club, London, with "Jack" Denny, American lightweight, who has just arrived in England Delaney has received from his commanding officer special permission to train for the fight.

Canadian Hospital is in Use

Wounded Canadian Soldiers Are Being Cared For There

A cable message has just been received from Dr. Donald Armour, Surgeon-in-Chief of the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe, Kent., Eng., stating that wounded Canadian soldiers have been sent there and received at the Hospital. The message read "Wounded Canadians from Belgium received in Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, last night." It will be interesting to many people to know that Canadians will be sent to this place when possible.

SAYS BRAIN WAS "COOKED."

Cashier Wins Acquittal at Forgery by Demonstrating Intoxicants'. Effect on Mind.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 10. —The unique plea of the defence by his attorney probably saved Thomas L. Southworth, former cashier of the People's Bank, at Stampingground, Ky., from a penitentiary sentence to-day. Southworth is accused under thirteen indictments of forgery, embezzlement and other crimes which helped wreck the bank. His defence at the forgery trial to-day was that he was so addicted to the use of intoxicants that his brain was "cooked."

His attorney took a glass of whiskey and broke an egg into it, and when the alcohol cooked the white of the egg he declared that Southworth's brain is cooked precisely like the white mass. He backed this up by expert testimony from a liquor cure hospital. The jury was out only a short time, bringing in a verdict of acquittal. Twelve other indictments stand against Southworth.

Why is POSTUM Replacing Tea and Coffee?

People are waking up to the harmful effect of the powerful drug—caffeine—in tea and coffee, which poisons the system, often resulting in nervousness, heart flutter, headache, biliousness and many other ills and discomforts.

The pure food-drink, Postum, is absolutely drug-free—made only of the choicest wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses. It contains no caffeine or other harmful elements.

If you doubt that tea or coffee hurts you, a sure test is to leave it off for 10 days and use Postum. It's an easy change, and, as the drug is eliminated from your system, your own feelings suggest Postum and better health.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be boiled, 15c and 25c packages; Instant Postum—soluble form, made in the cup with hot water instantly, 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious, and the cost per cup is about the same.

Must Solve Struggle

"We Are on the Eve of a Great Operation That Must Solve Definitely Struggle in the East" Says Official Report

WITHHOLD DETAILS

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, FEB 12—THE WAR OFFICE TO-DAY IN EXPLAINING THAT CERTAIN OF THE RUSSIAN FORCES HAVE BEEN WITHDRAWN FROM THEIR ADVANCED POSITIONS IN EAST PRUSSIA, POINTS OUT THAT IT WILL BE NECESSARY FOR THE NEXT FEW DAYS TO WITHHOLD ALL DETAILS OF OPERATIONS IN THIS SECTION.

THE REASON ASSIGNED IS THAT "WE ARE UPON THE EVE OF A GREAT OPERATION WHICH MUST SOLVE DEFINITELY THE STRUGGLE NOW IN PROGRESS THERE."

JUST WHAT IS PLANNED IS NATURALLY A CLOSELY GUARDED SECRET, BUT THE WAR OFFICE IS VERY CONFIDENT THAT, WHEN THE VEIL OF SECRECY CAN BE RAISED IT WILL BE FOUND THAT VERY IMPORTANT SUCCESSES HAVE BEEN ATTAINED.

THE GERMANS FIGHTING IN THE CARPATHIANS CONTINUE THEIR DESPERATE EFFORTS TO GAIN A FOOTHOLD IN VARIOUS PASSES, BUT SO FAR WITHOUT SUCCESS. RUSSIAN ARTILLERY COMMANDS HEIGHTS AT EVERY STRATEGIC POINT, AND IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE GERMANS TO GAIN ANY GROUND.

AN ADMISSION THAT THE FORTRESS OF PRZEMYSL IS STILL HOLDING OUT IS MADE IN TODAY'S OFFICIAL STATEMENT WHICH SAYS THE GARRISON THERE IS "EXHAUSTING ITSELF" MAINTAINING AN IRREGULAR FIRE AGAINST THE RUSSIAN BLOCKADING FORCES.

In a State of Depression

Kaiser is Reported to Have Said That Germany Must Seek Peace Somewhere

ABANDON AUSTRIA

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 12.—According to the Zurich correspondent of the newspaper France de Demains, the Kaiser is in a state of absolute depression, and has told members of his suite that Germany must seek somewhere to conclude peace.

It is stated that he is still hopeful that he will be able to approach Russia through a small pro-German coterie of officials at the Russian Court, and it is declared by the correspondent that Germany would readily abandon Austria if she could thereby make satisfactory peace for herself.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Arnaud, B.C. writes: "Seven of our little children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was for nearly completely cured of rheumatism by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

SHOULD OPENLY EXPRESS SYMPATHY WITH ALLIES

Such is the Feeling That Britishers Think United States Should Give Expression to—the American Note to Great Britain

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 12.—That the United States intends to fully protect all of her rights and privileges, is the construction to-day placed on the American notes to Germany and Great Britain.

Although a complete text reached here too late for extensive comment by the morning papers, there is no question that vigorous language used in both communications came as a distinct surprise to the majority of British diplomats.

There is a general disposition to resent the action of the American State Department in assuming, without first asking for official information, that the British Foreign Office has sanctioned the "misuse of neutral flags."

As a matter of fact the majority of Britishers are arguing that inasmuch as England has always allowed the use of her flag by merchantmen seeking to evade capture, she should have the same rights.

Were the American note not accompanied by the present strong language used in the note to Germany it is believed it would arouse severe irritation.

But there is a general feeling that of the two, the Kaiser gets the worst of it, and this brings satisfaction to the average Britisher. However, there is no disguising the fact that a strong anti-American feeling is growing throughout Britain, having its basis in the belief that the United States should openly express sympathy with the cause of the Allies. It has been added to by an original protest against England's assumption of domination of the seas and the last note can be expected to add to it.

BRITISH SHIPPING LOSSES FOR THE PAST SIX MONTHS

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 12—The chairman of the Liverpool Underwriters' Association, addressing the annual meeting, said that owing to the effective work of the British fleet the losses during the war to British shipping had been much less than might have been expected. After six months of war, he said, the loss to the British mercantile fleet was estimated at £8,000,000 to £7,000,000 ($39,000,000 to $35,000,000). The report of the 1913 committee gave a probable loss of £18,000,000 ($90,000,000) in the first six months of the Continental war.

The chairman said the year 1915 had opened badly, with a large number of costly losses, the figures on the books of the association showing a total of $6,500,000, against $3,500,000 for the corresponding period of last year. The insurance of hulls on time charters was in an unsatisfactory state, he said, and owing to the higher cost of labour and materials, which made a large percentage of premiums disappear in claims, concerted action had been taken to raise rates moderately. Referring to war risks, he said this part of the insurance business had brought satifactory profit to the underwriters.

Hospital For Canadians Has All of The Comforts

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb 11. — The Cliveden base hospital opens Monday with 125 beds, which will be subsequently enlarged to 1,000 beds. No more splendidly placed and equipped military hospital exists anywhere. "You can tell the people of Canada," said Col. Gorell, when showing me over the buildings, "that this is the finest military war hospital in the world. There is nothing to beat it as a temporary hospital anywhere".

The transformation of Astor's palatial country home into a hospital proceeded with record speed. The large building, formerly used for winter games, was first prepared, Astor meeting all the expenses of the alterations. Wards were partitioned off, operating rooms, dispensary, and nurses' quarters provided. From the windows of this fine building the sick and wounded will have before their eyes some of the most beautiful and healthiest English rural wooded, and river scenery.

Even a Baseball Park.

The Canadian Red Cross provided equipment costing already $10,000, and it will be responsible for the upkeep. Colonel Hodgetts appeals for necessary funds, saying: "The hospital is the only one of its kind existing. It is not purely voluntary, not purely military, but half and half."

The immediate staff under Gorell numbers eighty-three picked men from the first and second contingents, and will subsequently be increased to 200. Nursing Sister Campbell is matron, with twenty nurses. The staff includes Captain Styner Ellis, Captain Noff, Sergeant-Major Gadbraith, Sergeants Down, Saunders, J. R. Smith and J. H. Reppen.

Mr. and Mrs. Astor spared no trouble and expense or personal service, and have done magnificently to promote the comfort of all. A club-house has been opened in the grounds and a baseball park will be provided. Dr. Hodgetts, Red Cross Commissioner, indignantly repudiates the statement of Mynott in a letter in the Toronto Star, January 26, implying scarcity of field comforts and saying the commission have been unable to obtain beef extract from the Red Cross. "Misses Plummer and Arnold made no request for beef extract," he says. "No request to the Canadian Red Cross or medical department has been ignored. All have been met promptly. These ladies knew very well that this office was dealing exclusively with the distribution of Red Cross supplies. I intimated to them personally my willingness at all times to meet any want, and asked them personally to let me know. You can assure the people of Canada that Red Cross supplies and beef have been distributed promtly and well."

The Record Bureau.

The address of the information bureau of the Canadian Red Cross, opened a few days since, is 14 Cockspur street, London. All requiring information as to sick and wounded Canadian soldiers should communicate there The wounded and sick Patricia's are scattered in English hospitals until Cliveden opens.

Protest Against Use of Flag

State Department Officially Admits Despatch of Notes to Great Britain and Germany

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11. — The State Department to-night officially admitted a despatch of notes to Great Britain protesting against the misuse of the United States flag, and also to Germany protesting against the creation of a war zone around Britain. Both notes are strongly emphatic in tone and in far sharper tones than hitherto hinted at.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11. — The United States steamer Washington was sunk in Trebizond Harbour by the Russian fleet while bombarding that port yesterday.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Despatches late to-night tell of big British reinforcements arriving at Ypres district and the Allies holding ground at all points.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

So when he was ready to cross the ridge to the schol he obeyed an old ridge to the school he obeyed an old saddled at the front fence that it might seem as if he were going out—but had not yet gone.

He had sent by messenger a summons for Good Anse Talbott and the preacher arrived while he was at his supper table.

"Brother Anse," he announced, "I'm goin' to need ye some time betwixt now and midnight. I want ye to tarry here till I come back."

"What's the nature of business ye needs me fer, Anse?" demanded the missionary. "I hadn't hardly ought ter tarry. Thar's a child ailin' up the top fork of little branch of Turkey-Foot Creek."

But Bad Anse only shook his head. "It's the best business ye ever did," he confidently assured the preacher, "but I can't tell ye yet. Is the child in any danger?"

"I reckon not, hit's jest ailin', but—"

The brown-faced man sat dubiously shaking his head, and Anse's features suddenly set and hardened.

"I needs ye," he said "Ain't that enough? I'm goin' to need ye bad."

"That's a right-strong reason, Anse, but—"

For an instant the old dominating will which had not yet learned to brook mutiny, leaped into Anse Havey's eyes. His words came in a harsher voice.

"Will you stay of your own free will because I'm goin' to need ye, Brother Anse?" he demanded. "Because, by God, ye're goin' to stay—one way or another."

"Does ye mean ye aims ter hold me hyar by force?"

"Not unless ye make me. I wouldn't hardly like to do that."

For a moment the missionary debated. He did not resent the threat of coercion. He believed in Anse Havey and the form of request convinced him of its urgency.

So he nodded his head. "I'll be hyar when ye comes," he said.

Anse left his house that night neither by front nor back, but in the dark shadows at one side, and his talisman of luck led his noiseless feet safely between the scattered sentinels who were watching his dwelling to kill him.

It was a brilliant night and the hollows were full of moon mist, but where the shadows fell they fell blackly.

The chorus of whippoorwills and night music sang to him, because his heart was very full of joy. The air breathed soft passion and the breeze whispered of love as it harped drowsily in the jet plumes of the tree tops.

A spirit of languorous, yet powerful appeal rode with the mother-of-pearl shimmer of the clouds. The silvery luminance of the moonlight seemed as miraculous as the essence of dreams, but the iron-gray ridges, paling in the distance to misty platinum, were immemorial pledges of permanence.

Juanita Holland was there and he was going to her and after to-night she should be Juanita Havey!

"No to-morrow's sun should arise and set
And leave them then as it left them now."

He noticed as he passed the Widow Everson's cabin, that it was dark and closed, and he remembered that she and her family had gone away to visit friends in town. The McNash children, even, were down at Jeb's cabin, so Juanita was quite alone.

The school-buildings slept in silent shadows, except that from the open door of the room where her piano stood, there came a soft flooding of lamplight; a single dash of orange in the nocturne of silver and gray. He went up very quietly, pausing to drink deep of the fragrance of the honeysuckle, and there drifted out to him the music of the piano and the better music of her voice.

She was singing a love-song.

Though he had set no word of his coming, she was once more in evening dress; all black, save for a crimson flower at her breast and a crimson flower in her hair. But this time the sight of her in the costume so foreign to the hills did not distress him; it was a night that called for wonders.

She rose as the man's footstep sounded on the floor and then, at memory of their last meeting, the colour mounted richly to her cheeks and he took her again in his arms.

She raised her hands to his shoulders and tried to push him back, but he held her firmly and while she sought to tell him that they must find their way back to the colourless level of friendship, he could feel the wild flutter of her heart.

"Listen," she protested. "You must listen." But Bad Anse Havey laughed.

"Ever since the first time I saw ye," he declared. "I've been listenin'. It's been a duel always between you and me. But the duel's over now an' this time I win."

She looked up and her pupils began to widen with that intense impression which is the drawing aside of the curtains from a woman's soul, and as though she realized that she could not trust herself to his eyes she turned her face away. Only in its profile could he read the struggle between mind and heart and what he read filled him with elation.

"Anse," she said in a very low voice, "give me a truce. For one hour let me think; it involves both our lives for always; let me at least have the chance to be sane. Give me an hour."

The man stepped back and released her, and she turned and led the way out to the porch where she sank down in the hammock with her face buried in both hands. When she looked up she was smiling rather wanly.

"It can't be, dear," she said. But while she argued with words and ostensible reasons the night was arguing, too, arguing for him with all its sense-sleeping fragrances and cadeness and appeals that stirred sleeping fires in their hearts!

And while she talked he made no response, but sat there silently attentive. At last he looked at his watch and put it back in his pocket. He rose and said quietly, but bith a tone of perfect finality:

"Your truce is over."

"But don't you see? You haven't answered one of my arguments."

Anse Havey laughed once more. "I didn't come to argue," he said, "I came to act." He drew from his pocket the license and ring. "Brother Anse Talbott is wainin' over at my house," he said. "Will you go over there or shall I go back an' fotch him here?"

CHAPTER XXXV.

Juanita rose from the hammock, and stood unsteadily in the blue moonlight; an image of ivory and ebony. The man clamped both hands behind his back and gripped them there—waiting. But despite his seeming of confidence and calm his brain reeled gloriously with an intoxication of the soul. He saw her standing there, straight and lithe and slender, with the moon-washed sky at her back and the inky shadows of the porch throwing the picture into a vivid relief.

He saw the flower on her breast rise, and fall under the quick tumult of her emotion. He saw the lips he had loved so long half parted, and he knew that she must yield to her heart's ultimatum. He saw everything with the steady eagle eyes that held and fascinated her, and that kindled, as she gazed into them, with a flame which burned invincibly up from his heart. He saw the shadow lace of the vines and a tracery of trembling leaves on a drooping maple bough beyond; he saw, in the distance, mountain shoulders melting away into liquid skies, but he saw all these things only as brush-strokes in the background, for she herself was the picture that his soul drank through his eyes. Soon he must crush her to his breast, and let her heart beat there against his own, where it belonged.

But while he saw so much she could see only two eyes that were fascinating, hypnotizing her, until all else faded and they seemed twin stars drawing her to them irresistibly out of space and across the universe, swinging her will as the moon swings the tides.

She took an involuntary step toward him with lifted arms, and then with a strong effort as if struggling against a spell, she drew back again, and her voice came very low and broken.

"I can't—I can't!" she pleaded. "But I wish to God I could."

Then Anse Havey began to speak.

"Ye've talked an' I've listened to ye. Ye've taken my life away from me an' made it a little scrap of your own life. . . . Ye've let us both come to needin' each other more than food an' drink an' breath. . . . For me there's no life without ye. In all the earth, there's just you—you—you! For every true woman in the world a day comes when there's just one man, an' for every man there's just one woman. . . . When that day comes nothin' else counts. That's why all them reasons of yours don't mean anything."

His voice had the ring of triumph. "You're goin' to marry me to-night. Come!"

He raised both arms and held them out, and though for a moment she hung back her eyes were still irresistibly held by his and the magnetism that dwelt in them. With a gasping explanation that was half surrender and half echo of his own triumph, she swept into his embrace.

About them the world swam and danced to the harping of the stars. She knew only that she had come home and that, resting here with those arms about her against that strong breast, she felt safe and deliriously happy. He felt her throbbing heart-beat; felt the warmth of her fluttering breath on his cheek; felt the softness of her arms about his neck, and the miraculous touch of her answering lips on his own.

A stray lock fell over her brow and its strands enmeshed his kisses against her face. How could she who was so frail and yielding in his tight-locked arms have been so powerful? How could a creature whose touch was as cool and soft as sentient velvet have reduced him to this slavery which made him a king? Then proudly he answered himself. It was because she was the one woman; because her delicately fibered being had a strength beyond his brawn; because she was the stronger for being weaker.

But after a time, she drew back a little so that she could look up again into his face, and with his arms about her and her arms about his neck, she smiled out of eyes that swam as mistily as the moon and as brightly, and lips that no longer held a hint of drooping.

As she locked her fingers caressingly behind his dark head, she wished for words fine and splendid beyond the ordinary to tell him of her love. But no phrases of eloquence came. So she found herself murmuring those ancient words of willing surrender, that have become trite because they have not been improved upon — "Thy people shall be my people and thy ways, my ways."

Then she felt his arms grow abruptly rigid and he was pressing her from him with a gentle insistence while his face turned to peer out into the moonlight with the tensity of one who is listening not only with his ears, but every sensory nerves of his being.

Could Hardly Straighten Up For The Pain in Her Back.

Many women suffer from an excruciating pain in the back. They are not even able to look after the common duties of their housework, and cannot even walk at times.

The whole trouble is that the kidneys have become affected, and when the kidneys get "out of kilter" the whole system becomes deranged. On the first sign of a weak, lame, aching back you should not neglect it, for if you do, you may be sure that some serious kidney trouble will follow.

What you want is a kidney medicine, for kidneys only. This you will find in Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they're made for kidneys only.

Mrs. George Craigie, Rose Valley, P.E.I., writes: "I am writing to tell you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills did for me. I was suffering with a lame back, and for several days I could hardly straighten up for the pain. I had used quite a lot of other kind of pills, but received no relief. Just then my sister told me about what "Doan's" had done for her, so I decided to try them. I used three boxes and I am completely cured. I do not hesitate to recommend them to all."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

ARE YOU STRONG ENOUGH TO WORK?

Mrs. Hubbard Tells How Vinol the Famous Cod Liver and Iron Tonic Built Her up and Made Her Strong.

Covington, Ky.—"I was in a general run-down condition and suffered from a bad cough. I have a family of four, and after working for a while around the house I would get so tired I would have to sit down and rest and sometimes it seemed as though my back would break.

"I tried cod liver oil emulsions and other remedies but did not seem to get any help. Finally one day I saw Vinol advertised and tried it. I soon noticed a decided improvement, and now it has built up my health and strength."—Mrs. ALEX. HUBBARD, Covington, Ky.

Vinol is a constitutional remedy for all weak, nervous and run-down conditions of men, women and children.

In a natural manner this delicious cod liver and iron tonic creates a hearty appetite, aids digestion, makes pure, healthy blood and thus creates strength for the run-down and debilitated. We have never sold in our store a more dependable remedy for coughs, colds and bronchitis than Vinol.

Try a bottle, and if it doesn't help you we will return your money.

He Got the Cheapest.

Old Hiram Pinchon was a born trader and a penny pincher besides. He was never willing to pay the price of anything he wanted, and all the shopkeepers at the village dreaded to see him enter their stores.

One day he did a little trading at Nelson's shoe store. He tried on a dozen pairs of boots, but could find nothing that was not too expensive. Then he guessed he would get a pair of rubbers. He rejected a pair that cost a dollar and another that cost 65 cents. Finally the clerk brought him a pair for 50 cents. They seemed to fit well enough, but Hiram was still dissatisfied.

"Hain't ye got any rubbers that are cheaper?" he asked.

"No, sir," declared the irritated clerk "we haven't. That pair you've got on is the cheapest, poorest, most no account rubber there is made!"

So Hiram bought them.—Youth's Companion.

Properly Rebuked.

Emma, queen mother of the Netherlands, is the subject of many stories in her own country. During the time when she acted as regent before the present Queen Wilhelmina came of age it is said that one morning Queen Emma was awakened by a peremptory knocking at her bedroom door.

"Who is there?" she asked.

A precociously dignified voice answered, "The queen of Holland."

The queen mother quietly answered "I am not dressed and therefore not able to receive her majesty, but if it is my little girl she may come in."—London Mirror.

Vegetable Sponges.

What are known as vegetable sponges grow freely in Ecuador during the rainy season. They grow on vines, like pumpkins. The poor people utilize them for washing dishes and when bathing, claiming they are superior to the animal sponge.

Dogs' Pants.

Dogs do not perspire. In hot weather they regulate the temperature of their blood by breathing more quickly, which produces a rapid evaporation of water from the surface of the lungs. That is the reason why a dog pants in hot weather.

Deep Doings.

"What's ailing Mr. Trout?"

"He suffers from sunstroke."

"Go on! Whoever heard of a fish with a sunstroke?"

"Well, you see, it was a sunfish that pumped into him."—Spalding Banker-Review.

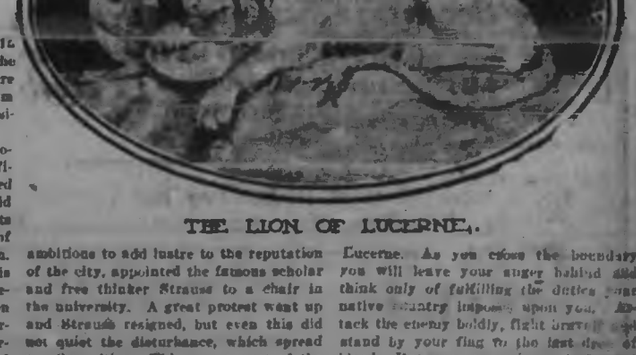
SWITZERLAND'S CENTURY OF PEACE

ANNUAL FESTIVAL AT ZURICH SHOWING OPENING OF WINTER BY SPRING

MONUMENT TO POSTAL UNION. WORK OF THE SCULPTOR SAINT-MARCEAU.

FROM THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

THE SOLDIERS WHO KEEP THE PEACE OF SWITZERLAND.



THE LION OF LUCERNE.

WITH neighboring nations at war, or on the verge of it, Switzerland, with its august mountains and lovely valleys, rests in peace. Moreover, for a hundred years Switzerland has had no war with any other country.

This is not because of pusillanimity or lack of military skill, for the history of the Swiss soldiery and what it has done for other nations, as well as for its own integrity, is emblazoned in the records of a thousand victories and in as many brave defeats. Yes, the Swiss can fight. Their army, too, is kept in the best of condition and has been termed the most efficient militia force in existence, or was before the present war broke out. All young men when they come of age must go before an examining board, and those who have sustained the rather easy tests successfully are drafted into the recruiting schools. Those who fail because of educational defects are compelled to attend special recruiting schools, and those who are physically unfit have to pay a special tax.

After the young men have been trained in the recruiting schools they must serve in the active army until they are thirty-two, being called upon for drill every other year; the cavalry every year. At the age of thirty-two they pass into the Landwehr and after that into the Landsturm. In this way Switzerland has an army of more than half a million men with a population of only a little more than three million persons.

Every soldier keeps his outfit at home ready for instant use whenever he may be called upon, and the arms in every district are rigidly inspected from time to time to make sure that they are in good order.

The Swiss do not have a commanding general—only a general staff—but if there should be a war the Federal Assembly would at once elect a general to take command. There is an complete an absence of class distinctions in the Swiss army as is consistent with the maintenance of effective discipline. Only when drilling is in progress is one man superior to the other. At other times they walk arm in arm or work side by side—officer and private.

The Concordat expresses the confidence of the Swiss people in their army when it says:—"The independence of the Swiss Confederation rests not upon assurances or promises of emperors of Kings; it rests upon a foundation of iron—that of our swords."

In the six centuries of its existence the Swiss Confederation has helped to overthrow intellectual and material tyranny and to-day has a government that runs so smoothly and is so effective in promoting the peace and welfare of the nations that the millions who visit the country for the sake of its scenery and the recreation it offers never think of what is at the foundation of their security and comfort and that of the Swiss people.

For her hundred years of peace the Swiss States which form the Confederation prepared the way by valiant struggles. The great nations and houses of Europe were concerned with the mountainous section which has evolved its stability and peace from widespread and long prolonged efforts for independence. The Teutons followed the Romans, and the Franks in turn established their supremacy.

In French Switzerland they still talk of the good old times of Queen Bertha of Burgundy. The houses of Zaeringen, Savoy and Hapsburg in turn left their impress upon the hilly little country before they were overthrown by the hardy Swiss peasants. One must know something of the long struggles of the Swiss to understand what their peaceful century really means.

It is approximately to the time of the formation of the Swiss Confederation that the picturesque story of William Tell belongs. Of recent years it has been considered mythical, but it was one of the several stories published at the end of the fifteenth century when the Swiss Confederates had defeated the great Charles the Bold of Burgundy. In an effort to magnify the greatness of the Swiss they told heroic tales of prominent men of the three districts that formed the nucleus of the Confederation. Tell, who is alleged to have been merely a mythical personage, is the only one whose story has survived.

In the great battle of Morgarten the Confederates cemented their union, annihilating the mounted knights although they were only rude peasants on foot. After this, one province after another joined the Confederation, and the period between the Swabian war and the Reformation was one which the Swiss regard as the most glorious of their country in war and diplomacy. Every nation in Europe was bidding for the favor of Switzerland and this little nation was able so to throw its influence as to hold the balance of power. Adjoining States were fired to emulate the example of the Swiss Confederates and one after another gained freedom from the feudal shackles. A great wave of democracy swept over the region, greatly terrifying the nobility and others whose interests were threatened.

The first civil war of the Confederation was the so-called Old Zurich war. In reality it was a struggle between State rights and nationalism, and nationalism was victorious. The Swiss Confederation became a new power in Europe, and within the next few years formed many alliances.

Although Switzerland held such an important place at the end of the fifteenth century, and has served as an example of progressive democracy, nothing has given her greater fame than her religious reformers, Ulrich Zwingli and John Calvin, in the movement which swept through Germany. The bitter struggles between Catholics and Protestants created factions, and a general decline of patriotism set in, yet about this time Swiss independence received its official recognition by the treaty of Westphalia, which put an end to the Thirty Years' War.

In the second half of the eighteenth and the first half of the nineteenth century there was a great revival of arts, literature and science, which seems to have been followed by political regeneration.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century, France having established a new government at home and attempted to foist one upon Switzerland, this country became the battle field of Europe. Those who approved the "one and undivided Helvetic republic" prescribed by France desired to help that country by waging war against Austria. The country was so distracted that in some battles Swiss soldiers fought on both sides. While the two parties of centralists and federalists were trying to frame a constitution that should replace that of the Helvetic republic, Napoleon took matters in his own hands, and the Act of Mediation was signed by Swiss emissaries under his direction.

While this was an improvement over the Helvetic constitution France treated Switzerland merely as a vassal, until the Congress of Vienna once more established Switzerland's independent position among the nations. The signatory Powers on March 20, 1815, made "formal and authentic acknowledgment of the neutrality of Switzerland and they guaranteed her the integrity and inviolability of her territory within her new boundaries."

There were great men to stand sponsor for [illegible] new independence. Metternich worked for Austria, Richelieu for France, Wellington for England, Hardenberg for Prussia and Capo d'Istria for Russia. The person who presented the text was Charles Pictet de Rochemont, the Swiss representative at the Congress.

As it had been a French revolution which in 1798 caused the old Swiss Confederation to collapse, so it was another French revolution which in 1830 gave the signal for the political regeneration of Switzerland on democratic lines. The Swiss people came together in open air meetings to formulate their demands for more rights and the ability to enforce them. Petitions for the revision of the constitution were drawn up and so vigorously pressed that changes were made in many places.

The efforts of the rural population to get better representation and the various religious issues complicated the situation and disturbances were frequent in the various cantons. Yet, despite these troublous political times, education made marvellous progress, and to this period are due the zeal in education and the improvement in methods which have made of Switzerland an inspiration and example for the educators of the world. Five cantons established splendid seminaries for teachers, primary schools were made more effective and secondary schools generally established. Also the cities gymnasiums were founded. In Zurich the venerable institutions the Chorherrenstift and the Carolinum were in 1832 converted into the gymnasium and university that fill so useful a position at the present time.

Out of one of Switzerland's most pronounced virtues, however, arose difficulties. The hospitality that she offered to those who fled from other lands laid her open to trouble with the governments from which they had escaped. Many of these exiles were very prominent men. The Prince de Chartres, afterward Louis Philippe, acted as instructor of mathematics in a Swiss educational institution while in exile, and Louis Napoleon, afterward Napoleon III., was a Swiss burgess, having been naturalized, passed through a military school and become captain in the Swiss army. When France made a demand that Louis Napoleon be given up on the grounds that he was a political intriguer, the Swiss refused, and when France ordered an army of 23,000 men against her "turbulent neighbor" determined little Switzerland set out to protect her borders. Louis Napoleon, however, left the country rather than embarrass it by his presence. Thus one war of the century was avoided.

About this time internal troubles again developed. Zurich had organized its legislative and administrative departments better than any other canton. From the primary schools to the university the educational system was a model. Eminent men made it a real intellectual centre, and the government, ambitious to add lustre to the reputation of the city, appointed the famous scholar and free thinker Strauss to a chair in the university. A great protest went up and Strauss resigned, but even this did not quiet the disturbance, which spread to other cities. This was a part of the movement that led up to the one war of the century in Switzerland. As it was over in twenty days and peace was effected with slight loss of life, it hardly deserved to be ranked as a war.

The Diet expelled the Jesuits from Swiss soil and soon afterward commanded the Sonderbund to disband, and in order to enforce the command, they put General Dufour at the head of a force of soldiers. All efforts to reconcile the Unionists and Secessionists failed and the Sonderbund applied to Austria for help. Thus the century of peace with the outside world was again threatened, but the danger was happily averted. General Dufour proved himself worthy of his nation in the humane directions which he gave his men—

"You will advance into the Canton of Lucerne. As you cross the boundary you will leave your anger behind and think only of fulfilling the duties your native country imposes upon you. Attack the enemy boldly, fight bravely and stand by your flag to the last drop of blood. But as soon as victory is declared in our favor forget every feeling of revenge, act like generous soldiers, for you will thus prove your real courage. Under all circumstances do what I have already commanded you respecting churches and all buildings consecrated to divine service. Nothing will disgrace your flag more than insults to religion. Take all the defenceless under your protection; do not allow them to be insulted or maltreated. Do not destroy anything unnecessarily; waste nothing. In a word, conduct yourselves in such a manner as to win respect and to show yourselves worthy of the name you bear."

With this spirit the Union forces went into the war and at the end of twenty days peace was declared with only trifling losses.

HEROIC DEEDS OF BRITISH AND FRENCH BROTHERS IN ARMS

French Boy's Thrilling Deed That May Win Him the Victoria Cross —Glory That Brightens the Awfulness of War

LONDON, Feb. 10. — The Daily Chronicle publishes the following from its special correspondent at Angers:

"Jean Berger 'simple soldat' of the 2nd Regiment of Infantry, should, after the war, be Jean Berger, V.C. He is a Frenchman—yes, but listen to his story.

"He is a boy of about 18 years of age lies in hospital here, wounded badly but not dangerously, in the side and also in the hand.

"Jean belongs to an old Alsatian family. After the war against Prussia his grandfather refused to submit to the rule of the conquerors, and left the province to settle in Normandy. He passed his hatred of the Prussians on to his son, and the son instilled it in the four grandchildren.

"When war broke out two of the sons were already in the army, one as an officer, and the father, calling to him the two boys who were not yet of age to be called upon by the military authorities, said to them: 'Go and enlist! And be sure to join regiments which will operate on the Alsatian frontier.'

"Jean joined the Second Regiment of Infantry, which was soon under orders for Upper Alsace. Before it arrived at the scene of operations, however, fresh instructions were received, and the Second went to operate with the English on the left. He went through the terrible ordeal of the battle of the Marne, and, with his regiment, now sadly diminished in numbers, but with its dash and spirit as of old, he formed one of the stupendous line drawn up to face the Germans in their tremendously strong positions on the Aisne.

"It was during one of the almost innumerable fights which, battles in themselves, are making up that Homeric struggle of the nations on the River Aisne that the Colonel leading the gallant Second was shot down. Machine guns were raking the quickly thrown-up trenches; showers of rifle bullets were falling everywhere around. With that heroism which takes account of nothing save the object in view, Jean rushed out of his shelter to carry his Colonel to safety.

"Through a rain of leaden death he passed scatheless, reached his Colonel and carried him to safety.

Back Through Hail of Lead.

"As he was performing his glorious act he passed an officer of the Grenadier Guards wounded severely in the leg who called out for water.

"'All right!' cried Jean, 'I'll be back in a minute or two.'

"He put the Colonel in the shelter of a trench where the Red Cross men were at work, procured some wine from one of the doctors, and set forth again to face the bullet showers. And again he went out untouched.

"Reaching the English officer, Jean held up the flask to the wounded man's lips, but before he could drink a bullet struck the young Frenchman in the hand carrying away three fingers, and the flask fell to the ground. Quickly, as though the flask had merely slipped out of one hand by accident Jean picked it up with the other; and, supported by the young Frenchman, the English officer drank.

"While he was doing so a bullet drilled Jean through the side. Yet in spite of his intense pain, he managed to take off his knapsack, and, searching in it, discovered some food, which he gave to his English comrade.

"'But what about you yourself' asked the officer.

"'Oh,' replied Jean brightly, 'it's not long since I had a good meal.'

"As the Guardsman was eating, he and Jean discovered that near them was a wounded German soldier, who, recovering from the delirium of wounds, was crying out for food and drink. The Englishman, taking the flask which had still some wine in it, and also the remainder, of the food from the Frenchman's knapsack, though suffering great pain, to roll himself along till he reached the spot where the German soldier lay. There, however, he found he was, by himself, too weak to give the poor fellow anything.

"So he shouted to Jean to come to his assistance, and, though movement could only be at cost of great pain, the young Frenchman managed, too, to reach the place, and together, Englishman and Frenchman, succored the dying German. One held him up while the other poured wine between his parched lips.

All Fall in a Heap.

"Then human nature could stand no more, and all three fell, utterly exhausted, in a heap together. All through the long night, a night continually broken by the roar of cannon, Death watched over that strange sleeping place of the three comrades of three warring nations.

"In the morning, shells bursting near them aroused the English officer and the French soldier. Their German neighbour was dead, and for a long time they could only wonder how the day of battle was going. When the forenoon was well advanced they saw Germans advancing.

"Jean, who can speak German, called out, 'We are thirsty; please give us something to drink.' He was heard by some officer of the Uhlans, who rode up, and, dismounting and covering them with his revolver, asked what was the matter.

"'We are thirsty,' said Jean.

"The German looked at the little group. He saw his countryman lying dead with an empty flask beside him, and guessed what was the scene of comradeship and bravery which the spot had witnessed. He gave instructions to an orderly, and wine was brought and given to the two wounded men. Surely, that is a scene and a deed which will wipe out many a bitter thought and memory of war!

"Just then the cannonade burst forth again with tremendous fury, and the German force which had come up had to retire. Shells were soon bursting all around, and fragments struck the English officer. He became delirious with pain, and the young Frenchman, stiff, feverish, and weak himself, saw that it was necessary to do something to bring the officer to a place where he would be safe and would receive attention.

"Jean tried to lift the Englishman, but found that he had not sufficient strength left to take his comrade on his shoulder. So, half lifting himself and dragging and rolling him at times, the gallant little piou-piou brought the wounded officer nearer and nearer to safety and help. The journey was two miles long! * * * But at last it was over."

May Get Victoria Cross.

"The two men came upon some trenches occupied by the allied forces; they were recognized and taken in charge by an officer of the English Red Cross. They had both just strength to shake hands and say goodbye.

"'If I live through this,' said the officer of the Guards, 'I shall do my best to get you the British Victoria Cross. I've your number and that of your regiment. God bless you, mon comarade.' And the guardsman lost consciousness.

"Jean Berger lies in hospital here in Angers; he is expected to recover.

"That is the story; and that is why I believe that England will think that Jean Berger, 'simple soldat' of the Second Regiment of Infantry, should become Jean Berger, V. C.

"For the two nations have become one by blood shed and bravery displayed, and, in addition, a little incident which I can relate will show that there is a precedent for a union of honours as there is evidence of a complete union of hearts.

"In the British Expeditionary Force there is an English soldier, a member of a cyclist corps, who is proud to wear upon his breast the 'medaille militaire of the French Army.

"The story of the stirring incident has been told to me by Henri Roger, a young soldier of the Fifth Infantry, who saw it from the trenches and who is now lying wounded in hospital here.

"During one of the engagements last week on the River Ainse the Fifth was holding an intrenched position and was faced in the distance by a strong force of the enemy. To the right and left of the opposing forces were large clumps of trees, in one of which a force of English troops had taken up a position, a fact regarding which the Germans were unaware. In the other wood, it was soon discovered, lay a considerable body of German infantry with several machine gun sections.

Cyclist Wins Decoration.

"A road ran beside the wood in which the enemy lay hidden, and along it a force of French infantry was seen to be advancing. How were they to be saved from the ambush into which they were marching? That was the problem, and it was a difficult one.

"Every time the French troops in the trenches endeavoured to signal to their oncoming comrades hidden German sharpshooters picke off the signalers. Soon the position seemed to be almost desperate; every moment the intrenched French soldiers expected to hear the hideous swish of the Maxims mowing down their unspecting comrades.

"Suddenly, however, something happene which attracted the attention of the French and German trenches. From the wood where the English lay hidden a cyclist ashed—the English, too, had seen the danger, and a cyclist had been ordered to carry a message of warning to the advancing French column, several hundreds strong.

"The cyclist bent low in his saddle an darted forward; he had ne gone a hundred yards before he fell, killed by a well-aimed German bullet. A minute later another cyclist appeared, only, in a second or two, to share his comrade's fate.

"Then a third—the thing had to done! The bullets whissed around him, but on he went over the fire-swept sone. The Frenchmen held their breath as they watched the gallant cyclist speeding toward the French column; puffs of smoke from the wood where the Germans were showed that the sharpshooters were redoubling their efforts. But the cyclist held on and soon passed beyond some high ground where he was sheltered from the Geramns, but could still be seen by the intrenched French.

"The Frenchmen could not resist a loud 'Hurrah!' when they saw the daring cyclist dismount on reaching the officer in command of the troops which he had dared death to save.

"The officer heard the message and took in the position at a glance. He gave an order or two instantly, and turned to Englishman.

'Then was there a fine but simple battle picture which should live.

"The deed which had saved hundreds of lives was one of those which bring glory as of old back to the horror of modern warfare. Courage, and courage alone, had triumphed, unsupported by any of the wonderous machinery of the armies of to-day.

"That was what the French officer recognized. He saluted the gallant fellow standing by the cycle. Then, with a simple movement, took the 'medaille militaire' — the 'Victoria Cross of France—from his own tunic and pinned it on the coat of the Englishman.

"'I am glad,' young Roger told me when he had finished relating the story. 'to have lived to see that deed. It was glorious!'"

6 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cosnecon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

JEWS' DEBT TO ENGLAND

"My brethren, England deserves that her Jewish sons should gladly die for her. In what other country are the teachings of Holy Writ so venerated and obeyed? What other country is so free of prejudice on the score of religion and pernicious racial antipathies. England has honored the Jew as no other country has."

In a message breathing unswerving loyalty to the Empire Rabbi Jacobs, speaking to the Holy Blossom Synagogue, Toronto, called upon the Jewish people to put forth every effort to aid the cause Britain had made her own, to take their places in the firing line, to help the distressed and to minister with unwearying generosity to the sick and wounded. The service was a special one of intercession and prayer for the success of the allied cause and the speedy coming of peace.

A great English writer had said. "To engage in war without a clear necessity is a crime of the blackest dye. When the necessity is clear it then becomes a crime to shrink from it." It was this principle which had always guided British statesmen. England had no alternative but to fulfil her solemn pledges and protect weaker nations to whom she was bound by sacred treaties.

LIFE AT ALDERSHOT

Lots of Drill and Early Rising But Highlander Enjoys It

In a letter from Aldershot, Tom Smalley, lance-corporal in the Seaforth Highlanders, and formerly fourth assistant clerk at the Blackburn Union Offices, said: "I am writing this letter with water swilling round my feet, having been rained off morning drill. I think we will be going to the front in a very short time. With regard to work here I will try to give you an idea of a day with the colors—4.30 a.m., rise, wash and shave; 5 a.m., early breakfast, consisting of tea and a biscuit; 5.30 to 8.30, parade with full equipment for inspection, platoon drill, and marching drill; 8.45, breakfast, tea, quarter-loaf of bread and brawn; 9.30 a.m. to 12.30, physical drill and platoon drill; 1 o'clock, dinner, one potato and three or four pieces of meat; 2.30 to 4.30 rifle drill and target practice; 5 p.m., tea, same as breakfast; 6.30 to 8.30 night marching.

"As we have to be in camp and lights out at 9.15 p.m., you will see that it means stealing a few minutes after meals to write letters. I am beginning to enjoy this life. We have been drilling in gymnasium singlets, with the arms and the neck turned in, and the result is we look like a troop of Indians. I feel in the best of health, and as strong as a young lion. It will be hard work to settle down to pen-pushing when I come back after such a wild life; but I suppose I shall come to like it just as well as when I got into it."

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Grey, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

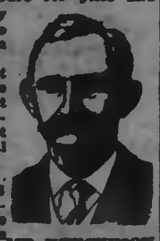
Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

Cured Fifteen Years Ago of Piles and Eczema

By Using Dr. Chase's Ointment—Certifies That the Cure Was Permanent.

Some people have tried so many doctors and so many treatments in their search for cure for piles and eczema that they find it difficult to believe there is an actual cure.



MR. KETCHESON

The strong point about Dr. Chase's Ointment is that it not only brings relief promptly, but brings about actual and lasting cure.

In 1897 Mr. Ketcheson, 35 Deure street, Peterboro', Ont., wrote as follows:—"I was troubled for thirty years with itching piles and eczema. I could not sleep at night, and when I got warm the itching was terrible. Eczema covered my legs down to the knees, perfectly raw. I have tried every preparation I could hear of. Seeing Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised, I procured a box, and this Ointment effected a complete cure."

On Sept. 23, 1913, Mr. Ketcheson wrote as follows:—"I received a letter from you to-day, saying that you found on file a statement made by me 15 years ago. I have always given Dr. Chase's Ointment a good name since it cured me, and shall tell you how I came to use it.

"I had suffered for many years from eczema and piles, and had tried doctors and everything I could hear of in vain. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I purchased it at once, and was soon completely cured. That was fifteen years ago, so there can be no doubt of the cure being a permanent one. I have met a great many people who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Woman Who Never Sleeps Amazes Scientific Men; Has Been Constantly Awake For a Period of 7 Years

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 10.—Mrs. Edward Hauck, of this city, says she has slept only half an hour in the last seven years.

Her husband substantiates her statement.

Seattle physicans say it is impossible—that if Mrs. Hauck hasn't slept for seven years, by all the laws of nature she would have been dead long ago.

"The average person," declared Dr. G. W. Griffin, a local physician, whom Mrs. Hauck consulted, "couldn't go much more than a week without sleep. They would die of exhaustion. The brain will go just so long without the rest given it in sleep."

Doctors are puzzled by Mrs. Hauck's affliction.

Dr. C. C. McClure thinks Mrs. Hauck is mistaken when she says she hasn't slept for years.

"It is a well-established medical fact," he said, "that persons often convince themselves they have not closed their eyes in sleep when in truth the opposite is true. Such cases are often noted in hospitals. The patient will assert he hasn't slept a wink, while the nurse's record will show he has slept for hours, perhaps."

The three doctors agree that a nervous disorder is primarily responsible for Mrs. Hauck's plight.

Dr. Griffin says she is a neurasthenic.

"She is honest enough, I believe, in saying she hasn't slept for seven years," the doctor said, "but it can't be true."

In addition, Dr. Griffin noted that the woman has a floating rib which he says undoubtedly has contributed to her nervous condition.

Dr. McClure stated he found indications, too, of heart trouble.

"It's all very well for the doctors to say I'm mistaken," Mrs. Hauck herself said, "but no one who knows me, I'm sure, will say I am out of my right mind, and I guess I know better than any one else whether I have slept or not."

Two or three years ago, one night, she dozed off, she declares, and slept for fully half an hour.

Often, now, she feels sleepy, and immediately lies down, in the hope that the longed for unconsciousness will come. But it never does.

She weighs 25 pounds less than she did seven years ago, when her long period of sleeplessness began. She suffered severely for the first two or three [illegible], and seems

"It has come to be a sort of matter of fact condition with me now," she went on. "There is no pain, only a kind of dull feeling that weighs down on me. And the nights, you know, are so long when one is alone, and everybody else in the world is sleeping."

She passes little of her time in bed.

Early in the evening, she lies down with her little daughter, Irene Bell, 1½ years old, until the child is in slumberland. Then she gets up, clears away her work, and prepares for her long siege against the coming of daybreak.

Edward Hauck, the husband, is employed as a cook. He works nights:

"I worked in the daytime until recently, though," he said, "and slept here at home at night, and I know my wife is not mistaken when she says she spends her nights just as wide awake as she is during the day. Occasionally, when she tried going to bed, I'd wake up and find her tossing beside me, always awake. Generally, though, she would be sitting in our one rocking chair, with the shaded lamp beside her, reading."

Mrs. Hauck says she finds she can get more physical relaxation in a chair at night than in bed. She makes the chair comfortable with bedclothes, partially disrobes, and lies back to count off the hours.

"She's such a plucky little person," her husband explains, "that she hard- [illegible], and seems anxious only that baby and I shall get our rest."

Mrs. Hauck sought relief from physicians in the east, before coming to Seattle, three years ago from Berlin, Ont., but could get none, she says. She has bought drugs, and sleeping powders, and patent remedies at various times, in various pharmacies, both with and without the advice of physicians. But nothing has helped, she says.

Germany Dominates Banks, Commerce, Industries and the Newspapers of Italy

Dr. Vittorio Racca, Professor of Political Economy in the University of Rome, in a recent interview with the New York Times, gives an interesting account of German domination of Italian finances and industry.

It began, he says, with the formation of the Triple Alliance in 1882, and has now resulted in the control of most of the financial institutions in Italy, and in many political matters, both domestic and foreign. Berlin has at times dictated what the Italian Parliament shall do; it owns most of the bigger "Italian" steamship lines; the cream of the Italian shipping trade is gathered in by other lines which are German in name as well as in ownership. Germany is Italy's millstone about the neck; the burden has become intolerable. Italy's opportunity has come, Dr. Racca believes, and she will seize it.

"The German propaganda in Italy, of which much has been heard on this side of late, has been carried on for many years," said Dr. Racca. "Its work was seen in the beginning in the Triple Alliance in 1882.

DENIED AID TO ITALY.

"As soon as Germany and Austria had succeeded in getting Italy's pledge to join them, they denied the aid they had proferred in respect to her positions in the Mediterranean, in spite of the fact that the new situation had been created by a violation of the status quo in that sea, and to the detriment of Italy.

"At that time France was our best customer. Naturally enough, she replied to our entrance into the Triple Alliance by denouncing her commercial treaties with us, this having the effect of making our economic condition even worse than it was. Italy tried to have Germany and Austria sign commercial treaties compensating her for the loss suffered by the denunciation of her treaties with France. In fact, such treaties were actually signed, but though they apparently gave Italy satisfactory terms, their effect was to make an economic invasion of our country by her two allies much easier than the exportation of her products into Germany and Austria.

"Italy was immediately invaded by travelling salesmen from these two countries, and we were obliged to buy their wares because we could not buy from any other source. Then, advantage being taken of the provisions of the new commercial treaties, a large number of commercial, industrial and maritime concerns were started throughout our country, all of them with German capital, German directors and German officials. Even German skilled workers were brought in to supply labour.

"All this tremendous economic building would have failed had it not had as its backbone a solid German bank. So it was that Germany created in Italy the Banca Commerciale and the Credito Italiano. These institutions were perfectly legal, because the Italian law only requires that certain directors and officials must be Italians. The Germans put in such officials, but they stripped them of all authority, and placed all of this in the hands of a small number of German officials who received their orders direct from Berlin.

"Later on the Germans bought out all of the independent banking concerns of any importance, so that now in the whole of Italy there are no independent commercial banks—at least none except the Banca di Roma, a Catholic institution.

"These banks have proved to be a powerful instrument of domination in the hands of the Germans. Many politicians who have been useful to the Germans have received splendid positions as directors of banks or of concerns supported by the banks, the only condition imposed being that they should draw their salaries and keep quiet. Only persons who were known to be friendly to Germany or at least neutral, could get money from the banks. In this way the German hold upon the economic life of Italy was complete.

"Fortunately the Clerical Banca di Roma was liberal enough to lend money to trustworthy concerns, no matter whether they were owned by Catholics, Socialists, or Free Masons, but this was not sufficient to destroy the German grip on Italian economic life. The steamship companies, such as the Navigasione Generale, the Veloce, the Italia, and the Lloyd Italiano, have fallen, one after another, into the hands of the Germans. A time came when the Italian Government wished to modify the law giving subsidies to steamship companies in order to create independent lines, but through their friends in Parliament and the press, the Germans succeeded not only in having the bill rejected, but in having the Government overthrown.

"The Lloyd Sabaudo was created—and from an authoritative source it has been reported that all the members of the Italian royal family have invested large sums of money in the new line. The company has been fought not only by ordinary rate cutting, but at the time of the war in Tripoli German influences succeeded in arranging steamships of the Lloyd Sabaudo were taken by the Italian Government for the transportation of troops and ammunition and these were kept off their trade routes for months while the German-owned lines gathered in their business.

GOT ITALY'S COMMERCE.

"While this was done, the Germans were appropriating the best of our overseas commerce through a proviso of the trade and navigation treaty between Italy and Germany, which secures to both countries equal rights in navigation, landing, docking, and so on, in the ports of each other. This proviso has been of no use to Italy, but by means of it, Germany has established a wonderful traffic between Italy and the rest of the world, as witness the growth of the Mediterranean services of the North German Loyd, the Hamburg American, and the Hamburg-South American lines.

"When Italy began to take an active interest in Balkan questions, the need was immediately felt of a bank to back the economic penetration of our country into these regions, and the Banca Commerciale d'Oriente was created. Italian in name, as usual, but completely German in fact. This new bank got hold of all our economic activities in Turkey, Servia, Montenegro, and the other adjacent States, and it was one of the highest officials of this bank, an Italian, but one of the most unscrupulous tools of German and Austrian interests in Italy, who succeeded in having himself appointed one of the negotiators of peace between Italy and Turkey after the war in Tripoli. In that way, he secured to German interests the dominating influence in Italian North Africa, Albania, and so on. This action, dreadful as it is, was no surprise to those who were familiar with the work of that abject creature in the Balkans.

"Through the economic patronage I have spoken of, Germany succeeded in getting under her thumb a large number of politicians, who on account of benefits to come were ready to do anything she wished. Thus a large number of members of both Houses of Parliament became mere instruments in her hands. Our whole political life, internal and external, was directed according to the interests of Berlin and Vienna. At the beginning of the Alliance, Italy was forced to spend for armament such enormous sums of money, that she was brought almost to the verge of bankruptcy.

"In Europe, more than in other countries, the press represents certain definite economic or political interests. The Germans naturally try to influence the press, too, and by becoming stockholders in many of the more influential Italian papers, or by bribes, succeeded in making them say or not say what Germany has liked. Even now, when all Italy is against Germany and Austria, this hideous campaign is going on, and millions are being sent to subsidise papers that nobody reads and everybody hates, or to create all over the country pro-German papers that have no readers; and, strange to say, no editors that dare to state their relation to those papers.

ITALIANS DEEPLY RESENTIVE.

"I would be very sorry if anybody who reads what I have said gets the impression that the Italians are nothing but sheep that accept blindly what Germany wants, and act accordingly. The Germans, in spite of all their efforts, have succeeded in aligning with them only a small minority of soulless, heartless, rotton politicians. They have never reached the heart or soul of Italy. The Italian people have always been deeply resentful of the unscrupulous methods of the Germans.

"But Italy has prepared herself on land and sea for a conflict that she has seen coming. All our armaments, all our military preparations, have been directed in the last years against Austria, not because we wanted war, but because we wanted to be ready against Austria, just as we had already prepared ourselves to defend ourselves against France at the beginning of the Triple Alliance.

"I do not believe that, if Italy joins the Allies now, Germany and Austria will be able to do us great harm from a military point of view. Our troops are known to be among the best in the world, and, fighting against Austria, they will have to their advantage not only the splendid training offered by the war in Tripoli, but the marvellous moral force engendered by concentrated hatred against the country that for so many years has misgoverned a large part of our country.

"Italy has stood and still stands to a man behind Premier Salandra and King Victor Emmanuel, full of hope and force, conscious of her duty toward humanity and toward herself. Italy will win, and it will be a victory for civilization."

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Feb. 12.—A semi-official statement issued this afternoon says.

"During the curse of a recent meeting His Majesty King Albert of Belgium bestowed upon General Joffre the insignia of the Grand Cross of the Order of Leopold.

"In expressing to the King of Belgium his warm appreciation of this high distinction General Joffre thanked His Majesty for this new evidence of esteem which he thus desired to show to the French army in the person of its chief, and which would strengthen still further the bonds uniting the two allied armies"

FED BEGGAR AND RECEIVED $58,000

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 12.—Four years ago this month a young man, ill and hungry, applied at the rear door of a house in South Marshfield avenue for food. The maid called her mistress and the man told her a story of coming to America from Prague, Bohemia, and of finding himself homeless and penniless. He was too proud to let his people know of his condition. An hour before he had been discharged from the County Hospital.

The woman, greatly moved by his story, gave him a good meal and let him sleep that night in the basement. An old suit of clothes belonging to her husband was given to him.

His health became so bad that it was found necessary to deport him. He returned to Bohemia in September, 1911.

The woman who was kind to the boy has received word from a firm of lawyers that by his death she [illegible] acy of $25,000 and that the same amount was bequeathed to her sister.

Mrs. Jennie Wolf is one of the beneficiaries of the will. Her sister, Miss Bessie Gordon, is the other.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments, your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffing, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

PET DOG FINDS $3,000 RING

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Many employees of the Plaza were kept busy recently searching for a diamond and pearl ring valued at $3,000, lost by Miss Patricia Burke, of Los Angeles, Cal. Where she lost the piece of jewelry she could not tell. Perhaps her little Pomeranian Digi gleaned that there was something wrong. Anyhow he solved the mystery.

Miss Burke told the management of the Plaza about her loss, and Detective Mason of the hotel, did all he could but found no trace of the ring. Miss Burke decided to advertise for it and she went to the writing room to pen an advertisement. Digi all day long had wondered, so his owner believes, what the trouble was about. He had not left Miss Burke and was at her heels wherever she went.

When the advertisement was written Miss Burke looked it over and was showing it to E. Rorke, one of the assistant managers of the hotel, when Digi, to get the attention of Miss Burke, made odd noises. Miss Burke looked at Digi, and there, to her amazement, was the ring gripped tightly in the teeth of the Pomeranian.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 11.— All the bows and arrows in Belgium, where archery was formerly a favourite sport, have been confiscated by the Germans, according to the Telegraaf, because of the discovery that arrows were being used to shoot messages across the frontier.

CHILDREN'S SHOES.

When next you buy a pair of shoes for the children, take a hat pin or the point of a pair of scissors and score the soles and heels diagonally in lines about half an inch apart. Then start at the toe again and cross these lines and you will find the child will not slip so often. If for any reason your children do fall and bump their foreheads, rub the place at once with salted butter and there will be very little disfiguration.

LEADING FIGURE IN SOUTH AFRICA

General Smuts Proves His Loyalty to Crown—His Done Much to Consolidate the Two Factions

It is said that the strongest man in South Africa is not the Premier, Gedeon Botha, but General Jan. Christian Smuts, his Minister of Finance and Militia, and his oldest personal friend. General Smuts has proved himself a devoted and loyal British subject, and has won the admiration and respect of the English-speaking Afrikanders quite as much as has General Botha. Indeed, it was Smuts's voice that was first heard in South Africa after war had been declared. General Beyers, commander-in-chief of the defence forces of South Africa, had resigned rather than take the offensive against the Germans, and the letter in which Smuts received his resignation will be remembered as long as there is a history of South Africa to be remembered. He lashed the traitor with words of scorn, and remarked that if Beyers had been in Germany he would have been shot for his action.

In the Boer War Smuts proved himself a military genius hardly second to De Wet himself, thus endearing himself to the burghers, and when he entered the Botha Government after the war he consolidated himself in their affections. It is true that he was responsible for the deportation of the labor leaders from South Africa, and thus incurred the enmity of the union men, but his firm handling of a difficult problem was generally approved by the English-speaking population, and by the Boer farmers everywhere. Moreover, his firm note to the Home authorities, in which he drew the color line, and declared that South Africa must be kept a white man's country, was almost everywhere welcomed.

The son of a typical Boer farmer who could do little more than read or write young Smuts at school early distinguished himself. He became a fine classical scholar and eventually won a scholarship that was to take him to England. Unfortunately, the bank which was administering this trust failed, but Cecil Rhodes stepped in, and sent Smuts to Cambridge. Here he won a gold medal and headed the list of both parts of the Law Tripos in 1894. On his return to South Africa he became associated with Rhodes, who intended to place him in Parliament. Then came the Jameson Raid, and the friendship between the two men was broken, Smuts becoming one of the most resourceful and determined of the great Empire builder's opponents.

In 1897 he was made State Attorney by Kruger. It is said that he did his best to persuade Kruger to grant reforms, but, though Oom Paul appreciated his unusual gifts, he considered him a mere youth, which indeed he was, and declined to take his advice upon the questions that were rapidly bringing the Transvaal and the British Empire to a state of war. When war broke out, Smuts took the field as a volunteer but soon showed that he was as able a soldier as he was a lawyer, was advanced to the rank of General, and when the war

Was Troubled With Eczema.

Would Nearly Yell With Pain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED HIM.

Mr. R. J. Swales, Harriston, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer with eczema. I tried all kinds of salves, but they did me no good. Sometimes I would nearly yell with the pain, and would pass little white worms. I was told to get at the blood, so I used four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it has made a complete cure."

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, boils, pimples, eruptions, ulcers, etc., are all caused by the blood becoming impoverished, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble, and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all its impurities and by this means cure all skin and blood troubles.

This valuable preparation has been on the market for the last forty years, so you do not make any experiment when you give it a trial.

TREAT EVERY CHILD'S COLD EXTERNALLY

"RUB ON "NERVILINE"—A SAFE CURE

A Miracle of Healing Power in Every Drop of Nerviline

Little children can't be expected to stay in and stay out, without sometimes coming to grief. Some of their games and rough and tumble, useless undue fatigue, and not infrequently the kiddies are bruised; have strains, swellings and aches just like their elders.

When children come in tired and sore, see they are well rubbed with Nerviline. It does wonders in breaking up a cold—has an amazing effect on any sort of muscular pain.

The wise mother always keeps trusty old Nerviline on hand. It has a wonderful list of uses, and a bottle handy on the bedroom shelf often saves calling in the doctor.

Young and old alike can safely use Nerviline—there's no harm in it—just a heap of curative power when you rub it on.

When ever there is a pain or sickness, Nerviline should be close by. It is a true specific for rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica or neuralgia.

As for earache, toothache, sore back, sprains or strains, nothing else will cure so fast as good old Nerviline. In use about fifty years—sold by dealers everywhere. The large 60c. family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c., all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

Dissolve It, That's Best Way.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to disolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

PRISONERS OF WAR A SERIOUS PROBLEM

Well Defined Rules Govern Their Treatment But no Definition Exists as to Meaning of Term

Among the many military problems that will be worked out for the first time in the conflict now raging is that of caring for prisoners of war. This is a new problem, because of its magnitude. In the Russo-Japanese War the Japs had not more than 50,000 prisoners; and the Russians had comparatively few. So thorough was the Japanese organization that the Japs were able to treat their prisoners quite as well as their own soldiers, and as the war was not a very long one the question of adequately feeding and sheltering the captives was not insoluble. In the present war, however, there are hundreds of thousands of prisoners, and the problem constituted by the great armies of prisoners will be one of the first magnitude.

It seems likely that all the powers involved will regret that they did not accept the solution proffered at The Hague a few years ago, which has the effect that all prisoners of war should be returned to their respective countries, which would be pledged to detain them en masse until the war was over.

The idea of detaining them en masse is to prevent them rejoining their regiments by stealth, but in the light of a certain famous remark about a "scrap of paper," probably Britain and her allies are justified in supposing that Germany at least would not consider herself bound to abide by any agreement entered into previous to the war.

There is a general international agreement that while prisoners of war may be set to work by their captors, they must be paid for their services, and they must not be employed in any hazardous or humiliating occupation. Nevertheless, reports have been received of captured French soldiers in uniform being forced to clean the streets of Stuttgart and other German cities.

Who Are Military Prisoners?

The international understanding as to the treatment of prisoners was arrived at in 1907 by The Hague Peace Conference. All civilized powers then pledged themselves to a certain course of treatment of prisoners of war, but it was due to the action of Germany that no definition of what constitutes a prisoner of war was arrived at. Germany's policy on this subject was made clear at a conference held in [illegible] 1874, [illegible] Brussels [illegible] Russian Czar in the course of the Franco-Prussian War. At this conference practically all the other powers, at the suggestion of the French representative, wished to have citizens who took arms in defence of their homes treated as recognized belligerents, and accorded the same treatment when captured as soldiers in uniform. Germany objected then, as she objected in 1907, and no agreement was made in committee.

The point is that Germany has only one theory of war. That is a war of invasion. She has always calculated to do her fighting on the enemy's soil, and therefore she calculated that any armed citizens would be her enemies, not her countrymen. Any particular consideration extended to these fighters was confined to an enemy, and that is why she stoutly refused to recognize them. To have done so would have been to admit that the thousands of armed French citizens met in uniform whom she had taken prisoners and shot or hanged in 1870 and 1871 had been practically murdered.

France's Humane Stand

In 1894 France, without regard to the action of any other nation, passed a series of laws which recognized the armed citizen not in uniform as a belligerent, and entitled to all the consideration extended to any belligerent. The regulations then adopted by France were the basis of the regulations subsequently approved by the Peace Conference, but Germany's action, as stated, prevented the adoption of any definition of a prisoner of war.

At best the fate of a prisoner of war is an unhappy one, especially if he is an officer. At the close of the war, when he returns home, an investigation is held to ascertain all the facts as to his capture. If he happens to be wounded he is given back pay, retains his rank, and may even be promoted. But if he is not wounded he is called upon to explain how he was captured, and if the court thinks that he was neglectful of duty or cowardly he may be punished. To be captured unwounded, therefore, is hardly better than to be wounded or even killed on the field, and this may explain the desperation with which officers will fight to the last to avoid falling unwounded into the hands of the enemy.

WHEN BUYING A HORSE.

How to Find Out Whether a Trotter Has Cheated You.

In Farm and Fireside a contributor says that ordinarily the purchaser of a horse is allowed twenty-four hours in which to try and return any horse found unsound. In great horse marts like Chicago a twenty-four hour limit for testing is allowed. This contributor tells us follows how to test a horse:

"When a horse has been doped for heaves the disease symptoms will be likely to return in twenty-four hours if the horse is given all the drinking water he will take and is fed generously on bulky food. He can then be thoroughly tested for wind by running and by dragging a wagon with a locked wheel.

"Where cocaine is used to hide lameness its effects will pass off in a few hours. A hypodermic injection of morphine, strychnine or similar drug will pass off in twelve hours or less. Cannabis indica or chloral hydrate makes a horse sleepy for from twelve to eighteen hours unless the dose is very large, in which case the effect will last longer. The only sure way to protect yourself is to buy a horse from a reputable dealer and get a written guarantee of soundness signed before a witness."

PRAISE FOR "TERRIERS"

Equal in Every Respect to the Regulars Says Observer

I have had many opportunities of talking with officers and men in the regular army who have fought side by side with members of the Territorial Force, writes a London correspondent, and I have seen the Territorials themselves when they have been out of action, and everything I have seen and heard has led to but one conclusion—that the well-trained British Territorial is as fine a fighter as one could wish to meet. When I speak of the well-trained Territorial I draw no distinction between the various war regiments in the field, for, without exception, the man who volunteered for service in France and Belgium has come up to the standard which one has come to expect from the British soldier. That is saying much for this war, if it has shown anything at all, has shown that the British soldier, true to his reputation of being one of the best fighters in the world, has established a great personal ascendency over his opponent. In that ascendency the British Territorial shares.

It would be undesirable to give any indication of the number of Territorials in the field, but it is certainly much larger than any people in England might suppose. It would be a mistake, let me add, to assume that the work with which they have been entrusted has given them little scope for action. That their work could not be better done is proved by the tributes which are paid them by the men who have made the art of war their business in life.

These tributes are as sincere as they are flattering. For example, two soldiers from one of our best regiments, whom I met—men, who, for some weeks, had been fighting shoulder to shoulder with Territorials, who happen to come from Wales—stated without reserve of any sort that their comrades at arms were as good fighters as any. They shot well, they acted well, and when their turn came they did well. But these two men, like all others I have talked to, took special care to emphasize the magnificent spirit with which the Territorials fight, their high daring, and their fine enthusiasm.

The presence of the Territorials, both of them agreed, is the finest tonic in the world for trench weariness. I heard from many sources that when going under fire for the first time the Territorials, without exception, acted with a restraint and self-possession which surprised the seasoned veteran, and gained and held his warm respect. With the bayonet, experience has shown that the Territorial has little to learn from anybody, and certainly nothing at all from the German soldier. Altogether, therefore, it may be said that the Territorial has justified himself, and more than justified himself.

FIVE MINUTE CURE IF STOMACH IS BAD

"Pape's Diapepsin" is quickest, surest indigestion cure known.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomach. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home — keep it handy — get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

Saved by His Wit.

The French author Martainville was a royalist and did not hesitate to attack the French revolution and its authorities. Presently, of course, he was summoned to appear before the revolutionary tribunal, with the terrible Fouquier at its head. The revolutionary tribunals at that time did not hesitate to send anybody to the guillotine who had ventured to attack them. Martainville expected to go with the rest of the victims. "What is your name?" asked the revolutionary judge. "Martainville," said the young author. "Martainville!" exclaimed the judge. "You are deceiving us and trying to hide your rank. You are an aristocrat, and your name is De Martainville." "Citizen president," exclaimed the young man, "I am here to be shortened, not to be lengthened! Leave me my name!" A true Frenchman loves a witticism above all things, and the tribunal was so much pleased by Martainville's grim response that it spared his life.

4. Forming column on the move at right angles to the line of advance in fours. FACING RIGHT. ADVANCE IN COLUMN.

The leading company commander will give the command Form Fours, Right, Left—Wheel, and each company commander will act similarly in time to gain his place in column, the companies acting as in Sec. 97, 5.

On the command Right, officers and supernumeraries will double to their places in fours as in Plate XIV. (See Sec. 107.)

The commander of the leading company will give the command On the left form—company, followed by Forward as soon as the formation is completed. Each company commander will act similarly when his company reaches the point where the leading company formed.

Note. If it is desired to form column simultaneously the battalion commander will give the command, ON THE LEFT FORM—COMPANIES, when the whole of the companies will form at the same time, and then, FORWARD, when the whole battalion will lead on in column.

The leading company will be halted and turned to its right by its commander, the remaining companies will be led in rear of it, at column (or quarter column) distance. On reaching their positions they will be halted and turned to the right by their commanders in succession.

The leading company will be turned to its right by its commander and will lead on, the next company will continue in fours till its leading four is in rear of the centre of the company in front of it, when it will receive the command Right Incline. When its leading four is in rear of the left of the leading company it will again receive the command Right Incline. It should then be at column distance from the leading company.

The remaining companies will be inclined similarly in succession.

107. Positions in Column of Fours.

1. When in column of fours on the march, drums and band will be twenty paces in front of the leading company, or if desired the band, only, may be in front of the leading company, the drums taking position in the centre of the column or vice-versa; machine guns, stretcher bearers, ammunition and tool pack animals, carts and wagons will be in the battalion; the whole in the above order. The cyclist section, if present, will be in rear of the machine guns. The machine gun detachments will march in rear of the limbered wagon or of the pack animals carrying the guns. In no case should more than 4 men march abreast, including commanders and supernumeraries. (See Plate XIV.) The adjutant and the senior major will accompany the battalion commander, who will be at the head of the leading company, the third field officer if mounted will be in rear of the battalion, should no third field officer be mounted the senior major will be in rear. The serjeant-major will be in front of the leading company.

2. Columns of fours will march on the left side of the road unless direct orders to the contrary are issued. In the event of the men who are marching on the extreme left of the road being caused greater inconvenience than the others, after each halt the left hand man of each section of fours will place himself on the right when the march is resumed. The distance to be maintained between battalions and companies on the march will be reckoned from the rear officer or man of one battalion or company to the leading officer or man of the next (see F.S. Regs., Part 1, Sec. 25).

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WITNESS TO THE DEED

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

My mistress in Gainsboro road had lost a £5 note in the house, and, the thief was the parlor maid. I knew it from her actions, and three months after I left the house she was caught in a similar offense and owned up to the first theft. However, the crime was laid on me, and because I made indignant and perhaps impudent protest I was flung out of the house at half an hour's notice and refused a character. I was idle for the next three months. The first thing demanded when I applied for a place was a character. As soon as it was learned that I had none it was useless to talk further. It was for this reason that I finally paid a fee to an intelligence office in Margate street and was at length sent for to take a place at general housework. It was an old man named Dyson who wanted me. He was willing to take me without a character because he would have to pay less wages and because, as he grimly asserted, there was nothing lying around loose in his house for me to steal. As we sat face to face I sized him up as mean and penurious, but I did not see any evil in him. He had an aged and infirm wife, he told me, and I would be the only servant.

It was not for me to pick and choose I must have a place and hold it long enough to get a character again. I went with him miles and miles out on the Holburn road, and we at last arrived at the cheaply built and cheap looking cottage he occupied. It was a place devoid of almost all conveniences and had been selected for its cheap rent. I found the old wife deaf, almost blind and palsied, and it was apparent that she had no care whatever.

I soon had evidence that he was in love with a widow in the neighborhood, or at least he desired to be free so that he could marry her. My natural impulse on finding out how he felt toward his wife was to flee the house, but I have explained how I was situated.

In the course of a couple of weeks he declared that the cellar was full of rats and gave me money and commanded me to buy arsenic. He recommended me to go to a store miles away and to say that I wanted it for my complexion and to give my own name. I went to a drug store only two blocks away and gave his name, and when he discovered this he was highly indignant for a day, and I rather expected to be thrown out. However, in the course of three or four days he developed another plan. After coaching the old wife he left me alone with her for the first time, and she begged me to get her some laudanum for toothache and not to mention the matter to him. It was easy to tell that she had been coached what to say, and I refused to buy the drug. A few days later as I was preparing her a soup I had to leave the kitchen for a minute. When I returned the soup was giving out a strange odor, and being satisfied that her husband had poisoned it I, of course, threw it away. He scolded about my waste, but when I looked him squarely in the eyes he dropped his and had no more to say.

I had been with the Dysons five years when the climax came. The old woman was holding her own if not getting better, and the husband's impatience had a savage edge to it. Their bedroom was on the north side of the house. All along on that side was a deep excavation for a factory.

At 10 o'clock one night I lay wondering if he really meant to take her life and how he would finally accomplish it, when I heard a half suppressed scream from his room. I got softly out of bed and went to the farther door, and, looking through a crack, I saw that the window was up and that he stood before it with his wife in his arms. She was hanging on to him with fingers of steel and making a great struggle. I heard him breathing heavily and snarling and growling as he tore her fingers loose, but I did not know what he planned to do till of a sudden he staggered to the open window and flung her out. She screamed as she went to her death, and in my fright I echoed the scream. I remember the man rushing across the room at me, of his dashing open the door, of his striking me down, and then came darkness which lasted for weeks. He had struck me with a piece of iron and fractured my skull. He then carried my body downstairs and bore it a quarter of a mile away and flung it into another excavation. Before taking me from the house he put on my hat and cloak, and thus it appeared to those who found my unconscious body next morning that I had been coming home the night before and fallen into the pit. As to his wife, he gave the alarm and brought the police and made out that it was a case of suicide. While he was fast asleep, as he claimed, she had stolen to the window and leaped to her death.

His story went, and it was several months before there was any contradiction. I had a fractured skull, brain fever and pneumonia and for weeks and weeks lay as one dead. When I mended my memory was confused, and it was seven months before I told my story and put the police on the track. Long before that Dyson had married the widow and sailed for America, and though efforts were made to find him nothing came of them. Never did a man deserve the hangman's rope more, and yet if living today he is free and has no fear of the law.

GOOD NATURAL TEETH.

What They Mean to the Man Over Fifty Years of Age.

"Few factors contribute to jolly age so does pride in personal appearance," writes Dr. John Philip Erwin of Pittsburg, Pa., in Oral Hygiene. "A well groomed person never grows old. Especially essential are well cared for teeth. At no time in life are teeth more valuable than when a man has passed fifty. They double in worth every year after the half century year stone has been reached.

"It is a sad fact," he continues, "that all the dental pastes and powders, past, present and to come, combined and concentrated, cannot restore the normal form of a face destroyed by extraction. It is a blessed truth that modern dentistry can prevent this calamity.

"But the greatest blessing of natural teeth in declining years is derived from the assistance they give to the boiler of the body, the stomach, throughout that period when digestion is on the wane. In youth the stomach stood for beer, Dutch lunches, rabbits and lodge banquets. It seldom kicked back. Not so in maturity. The teeth must now arbitrate many health questions. When the disgruntled stomach is tandemed with dental deficiency the remaining members of the alimentary canal join in a rebellion against food oppression which culminates in a revolution that proves a revelation to the victim. Dyspepsia may be conquered in youth, but never in age. The most pessimistic stomach, coupled with dental efficiency, will develop a fair degree of optimism, possibly a contentous life of complaint.

"Good teeth at fifty proclaim family character, conserve facial contour and insure food comfort."

The Cambodians.

The Cambodians are a docile people, much averse to war. Their language and civilization, unlike those of the remaining peoples of Indo-China, are derived from India, as is also their religion. Their country contains various interesting ruins, the work of the Khmers, a race that has quite disappeared. The ruins at Angkor are remarkably well preserved and are possessed of great beauty.

Coldly Considered.

Germans Lose 20,000 On The Kaiser's Birthday

PARIS, Feb. 12.—In an account of the events from January 27 to the evening of February 6, an "eye witness" with the French army, says:

"The last period of ten days has been one of comparative calm. The actions, engaged in by small forces, have developed upon limited fronts without effect on the operations generally."

Referring again to the fighting, he asserts that the French found a number of bodies, which, he says, "in view of the generally admitted proportion of four wounded to one killed, warrants the conclusion that the German losses during the three days of that fighting amounted to 20,000.

The Chronicler adds: "It is well to repeat this figure, which is disputed by the German General Staff, but which is indisputable."

Details of further brilliant action in the dunes are given, and a tribute is paid to the heroism of the Belgian troops, who held the conquered positions and inflicted severe punishment on the Germans. As during the preceding period, all the positions at La Bassee, temporarily lost by the English and French, were regained after sharp fighting on January 29 and 30.

Two defeats of the Germans between the canal of La Bassee and Arras are recorded, more than two hundred dead being found after the fighting. The writer expresses the belief that the Germans lost in killed and wounded at least three companies. A number of officers were among the dead.

"The French losses were slight," he adds; "we had seven killed and six wounded."

The fighting at La Creute is described as particularly severe, but insignificant as regards consequences. The Germans began the action with an intense artillery fire. They hurled hand grenades at a portion of the first line trenches, causing serious losses to the Allies lines. In this assault the Germans also met with heavy losses—4,000 killed and wounded. The Allies' loss numbered 1,000 killed and wounded.

In the region of Perthes, Mesnil and Massiges the Germans attacked four points simultaneously but, according to this account the Allies remained masters of their positions

Violent engagements occurred in the Argonne on January 27, 29 and 30, the Allies' left giving way slightly, but the centre holding firm, although severly tried. Later the Allies counter attacked six times, the last attack resulting in progress. The German losses were serious.

Daring aerial expeditions over the enemy's lines during the night as well as in the day are noted. An audacious attack on Ostend occurred on the night of January 29, in which three German officers were killed.

Roger Gaeil, a seventeen-year-old volunteer, wounded by shrapnel, who died singing the Marseillaise, receives notice as an heroic example of French youth in perpetuating in the twentieth century the brave deeds of Viala and Bara.

Servian Women Fight Beside Their Soldiers

ATHENS, Greece, Feb. 11.— Sister Susie isn't "sewing shirts for soldiers" in Servia. Neither is Sister Susie knitting socks. One reason is that socks are not worn by Servia's [illegible]. Another reason is that in Servia Sister Susie is a fighting man herself. She's too busy to sew. Thus the words of Britain's latest popular melody do not apply to the extremely masculine type of woman the war has developed along the Danube.

Servia's women are in the war. They are at the very battle front. Homes and fields have been deserted for the firing line; for Servia is fighting for its very existence and the women must help.

For centuries the bravery and patriotism of its women has been tradition in the little nation of Slavs. In no war have they not laid down their household work and gone to the front to nurse the wounded, bury the dead and even to fight.

And in this war, with every able-bodied man and boy at the front there is no reserve to draw upon except the women. And they have upheld history in coming forward even to taking their places in the trenches, because the nation fears Austria will exact a fearful vengeance from the smaller nation if the Germanic alliance is victorious in this war.

Small patched up tents, constructed of anything at hand, are the field hospitals of the little Servian army, small enough at the outbreak of the war, already further depleted by vicious battles. Servia has no perfectly organized Red Cross; it has in fact none of the equipment of modern warfare. The nation has been too poor, stripped of what wealth it had in the Balkan troubles, to provide the latest machinery of destruction.

But what it has provided is an unrivalled body of warriors, trained against the Turks, surpassing by far the fighting ability the overwhelming numbers they are forced to combat."

But Servia is going to pay dearly even if victorious. The nation is in a chaotic state and should the war stop now, it would take years for the Serbs to reconstruct their national scheme.

A letter received by a Serb in Athens gives an idea of the suffering the hardy men and women of the country are compelled to undergo.

"Here we are suffering terrible," reads the letter. "Our por fellows are perishing by hundreds and thousands, but hopes of crushing the tyrant Austria prevent us from becoming disheartened.

"It seems that there are more women at the front than men. And it is well that this is so, because the women of Servia are doing a wonderful work. How many thousands of our wounded, mutilated and frozen sick, would have died from want and inattention had it not been for the woman?

"Young girls are fighting at the side of the fathers and brothers, young wives are holding rifles at the side of their husbands. Their mothers are aiding in the moving of cannon, caring for the wounded, burying the dead and foraging for food.

"Food is a big problem. No crops have been harvested and the nation possesses no money to purchase food. Not only does the army feel this, but the prisoners of war. And Servia is doing its best for the prisoners, to avoid such criticism of its actions as followed the Balkan war."

Servia is attempting to get Roumania into the conflict. Thousands of the Roumanians in Transylvania are subjects of Franz Joseph and this territory is being held out as a bait to cause Roumania to hurl its 600,000 men at Austria.

SEVERE FIGHTING TO THE SOUTH OF LABOISSELLE

Germans Succeed in Exploding a Mine Under Trenches But The Allies Are Maintaining All Their Positions in Spite of the Demolition of Their Trench.

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY IN THE EAST

(Special Cable to The Examiner:)

PARIS, February 12.—3 p.m. official.—Severe fighting continues to the south of Laboisselle, where the Germans have succeeded in exploding a mine under a section of the allies' trenches. Despite this fact it was officially announced here to-day that the allies are maintaining all of their positions there and that the Germans were unable to take advantage of the demolition of the allies' trenches. From the sea to the Somme artillery exchanges continue and are growing in intensity, but there has been no change in the relative positions of the British and German forces. The Germans are again bombarding Tracy le Mont and have succeeded in badly damaging a number of the buildings there. From Rheims to the Soissons angle the allies were to-day engaged in violently bombarding the German positions and were reported to have silenced some of the more active German artillery.

The War Office in connection with its afternoon summary of war conditions, announced that official despatches from Petrograd say that the Germans have lost 40,000 men in their recent attempts to renew the offensive in Poland and that everywhere they have been completely checked.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Germans in the United States are evidently displeased at the United States note of protest to Germany. The Staats Zeitung says:

Those who did not profess to know before, despite all of the explanations of neutrality in which direction the sympathies of the Administration were directed, need only compare the two notes, and become advised. While the protest concerning the repeated misuse of our flags sent to England contains a soft note with "Please don't do it again" plea, the note to Germany, despite its pleasant words, is couched in a threatening and demanding tone.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 12.—Thirteen hundred young Belgians have been arrested by the Germans at Hasselt, and 25 of them have been executed for trying to escape into Holland, according to despatches printed to-day by the Telegraaf. A number of smugglers have also been shot by the Germans, the message says.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OPENED LAST NIGHT

The annual Bible and Missionary convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance opened last night in Bethany Tabernacle with a Bible address by Rev. T. J. Long, District Superintendent of Toronto. He spoke on the subject "The Supremacy of Love," chosing as his text I. Cor. 13:13 (R.V.) "And now abideth faith, hope and love, these three, but the greatest of these is love."

This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, Mr. Long spoke on "the things concerning the last times foretold in Daniel's prophecy He will speak to-morrow afternoon on the "Signs of Modern Times," which point to Christ's coming".

Rev. A. E. Tompson of Jerusalem, Palestine, left Boston last night and is expected to arive in Peterborough this afternoon, via C.P.R. He will deliver his first address in the Tabernacle to-night at 8 o'clock. Having just returned from the war zone he will have many interesting things to tell. You will want to hear him.

Monthly Meeting of Mother's Club

Was Featured by an Interesting Report—Officers Elected

The regular monthly meeting of the Mothers' Club was held on Wednesday afternoon in the parlours of the Y.M.C.A., which was largely attended after the regular order of business. Miss Elsie Adams gave a pianoforte selection which was appreciated by all present, after which Mrs McElhiney gave a very interesting and instructive address, speaking of the pitfalls and dangers parents must guard against in bringing up their boys and girls.

The following report from King Edward School was read by the President, Mrs. Howden:

The Mothers' Circle in connection with the King Edward School was organized on November 20th, when the following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mrs. (Rev.) Clarry.
President—W. G. Howden.
Vice-President—W. H. Moore.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. Pollock.
Secretary—Mrs. Mervin.

The first regular meeting was held on Nov. 27th Since that time meetings have been held each Tuesday, the ladies gathering at 2 o'clock for sewing and on the second Tuesday of the month at 3.30, the regular business meeting is held.

At the Christmas season, with the help of the pupils, teachers and several outside friends we were able to provide twenty-two families with baskets of good cheer, including meat, butter, pies, fruit, etc., a partial list being:

14 children's dresses.
27 articles of underwear.
14 pairs of boots.
4 pairs of rubbers and many other articles, including quilts and blankets, four pairs of new boots and two pair of rubbers. Free milk is being delivered to one family, and medical attendance provided for two children. We also have a mite box, the proceeds of which is used for buying articles necessary for sewing.

FANNY CROSBY FAMOUS HYMN WRITER IS DEAD

Although Blind From Infancy She Had Written More Than Eight Thousand Hymns

WAS 95 YEARS OLD

Examiner Special:

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 12. — Fanny Crosby, the famous blind hymn writer, died here to-day at here home. She was 95 years old. Fanny Crosby contributed more than eight thousand hymns to the Protestant church. She signed her work by over two hundred pen names because her publishers wished to make it appear as though there were other writers in the field. Her hymns are printed in practically every language. She had been blind from infancy. She was not able to read by raised letters, getting all her knowledge through her remarkable memory. "Saved by Grace," "Blessed Assurance," "Rescue the Perishing" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" are some of the best known of her hymns.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Fire, Water and Light committee of the City Council will visit the fire hall this afternoon on their annual trip of inspection. The committee will meet at four o'clock.

More Light Wanted.

The residents in the vicinity of Charlotte Street and Pearl Avenue are complaining of the inadequacy of the of the street lighting system in that vicinity. A light at the corner of Charlotte Sreet and Pearl Avenue or at King Street and Pearl Avenue would solve the difficulty. This light has been promised for some time.

Getting Ready For Spring.

The Board of Works is making preparations to combat with any surplus water that might accumulate as a result of the thaw. This includes the opening up of the catch basins and water courses.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

Ald. Mealley has made a proposal to the Hamilton Street Railway Committee that arrangements be made for a railway around the bay.

A Talk Fest.

The Toronto City Council talked seven hours and business was held up owing to automatic adjournment engineered by Ald. McBride.

M. H. O. Protests.

Dr. F. G. Pearson, Medical Health Officer, Brantford, has protested to the provincial health authorities against the Brantford City Council's failure to order compulsory vaccination. There are at present 50 smallpox cases.

A Whirlwind Campaign.

The Orillia Board of Trade is making an effort to double its membership and with that object in view has appointed a special committee to conduct a whirlwind campaign.

Firemen Injured.

At a $100,000 fire at Sault Ste. Marie yesterday morning in the Barnes block the Fire Chief and several members of the brigade were injured by falling bricks, and one fireman narrowly escaped being burned to death.

The United States again exceeded previous records for petroleum production last year, the government estimate being 92,000,000 barrels.

SITE MAY BE CHANGED

City is Not Obliged to Adopt Present Proposed Site For Sewage Disposal Plant—Can Be Pumped an Indefinite Distance

BOARD WILL DECIDE

Mr. E. A. Peck, of the legal firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, who is acting for the townships to the south of the city, in respect to the city's proposal to erect a sewerage disposal plant in Otonabee, states that he is informed by Dr. McCullough of the Provincial Board of Health that it has not been decided just where the city will be permitted to locate the plant. The city may erect the pumping station at the Government wharf, but it does not follow that the sewerage disposal plant itself must be placed at the point suggested. One of the engineers of the Provincial Board of Health assert that it would be very little more trouble to pump the sewerage two miles if necessary. So that the city is not bound to locate its plant on the site selected, especially should it happen to prove objectionable to a large number of residents in that particular community. The question of selecting a suitable site will have to be decided by the Provincial Board of Health. The city is not obliged to adopt the present proposed site even should it decide to erect the pumping plant at the Government wharf. The sewerage disposal plant can be moved farther down.

A Military Wedding At St. John's

Marriage of Pte. Walter Gash of the 3rd Contingent and Miss E. Fosbracy Yesterday Evening

A military wedding was solemnized at St. Johns church last evening at five o'clock, when Miss Elisabeth Fasbracy of this city, became the wife of Pte. Walter J. Gash of Peterborough, and a member of the 3rd Canadian contingent for overseas service. The ceremony, which was witnessed by a large number of the members of the 3rd contingent, was performed by Capt. Spencer, officer commanding the local detachment of the contingent. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Weeks attended the bride and groom. The bride looked charming in a gown of white, with veil and orange blossems. The groom was in military uniform.

Not in the Arrangements.

An unforseen circumstance that fortunately didn't result seriously, occurred on the return from the church. The road leading from the the church, owing to recent heavy snowfalls, had become almost impassable. In an attempt to drive down it the hansom got stuck in the snow and the cab was turned over on its side. With the assistance of a number of soldier boys, the bride and groom were removed from the vehicle, while the groom gallantly carried his trembling bride to the sidewalk, where they re-entered the cab and drove away without further mishap.

The good wishes of a host of friends follow Pte. Gash and his young bride for a happy wedded life.

NOT GOING THIS WEEK

Local Squadron of 8th Mounted Rifles Will Remain in Peterborough for Several More Days at Least

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

That the Mounted Rifles will not leave for Ottawa for several days at least was the information given the Examiner by Major S. T. Medd, commanding officer of B Squadron, to the Examiner this morning. It was expected that the squadron would have left this week but the looked for orders failed to come along. It is rumoured that until all the men have been vaccinated they will remain in Peterborough.

Speaking of Major Medd's recent visit to Ottawa, the Canadian Military Gazette says: "Major S. T. Medd, commaner of the Peterborough squadron, and Major W. T. Brown, commander of the Toronto squadron, were in Ottawa this week preparing to bring their unions to this city (Ottawa) as soon as the barracks are completed. The regiment is well up to strength and will go into barracks somewhat over establishment. Howick Pavilion is being converted into an excellent barracks. The main building, with its extensive tan bark ring, will be used for drill purposes and there will still be plenty of room left in the pavilion for the quarters of the officers and men. Lt.-Col. Munro is planning a strenuous syllabus of training to get the men in shape as soon as possible. It will be some time yet before the horses for the regiment are sent in, and the officers are anxious to give the members of the corps as much drill as possible before they have their horses to look after. While most of the drill can be done in the building, there will also be route marches."

The 57th detachment to the 39th Battalion is putting in some useful hours each day drilling at the armouries, and the improvement shown day by day is remarkable. There are some 80 men in the detachment.

Commites Appointed

Public Library Board in Session Last Night

At a meeting of the Peterborough Library Board last night, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner was re-elected chairman of the Board for the year. The following committees were chosen:

Finance Committee—E. H. D. Hall, chairman; W. G. Morrow, Mayor Buller, John Corkery.

Library Committee — A. Mowat, chairman; S. J. Stubbs, F. Sollitt, Dr. McNulty.

Property Committee—F. Sollitt, chairman; W. G. Morrow, John Corkery.

A number of accounts were passed before the Board adjourned.

CONDEMNS THE SINKING OF SHIP

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The French government to-day ordered made public the result of the inquiry ordered by the Minister of Marine into the torpedoing of the French merchantman Admiral Ganteaume on October 28, 1914, and gave to representatives in Paris of the neutral Powers copies of the memorandum. The vessel when struck by a torpedo fired by a German submarine had on board twenty-six hundred refugees from Belgian and French coast towns.

The report says the attack was committed by a German submarine without daring to show its colours and without warning or stoping. It asserts that the attack was made on an undefended merchantman carrying women and children and old men who were refugees. The attack, it is contended, was without military or naval utility or strategy and was only "the murder of inoffensive individuals."

The report scores the methods of the German submarines and says the government of the republic believes it is acting in the common interests of the civilized world in bringing these facts to the attention of the other governments.

TARIFF INCREASE WILL COME INTO EFFECT AT ONCE

MR. D. O'CONNELL MAY BE ASKED TO ACT FOR THE CITY

At the Investigation Concerning the Board of Education—Case Will Have to Be Submitted to the County Judge

MAY COMMENCE NEXT MONTH

It is altogether probable that Mr. D. O'Connell will be selected by the City Council to represent the city at the investigation that is pending in connection with the Board of Education. The Council has sanctioned the investigation and it now remains to appoint counsel to present the case to the County Judge. As the investigation encompasses City Solicitor Gordon it becomes necessary for the city to select some other solicitor. It is stated that the choice will fall upon Mr. O'Connell.

The Next Step.

The appointment of counsel practically constitutes the next step in the proceedings that have been undertaken at the request of the city. The matter will either be dealt with at a special meeting of the City Council or at the next regular meeting, which is on the first day of March.

Upon His Honour Judge Haycok will devolve the duty of determining whether City Soliciter Gordon can legally sit on the Board of Education, and whether he possesses proper qualifications as corporation counsel, also as to whether any named member of the Board accepted commissions from the Board while acting in the capacity of a member. The School Board's overdraft of $16,000 may also be investigated.

It is hardly likely that the investigation will commence until sometime next time.

Describes The Machine Gun

Pte. Heber Rogers Writes Interesting Letter—Weather is Clearing

In a recent letter to his father, dated January 25th, Pte. Heber Rogers, with the First Canadian Contingent, writes interestingly of the machine gun. In part he says as follows:

"They have taken two from each company and are training them for the machine gun. So at present I am on that along with Gordon Graham. So far I like it fine and if I get on one of these guns, guess I will stick to it. We are using the Colt guns, American make, but they are fine pieces of machinery. They are not so liable to jam as the old Maxim and are much simpler. They are run with the gas that follows the cartridge. Near the end of the barrel there is a gas vent with a cylinder over it. A piston attached to a gas lever fits into this. The piston is forced down with a pressure of three tons to the square inch. This works all the connections inside. Each time the gas lever goes back it takes a cartridge from the belt, puts it in the chamber and fires it as it gets back to its original place again. All you have to do when it is ready is pull the trigger and it shoots off a belt of two hundred at 1 fifty. They are just air cooled, but there are spare barrels with each gun. We were on the ranges all day to-day an Saturday was our first time.

The weather is getting better. We sometimes miss a day without rain now, so we think the weather is fine. However, there is still plenty of mud around.

It won't be long till we leave this place. It was in divisional orders as February first, but it may be later, and still later. We shall leave here like we did Valcartier, but that seems to be about the time. Nobody will be sorry to leave this place. Of course they have it about the same at the front, but they have excitement, too."

Special Taxes However Do Not Become Effective Until the New Tariff Bill is Passed by the Government.

PREPARING WAR STAMP

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 12.—The new horizontal increase in the Canadian tariff comes into effect at once. The special "war" taxes will not come into effect with the exception of the duty imposed upon champagne, until the tariff bill is passed, so that Canadians have ample time to prepare to accommodate themselves to the new conditions.

In the meantime the departments of the Government concerned are preparing the machinery necessary for its enforcement. The inland revenue department is now designing a war stamp, and as soon as the new imposition goes into force, no letter or post card will be delivered unless it has affixed to it one of the new stamps.

These will have the words "war stamp" affixed to them.

THE FIRST WAR TAXES.

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—The first war taxes to go into effect in Ontario were levied this morning in the sale of a dozen bottles of champaigne by a well known down-town store, each quart bottle of which bore a revenue stamp calling for an additional 25 cents in price.

"The customer seemed to look on the matter rather as a joke and took it patriotically," related the wine merchant.

Ontario druggists are holding conferences to-day and arranging for the stamping of all bottles when revenue stamps are issued by the Government.

Railways, Banks and the post office are not yet affixing the tax, but are awaiting orders from headquarters.

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—The first day following the announcement of the new war tariffs found local manufacturers trying to figure out in just what way and to just what extent their own industries would be affected.

Financial men did not object to the tax measure and stated that it was an equitable one.

Out of the general haze, certain points loom up very distinctly. One is almost universal belief that where extra taxes are imposed upon imports from the United States and other countries, there will be corresponding endeavours to solve the difficulty by manufacturing articles in Canada.

New tariff will greatly stimulate certain industries in Canada, according to some opinions here.

Raffles Will Be Prohibited

Crown Attorney Has Been Instructed to Take Action

Warnings have been issued in regard to holding raffles or lotteries of any kind. It is a criminal offence to disclose of anything in this way, and the County Crown Attorney has instructed constables to prosecute every offender. Anyone attending a raffle also leaves himself liable to a severe penalty. Any gathering where articles are won by throwing dice, or any other game of chance, is classed as a raffle, and the selling of tickets by which the holder of a certain number will win something is lottery. The only exception is where tickets are sold by an institution for charitable purposes and the value of the article to be disposed of is less than $50.00.

TRYING IT ON.

The "Corridor Patrol" of the Ottawa Journal states that Hon. T. W. Crothers, "Minister of Labour," is a "terrific walker." He takes a four-mile tramp—doing it within the hour—every night before he goes to bed. It is safe betting that the minister doesn't do his ambulatory "steat" in army boots such as we are told were supplied the soldiers of our first contingent. If he doesn't, he should be supplied with a few pairs. The number he would wear out in a week, and his feelings in the process, would furnish valuable data for investigation and sharpen his interest in unearthing the somebody that blundered in the matter of army boots. We need a [illegible] ing of the lid, and preventing Canada from sacrificing the soles as well as the bodies of her soldiers in the cause of Empire.

ANOTHER JUSTIFICATION.

On Wednesday the members of Parliament had actual darkness added to the ordinary benighted mental condition we ascribe to those that differ from us in politics, illustrating the necessity of more light on other things than the contracts for army boots. If the light that failed, failed because of failure of the motive power of the Ottawa Electric Light Company, it is a justification of the action of our Utilities Commission in providing an auxiliary steam or equivalent plant, for our water works. There would have been no interruption of light such as plunged the whole country in darkness through their representatives, and forced the adjournment of the House, if, by the lighting of a match or the turning of a crank, power could have been supplied by an auxiliary steam or gasoline engine. This break-down that puts the nation's business out of business when mighty issues are at stake, illustrates the necessity of having dependable motive power—power always available and always on tap. We need the same assurance, in respect of our water works and we shall have it supplied by the installation of an auxiliary plant as made necessary by the report of Superintendent Dobbin.

SOLDIERS' BOOTS.

The party truce is all right in the way of excluding acriminous discussion in Parliament, and promoting unity of action in helping on our share in the war; but party truce or not, there should be thorough ventilation on the floor of the House of the question of the boots supplied the soldiers of our contingents. It is enough to ask our fellow-citizens, our sons and our brothers, our neighbours, and our friends, to stake their lives in battle; we should not ask them to risk their lives and impair their fighting efficiency, by having them shod with paper-soled boots, or an equivalent in badly built boots. No matter who is concerned we should know the facts. No personal or other influence should be allowed to protect those who have been responsible for providing soldiers with boots that won't stand a week's wear, and, even at their best, are unfit for the rough-and-tumble strain of actual service—in snow and slush and frost. The idea is not to protect any contractor or inspector, but to protect our soldiers who are giving their lives to protect us. Boots are the very foundation of a soldier's proper equipment, and if the foundation is bad the rest of the outfit doesn't count much. There should be thorough investigation; not so much to discover the guilty, but to get into a position that will insure the provision of the best boots obtainable for our soldiers on active service. Here is the place where the party truce should enter. No political or partizan considerations, if there are any such involved, should be allowed to interfere with the complete ventilation of the subject of the too well ventilated boots which there is every reason to believe have been supplied our soldiers.

EMPLOYMENT AND EMPLOYMENT.

We sometimes hear of instances, which illustrate the difficulties incident to the solution of the unemployment problem. There are quoted locally and in other places cases of persons on the verge of starvation refusing work when offered them. Such persons are severely criticized and denounced as degenerates who do not want work, but prefer to be parasites and pensioners on the bounty of the industrious. But there are two sides to every subject, and there are two sides to the matter of employment. These men refuse employment in many cases because it involves a class of work they cannot do. We had that illustrated in the case of wood-cutting in North Monaghan, when men, though willing and trying hard, could hardly earn their salt; because they were unaccustomed to the work and improperly equipped for it. Some of them had axes that would hardly split a pumpkin. Wood-cutting is an art that needs an apprenticeship before a man can earn anything at it. It needs an axe of the right weight with a thin blade and keenly sharp. A man unused to the work, without proper tools, couldn't make any headway with wood-cutting, and it would be no disparagement of his industry or desire to earn a living if he refused a job of this kind. One couldn't expect, say, a bookkeeper to take a job as a mounder; or a navvy out of work to take the position of bookkeeper. Obviously the work and the man must correspond. To be of any use the man must be adapted to the work. It seems possible to bring about this conjunction, in a more or less practical manner. In the registration of the unemployed, the work to which a man is fitted should be specified in connection with his name. This will be an intelligent basis of action to begin with; and will tend to greater satisfaction to both employed and employer. It will permit dealing with the candidates for employment in a more effective manner, and prevent attempts at fitting the round man to the square hole. We must be reasonable as well as enthusiastic; we must deal with conditions as we find them, and gauge our course of action accordingly. We must be sympathetic and considerate. We must try to take the point of view of the man suffering under the greatest of minor misfortune, unemployment.

IN A WORD.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is Canada's grand old man. Four years beyond the Psalmist's span of human life, he is alert and vigorous in both mind and body. He is not only one of our most, if not our most, persuasive orators, but he is the master in the use of terse epigrammatic English; he is our foremost maker of happy phrases—winged words that sharpen high sentiment, inspire high ideals, and impel to high actions. Among some of his fortunate phrases that have become the current coin of Canadian sentiment, are—"the twentieth century belongs to Canada"; "when Britain is at war Canada is at war"; and on Monday he uttered, not perhaps a phrase, but a sentiment, that puts the issues of the war, the interests at stake, in an epigrammatic nutshell, the pith and potency of the whole matter:

[redacted]

"German publicists have yet to learn that there is a greater force than force, and that the British Empire, resting upon the basis of freedom, is more durable than the German Empire resting upon the basis of blood and iron."

CHEERS FOR ALLIES.

Spanish Gathering Evinces Enthusiasm For Triple Entente.

MADRID, Feb. 12.—A remarkable demonstration of sympathy for the suffering Belgians took place here yesterday.

Nearly 20,000 Spanish Republicans at a mass meeting adopted resolutions promising help to the Belgians, and later marched to the residence of the diplomatic representatives of the allies where they cheered the envoys.

Within the last two weeks there has been a marked change in the sentiment, which in the early months of the war was favorable to Germany.

Bomb Dropped In Holland.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—According to a news agency despatch from Amsterdam Dutch neutrality was violated yesterday by an aviator who flew over Flushing, Holland, and accidentally dropped a bomb that struck the bank of the canal there but did no damage. The despatch did not state the aviator's nationality.

Symons In Penitentiary.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 12.—Harry Symons of Toronto, sentenced to five years in connection with the investigation into the Union Life Assurance case, has commenced to serve his term at the Portsmouth Penitentiary. A breakfast was provided for him at the hotel, but he could eat nothing. He appeared to be very much down-hearted and felt his position keenly. He will be given a job in one of the offices.

International Bridge Guarded.

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Feb. 12.—Military guards were stationed yesterday at the Canadian end of the international bridge to prevent any attempt to wreck the structure, and the railroads were notified that bridge passes will not be respected.

APPEAL OF RED CROSS WORK TO PRACTICAL POPULAR INTEREST

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—The report of the British Red Cross Society for the week ending January 9, which has just reached the headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society in this city, gives some important information which will be read with interest by the many supporters of the society in the Dominion.

It is explained in the report that during the first week in January there was no heavy demand from abroad for Red Cross stores owing to the comparatively small number of casualties in the expeditionary force.

The report continues: "The military hospitals in France are at present (January 9) well supplied with hospital stores of all kinds. The distance of the fighting line from Boulogne is not great and transport is fairly easy. Lastly, a large number of the wounded in the hospitals of that town have now been brought to England, and there are now many empty beds in Boulogne Seventy hospitals in this country (France) are well supplied with stores.

"A large quantity of stores have been purchased to be sent out to Serbia and Montenegro in conformity with the decision arrived at by the joint war committee of the Red Cross and the St John's Ambulance Association. This committee has voted the sum of $37,500 for the purpose of sending out well-equipped units to these two countries These stores have already gone.

The question of assisting the expeditionary force in British East Africa is at present under the consideration of the society and it is only waiting information as to what has been done in the direction of providing medical stores and hospital comforts by the Indian government and by the War Office. In the meantime 5,000 blankets and 5,000 pairs of socks have already been despatched to Kilindini for the use of the African troops and native police who form a portion of the force.

The hospital ship, named after Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, has been busy conveying the wounded soldiers from Dunkerque to Bologne, and has for the past two weeks been engaged in conveying stores to those ports.

Another interesting item in the report is that the new Lady Hardinge hospital, named after the Vicereine of India, is situated at Brockenhurst, and has already been opened for the reception of wounded soldiers of the Indian Expeditionary force. This hospital, which is in charge of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, has now a number of wounded Indian soldiers under its roof, where they are being brought back to health.

The chief surgeon of the hospitals at St. Malo, in France (Dr. Hossack) states that an enormous amount of work has been done in these institutions, both hospitals having been full of very serious cases Expeditions to Serbia and Montenegro are being arranged under the joint committee. The Montenegrin expedition, under the charge of Dr. Clemow, started from England on January 14th, and consisted of three surgeons, two trained nurses, four orderlies and a large amount of stores. The party for Serbia, under Captain Bennett, has been conveyed by Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht, which he has kindly lent for the purpose. It consisted of five surgeons, 1 matron, 6 trained nurses and 9 orderlies. The yacht also conveyed a large quantity of stores. The Serbians have suffered greatly for want of supplies, and trained nurses. So great has been their distress that a Serbian Relief fund was started a short time ago and this fund has collected a large amount of comforts and money for the relief of the stricken people.

Lady Paget left England a few months ago with a number of trained nurses and arrived safely at Nish, where she and her assistants have been doing splendid work among the wounded Serbians and the non-combatants, who have been cruelly treated by the invading Austrian armies. The treasurer of the Serbian Relief Fund is Sir Edward Boyle, Bart., to whom subscriptions may be sent to 43 Queen's Gate, London, S.W., England. The plight of the Serbians is too awful to describe and while Belgium has been assisted in every way little Serbia has been greatly neglected.

Early in October last the Dairyman's Association of Western Ontario opened a fund to be known as the Dairymen's Patriotic Fund, identified with products manufacturing in Western Ontario. A circular letter, sent out by the Secretary-Treasurer to the officers of all dairy manufacturing plants, suggested that the patrons be requested to voluntarily contribute the proceeds from one day's milk or cream or any portion thereof and that employees subscribe one day's pay or any part of it.

As a result of this splendid scheme the Red Cross Society has benefitted by the sum of one thousand dollars, which has been received at the headquarters of the Society in this City from Mr. Frank Herns, Secretary-Treasurer of the Dairymen's Patriotic Fund. This sum is very gratefully acknowledged by the Society.

Mr. Noel Marshall, Chairman of the Executive Comimttee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, has received a letter from the Secretary-Treasurer of the Ottawa Branch of the Society enclosing a cheque for $4,000 for the purchase of two motor ambulances. As soon as the payment is needed for the other two motor ambulances which have been generously given by the Ottawa branch, a further sum of $4,000 will be sent to headquarters in this City for their purchase and delivery to the Canadian commissioner in England. When these four motor ambulances have been purchased (two have already been delivered), the number given by the Canadian Red Cross Society and the people of Canada through the Society will amount to 23. This is a splendid number and the society will be glad to hear of any branch or number of branches who are ready to increase this number of ambulances.

All gifts in money or comforts etc., should be sent to the Secretaries of the provisional branches. These will also be received at the headquarters of the society, at 77 King Street East, Toronto. Tobacco, cigarettes, cigars, and pipes will be warmly welcomed at headquarters These comforts are more than appreciated by the soldiers and already in England large consignments of "Smokes" have been sent to the trenches. Lately the gifts of cigarettes, etc. have fallen off, and the public is asked not to forget the soldiers in this respect.

ALASKA'S SEAWEED.

Volcanic Eruptions Have a Deadly Effect Upon Kelp Life.

The damage done to seaweed and other forms of marine vegetation is about the last thing that would occur to anybody who had not made a study of the subject as a possible result of a volcanic eruption.

Kelp is one of the most useful forms of seaweed. It used to be found in abundance off various parts of the coast of Alaska, but for several years past the crop has been practically destroyed by volcanic eruptions which have occurred in that vicinity.

This has been a source of great loss to the natives of Alaska, who have made use of kelp in a variety of ways. As it grows only in shallow water, it has proved a valuable aid to navigation in waters where there are practically no aids except such as nature has provided. Then, too, the natives used it to fertilize their gardens.

There are various theories as to just how the action of volcanoes interrupts or entirely stops the growth of kelp. One is that the hot blasts and poisonous gases which pour out of the craters during eruptions are fatal to plant life.

Another more probable explanation of the damage done to kelp is that it is due to the enormous masses of pumice from the volcanoes.

This pumice, it is thought, covers the rocks so that the kelp and other marine plants find it impossible to cling to them, or it may be that it is the grinding effect produced on this great mass of rough stone by the constant movement of the tides and waves which crushes out the water's vegetable life.—New York American.

BRAZIL NUT TREES.

They Do Not Bear Fruit Until They Are Fifty Years Old.

In this country Brazil nuts are almost as well known as walnuts, yet few know the manner of their growth and the steps taken in their collection and marketing. The tree itself is the most majestic in the valley of the Amazon, where it attains a height ranging from fifty to a hundred feet. Generally several hundred trees are found in a group. The control of the best producing districts long ago passed to private individuals; hence the natives are not free to pick and sell the nuts at will.

The Brazil nut tree does not begin to bear fruit until it attains the age of fifty years or thereabouts and continues to produce crops intermittently almost forever. At least trees known to be hundreds of years old have produced crops. The pods in which the nuts are contained drop in November and December.

These pods are very hard and weigh several pounds, consequently the trees are studiously avoided during the period in which the pods are dropping since it would be extremely hazardous for the gatherers to expose themselves to the danger of having the pods fall on them from such a great height. Each pod is at least seven inches in diameter and is full of nuts. The pod is usually opened with a machete.—Argonaut.

Reason For Dodging.

"Look at that foolish Mr. Baker," said one man to another, "out on a rainy day like this without an umbrella! Is he crazy?"

"I guess so," said his friend hurriedly. "Let's hurry on. I don't want to meet him."

"Why not?"

"He may recognize this umbrella. It's his."

Forced Consuls To Lower Flags.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 10—The Telegraaf yesterday published a despatch saying that the German commander at Bruges, Belgium, ordered all the consulates there to haul down their flags and remove the coats of arms.

The consuls, the despatch adds, including the representative of Turkey, protested but the order was enforced, in some cases with violence, and in addition the consuls were compelled to surrender all their arms.

The judge made jokes, the witnesses looked weary, the counsel declaimed and cross examined, the twelve good men and true twiddled their thumbs, and the usher ushed whenever necessary. Altogether it was a model court.

"Now, ma'am," cried the cross examining K. C., "was the defendant's air when, as you allege, he promised to marry you perfectly serious or was it, on the contrary, jocular and full of levity?"

"It was all ruffled," replied the plaintiff, "with 'im runnin' 'is ends through it."—London Mail.

The "I Will Man" Says "I Must"

Still Greater Reductions That Must Produce Quick Clearance

"I guess," says the "I Will" Man "that I haven't made this town sit up and take notice this month. The first few days of this sale convinced those that were here that this town has never had such apparel offerings on really good and dependable merchandise as has characterized this sale. And each day the news spread farther and farther. Brothers told brothers, neighbours told neighbours and school children told their playmates. And how they have appreciated the savings is best told by the way goods have gone. That don't mean that there are not a lot of great bargains here yet to be had. In fact they are greater than ever. I'll tell you why. Many of our lines have become broken up with the onslaught of wise bargain seekers. In some lots where there were 20 to 30 suits and overcoats of a pattern or size there are now only 5 or 6. We cannot advertise complete lots of these and then when customers come in tell them we have not their size---that is bad business. So what have we done? We have placed them in with the next cheaper lot and give you the benefit. That shows our determination to clean this stock out and give you the strongest bargains that we can regardless of cost or profit. This is the 'I Will' spirit. Only I say now 'I Must' and I mean what I say. 'I must' clean up this stock inside the next few days

Suit Savings Greater Than Ever

Here is how this plan is working out with the suit lots. Just notice how we have moved broken lots down to the next cheaper grade so that your savings are in many cases 10 to 15% greater than they were when this sale opened and goodness knows the reductions were certainly liberal enough then. Get them now while they are here.

BROKEN LOTS FROM THE $7.50 TO $8.50 SUITS.

As we bunch together the broken lines your benefits increase in savings and in qualities. We made big inducements at the very opening of this sale in this lot but now the prizes are really remarkable. You are going to remember this "I Will" sale for a long while because these suits will last you a long while. And we are offering them now at 4.90

BROKEN LOTS FROM THE $10 TO $14 SUITS NOW

There is no use describing these garments to you. We cannot make their attractions at this price strong enough to do them justice. We just want you to see them that is all, and then judge for yourself if you can duplicate them anywhere in town within 15 to 20 per cent. of what we are offering them at now. They are models and materials that never have been offered before at .. 7.40

BROKEN LOTS FROM $16 AND $18 SUITS

You would never believe that the dandy cheviots, worsteds, cassimeres and serges that comprise this lot could be sold at any such money as we are offering them at now. They couldn't be, if anything but complete clearance was uppermost in our endeavour. We are going to do it, too, if sacrificing high class merchandise will induce you to help us and help yourself to the biggest bargains you ever saw. These are the garments at 11.90

BROKEN LOTS FROM $18 TO $20 SUITS

Don't think because we have been doing a tremendous business all week on this line that all the desirable styles and patterns are gone. This store never had an undesirable style and patterns, and these are all the sort of garments that any man can wear now with pride. You will find now many suits in this lot that this week we offered at $14.85, and formerly sold as high as $20.00. They are now offered to you at 13.50

BIGGER BARGAINS IN OVERCOATS

The same plan of bunching broken lots and moving them down to the next cheaper lot has been done with the Overcoats, as well as the Suits. This is done to such an extent that the man who is really alive to the main chance will buy more than one of these garments and fix himself right for this winter as well as next—the garment is in good style too—styles that will last more than a season as well as wear through two complete seasons. Look them over.

BROKEN LOTS FROM THE $7.50 TO $10 OVERCOATS

There is no secret about it, everyone knows that this has been a backward season because of the delay in real winter weather. If it were not for that fact our overcoats stock would not have been so plentiful as to last this long at these prices. They went like hot cakes last week though, and broke into lines now crowded down into greater reductions. See the values now at 5.90

BROKEN LOTS FROM THE $12 AND $15 OVERCOATS

Almost every sort of overcoat model, material and style that you want can be found somewhere in this lot, as there is a great variety of sorts. We have made it so by completing it with broken lines from better grades. That is the entire policy of selling this week, to give this sale a greater punch than ever. You better get busy. To-morrow may be your last chance at 7.40

BROKEN LOTS FROM THE $14 TO $18 OVERCOATS

Early in the season when we offered these goods we considered them big values. When we opened this sale we thought them real astounding snaps at the sale price. Now when we have made still further reductions on a great part of them we know that they establish overcoat value giving that cannot be approached anywhere in this community. See them at 10.40

BROKEN LOTS FROM THE $20 AND $22 OVERCOATS

This seems to be a popular priced lot the way folks have gone to this price garment. That is why we had to replenish the lot this week with still better grades so that we could supply all sizes. It costs us some profit too to do it and you will derive the benefit of the sacrifice. We are satisfied to do it though because such bargains will weld you closer to this store, that and clearance are worth while to us. Hence 13.40

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

UNCLE OF PETERBORO' MAN LEFT TRUNKFUL OF SECURITIES

Death Occurred in New York From Pneumonia Brought on by Starvation—The First Accounting of the Huge Estate Has Been Filed in the Surrogate Court

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The first accounting of the estate left by Dudley Jardine—uncle of Albert Dudley Jardine, of No. 509 King street, Peterborough, made by the executor of the estate is to-day on file here in the office of the Clerk of the Surrogates' Court.

Mr. Jardine, who was the son of the founder of the organ-building firm of George Jardine & Sons, for over half a century prior to his death on Feb. 9, 1913, for reasons only known to him, changed his name to "William Smith," lived in one of the cheapest hotels on the Bowery here, walked around through the streets of New York with holes in his shoes and dressed in rags, appeared to be in the direst of poverty, died from pneumonia brought on by starvation in the Bellevue Hospital, and came pretty near being buried among the paupers in Potter's Field had not the Police Department, after the body had been laying in the morgue for a while, in an effort to perhaps find some relative of his to save the city from the expense of a burial, discovered his identity when they made their way into his room, smashed open a little forty-nine-cent trunk, and almost reeled with surprise when they found within a will, securities, and bank deposits, which later, by the State, was appraised at $208,968.13.

Was Temperate.

Mr. Jardine, who was then buried in his family plot in the Trinity cemetery, where some of the noted men and women of this country are buried, as far as is known, never drank or smoked and, apparently, appeared to have been at all times courteous and in his full mental faculties. Judging by his investments in securities it is admitted on all sides that he had a very keen mind and acted on all occasions with shrewdness and tact. Sometimes he would do his business by mail with his brokers while on other occasions he made a personal call in clothes borrowed from a fellow lodger for a half an hour or so. His room rent and board merely amounted to $1.25 a week.

According to a Mrs. Anna McCarthy, a woman of about forty, and wife of John McCarthy, who is the janitor of the New York Society Library at No. 109 University Place, who alleges that she is the sole surviving child of Jardine, whom she always knew as "William Smith," the decedent, under that name, she alleges, married her mother, Anita Blackwell, and later deserted his family for which he later on was arrested for non-support. Mrs. McCarthy has made a demond upon the excutor of the estate for a good-size share of it under a threat of starting a Supreme Court action to have the document admitted to probate set aside.

Served in Civil War.

According to Mrs. McCarthy, who is the mother of six children, living in apartments in the basement of the library building, the decedent served in the Civil War under the name of Smith, and was a member of the J. L. Riker Post, G.A.R., enlisted Aug. 18, 1864, and was discharged from his company—M, 2nd N.Y.—in 1865 on account of the close of the rebellion. Mrs. McCarthy says she had to support her mother since the decedent "deserted his family," when she was sixteen years old

"There were three of us children," she said, "but my sister died in 1880 when only a child, and my brother was killed in a railroad accident in 1902. My mother died fourr years ago.

"I remember my father very well, and we have some excellent pictures of him. We lived in a poor tenement on the lower east side until my father left us and took up his abode in a Bowery lodging house. We never saw much of him afterward. I remember that my mother saw him marching in a Memorial Day parade one year and called to him. He came over to where we were standing and said that he was living in a cheap lodging house and that he had no money to give my mother as he did not have one cent in the world." Mrs. McCarthy explained that she first came to suspect that the decedent was no other than her father through the publication in a local paper telling of Jardine's strange life after the filing of his will for probate.

The Net Estate.

The net estate as left by the decedent when it was appraised some time ago placed the figure at $14,760.95, and under his will it was supposed to be distributed, as follows:

Cornelius B. Gold, the executor, $1,000.00; Albert Dudley Jardine, of Peterborough, Ont., $500.00; four other relatives, each, $125.00; Annie J. DeVoe, niece, $17,618.90; Frederick L. Jardine, grandnephew, of Upper Montclair, N.J., $10,571.34; Robert McJohnston Jardine, grandnephew, of Hollywood, Cal., $10,571.34; George E. Hogg, nephew, of No. 2800 Broadway, $17,618.90, and $11,276.10 each to the Prison Association; the Women's Branch of the Mission and Tract Society; the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church; the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church, and the New York Protestant Episcopal Church Mission Society.

According to the accounting report as filed by the executor $79,559.72 of the securities were sold and the interest on all the securities amounted to $12,648.29, making the total of both $92,208.01.

Helped Police Department.

Out of this amount he alleges he paid $155.0 for the funeral; $81,789.72 paid $155.90 for the funeral; $81,789.72 dine's lodging boarder who loaned the decedent occasionally his suit of clothes, and later helped the Police Department in communicating with decedent's relatives, and $8,285.45 for administration and transfer tax expenses, etc., leaving a balance on the $92,208.01 realized of $1,816.94 to be distributed with the rest of all those entitled to, subject to commissions and expenses of the accounting.

Trunkful of Securities.

When the payments will be made to the beneficiaries is as yet uncertain. The executor still has a trunkful of securities on hand to be sold and distributed, among them being, as follows:

100 shares Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, prd., $9,950.00; 50 shares Kansas City & Fort Scott & Memphis, pfd., $3,550.00; $1,000.00 Colorado, South 1st four per cent. bonds, at 92; 5 $1,000.00 St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Gen. Cons., & Land Grant five per cent. bonds; 1 $1,000.00 Texas Pacific first five per cent. bond, at 103½; 5 $1,00.00 Oregon Short Line refunding four per cent. bonds, $4,425.00; 3 $1,000.00 of Oregon Short Line Cons., five per cent. bonds, $3,150.00; 5 $1,000.00 Oregon Short Line first six per cent. bonds, $5,500.00; 1 $500.00 Peoria Water Works, debenture (reg.), $175.00; 20 $1,000.00 Peoria Water Works four per cent. bonds, $12,000.00; 5 $1,000.00 Peoria Water Works five per cent. bonds $4,650.00; 5 $1,000.0 St. Paul City Railway Cable Cons., five per cent. bonds, at 1203; 100 shares of Union Jacific, pfd., $9,975.00; 50 shares Republican Iron & Eteel, pfd., $4,337.50; 30 shares Union Pacific Cons., $3,000.00; 100 shares Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Cons., $10,337.50; 3 $1,000.00 Peoria & Eastern 1st Cons., four per cent. bonds, $2,625.00; 2 $1,000.00 Reading (P. & I. Co., C. & I.), general four per cent bonds, $1,940.00; 5 $1,000.00 Southern Pacific (Central Pacific Colloteral) four per cent. bonds, $4,843.75; 6 $1,000.00 Toledo, Peoria & Western 1st four per cent. bonds, $5,407.50; 6 shares of Baltimore & Ohio I.R., pfd., $414.00, and 11 shares of Baltimore & Ohio R.R. Co., common, $739.00.

German Army Resorting to Young Recruits and Physically Unfit Men

British "Eyewitness" Explains Why Siege Artillery Has Proven so Effective—Deterioration of the Army

LONDON, Feb. 13—The Official Press Bureau last night issued the following Eyewitness account, dated February 5:

"Some of the infantry units opposing us contain large numbers of Ersatz reservists (young recruits partially trained), among whom are men who originally were rejected for physical defects. Recently these men have joined the line after only eight weeks of training.

"The casualties in one German company in the recent fighting around Quinchy were enormous. In six days they lost from shell fire and bombs 130 men out of a total strength of 160. The remaining 30 appear all to have been killed, wounded or captured since. On February 4, two other companies which took part in the attack on January 29 had been reduced to 20 men each.

Enemy Well Fed.

"It is stated that the German soldiers are not sufficiently fed out of the Government ration, but by the gifts of food sent by friends and relatives they seem to get sufficient. At any rate, the prisoners seem fit enough, and certainly they do not give the impression of being half-starved.

"It is reported on reliable authority that on February 10th the German Government will commandeer all copper, tin, nickel, aluminum, antimony and hard lead, both raw and worked material, and also the alleys of those metals.

Petrol Aids Artillery.

"The change in warfare generally brought about by the introduction of petrol-driven mechanical transports, has been remarked, but the effects on the work of the artillery are not so obvious. So destructive have the modern high explosive projectiles shown themselves against even the strongest forts constructed of concrete and iron such as those surrounding Liege, Namur, Maubeuge and Antwerp, that there has been an inclination to credit the results to this agency alone. This is not altogether correct. In all former wars the heavy guns were comparatively immobile when off the line of railway and could only be fired from solidly constructed wood and concrete forms.

"Now not only is no material of which forts are constructed capable of resisting the shells, but heavy siege artillery has, by the introduction of motor traction, been rendered mobile wherever good roads exist.

Fire from Carriages.

"By mounting the guns on carriages with belted wheels, even the heavy pieces can be fired from the carriages It is possible, therefore, in an attack, to bring up large siege trains under cover of darkness or by roads secure from observation, and concentrate an overwhelming bombardment against the defence before the latter has time to locate the attacking guns.

"All the German heavy howitzers, with the exception of the 42-centimetre pieces, are mounted in this manner. This accounts both for the success of the Germans against the Belgian fortresses and for the great effect they gained in their field operations. During the early part of the campaign they had the advantage both in weight of ordnance and in power of rapid concentration, thus being able to speedily bring superior weight of metal into action against any portion of the allied line."

French Army Operations

In an account published in Paris of the events from January 27 to February 6th, an "eye-witness" with the French Army, says: "The last period of ten days has been one of comparative calm. The actions engaged in by small forces have developed upon limited fronts without effect on the operations generally".

Referring again to the fighting on the German Emperor's birthday, he asserts that the French found a number of bodies, which, he says, "in view of the generally admitted proportion of four wounded to one killed, warrants the conclusion that the German losses during the three days of that fighting amounted to 20,000"

Casualties of 4,899.

The fighting at La Creute is described as particularly severe, but insignificant as regards consequences. The Germans began the action with an intense artillery fire. They hurled hand grenades at a portion of the first line trenches, causing serious loss to the allies' lines. In this assault the Germans also met with heavy losses—4,000 killed and wounded. The allies' loss numbered 1,000 killed and wounded.

Roger Gsell, a seventeen-year-old volunteer, wounded by shrapnel, who died singing the "Marseillaise," receives notice as an heroic example of French youth

Sir William Osler's Colustering.
(London Daily Mirror.)

Sir William Osler, I see, is preparing to disprove the theory which will ever be connected with his name, although he has long since denied responsibility for it—"too old at forty." He has offered his services to the McGill University Base Hospital, which is to go out to the front. Sir William is in his sixty-sixth year, and there is nothing "too old" about this Canadian yet.

Early last year I remember he told a gathering of Yale University students some of his rules of life. "They are the freshest, the oldest, the simplest and the most useful," he said. "Forget the past, forget the future, and you have a vaccine that will insure you against all morbid thoughts. When the load of to-morrow is added to the load of yesterday many men fall on the way. Live earnestly, make the limit of your life the twenty-four hours of the day."

"The first two hours of the day determine the day," he continued. "Quit tobacco and liquor; bright eyes are the thing and bright eyes never come from free indulgence in wine."

A "Tourist Guide."

A remarkable instance of German preparations for war has just been revealed by expulsion of the principals from Basle by the Swiss authorities. The preparations were begun some two years ago by the insertion in a French provincial newspaper of this advertisement: "Easy work for men; well paid. Write agent, Poste Resante, Basle." Those replying to the advertisement received letters signed "Thomas, Rue Fransche, Basle," saying that the writer proposed to edit a tourist guide, and required details of roads, hotels, etc., in the neighbourhood of the men who answered the advertisement.

When the latter replied, payment came immediately —upward of $20 and $30 for the most insignificant information —accompanied by requests for further information as to woods, streams, hills, large factories, and important buildings.

And Never Saw a German.
(Glasgow Herald.)

A Glasgow man gives the following account of a little tailor who, despite a stiff arm, was working away expertly at his trade. His story was:

"I was just whippet awa'. I had three days to go till I was oot o' the reserve when I got one o' yon blue papers tellin' me to report myse'f at Hamilton barracks. I put it in the fire, as by then I wad had oot o' my time. The next nicht when I was at the close-mooth takin' my smoke, a man cam' up to me an' said, 'Are you Macallister?' an' I said, 'Whit aboot it?' an' he said that there wad be plenty aboot it if I didna report myself at Hamilton barracks in six hoors. So, thinks I, this is war. So I whippet awa' in twa hours to Hamilton barracks, an' in six hoors mair I ha my kit on my back, an' was in a train awa 'aboot England. In twenty hoors I was in a place they ca' Southampton, and in thirty hoors after that I was in France, near a place that's called Mons. There were a lot o' kent faces in the places whaur I was put, an' they cried oot, 'Ho, Macallister, that's you: No, tak' your rifle an' fecht for, your king an' country.' But before I had time to turn roond I found I was fechtin' for my rosy life. King an' county indeed thinks I. I hadna been fechtin' an 'oor when they got me on the shoulder wi' shrapnel, an' the next I knew I was in Stobhill barracks—Stobhill barracks, mind you, an' that no' many miles from where I bide—an' the upshot o' it was they left me oot an' told me I wad be all richt for my tred, but no use for the sodgering again. An' here am I, back at my tred, tailoring, ten days after I was whippet awa'. I canna think that it was to me that a' this happened. It seemed as if it was somebody else, an' no me. And, mind you, I never saw a German."

A Notable German Prisoner.
(F. W. Wile, in London Daily Mail.)

Permission was given me to pay a visit to "Dyffryn Aled," the Welsh estate of Lady Dundonald, which is doing duty as "detention barracks" for enemy officers who are prisoners.

"Dyffryn Aled" is a glorious country seat nine or ten miles distant from Denbigh, so secluded amid wooded hills, some 300 feet above the level of the sea, that it is accessible only by vehicle from the world without. Lady Dundonald's rambling old sandstone mansion of some twenty-five or thirty rooms shelters 95 German officers and 37 soldiers and civilians, also held as prisoners of war.

The most notable one is Aberleutnant Wolf von Tirpitz, son of Grand-Admiral von Tirpitz, chief of the German navy.

Von Tirpitz is a handsome young German of twenty-seven, with conspicuously clean-cut features, greyish blue eyes, wavy blonde hair, tall, trim and erect.

"My part of the Heligoland fight wasn't very important, I fear," he said. "It's only a miracle that I was spared. The officer on duty alongside me in the crow's-nest was torn cleon through the waist-line by shell fire, while I remained untouched. British hospitality, which began that misty August afternoon has been continued, so far as my comrades and I at 'Dyffryn Aled' are concerned, to this very hour. I cannot say I am exactly happy. I am a prisoner in the enemy's country. But I am quite as comfortable and well cared for as any man in my position has reason to expect—in fact, far more so.

"You have been round the camp and know for yourself that everything is done for our comfort, convenience and happiness which is compatible with our surroundings."

Charged With Being Insane

A Smith town ship man appeared before Magistrate D. A. Langley in County Police Court this morning on an information of insanity. He was remanded to the custody of Constable A. Moore until Wednesday, Feb. 17, at 10 o'clock, pending a medical examination by Drs. Halliday and Greer.

Mr. A. E. Dixon was counsel for the defendant.

The latter appeared quite rational in court this morning in his conversation with the Magistrate. He said he had received treatment in an asylum before, but it was three years ago last November since he returned to his home. He was preparing to have a sale of his farm chattels and has rented his farm, intending to give possession on March 1st.

Judgment in a case of this kind depends mostly upon the finding of the physicians who are appointed to examine the one concerning whom the information is laid.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

There will be a meeting of the Finance committee of the Association this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

A number of business men of the city met Mr. A. S. Hopper, Financial Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. National Council, at the Oriental Hotel last evening, at which time Mr. Hopper presented the general work of the National Council in Canada and also the special work being done under the auspices of the Council for soldiers through the Dominion and over the seas. It is thought Peterborough should have a special interest in this welfare work for soldiers in view of the large number of young men who have enlisted from our city.

Boys' Department.

Saturday afternoon, weather permitting, the boys' department will meet at the toboggan slide at 2 o'clock. The boys' secretary would like to see as large a number as possible out to-morrow. It is also requested that the members bring their snowshoes and skis.

School Boys' Bible Club Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

Gymnasium class at 9.30 o'clock.

Junior Bible Club at 9.45. Gymnasium class at 10.30.

The boys' department are starting their spring canvass for new members The boys intend to increase their membership by 50 by March 15th.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

Thirty-one soldiers and one commissioned officer, a lieutenant, were drowned on the Bay of Arzila, Morocco, when a bark with 100 soldiers on board stranded yesterday.

The London Daily Mail's Rotterdam correspondent says he learns that 35 German soldiers were killed in one of the Antwerp forts last Friday by a bomb dropped by British airmen.

The Dutch authorities will make an inquiry into the attempt of the German submarine U-2 to torpedo the steamer Laertes, as it is suggested that the attempt was made inside Dutch territorial waters.

The U. S. State Department was officially advised late yesterday that Gen. Carranza had ordered the Spanish Minister to Mexico to leave the country because of alleged refuge given to Angel De Caso, a Spanish subject.

The demands for coal yesterday in England exceeded any day since the outbreak of the war. As a consequence there was a corresponding increase in freight rate, the rate to Genoa reaching the unprecedented figure of 39 shillings ($9.75) per ton.

The final reply of the British Government to the note of the U. S. Government bearing on the detention by British authorities of American cargoes destined to neutral European ports was yesterday started by the British Foreign Office on its way to Washington.

Moving picture audiences throughout the province will no longer be thrilled with the stirring scenes of war. An order has been issued by the Ontario Board of Censors to the effect that all such films are prohibited during the continuance of European hostilities.

Submarine Was Outwitted

By British Steamer Laertes—Tried to Sink Ship

YMUIDEN, Netherlands, Feb. 12.—The German submarine U-2 Wednesday attempted to torpedo the British steamer Laertes, which arrived here yesterday from Java. The vessel escaped by adroit manoeuvres and fast steaming. When attacked the steamer was flying the Dutch flag. Capt. Prophet was in command.

The attack on the Laertes was made while the vessel was steaming between the Mouse lightship and Schouwen Bank. The submarine fired several shells, which damaged the steamer's funnel, compass and upper deck. As this did not induce the captain to stop, the submarine made an unsuccessful attempt to torpedo the steamship.

The Laertes, when challenged by the submarine, was proceeding without showing her nationality. When asked to stop the vessel flew the Dutch flag.

A despatch from Rotterdam says there is reason to believe that the submarine sank. She was last seen in a cloud of steam.

THE BATTLE FRONT

Petrograd, Russia, Feb. 12, via London.

The number of head and arm wounds of the men at the front is enormous, for men in trenches expose only their heads and arms. Many hundreds are hit in the head and death does not result from the wound. Occasionally one may see the slightly wounded walk back with heads bound up or arms in slings. Motor trucks loaded with wounded tear along the roads leading back from the extreme front. Perhaps forty per cent. of the wounded are back on the firing line after three months' care and rest in a hospital. It all depends on a man's health and blood. If the blood is pure and good, the soldier gets the first aid, proper treatment and his wounds heal by first intention.

Good blood is everything to every man. It means fresh strong nerves, good digestion, good circulation. Those who have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery marvel at the way it checks blood diseases. See a man to-day with skin all broken out; see him a few weeks later after using the "Discovery," his skin is all cleared up, eyes bright, and he is contented with himself.

The formation of good health is good blood! Are you pale? Are you weak? Are you no longer ambitious or energetic? Have you pimples or boils? Do you suffer from headaches, low spirits? Then you are anaemic—your blood is thin, lacking in healthy, strength-giving red corpuscles. Then your blood is impure—and your liver is not up to its task of clearing the blood from the poisons accumulated.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a temperance remedy that will restore to you rich, health-giving blood —a remedy proved by experience (in tablet or liquid form). It is a glycetic extract of roots from our forests, known to science as those which will best give the stomach, liver and bowels needed help.—Adv.

TARIFF INCREASES INCLUDE RAW AND MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS

Special War Levies Will Be Imposed on Banks and Insurance Companies and Stamps Must Be Affixed to Patent Medicines, Tickets, Letters, Telegrams, Cables, Wines and Money Orders

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.— Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, delivered his budget speech yesterday afternoon upon a formal motion that the House go in committee of ways and means and the budget debate was therefore adjourned for a week. The outstanding feature of the budget is the taxation of raw materials, heretofore free of duty, and a general or "horizontal" increase of all existing tariff duties by an additional 7 1-2 per cent. ad valorem. Except in a few specified cases where goods come under the British preference the increase is only 5 per cent. In addition to this are several special stamp taxes.

The Minister estimates that the special taxes will yield an annual income of $8,000,000 and that the tariff increases will bring in from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Liquors (except wine), tobacco and sugar are exempted from the horizontal increase. Squill and nicotine sulphate, now subject to duty, are placed upon and remain upon a free list. A specific duty instead of the 5 ad valorem duty is levied upon iron ore, the duty being 8 cents per ton (British preferential, 6 cents).

The "special war revenue tax," as it will be known, will include: A tax of one per cent. annually upon the note circulation of banks, to be computed and paid quarterly.

One per cent. on the gross income of trust and loan companies. One per cent. on premiums received in Canada by all insurance and trust associations, except life, fraternal and marine companies, payments to be made quarterly.

The above charges are made retroactive, and apply to all transactions made after Jan. 1, 1915.

One cent on each telegraph or cable message originating in Canada, to be paid by the sender.

Five cents on each ticket costing over one and not more than five dollars, and five cents for each additional five dollars or fraction of five dollars, on all railway and steamboat tickets to points in Canada, Newfoundland, British West Indies and the United States.

The following stamp taxes are applied:

Two cents on each check, deposit receipt and bill of exchange, express order, postoffice order, and bill of lading; and upon each postal note a stamp tax of one cent.

Each letter or post card mailed in Canada must carry a war tax stamp of one cent.

Upon each package of proprietary or patent medicine or perfumery a stamp of one cent up to ten cents value, and one cent for each additional ten cents.

Non-sparkling wines ten cents a quart.

Champagne and sparkling wines, twenty-five cents a pint.

Sleeping car tickets are taxed ten cents and chair car tickets five cents. Steamboat tickets for points not in Canada, Newfoundland and British West Indies or the United States are taxed $1 on tickets costing not less than $60, and $5 upon tickets costing more than $60.

Steamship and railway companies are authorized to add the amount of the tax to the cost of tickets charged their patrons.

No income tax is levied, several reasons being assigned therefore. One is that the tax would probably not yield over $2,000,000, and a large amount of this sum would be used up in the collection. Another is that there already exists provincial and municipal income taxes.

The tariff changes come into effect immediately, and the special taxes (except as above noted) will be brought into effect by order-in-council.

The items in the tariff schedules to which the flat increase of 7 1-2 per cent. ad valorem (5 per cent. British preferential) do not apply include:

Fish from Newfoundland; animals the improvement of stock; cocoa and chocolate products; tea; salt for the fisheries; Indian corn except for distillation purposes; wheat; wheat flour; sweetened biscuits; squid; oysters; seed and breeding; fish and fish eggs for propagating purposes; sugar; tobacco; wines from South Africa; books, printed; newspapers and magazines; news printing paper; matrix paper; nicotine sulphate; ores of metals; bells for churches; gold and silver coin and gold and silver in ingots, blocks, bars, drops, etc.; typesetting and type-casting machines; newspaper printing presses; mowers, binders, harvesters and reapers; traction ditching machines; surgical and dental instruments; material for ships; binder twine; articles for the manufacturing of binder twine; fish hooks, lines, twines and nets for the fisheries; artificial limbs, artificial teeth, not mounted; articles specified in tariff for schools, hospitals and charitable objects; settlers' effects.

The Minister of Finance in his budget speech said, in part:

"Taking the ten months of the year which have already elapsed, that is to say, from April 1, 1914, to Jan. 31, 1915, the Dominion's revenue from all sources has totaled, in round figures, $109,500,000. This compares with $139,000,000 for the corresponding period of the last fiscal year, a decline of nearly thirty millions.

"Upon the basis of these figures for the ten months' period and having regard to the present action of the revenue-producing services we estimate that the revenue of the Dominion for the fiscal year ending March 31 next computed upon the present basis of duties would amount to $130,000,000. The figures for the previous year having been $163,000,000, this year's loss of revenue would reach a total of thirty-three millions.

"For the whole of the present year we estimate our current expenditure will be $140,000,000, and our capital and special expenditure $50,000,000. Summarizing the estimated results we have the out-turn of the year, stated concisely, as follows:

Current expenditure	$140,000,000
Capital and special (other than war) expenditure	50,000,000
Total	$190,000,000

"Our revenue on the present basis being estimated as I have stated at $130,000,000, we should have to meet for this year a deficit of ten million dollars on current account plus the entire amount of our capital and special expenditure. The special war expenditure during the present fiscal year will probably reach the total amount of the appropriation, namely, $50,000,000.

"Taking all the foregoing into consideration, the increase of Canada's national debt for the year would probably aggregate $110,000,000. In this I am, of course, including our expenditure for war."

Hon. Mr. White went on to cite other items, such as, drought area relief, the retirement of treasury bills, and seed grain distributions, which he said forced the Government to calculate upon an expenditure totalling $190,000,000. This sum would have to be borrowed, because the market for the flotation of securities would for some time be very bad. His proposals for meeting the situation were:

"So far as concerns our special war expenditure, which may reach one hundred million dollars, I should be disposed, if we had not such heavy and uncontrollable capital expenditure to meet, to recommend that we should pay at least a part of it from current revenue. But it is obvious upon a consideration of the figures which I have submitted, that we shall not by any reasonable supplemental taxation measures be able to close the gap between revenue and expenditure, much less to pay a portion of the principal of our special war outlay. In the circumstances I have no hesitation in proposing to the House that we shall borrow the full amount required under this heading."

In conclusion the Minister discussed the general economic conditions, actual and prospective. The Dominion, he said, has stood the shock of the dislocation of finance exceedingly well. The interruption of borrowing had caused a slackening in many trades, but others had been quickened by the war. The future would show a gradual improvement which would follow with the success of the allies. A setback to the arms of the Triple Entente would mean a commercial relapse, but such a thing now seemed beyond the range of apprehension.

Western Front Will Soon Be Scene of Titanic Struggle

PARIS, Feb. 12.—All signs point to the resumption of the war on a grand scale on the western front almost any time now. It is spring in France, and the appearance of cavalry on the battlefield indicates that the ground has sufficiently hardened to permit manoeuvres. Artillery will soon be in a position to advance, and the present actions both sides are jockeying for a position of vantage. Cavalry fighting in the Argonne preceded a German attack on Marie Therese and Bagatelle Wednesday. Lancers had a skirmish, and then German infantry advanced in column of fours, a new disposition, along a third of a mile front, presenting a target for the French infantry and artillery that did not stand up very long. The enemy was rapidly mown down and left a great number of dead on the field.

The French occupied a German trench in the Vosges, south of the Chateau de Lusse and north of St. Mary's Hill.

The Germans bombarded Nieuport and the banks of the Yser without doing much damage.

The most violent artillery duel that has occurred in Alsace since the beginning of the war was commenced Wednesday. As the result of the battle, an exodus has begun of German families from Muhlhausen, Kolmar and Strassburg.

JOHN M'CORMACK AND "TIPPERARY"

W. S. O'Connor writes to the Toronto Star as follows regarding "Tipperary," the popular marching song of the soldiers:

Dear Sir,—"I will sing anything you like, but I will not sing "Tipperary." " Thus spoke John McCormack recently to a Denver audience who clamoured for the above musical gem, upon which the musical editor of the Globe makes the subtle comment "which makes his neutrality quite clear." Is not this a question of mentality rather than neutrality? John McCormack, the Irishman, was justified in voicing his protest against the song, which sounds like the maudlin wail of an Irish degenerate, who, seted with the questionable joys of Piccadilly and Leicester Square, fain would go back to the "sweetest girl" he knows in Tipperary only that it is such "a long way to go." John McCormack, the artist whose interpretations of Ireland's beautiful songs and ballads have delighted the world, should not have been asked by a concert audience to make a clown of himself by singing such drivel as "Tipperary." All honour to him for maintaining the dignity of his country and his art. May I also mention that at the possible risk of the loss of his voice, if not his life, McCormack sang to the people of Ostend a couple of days previous to its investment by the German army. One can hardly call this an evidence of neutrality.

I think it regrettable that the Mendelssohn Choir, the strains of whose beautiful numbers are yet lingering in our ears, should descend to the inclusion of the classic "Tipperary" in the programme for the coming concert to be given in honour of our soldiers, many of whom, I fancy, must be heartily tired of the wretched ditty. For the honour of Ireland's poetry and song, let it die.

ZEPPELIN CREWS LOSE LIVES IN THE NORTH SEA

GENEVA, via Paris, Feb. 12.—The entire crew of a Zeppelin which has been missing for four days, was drowned when the airship fell in the North Sea, off the coast of Denmark, during a storm, it is reported at Friedrichshafen. Details of the disaster have not been received.

It is said here that one Zeppelin and two airships of the Parseval type will accompany the German troops which have been detailed to take the field against Servia. The Parsevals, deflated and loaded on special railroad trucks, passed through Munich yesterday on the way to Vienna.

Austria is experiencing great difficulty, especially in Hungary, it is reported at Innusbruck, in mobilising the Landstrum of the classes from the years 1878 to 1880, which were recently called to the colours. Women are said to be preventing the men, many of whom are grandfathers, from leaving their homes.

COMFORTS FOR THE HOSPITAL

Bale May Be Inspected on Wednesday Next

The citizens of Peterborough and any friends interested in the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe, Kent, England, are invited on Wednesday afternoon next, Feb. 17, to the reception room at the armouries to inspect the bail which is to be sent to the hospital. The room will be open from 3.30 o'clock until 5.30. There will be no charge for admittance, but the Peterborough Progressive Club will be glad to receive any donations that may be handed in to help to defray the expense in sending the bale. Any tobacco, socks, mufflers, etc., brought in that day for the comfort of the soldiers can be packed and sent with the things. 3d-f.m.t.

DEFEND THEIR GERMAN "KULTUR"

MAINZ, via Berlin and London, Feb. 12.—At a meeting of socialists here to-day, which was addressed by Dr. David, a member of the Reichstag, resolutions were adopted approving the action of socialist members of the Reichstag in voting for war credits. The resolution declares that the defence of the fatherland should be undertaken by socialist working men, to whose interest it is to preserve the country's territorial integrity, economic existence and "kultur."

The resolutions expressed the thanks of the socialists to the soldiers who were risking their lives at the front and voiced the hope for an honourable termination of the war under conditions that would assure the blessings of peace and undisturbed labour to the German people.

DRAMATIC NEWS

SCHOOL DAYS.

"School Days," the attraction at the Grand Opera House last night, was one of only average merit, but the majority of the audience seemed to find it amusing. An eccentric dance by Billy Newton, in which he gave an imitation of a roller skating novice, was the best number of the evening.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 11.—The British steamer Laertes, loaded with passengers, was attacked by a German submarine near the Dutch coast, but avoided torpedoes by taking a zig-zag course. She arrived here shortly.

AGRICULTURE IN PETERBORO' COUNTY

Is Developing Into an Important Industry

In a bulletin on "Notes on Ontario Counties," issued by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, in their Patriotism and Production campaign, the following references is made to East Peterborough: "Peterborough—Developing into an important dairy district, although general farming prevails. Live stock on hand: 12,558 horses, 17,299 milch cows, 29,986 other cattle, 14,966 sheep, 20,168 swine, considerable poultry raised. Hay 48,033 acres; corn for silo, 6,926 acres. The fourth largest acreage of peas, 11,204. Oats, 52,128 acres; barley, 10,178 acres; fall wheat, 10,182 acres."

Northumberland has the largest acreage in orchard of any county. Hastings has more dairy cattle than any other county in Eastern Ontario. Oxford is the greatest dairy county in Canada. Simcoe raises more horses than any other county in the Province.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE IS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Made from fruit—Can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs," to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Coffins are being made of paper in France, cheapness and lightness being their advantages.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Defendants in McCutcheon Case to Go Before Jury

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—Gordon D. McCutcheon, D. M. McCutcheon, J. H. and C. M. McCutcheon and Marshall A. Cook were sent for trial by a jury by Magistrate Denison yesterday afternoon on a charge of conspiring to defraud Dr. H. M. Weaver and others out of certain sums of money.

After the evidence had all been submitted and when A. J. Russell Snow, K.C., commenced an argument on behalf of the defendants, Magistrate Denison said: "There is sufficient evidence brought here to show that there has been a widespread fraud all over the place. People have appeared before me and sworn that they have received nothing for their money. It is most extraordinary the way this thing has been done."

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN GET FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every emaciated thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. This people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

INITIAL PREFORMANCE OF ST. JOHN'S LADY MINSTRELS

Was Huge Success—Will be Repeated To-night—A Long Distance Conversation With Mr. J. H. Burnham M. P.—Fur Lined Overcoats For the Home Guard

It seldom falls to the lot of an amateur organization to meet with the unqualified success as that which attended the initial presentation of the Lady Minstrels in St. John's schoolhouse last evening. From the opening chorus to the final drop of the curtain the production was one blazing trail of merriment. It was well staged and the costumes and scenic effect thoroughly adequate to the needs. The audience which was fairly large, was most enthusiastic and persistent in its applause and was only satisfied when its insistent demands were acknowledged by encores. The performance which will be repeated this evening, will undoubtedly enjoy a crowded house, as the work of the St. John's Lady Minstrels is conceded to be one of the best amateur productions of the season.

Everything is New.

Between thirty-five and forty people comprise the organization that was responsible for last night's mirth provoking entertainment. Everything is new, with the exception of the drop curtain. The latter is interesting from the standpoint of antiquity, depicting as it does a scene dating back to the fifteenth century, or before old London was cleansed by the great conflagration. Only about one-quarter of the curtain is shown, owing to the limited amount of space available. Upon it, the artist has sought to portray a section of London as it existed nearly four centuries ago. The tower of London is plainly visible, also a street lamp that depended upon a candle for its illuminative effect. The curtain is the property of Mr. R. J. Devey, organist of St. John's church.

Local Jokes.

The Minstrels were responsible for the introduction of a number of popular songs of recent origin, also jokes without whiskers. The latter seldom failed to include well known local characters such as City Solicitor G. N. Gordon, J. H. Burnham, M.P., Mayor Buller and others of greater or lesser renown. Among them were the following:

"I have been invited to accompany a civic deputation to Ottawa."

"What are you going down to Ottawa for?"

"To see Gen. Sam Hughes."

"But he's not in Ottawa."

"Oh, that doesn't matter."

"What are you going to ask for?"

"Fur-lined overcoats for the Home Guard.

A long distance telephonic conversation with Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who is supposed to be at Rideau Hall, preparatory to taking Princess Patricia to a skating party.

"Hello, is that Mr. Burnham?"

"Yes."

"How much money are you going to vote for dreadnoughts?"

"Don't know yet."

"Couldn't you vote enough to buy a new flag for the Customs House in Peterborough?"

A Chicken Dinner.

"I know where you can get a chicken dinner for five cents."

"A chicken dinner for five cents?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"At Roland Denne's feed store."

Mayor Buller, Mr. G. N. Gordon and a number of the aldermen received considerable attention at the hands of the fun-makers. Ald. Kidner was credited with possessing parliamentary instincts in that he had attempted to reduce the salaries of city officials. It was suggested that his services be dispensed with.

To-night's Performance.

Mrs. Peter Campbell makes a splendid interlocutor, gracefully carrying out the duties of her important position, aided by six "end men". The musical end of the performance is in charge of Mrs. A. Spence and Miss Margaret English. Instrumental music is supplied by the Huycke Orchestra.

Some entirely new material will be introduced in to-night's performance including a number of solo numbers and a brand new repertory of local "gags."

Mr. Edward Hanrahan will sing the "Veteran Song."

TO KEEP IN TOUCH WITH CANADIAN BOYS

Red Cross to Furnish Information Regarding Wounded and Missing

Mr. Noel Marshall, chairman of the executive committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, has received a cablegram from Colonel Hodgetts, Canadian commissioner of the society in London, stating that he has completed arrangements for the information department to forward particulars regarding the wounded and missing Canadian soldiers.

"This work," says Col. Hodgetts, "will not conflict with the official returns, but will supplement them by furnishing subsequent information to relations as to their conduct and progress. The work will be carried on upon the same lines as the British Red Cross and with their co-operation."

A short time ago an information bureau was started in connection with the British Red Cross Society for the purpose of keeping relatives of wounded and missing soldiers informed of their progress and general health. By co-operating with this bureau the relatives of the Canadian soldiers who are wounded or captured will be informed as to their progress.

Idaho established new high record last year for the production of silver, lead and zinc.

Milk Vendors' Annual Dance

One of the most enjoyable social events of the season was the Second Annual Ball under the auspices of the Peterborough Milk Vendors' Association, held in the C.O.F. Hall, Simcoe street, last evening. About one hundred couples tripped the light fantastic to music supplied by Tucker's Orchestra. Mr. Arthur Vass made a capable floor manager.

Refreshments were served by the milkmen at the intermission, after which dancing was resumed until 2 a.m. Great credit is due the committee in charge for their efforts. Mr. A. Hunter is president of the Peterborough Milk Vendors' Association.

In connection with the item which appeared in yesterday's issue regarding F. E. Cuddon, about whom Chief of Police Thompson had received an inquiry from his mother in England, the local police have traced him to the year 1912. In that year he went to Winnipeg. So far nothing definite regarding his movements after 1912 has been unearthed.

A traveller in the city this morning, who noticed the articles in yesterday's Examiner, told one of the policemen this morning that a man by the name of Cuddon had enlisted in Toronto for one of the overseas contingents, and it is possible it was the same Earnest Edward. He could not give any very good description of the man he had in mind, but it will be investigated.

NURSES RECEIVE DIPLOMAS.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 12—Sixteen new graduates of St. Joseph's Hospital Training School for Nurses received their diplomas from the hands of Bishop Fallon at St. Peter's Parish Hall, to-night. Among the graduates were Misses Maud Shaughnessy and Muriel Gavin of Peterborough.

Charge Was Withdrawn

Peterborough Plumber Was Charged With Violation of Town By-law

LINDSAY, Feb. 12.— The charge against Mr. George Brenton, of Peterborough, for an infraction of the local plumbing by-law, was withdrawn by the Town Solicitor.

RESTAURANT BREAD ISSUED BY TICKET

Guests in Berlin Have the Option of Bringing Rolls With Them

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The guests of Berlin restaurants after February 22 must either bring pocketsful of rolls or a break ticket with them. Otherwise no bread will be obtainable. This is the solution arranged yesterday by the Berlin authorities for the one really difficult problem in the scheme for placing Berlin residents on a two-kilogram bread ration. Arrangements for the issue of bread tickets to family households were easily made, and the authorities settled the problem for hotels and boarding houses, by authorizing the issue of day-tickets for every guest registered.

The executive committee of the Municipal League will meet to-morrow to recommend the introduction of the two-kilogram bread quota on the same basis as that enforced in Berlin.

According to the Lokal Anzeiger a State regulation of another essential of German life is impending. The Bundesrath is considering a law limiting the consumption of malt to sixty per cent. of the present quantity permitted to be used and reducing the beer production correspondingly. The barley thus saved will be available for human consumption as barley grits or as food for cattle.

Expenditures For War Purposes

Two Peterborough Contracts That Figure in the List

OTTAWA, Feb. 12 — Expenditures in connection with the organization of the Canadian expeditionary forces and a list of the firms to whom contracts for the supply of boots, clothing, saddlery, etc., were given are the features of a printed memorandum which was tabled by General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, in the House.

The report also goes into details in regard to the organization of the first contingent, and of the forces which are now in training or are being raised. It is pointed out in a report by Quarter-Master General MacDonald, that 35,000 men were all equipped in six weeks.

Among the contracts referred to is one for the Auburn Woolen Company for saddlery blankets, $12,000, and one for B. F. Ackerman of Peterborough. The latter represents the sum of $13,500.

TO BEGIN OPERATIONS BY THE RIGHT-OF-WAY

COBALT, Feb. 12.—Some time ago the work of sampling the southern workings of the Right-of-Way mine was undertaken, and the result of this examination will be that as soon as power is available in the spring active operations will be commenced. The work has already shown that further development is justified. Mr. R. W. Angus, formerly of the Drummond Mine, is in charge of the sampling, and he has been at work now for about three weeks. No attention has been paid to the main workings near the La Rose, as this narrow strip has been worked out now for several years. On a few patches of ore were uncovered at the latter place, but the main La Rose fault was found to be unproductive as depth. Last summer the company devoted some attention to the sinking of the main shaft below the known productive area of that section, with an idea of determining the value of the La Rose fault, but the work was abandoned after several hundred feet of development had revealed no encouraging results. At the south end some ore still remains in ore shoots at two levels.

New Trial is Started.

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—Robt. Brown was freed from the charge of murder yesterday under conditions that a new trial on the grounds of shooting with intent to kill be commenced.

The jury rendered a verdict of "not guilty" from the explanations of Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, presiding in the assize criminal court, in which he set forth that from medical evidence it had not been proven that Mrs. Brown, wife of accused, whom Brown had shot, had died from the result of the wound inflicted.

The new trial commenced yesterday afternoon, and will be continued to-day.

Dacia Has Sailed.

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 12.—Off on a voyage that may prove her last and one that may involve the United States in serious international complications, the American steamer Dacia sailed from this port yesterday morning. When the Dacia sailed the Stars and Stripes were flying both forward and aft. The Dacia sailed with an American crew with the exception of seven men. Four of these are Hollanders and the other three Swedes. The Dacia is bound for Rotterdam, but her cargo of 11,000 bales of cotton will be delivered at Bremen, Germany.

Potato Riots in Berlin.

LONDON, Feb. 12. — The Copenhagen correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co., wires that serious riots took place in the potato market in Berlin Wednesday.

Fighting crowds stormed the shops demanding potatoes and shouting "where can we get potatoes?" The police finally, with difficulty managed to restore order.

Socialist Conference Planned.

HAVRE, Feb. 13. — The International Socialist Bureau has summoned delegates both from belligerent and neutral nations to meet at The Hague. They will confer separately and later hold a general assembly if one can be arranged.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

ST. LUKE'S CHAMPIONS OF CHURCH LEAGUE

Anglicans Beat George St. Methodist Church in Final Game Last Night After Ten Minutes of Over-time--Neither Team Scored in the Regulation Time.

By winning over George Street Methodists at Brock Street Rink, last night, 2 to 0, St. Luke's team won the championship of the Senior Church Hockey League. It took ten minutes' overtime to decide the winner, and the East City representatives scored one goal in each five minutes of the overtime, while the Methodists coudld not tally.

Neither team had lost a scheduled game this season and the championship was to be settled in a sudden-death fixture. Both teams have been playing good hockey and were in good trim for the final game. A fair-sized crowd turned out to see the game and they were provided with a very interesting exhibition.

The Methodists had the advantage in weight and used it every opportunity, but the winners plugged away all the time, taking their bumps and coming back for more.

The pace was fast throughout, every man seeming to realize that the first scorer would be the likely winner St. Luke's had the play in the vicinity of their opponents' goal over half the time, but had hard luck in shooting. The players on both teams checked close and the forwards checked back at all stages. There were quite a few spills, but the game was practically free from roughness and only a few penalties for minor offences were drawn. Seldom have two teams, so evenly matched, battled so long without someone getting the break. But try as they would, neither side could secure a tally.

When full time came and no score there was a five-minue rest before the ten minutes' overtime began. Though pretty well played out, they went at it hammer and tongs, and just before the five-minute gong sounded for a change of ends, Alex Butcher, the little St. Luke's centre man, beat Darling on a rebound off a shot from Hagerman.

In the last five minutes of play the George Street team a desperate effort to tie it up again, and everyone was on the forward line, trusting on their skating to save their own goal in checking back. But St. Luke's had secured a "life" and they followed up with renewed hopes. Alex. Butcher made it 2 to 0 after a bombardment of Darling and put his team on easy street with only a minute to play. It was a hard-earned victory.

Honours were about even amongst the winners. They all worked hard every minute of the time. Alex. Butcher, the little centre man, notched the winning goal. He was well supported by all his team mates, but they were checked so hard by their heavier opponents they failed to secure much advantage with their combination plays. George Butcher was good in goal and cleared a lot of "hot ones". Hagerman and Regan, on the defence, were up and down the ice like hornets, always checking back in time to save their own citadel.

The George Street boys were pretty good, too. Wade and Lowes, on the defence, made a husky pair to get past. A couple of the forward men were a pretty good weight, too, and they used it frequently. They were hardly in as good condition as their opponents, but a score in their favour would have put more life into them.

KNOX YOUNGSTERS CHAMPS CLEAN SHEET FOR SEASON

By taking the Charlotte Street Methodists into camp to the tune of 4 to 0, at the Brock Street Rink, last night, in a Junior Church League fixture, the Knox youngsters finished their schedule games without a defeat, and thereby won the Junior Church League championship. All the scoring was done during the first period.

The Presbyterians have a fine bunch of youngsters and on the play they deserved to win. The Junior Church League has been the means of assisting in the development of a number of boys, some of whom will undoubtedly be heard from later, on future O.H.A. teams. In fact there were a couple of boys on the ice last night who are deserving of a try-out next season. They are being taught in the Church League to play a clean gentlemanly game and the spirit shown among all the players is commendable.

Though the score in last night's contest looks a little onesided it was was not any run-away affair by any means. The game was hard fought at every stage and Knox got a couple of breaks in the luck which helped.

The two centre men, Montgomery for Knox, and Sherret for the Methodists, had a grand battle They were the stars of their respective teams, and honours were about even. Sherret did not get the assistance that Montgomery received, but he pulled off some very nice rushes and was always dangerous. The line-up:

Knox	Charlotte Street
Goal
Daynard	Austin
Right Defence
Wright	Williamson
Left Defence
Cunningham	English
Rover
Doughty	Soden

Curling Is Good Medicine

The curling season has opened and for the remainder of the short winter will hold its place among the commendable lines of athletic recreation. A short sermon might be preached to the business men and especially the desk men. They get entirely too little of outdoor exercise during the cold season. Since the motor car became so popular and its ownership so general the necessity of exercise in the pure air is more imperative than before because there is less walking than before. Men live too much in offices in which the low temperature of this climate leads to excessive and unwholesome heat. Their faculties are dulled and their health undermined by the confinement which is not relieved and counteracted by exertion which fills their lungs with pure air

Devotion to business is not only necessary, but admirable; but the business man might as well sacrifice food and sleep to the demands of business as to sacrifice the healthful energy of mind and body which is the first essential to successful business. "Work like sin when you must, and play like sin when you can," was the advice given by a noted and practical physician.

And for those who can, curling is a panacea for many of the ills which are attributable to confinement in superheated offices in the winter time. It means the pure, open air and that intermittent exercise which guarantees health. An hour with the "stanes" will counteract a day in the cabined atmosphere of the office. It will clear the brain and cheer the heart; start the circulation and stir the sluggish liver; dispel blue devils and drive away the doctor. Unfortunately everybody cannot curl; but all the more reason why those should who can.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

HOCKEY

The Disturbers will challenge the Express men to a game of hockey, to be played at the Brock Street Rink as soon as possible. The line-up:

Goal—E. Rex.
Right defence—H. Sweeney.
Left defence—G. Graham.
Rover—E. O'Toole, Capt.
Centre—H. Lawrence.
Right wing—D. Coons.

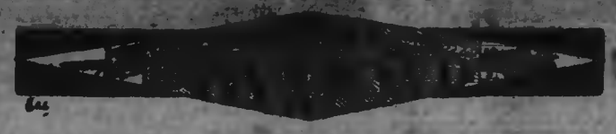
A Texas inventor's hair drying brush that is heated by electricity is provided with a screen to prevent it burning the scalp.



YOUNGSTOWN, Feb. 8. — Curley Blount, manager of Youngstown's new ball club in the Central League, is starting to get busy toward signing some ball players. Blount is going to communicate with quite a few of the big league pilots in an effort to get first crack at some of the youngsters the majors will be obliged to cut loose.

Although the organization to control the local club has not been permanently effected as yet, Youngstown territorial rights are under protection and this gives Blount the right to proceed with the signing of men. Blount declares he has several stars in view who will be grabbed if the salary question does not interfere.

The salary limit in the Central will be $2,000 for 14 men. This will not allow very many $200 ball players, so Blount will have to use great care in getting his outfit together. Not a single man is on the roster as yet, except Blount. He expects to play in the outfield and manage the club as well. It is not likely that more than four pitchers will be carried — probably only three, as it will almost be a necessity to carry two receivers.

According to President Heilbroner, every club in the Central League will have almost an entirely new roster. The teams are going after the youngsters, and already many of the veterans have been cut loose. If anything should happen that would prevent Youngstown from getting into the league this season, all players signed would simply be turned loose.

Blount is said to have lines out for a couple of lads who showed to advantage in the Canadian League last season. As a whole, the material in that circuit would not be good enough for the Central, but there are a few players in the Canadian meshes who could deliver the desired articles of pastiming in Heilbroner's wheel and get away with it in fine style.

The controlling company will be formed some time during the coming week. Articles of incorporation are new being prepared. It is said the company now has $6,000 pledged and the remaining $8,000 necessary to float the proposition will be forthcoming soon after the company is launched. Before the season opens, Wright field will get a more thorough going-over than it ever received before. The fence is in need of some repairs, while the grandstand will also occupy the attention of the carpenters, portions of the big stand being in need of repair. The local ball yard will be put in first class shape before the first game.

The Youngstown club, according to Heilbroner, will no doubt open away from home. This action will be taken to escape the disagreeable weather that usually envelopes this community during the closing days of April. The team will then close at home. Quite a bit of interest is being mustered up in the proposition and the promoters believe they will have one of the most successful seasons ever encountered here.

Old Country Football News

Everton toffee takes a lot of licking just now, although Liverpool practically swallowed it last Saturday.

Large size in hats are no longer in demand at Ewood Park, Blackburn.

St. Bernard's have again won the Scottish Qualifying Cup. The "Saints" have for long been closely identified with this trophy.

It is worthy of note that the three goals which took Everton into the second round of the English Cup were scored by two ex-Glasgow Rangers men—Parker and Galt.

Players of the team which wins the English Cup get medals costing $40 each. That's some souvenir, eh?

Belfast Celtic have won the Irish League championship after an interval of fifteen years.

Last season Lacey of Liverpool was the wonder of the season. This year he has kept all wondering what's wrong.

Swansea's ground is on the small side and the going is heavy, the turf being new. Blackburn didn't know that, but Newcastle got the tip in time.

Aston Villa have no fewer than ten players on the injured list and as many more at the front liable to be wounded. Poor Villans!

Like Brown of Everton, Crisp of Wolverhampton is only seventeen years of age. Fine young men for Kitchener's army!

If Charlie Thomson does not look out, he may lose his place in Sunderland's team. Young Hopkins is aspiring to take the captain's place.

David Howie, the Bradford centre half, is a brother of the more famous James of Kilmarnock and Newcastle United, who is now managing Queen's Park Rangers.

It is stated that Steve Bloomer's name has been included in a list of prisoners of war drawn up by Sir Edward Grey for exchange with Germans now interned in Britain.

One of the outstanding figures of the Leeds City team this season is George Law, the club's popular and gentlemanly right half. A Scottish International, he went to Leeds as a full-back, but has developed into a half-back of exceptional ability. He has persistently refused to share in the general decline at Elland Road and his recent displayes have been full of spirit. He now prefers the half-back position on account of the fact that he is able to warm to his work at an earlier stage of the proceedings.

BOWLING

In the Y.M.C.A. League last night the Engineers took two games out of three from the Shop, before a full gallery of ladies, who cheered lustily for their favourites at every opportunity. Manager Bishop of the Engineers, brought up some of his reserve artillery, who came through with a 200 score at a critical time, and turned the tide in their favour. Following are the scores:

Engineers	1	2	3	Total

To-night the Beginners meet the Belmont Club at seven o'clock in a postponed game, to be followed by the regular schedule games between the Belmont Club and Brighton-Ups.

— KAISER AT BERLIN. —

Hasty Visit Ominous For Germany, Says Copenhagen Correspondent.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 12. — The Kaiser's hurried return to Berlin from the east front is regarded here as a very ominous sign. It is officially announced that he received at the Imperial palace, Von Moltke, former chief of the German Staff, and other generals. He also saw Eulenberg, Minister of Commerce, and Gen. von Kessel, says the announcement. These officials were guests of the Kaiser and Kaiserin at dinner in the royal palace on the occasion of the anniversary of the Kaiser becoming honorary colonel of the 1st Guards Regiment. It may be taken to hide, in fact, that the Kaiser ordered a hasty council of war to discuss the critical situation of the German army on the east front. The National Tidender' Berlin correspondent plainly hints that the German capital is kept in ignorance of the fearful slaughter in the eastern war theatre. He wires that there is a mysterious silence, foreboding great events, which may change the course of war. He evidently knows more than he dare write.

SUBMARINES IN PORT.

German Flotilla Reaches Neutral Haven After Terrible Trip.

LONDON, Feb. 12. — The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent was informed privately from Christiania that during the heavy North Sea gales of a few days ago ten German submarines put into Bergen Stavanger, Trondhjem and other Norwegian ports in terribly battered conditions. The crews reported that they had been many days in the heavy weather, enduring privations, loss of sleep and discomforts through the ceaseless rising and falling of the mountainous seas. The men were in an exhausted condition, several of them being ill. The submarines were escorted to Norwegian waters by Norwegian patrol cruisers and informed that they must leave within twenty-four hours, according to the international rules, or be interned. They remained about twenty hours for rest and carried out some slight repairs. The men were only half inclined to return to their task in the North Sea.

German War Loan Likely.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—German financiers have been summoned to a conference in Berlin with the Finance Minister, who considers that a new loan of $1,250,000,000 is required for the continuance of the war, says a despatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Co.

It is hoped that a large portion of this loan, the message adds, will be subscribed by the Krupps and other leading German firms in exchange for new army contracts.

Allies' Terms Still a Secret.

LONDON, Feb. 12. — "The recent public utterances in Germany give no reason to suppose that the purpose in view will be promoted by adopting the course suggested," was the answer of Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, to a question in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon asking whether, with a view to ending the terrible loss of life in the war, Great Britain wa prepared to declare publicly the basis whereon the allies were willing to discuss terms of peace.

The members of the House greeted Sir Edward Grey's answer with cheers.

To Probe Fraud Charge.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—E. A. Pringle, of Ottawa, appointed commissioner to investigate charges of fraud and corruption in relation to contracts for the building of certain drill halls in Ontario, has fixed Thursday, Feb. 18, at 10 a.m. for the preliminary hearing at Toronto.

The charges are laid by Messrs. Hanson and Munns of Meaford, Ont.

News Twice a Week.

LONDON, Feb. 12. — The British Government has capitulated at last to the insistent demand for more news from the front. Prime Minister Asquith promised yesterday that arrangements would be made to publish communications from Sir John French, the British commander-in-chief, twice weekly.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Peace discussion in the British Parliament, coming immediately after demands in the Prussian diet that war be stopped, cut a figure today in lowering the price of wheat. Final quotations were heavy at 2 1-2c to 3 3-4c under last night. Corn closed 3-8c off, oats at 1-8c decline to a shade advance, and provisions at a rise of 12c to 32 1-2c.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Quotations on the Board of Trade are as follows:

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.67, lake ports; No. 2, $1.65; No. 3, $1.62; ½c per bushel more on track, Goderich.

Manitoba Oats—No. 2, C.W., 74c; No. 3 C.W., 71c, track, bay ports; No. 1 feed, 69c; sample oats, 63c.

Ontario oats—Outside, 63c to 65c.

Ontario Wheat—No. 2, per car lots, $1.60 to $1.65, outside, according to freights.

American Corn—No. 3, yellow, all-rail shipments, Toronto freights, 82½c to 84c.

Peas—No. 2, $2 to $2.05, car lots, outside, nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.33 to $1.35.

Barley—Good malting barley, outside, 65c to 67c.

Rolled Oats—Car lots, per bag of 90 lbs. $2.40 to $2.50; in smaller lots, $2.65, Windsor to Montreal.

Buckwheat—65c to 67c, car lots, outside.

Millfeed—Car lots, per ton, Bran, $26; shorts, $28; middlings, $32 to $33; good feed flour, $39 to $42; mixed cars, $1 more.

Cornmeal—Yellow, 98-pound sacks, in car lots, $2.20; in small lots, $2.50.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 11.—Prior to noon May wheat sold from $1.56⅝ to $1.57⅛, and July prices were given as from $1.57⅛ to $1.58¼. Opening prices were ⅜c to ⅝c lower, and later showed easier, closing 1⅛c to 1¼c lower.

Oats opened ⅜c lower and prices previous to noon were from 67⅝c to 68¼c for May, while July was steady.

Trading on the local market was quiet. Exporters were both buyers and sellers in futures. The cash demand for contract grades of wheat was fair; offerings of all grades were light. The demand for cash oats was improved, while flax was dead practically.

Inspections on Wednesday totaled 180 cars, as against 92 last year, and in sight today were 200 cars.

Wheat futures closed 1⅝c to 1¾c lower, cash 1¾c to 1¾c lower, oats unchanged to ⅛c lower and flax unchanged to ⅝c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—A fair amount of business was done in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable today. Cables from London were firm and prices were unchanged, but the bids from Liverpool were 1-2d to 3-4d per quarter higher. The tone of the local market for coarse grains is firm under a fair demand for car lots from both local and country buyers. There is no change in flour, but the tone of the market is very firm, with a little business doing both for domestic and export accounts. Demand for mill feed continues good and the market is active.

The trade in butter is fairly active and the undertone of the market is strong.

Cheese is unchanged and the demand for eggs is fairly good.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 11.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.55⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.51⅛ to $1.55⅛; No. 2 do., $1.48⅛ to $1.53⅝; May, $1.51⅛.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 73½c to 74c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 57½c to 57¾c.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Feb. 11.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.53⅛; No. 1 northern, $1.52⅛; No. 2 do., $1.49⅛ to $1.50⅝; May, $1.52⅝.

CATTLE MARKETS

Etymology of a Phrase.

A little boy was dining with his mother at a Boston restaurant when he saw the cook's boy in cap and apron coming along the aisle between the tables, wheeling a wagon on which were meats from which the guests might choose their piece de resistance of the meal. The child looked at the wagon in a puzzled way. Then he turned his head and asked:

"Mamma, is that what they mean by a la carte?"—Boston Traveler.

Both the heaviest and the lightest woods grow in the United States, the former being Florida ironwood and the latter the so-called cork of southeastern Missouri.

STREET RAILWAY PROFIT $495.

The Berlin System Reported a Decrease from Previous Year.

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 12.—The annual report of the Street Railway Department of the city shows a profit for last year of $495. This is a decrease from the previous year, but is considered favourable in view of changed conditions. Seventy-five per cent. of this amount goes to the city treasury and twenty-five per cent. goes to Waterloo.

Germany's Uhlans.

The uhlan hussar was borrowed from the Polish military system. Uhlan means simply lancer. Hussar is a word that comes from the language of the Hungarians, meaning twenty. It commemorates the time when every group of twenty men in the kingdom was required to furnish one cavalryman. So it means the representative of twenty men. The word dates from the time of Mathias Corvinus, when in national Hungarian levies every twenty men had to furnish one fully equipped horseman, who, in accordance with the fact, was called "honnur."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Place Names in England.

England can boast that no other country possesses so many Scriptural place names as it does. The name of Jericho occurs six times on the ordnance maps, Paradise five times and Nineveh, Mount Zion, Mount Ararat and Mount Ephraim three times each. In Bedfordshire there is a Calvary wood and in Derbyshire a Jordan hill.

These are the "continuous wire lamps," and are only sold at this low rate for advertising purposes. dtf.

A LARGE INCREASE.

In the annual report of the London Life Insurance Co., in yesterday's Examiner, it stated the increase in new business written during 1914 was only $1,891. The paragraph should have read $1,891,879, which was the largest increase in the Company's history. This speaks volumes for the confidence the Company enjoys with the Canadian public.

TO CLEAN THE STREETS.

If the snow plough was run over the streets a day like this it would take off all the soft snow and slush and make the streets a good deal cleaner than they are now. The walking is worse than at any time this winter. If it is not in the contract with the man with the snow plough it would be money well spent to pay extra for the day's work.

SPRING IS COMING.

Perhaps your spring overcoat needs a new velvet collar, or new silk facing before you can wear it on the mild days that are coming. If so, now is the time to have it done, or better still, let us make you a new one. Prices from $12.50 up. Suit cleaned and pressed, 75c. Read Bros., cor. Wolfe and Rubidge. Remember 'phone 1416.

ADVANCE EXAMINATION DATE.

The war is changing the date of the Toronto University examinations this year. It was announced at the University yesterday that the examinations this year would begin on April 9th, instead of May 1. This enables students who have enlisted to go to camp without losing the benefit of any work. The earlier exams. are likely to be general in all the Canadian universities.

SERVIA IS READY.

SOFIA, Feb. 11.—The Servian army has a strength of 280,000 men, well supplied with war materials and food. One of the diplomats at Nish, during the course of an interview, said:

"A new Austro-German offensive campaign is believed to be imminent, and everything possible is being done to put the country in a good state of defence. The women and children are aiding in digging trenches."

STOP DOUBLE-TRACKING.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 11.—George Bury, Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, while in the city today declared that no further work would be done for the present on the double-tracking of the company's main line from Toronto to Windsor. Double-tracking has been completed to Guelph Junction, and nothing further will be done. The Vice-President also stated that no immediate improvements are contemplated for London.

Last Meeting of The Series

The last meeting of the series will be held to-night in the Gospel Hall. Mr Irving will speak on the message to Christ unto the Church of the Laodiceans One thing that this lecturer has impressed on his hearers is this: That the coming of the Lord, for His redeemed people, draweth nigh. The signals are all hung out, that the sure word of prophecy says would be out to warn the people that that day was approaching. Mr. Irving, last evening, referred to the present distress over the world, but said that this was small compared to the time of unparalleled trouble that would come, after the salt of the earth (the true Church) was translated These troubles now are the beginning of sorrows, he said, but woe to the inhabitants of the earth after the Church is taken away. He warned his hearers of the awful apostasy now on and the so-called higher criticism taking the lead. Hear him to-night —8 to 9 o'clock at the Gospel Hall.

FOR RELIEF IN NORTH MONAGHAN

The report of the meeting of the Council of the Township of North Monaghan as appeared in Tuesday's issue, stated that Acting Relief Officer H. B. Rye presented bills for goods, distributed as charity, the amount of those bills being $90.23. Mr. Rye had been acting in the capacity of Relief Officer but a week, and as taxpayers of the Township may voice objections to such seemingly extravagance, it should be stated that but $48.61 had been spent by him in supplying families in need with provisions and fuel. The remainder of the $90 23 had ben ordered by other parties.

Its thinness is in the movement

Come in and let us show you how a new, mechanically correct movement of wheels reduced the size of the ordinary movement about one-half.

Then you will understand how this watch can "lie your pocket like a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this genuine thin model Gruen Verithin is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as conforming the inside dust protection cap to the back case, or putting a hollow disc somewhere in the centre of a thin edged case.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model watch—the Gruen Verithin.

BRITISH CRUISER AT MONTEVIDEO

Special Cable to The Examiner:

MONTEVIDEO, Thursday. — The British cruiser Bristol arrived here to-day.

From reports received it would appear that the Bristol has passed much of her time in the Atlantic. She had an encounter with the German cruiser Karlsruhe in September, took part in the naval battle off the Falkland Islands in December and was patrolling in the West Indies in January.

STOMACH TROUBLES DUE TO ACIDITY

SO SAYS EMINENT SPECIALIST.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, and stomachache are in probably nine cases out of ten simply evidence that fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acids. Wind distends the stomach, and causes that full, oppressive feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the fermenting food. Such fermentation is unnatural, and acid formation is not only unnatural, but may involve most serious consequences if not corrected. To stop or prevent fermentation of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and render it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, probably the best and most effective corrector of acid stomach known, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever wind or acidity is felt. This stops the fermentation, and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments. Fermentation, wind and acidity are dangerous and unnecessary. Stop or prevent them by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and thus enable the stomach to do its work properly without being hindered by poisonous gas and dangerous acids.—M. P. P.

EIGHT THOUSAND GERMAN DESERTERS

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 13—A London Times despatch from Amsterdam says:

"The Telegraaf learns from Antwerp to-day that some eight thousand German deserters have fled to the Netherlands, including numerous officers. All these men had been commanded to proceed to the Yser. Large numbers of soldiers are reported to be deserting from the Drasschaet and Morxem forts".

Few people believe nowadays that cheapness is necessarily economy. Cheap tea loaded with dust is a poor bargain at any price. Salada tea is all clean, whole leaves and marvellous value.

SEVERE FIGHTING IN THE ARGONNE REGION

Russians Lose Heavily In Recent Battles

GERMANS CONTINUE TO MAKE VIOLENT ASSAULTS

French Have Made Slight Gains in the Heavily Wooded Territory to the West of the German Positions--German Losses Heavy.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Severe fighting continues in the Argonne region where the Germans have again been reinforced.

Along the line between Fontaine Madame and Maria Therese the Germans are to-day continuing their violent assaults in an endeavour to gain a foothold in the French trenches, some of which they have demolished with dynamite.

They are being repulsed, however, by the French artillery and rapid firers.

The German losses in this operation, the War Office says, are very heavy.

There has been a renewal of the bombardment of the German positions along the heights of the Meuse and especially in the St. Mihiel section, where the French have made slight gains in the heavily wooded territory to the west of the German positions. In the Vosges slow but certain gains are being made under the most desperate conditions. It continues to snow heavily and the conditions are described as "very blizzardly," but the French infantry are steadily pushing their lines toward the main highways that run north and south.

The German activity at La Basses has been checked for the time being because of the enormous number of troops that are massed here. It is believed that the enemy has merely halted his operations, while additional artillery is being brought, The British are also getting heavy reinforcements at this point.

The bombardment of Soissons continues at long range, but the Germans have seemingly abandoned for the present, all thoughts of attempting to force the passage of the Aisne.

In the north, from Arras to the sea, the artillery duels continue and nearly every building along the line of conflict has been flattened to the ground by the intensity of shell fire.

PARIS, Feb. 13—A brilliant and successful feat of the French army is reported in the official communique issued by the War Office to-night. In a violent snow storm French Chausseurs, who have repeatedly distinguished themselves in the mountain fighting, stormed and captured "Hill 827," north of Hartmane-Weilerkop, east of the Vosges, driving out the Germans who sustained heavy casualties, and themselves suffering little loss.

Unofficial despatches supplementing the brief official announcement describe the feat as one of the most noteworthy of the war. The hill derives its name from the fact that it is 827 metres above the sea level. It had been held by the Germans in force, and was particularly difficult to attack, because of the rugged and wooded nature of its slopes, which were additionally defensible, because of the weather conditions.

The severe checks dealt German infantry attacks during the first part of this week have had the effect of making the enemy chary of leaving his trenches, hence the War Office has little to report of an offensive by the Germans, except the throwing of bombs and hand grenades, mine explosions and artillery fire. In no case have these tactics secured material results.

WANTS TO RECRUIT ITALIANS IN LONDON

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 13—General Ricciotti Garibaldi, who has lost two sons in the French army, and who recently came from Italy to interest the British military authorities in his scheme to raise Italian volunteers to fight on the side of the Allies, called on the Lord Mayor of London this afternoon and set forth his hopes and desires.

The Italian General showed his anxiety to raise and lead a force of Italian patriots.

GERMANS ATTEMPT TO PIERCE THE RUSSIAN LINES

Terrible Carnage Results—Forty Thousand Dead on the Battlefield —A Successful Air Raid

BRITISH AVIATOR RESCUED

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 13—The Admiralty announced that thirty-four British aeroplanes made successful raids on the German positions in Bruges, Zeebrugge, and Ostend, and inflicted considerable damage.

BERLIN CLAIMS A VICTORY.

Berlin, Feb. 13, via wireless.—Official despatches say that twenty-six thousand Russians with several guns, have been captured in their retreat from East Prussia.

CAPTURED GERMAN TRENCHES.

Paris, Feb. 13. — In a brilliant charge the French captured several German trenches in the Vosges mountains.

GRAHAM WHITE FELL.

London, Feb. 13—The Admiralty, in confirming the raid of thirty-four airships on Belgian towns, added that Claude Graham White, the noted British aviator, fell, but was rescued.

DUTCH STEAMER HELD UP.

London, Feb. 13—A Rotterdam despatch states that in compliance with the German threat, a Dutch steamer was stopped in the North Sea by a German submarine which, after examining its papers, allowed it to proceed.

FIGHTING VERY SEVERE.

Paris, Feb. 13—Artillery duels all along the line were very severe, chiefly in Champagne. Fighting in the Argonne district continues without much change. German aviators shelled Verdun, doing little damage.

FORTY THOUSAND DEAD.

Petrograd, Feb. 13.—Fighting in Poland was very severe all day yesterday. Germans made vain attempts to break the line before Warsaw. The losses were terrific. Forty thousand dead were left on one battlefield.

Enemy's Bases Are Destroyed

British Air Raid on Bruges, Zeebrugge and Ostend Districts

GBEAT DAMAGE DONE

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 13—Aerial warfare was waged yesterday on the largest scale in its history, and under adverse circumstances from the standpoint of the weather. British airmen, buffeting banks of snow in the air, swept over cities of Northern Belgium held by the Germans and dropped bombs on Ostend, Brubes and other places.

Thirty-four aeroplanes and seaplanes of the British navy took part in the operations, and all of them later returned safely to their base without casualties to their drivers, although two of their machines were damaged. The raid was made in order to prevent the development of submarine bases and establishments which might further endanger British warships and merchantmen.

Altough no submarines were seen, the British Admiralty statement indicates that the raid had satisfactory results, for considerable damage is said to have been done to German gun positions, railway lines and railway stations. The Ostend station is reported to have been set on fire and that at Blankenberghe to have been badly damaged. German mine-sweeping vessels at Zeebrugge also came in for a hail of bombs, but the damage done to them has not been stated.

At various points the airmen were received by the Germans with firing from anti-aerial guns and rifles. None of the airmen are reported by the Admiralty to have been wounded in these attacks.

One of the machines, driven by Flight Commander Claude Grahame-White, among the most intrepid of the British fliers, fell into the sea while returning to its base after the raid was over, and the aviator had a narrow escape from drowning. Fortunately for him a cruiser was nearby and picked him up, and then towed his aeroplane into port.

Wing Commander Samsen, who previously had made several notable visits to enemy territory in an aeroplane, was in chief command of the raiding aviators. He was assisted by Wing Commander Longmere and Squadron Commanders Courtney, Porte and Rathborne.

During the raid warships bombarded the German positions along the coast.

CRISIS IS EXPECTED IN THE NEAR FUTURE

Events in the Eastern War Theatre Are Developing Very Rapidly---Russians Retired Over Frontier Before New German Army of 160,000.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 12.—There can be no doubt that a crisis in the military situation of the eastern war zone is rapidly developing, and out of it will come the decision whether in the near future Germany is to capture Warsaw, cut off the Russian base of supplies with a large slice of Russian Poland territory, or whether Russia is to overrun the Carpathians, sweep the Hungarian plains, swing south towards Vienna, sweep north-weste towards Koenigsberg and East Prussia, and assume the mastery of that important theatre of the war.

No official statement, no unofficial report is yet able to establish satisfactorily what the issue of this impending battle is to be.

The Russians have retired from East Prussia before an enormous force of Germans, the regular forces of Gen. von Francois having been reinforced by 160,000 new men, troops shifted from the centre, reservists and new recruits. The Russian line, which ten days ago was a crescent from the Masurian Lakes to Tilsit on the north, is now swung over the border, and while preserving the same formation rests on its left in the province of Plock and with its right end in the province of Kovno.

CLAIM 26,000 PRISONERS.

The German official report to-day declares that 26,000 Russian prisoners have been taken in East Prussia already, with many guns and a quantity of war material that has not yet been catalogued.

There is no doubt that the German forces are driving directly south-east as if to pierce the Russian centre, and are now operating in Russian territory. Continuing this drive successfully would place them to the eastward of Warsaw, and in a position to command the communications of the Russian armies operating in the Carpathians.

Reports claim that the Russian advantage in the Carpathians, with Dukla Pass on the north, has been maintained. In that section, for a distance of at least 60 miles, the Russians are over the mountains, and have a foothold on Hungarian territory.

Czar Nicholas is still at the front, and it is officially reported from Berlin that the Kaiser has arrived in East Prussia. Because of the situation it is said that the garrison of Przemysl has been vastly encouraged to hold out. Petrograd reports that the German commander recently expelled six thousand poor persons, mainly Jews, because there was no food for them. These refugees were finally taken in by the Russians.

LOST 40,000 IN DEAD.

The French Government to-day gave out this statement concerning the operations in the Eastern war theatre: "The failure of recent attacks by the Germans in Poland appears to be complete. The losses of the Germans are unprecedented. It is reported that they exceed 40,000 dead.

"Cold and the frequent use of dense formations are among the causes given for the losses of the Germans. An eye-witness of the battle declares that machine guns mowed down the ranks of the enemy like a steel blade. When the combat ended the Russians saw hills of dead before them. At night, under the glare of searchlights, the undulating mass of wounded made efforts to extricate themselves. Then, towards 2 o'clock in the morning, they moved no more."

MOST OF CANADIAN FORCE SAFELY LANDED IN FRANCE

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Nearly all the Canadian troops transferred from Salisbury Plain have been landed safely in France. They were given a great reception on their arrival across the Channel. It is being urged in Paris that the people of the French capital be given an opportunity of seeing the Canadians before they go to the firing line.

Nearly ten thousand members of the first contingent, including over two hundred officers, have been left at the base at Salisbury.

As a result of representations made by the editor in Canada in regard to the inconvenience resulting from the non-publication in England of casualties among the Canadian forces, Lord Islington, chairman of the Committee for the Welfare of the Canadian Contingent, has written stating that the Canadian Record Office will hereafter give out the casualty lists, which will be available 48 hours after the official despatch is announced in Ottawa, thereby insuring that relatives shall have time to hear official news before it appears in the press.

The total list of casualties in the Princess Patricia Regiment up to February 6, shows that two officers were killed, one died of wounds, two were wounded, while among the men 13 were killed, four died of wounds and one of disease and 25 were wounded. The dates of the casualties indicate that the Patricias were in action four times and for a period of four days on each occasion.

The Canadian hospital at Shorncliffe has for the first time received wounded Canadians for treatment, two coming to the institution this week. Hitherto the patients have been Belgians. There are now 23 soldiers in the hospital.

"People are asking where this 'Eye-witness' business is going to end and what exactly has been the reason for making Sir Max Aitken a colonel," writes Anthony Nugent in the Globe. "Sir Max," he adds, "has won for himself a position in finance and commerce, but not even 'Who's Who' has anything to say concerning his literary abilities or journalistic attainments.

COIN STILL COMES FREE OF DUTY

The farmers of Ontario were lucky to escape a war tariff on feed corn. It was especially exempted from the list of commodities covered by a duty of 7 1-2 per cent., ad valorem, announced yesterday by the Ottawa Government. Farmers have enjoyed free entry of corn for some years past. This was a means to greater production of live stock. Had it been covered with a duty at this time, the market value would have immediately advanced between 6 and 7 cents per bushel. This would have practically precluded its import, and other feeding grains in Ontario would have advanced at once. The corn item is one of the most significant on the list. In the neighbourhood of 5,000,000 bushels have been imported by Toronto grain men and distributed among Ontario farmers this season up to date. It has been the only effective bearish factor in the grain market. Already farmers have been forced in many cases to ship in unfinished butchers' and take a low figure, because of scarcity and the high cost of feed. This tendency would have been precipitated had corn been taxed.

There are about 12,000,000 acres of tillable lands in the Philippines, of which only about 7,500,000 acres are cultivated.

60 PER CENT. OF WOUNDED FIT

Special Cable:

LONDON, Feb. 13.—In connection with his recent statement to the effect that the British casualties in the western fighting zone aggregated 101,000 officers and men, Mr. Asquith explained in Parliament on Thursday afternoon that approximately 60 per cent. of the wounded already had recovered and were fit for service.

For Shapped, Blotchy, Rough or Coarse Skin

Most skins require constant grooming at this season to keep the m from becoming unduly red, blotchy, coarse, rough or harsh, or if such condition has developed, to overcome it. In such cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores and make the complexion worse than ever. It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a spoiled complexion. Apply the wax, like cold cream, before retiring; next morning, in washing it off, you'll wash away fine flour-like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or more and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, white, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's, is all you'll need.

If the skin be wrinkled or flabby, here's the best possible remedy: Mix ½ pint witch hazel and 1 ounce powdered saxolite and use as a face bath. It works like a miracle, yet is entirely harmless.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

Slowly he drew back, still tense and alert, and from his eyes the tender glow died until they narrowed and hardened and the jaw angle stiffened and the lips drew themselves into their old line of warlike sternness. She was looking again into the face of the mountaineer; the feudist; of the wild creature turning to stand at bay.

For a moment they remained motionless ,and her fingers resting on his arms felt the strain of his tautened biceps.

"God!" he muttered almost inaudibly.

"What is it?" she whispered, but he replied only with a warning shake of the head.

Once more he stood listening, then gently turned her so that his body was between her and the outside. He thrust her back into the open door and followed her inside.

His words came slowly and though they were calm they carried a very bitter note.

"I must go. . . I hoped they'd let me live long enough to marry ye, but I reckon they're weary of hidin' their time."

He had closed the door and stood looking down at her with a deep hunger hunger in his face.

"What is it, Anse? What did you hear out there?" Her face had gone pallid and she clung to his arms with [illegible] release.

"Nothin' much. Just the crackin' of a twig or two; just some steps in the brush that was too cautious to sound honest; little noises that wouldn't mean much if I didn't know what they do mean. They weren't friendly sounds. They're after me."

"Who? What do you mean?"

Her voice came in a low panic of whispering, and even as he spoke the man was listening with his head bent toward the closed door.

He laughed mirtlessly under his breath. "I don't know who they've picked out to get me. It don't matter much, does it? But I know they've picked to-night. I've been lookin' for it, but it seems like they might have let me have to-night—" His lips smiled and for an instant his eyes softened again to tenderness. "This was my night; our night.'

"If they are out there, Anse," her eyes flashed suddenly and her grip tightened, "you sha'n't go. I won't let you go. In this house you are behind walls at least. I can't let you go."

"It's the only way," he told her; and again she read unshakable resolve written in his face. "My best chance is out there. Them mountains'll take better care of me than any walls—if I can once get to cover." Suddenly he wheeled and caught her fiercely in his arms, holding her very close, and now her heart was beating more wildly than before; beating with a sudden an sickening terror.

He bent low and covered her temples and cheeks and lips and eyes with kisses. "God knows, when I came here, to-night,' he declared, talking fast and passionately, "I didn't aim to ever go away again without ye. Now I've got to, but if I come through an' there's a breath or a drop of blood left in me, I'll be back. I'm a-comin' back, dearest, if I live."

Her answer was a low moan.

He released her at last and went over to the gun-rack.

Standing before her shrine of guns, in her temple of disarmament, he said slowly, "Dearest, I was about the last man to leave my rifle here, an I reckon I've got to be the first to take it out again. I'm sorry, Will you give it to me or must I take it without permission?"

She came slowly over, conscious that her knees were trembling, and that ice-water seemed to have taken the place of hot blood in her veins.

"If you need it," she faltered, "take it dear—nothing else matters. Which one shall I give you?"

"My own!" His voice was for the instant imperious. It was almost as if someone had asked Ulysses what bow he would draw in battle. "I reckon my own guns good enough fer me. It has been till to-day."

She withdrew the rifle from the rack herself and he took it from her trembling hands but when he had accepted it she threw her arms about him again and wildly clung to him her eyes wide with silent suffering and dread.

The crushing grasp of his arms hurt her and she felt a wild joy in the pain. Then she resolutely whispered, "Go dearest, go! Time is precious now, and God keep you!"

"Juanita,' he said slowly, "I have refused to talk to you in good speech. I have clung to the rough phrases and the uncouth manners of the hills, but I want you to know always, most dear, that I have loved you not only fiercely, but gently, too. No tenderer worship lives in your own world. If I don't come back think of that. God knows I love you."

"Don't Anse!" she cried with a smothered sob. "Don't talk like a soft-muscled lowlander! Talk to me in your own speech. It rings of strength and God knows—" her voice broke and she added with fierce tenderness —"God knows, dear eagle-heart, you need all the strength of wing and talon to-night."

Then she opened the back door very cautiously where the shadows slept in inky blackness and saw him slip away and melt instantly into the murk.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Out there the moon was setting. Soon, thank God, it would be dark everywhere. The man she loved needed all the chance that the thickening murk could give him. It was terribly quiet now, except for an occasional whippoorwill call, and the quietness seemed to lie upon her with the oppression of something unspeakably terrifying. The breath of hillside and sky was bated.

At last there came to her ears the sound of heavy feet crashing through the brush, but he had been gone ten minutes then. Perhaps they had just awakened to his escape and were casting aside stealth for the fury of open pursuit. She even thought she heard an oath once, and then it was all quiet again; quiet for a while and at the end of the silence like the punctuation of an exclamation mark, came the far-away snap of a rifle.

She had dropped to a chair and sat there tensely leaning forward, her lips parted and her ears straining. Had she heard one shot and its echoes or had there been several? Her imagination and fears were playing her tricks now and she could hardly be certain of her senses.

Once she started violently with the sense that she had heard his voice exclaim, "God!" as he had muttered it out there on the porch, but of course that was only a reaction of memory. She closed her eyes, but that made the agonised suspense of her waiting worse a hundred-fold, for when the familiar things of the hall were shut out other things came. In her fancy she saw him lying among the rocks and tangled branches, wounded desperately and seeking to hold back swarms of enemies who drew closer and closer about him with their cordon of blazing rifles. She could see the grim doggedness with which he was dying and the grim doggedness with which they were killing him. But he would not die alone! He would take his own toll first.

Then she pulled herself together. She must hold on to her faculties. In the way of such imaginings lay madness! Come what might he was the strongest of them all and the most consummate woodsman. He would elude them. They were like crows badgering and hectoring a great hawk in flight, and only succeeding in annoying him. The hawk had only to alight and face them and they would fly wildly away.

And yet an insistent little advocate of despair kept whispering to her heart; suppose there were so many crows, that the hawk could not alight! It would not do to follow that train of thought either. She and Anse had once stood together on the crest, watching the darting attack of several of the black pests as they hovered about the spread pinions of an eagle, until the eagle fled high into the sky.

"Why doesn't he kill one or two?" she had irritably demanded and the man only laughed.

"Have the mountains got into your blood? Have ye get the killin' instinct, too?"

She had been indignant at the question. Yet now she was praying that he, her mate of the windy heights, should kill and conquer. If anyone had fallen under that shot she heard, God grant that it might be one of his assailants. Yes, for the first time she knew now that in her heart, too, had awakened a germ of that killing instinct that heights and desolation breed and breathe into the human breath. Mixed and tangled with her fear and grief was something of the ecstasy of war prophetess of peace and disarmament though she was.

The passage of time was a thing of which she had lost count. Each moment was a century. Her eyes wandered absently over the room and fell upon the paino. He had brought it for her from Peril. She turned her glance away from the remainder only to have it fall on the spread eagle wings above the mantel. He had told her how many years that bird had preyed and pillaged and how long he had hunted it before it fell at last under his rifle. Now he, too, was out there, being haunted. She groaned horribly and fell to trembling.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORELLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

A Dark Deed.

Wife (entering room wringing her hands with an expression of extreme agony)—Now I have done it. But it serves me right for not turning on the light. I might have known I would make a mistake.

Husband (who is reading the paper) —Great guns! What have you done? Taken poison?

Wife—No; I put a two cent stamp on a postcard.—Columbia Jester.

The Long Wait.

She bade him go, she cared not where
His face she hoped no more to see.
And while he stood and lingered there
She was as firm as she could be.

He took her at her word and went.
And now she sits and waits alone
And wonders if he thought she meant
He shouldn't call her on the phone.

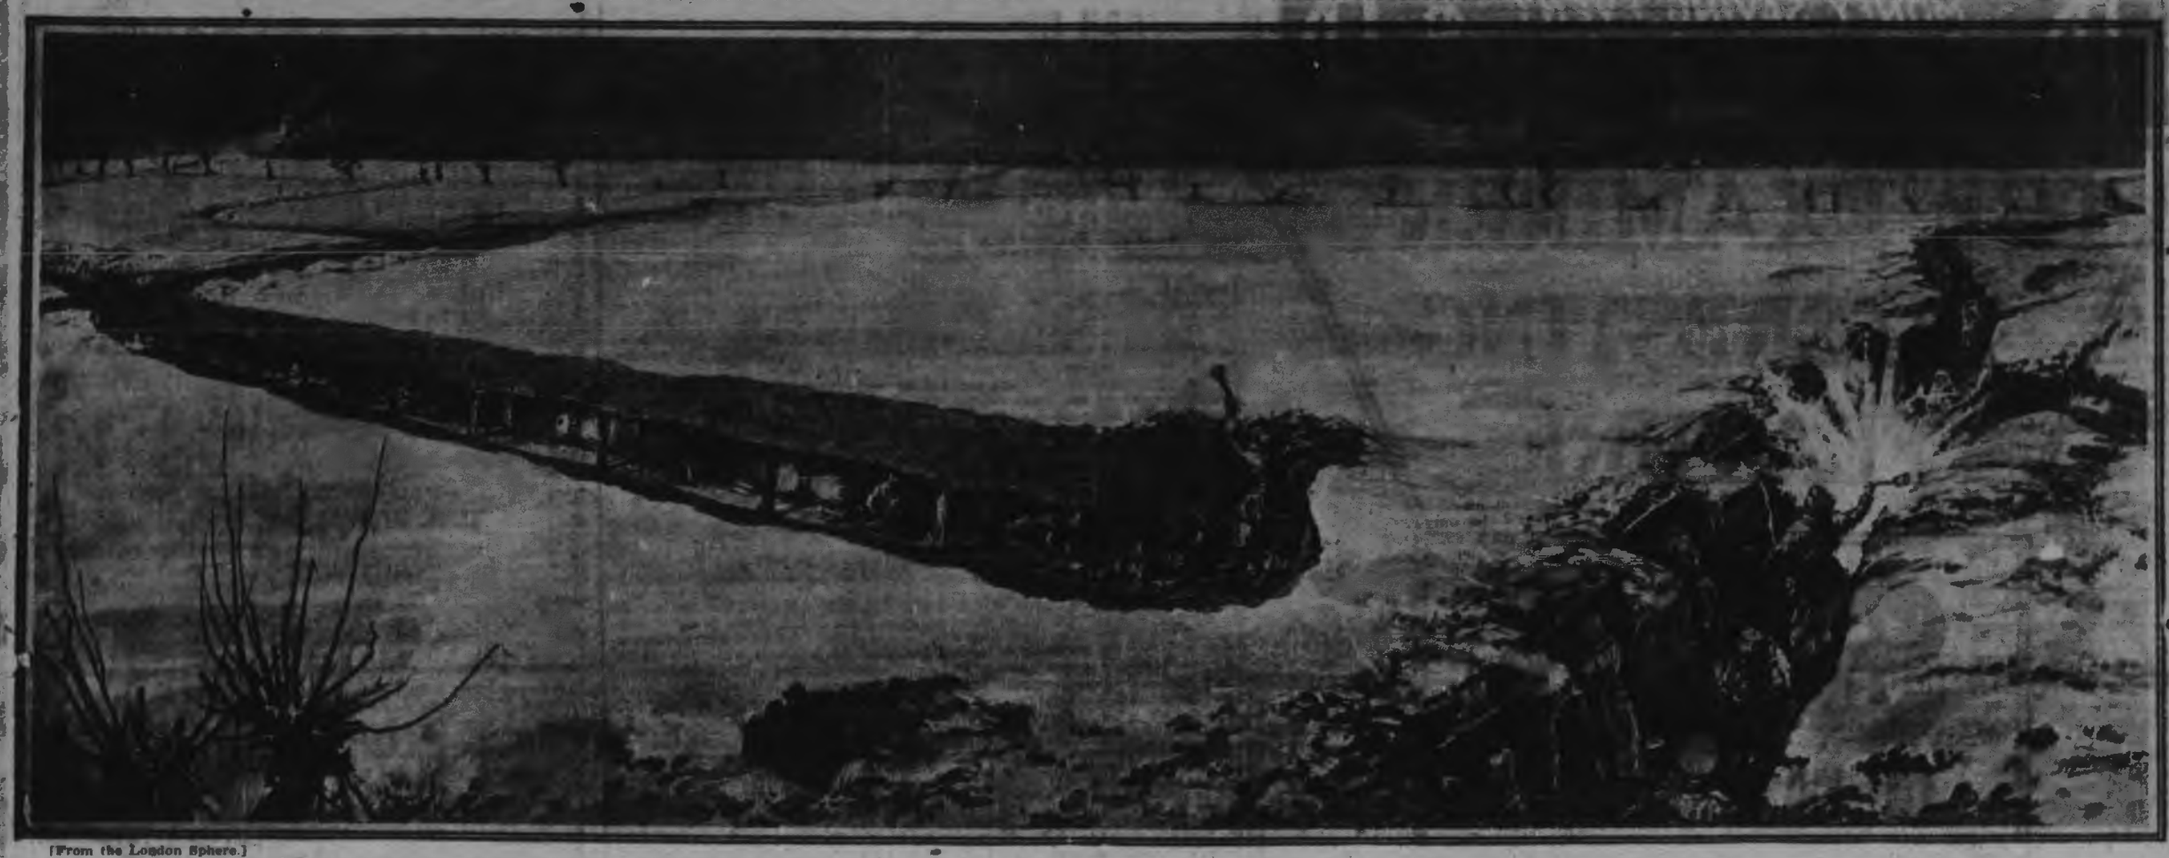
SAPPING AND GRENADE THROWING—HOW THE OPPOSING FORCES ATTEMPT TO CROSS THE STRIP OF "NO MAN'S LAND"



[From the London Sphere.]

The above illustration, which has been drawn from material supplied by a British officer recently returned from the front, shows the method adopted by the Germans of advancing close up to the British lines by means of advanced earthworks and saps. The saps run straight across to the British lines, and where necessary wooden supports are constructed to keep up the weight of earth in the excavations. The actual sap head is shown above. From this point the Germans throw their grenades direct into the opposing lines. At other times they push the sap forward until they actually burst into the British trench and attempt by means of a desperate rush to occupy the trench. The grenade which the British soldier is about to throw into the German sap head consists of two parts—the wooden handle and the bright, cup shaped tin, containing the actual explosive. To a corner of this tin is affixed a fuse, which when lighted very quickly burns down and explodes the charge, making it imperative that the grenade be thrown immediately after the fuse has been lighted. With regard to these hand grenades and also with regard to life in the advanced trenches, the following account, written by a British officer before his death in action, will be found interesting:—

"I have started experimenting with some new grenades fired out of a rifle. We had been heavily sniped for three days. I had one man killed, so I went for the sniper with a grenade. The first found the range, but was wide. The second landed just behind the trench and within five yards of the sniper. The sniping ceased entirely from that place, and as the grenades have a radius of about twenty yards I think my friend was, to say the least, uncomfortable. In the afternoon we spotted smoke rising from behind a trench. My first grenade failed to burst, but my second landed about two yards behind a party, and soon we saw smoke retire rapidly into a wood. I think I may say that it introduces a disturbing factor. We ourselves are none too happy, as eighty yards of my trench is two feet deep under water and one hundred yards a foot deep. The rest is mostly mud. It is impossible to keep dry except by standing up. Curiously enough, in the last month my company has been on the extreme left. The former was too hot a place, as we were in a sort of redoubt on the point of a salient, and the latter was too cold."

Germans Try to Arouse Suspicion of England

Persistent Propaganda to Create Mistrust in France by Proclaiming That the Struggle Is England's War, Brought About for Sordid, Shopkeeping Motives.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]
IN NORTHERN FRANCE,
Via LONDON, Feb. 13.

"I die gladly for my country. Tell the cavalry that the sacrifice of my life should be their example." These dying words of General Bridoux, who was killed almost at the outset of the campaign, sum up the spirit which animates the French troops and describes more graphically than any battle picture the splendor with which the French armies are fighting against the invader. The only anxiety of the man in the trenches, far from the public opinion of his countrymen, whom age or infirmity has kept from the battle line, is lest the civilians should fail. This was cleverly stated by a recent cartoon which represented two soldiers in a muddy trench under shell fire discussing the progress of affairs. Underneath was the legend, "Pourvu que les civils tiennent."

The soldier in the trench need have no fear, but the French, who realise that the common object of the Allies—the crushing of Germany—can only be attained at the cost of great sacrifice, are also alive to the fact that in war, and especially in these days of newspapers and politics, the non-combatant morale has in its way an importance as great as that of the army itself. They are therefore not unheedful of the demands of the "internal defence," as Mr. Delcassé described the work of keeping the public sanely confident in themselves and in their Allies.

The experience of the last five months has shown that the French have their confidence in themselves best fortified by the laconic truths contained in the official communiqués, which now, as [illegible] shown by the prompt publication of the check suffered on the Aisne, do not attempt to keep the public in ignorance of bad news.

The matter as between ally and ally is more difficult and more delicate, and the enemy, betraying the ignorance of French and English character which marked his diplomacy before the war, apparently hopes to be able by persistent propaganda to arouse mistrust of England in France. The Germans lost no opportunity of declaring to the French through every channel open to them that England, as Herr Lissauer proclaimed in the "Hymn of Hate," is their only enemy. With the French they profess to have no quarrel. The war, they insinuate by the most curious means, is England's war. It was brought about by Sir Edward Grey for England's sordid shopkeeping motives, and the English, maintaining their traditional perfidy, have deluded the French into fighting their battles for them.

This idea they disseminate in neutral publications which reach France, and preach in their own journals. It is explained in circulars which German agents, who have so far managed to elude the police, place under house doors in the towns of Northern France during the night hours.

Even the French dead have been made to serve in this work of propaganda. When papers are found by the Germans upon a dead Frenchman, together with an address of a friend or relative to whom they can be sent, they are forwarded with a letter, correct in tone and sentiment, expressing admiration for the dead man's heroic end. The tale is then adorned with the moral that if it had not been for England the man's relatives would not have to mourn his loss.

Foolish and ineffective though this propaganda may be, it is folly to ignore it. It is difficult to explain to the Frenchman in the towns around here the many difficulties Britain has had to contend with in the formation of her new armies. A great many Frenchmen are under the impression that in England service is obligatory. A still greater number believe, in the absence of any news to the contrary, that there are but the original 100,000 men in France. They are all, both ignorant and informed, frank and generous in their admiration of the British troops in the field and of the services they have rendered to France while fighting for Great Britain. But that cannot prevent a certain wistful envy from arising now and then when the French read of the normal rise or the Englishman at home, of prosperous shipping, satisfactory trade returns, almost ordinary banking facilities, and when they compare this with the situation in France, where industries are still to a great extent paralyzed through lack of the labor which has been working on the field of battle since the beginning of August and where a stringent moratorium has only just been relaxed.

Much useful work is now being done by several of the large newspapers, among them the Matin, which has sent out a special correspondent, who for some time past has been explaining with admiration to the French the extent of the effort Great Britain is making.

Germans Employ Tricks to Gain Unworthy Advantage, Foes Charge

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]
LONDON, Feb. 13.

There seems to be no end to German artifices in this war. No sooner is one trick discovered than there is another ready. "Nothing is too low, nothing beneath them, to gain an unworthy advantage," writes a correspondent from the Polish front.

"New Year's Eve," he writes, "and a great battle raging; and here am I in the midst of a forest of Russian guns, forty-eight in number, and all singing away merrily.

"You have heard about German tricks with the white flag. Well, now the old thing has been exploded and, as our men no longer trust their pretences of surrender, they have invented a new dodge. It used to be a whole company that raised the white flag, and when our fellows accepted it they fired on us unawares. Now four or five, but never more than ten, crawl out of their trenches and come, without arms, to surrender. Behind them come four or five more, and behind them again one man. The first lot actually surrenders, but keeps up a deal of talking and moving about.

"The last man is the one who counts, and his job is to pace accurately the distance to our trenches. He moves behind the others, but while the talking is going on he runs hastily back, the others covering him from our fire. We thus get four or five prisoners and maybe shoot one or two of the second four or five as they hurry back, covering the one man, who gives the enemy's artillery the precise range, and we get peppered hotly ever after. The modern trench is difficult to shell unless you know the range to a few inches, and this is the way the Germans are now getting the range. Orders have been given not to take any prisoners from the trenches, so that this dodge also is dead."

Allies in France and Belgium Make Gains Slowly, but Surely, Says Observer

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

IN NORTHERN FRANCE, via LONDON, Feb. 13, 1915.—There is no disguising the fact that the slow advance of the Allies in France and Belgium is a disappointment to many, who are wondering if ever they will break through the German lines. But personal information, gathered in the course of a long tour over the whole line from one end to the other, is sufficient to show that there is no cause for pessimism, but, on the contrary, of great hope for the future.

Let it be clearly understood, first of all, that the French have, before all, made up their minds not to repeat the German blunders. They have had many opportunities of discovering why the enemy's offensive has everywhere resulted in utter failure. The last important lesson was given the Allies around Ypres in November last. Then, as ever, the German offensive took the form of what may be called a blind effort. The German guns sent a shower of shells over a whole area, which included the unfortunate town of Ypres, in order to make life impossible throughout the district. Then came the infantry attack. It has already been described by many witnesses, who saw with horror and admiration thick lines of men marching, one behind the other, on the British and French trenches. The German theory was, indeed, that their human stream was bound to overflow anything. They thought, and still seem to think, that ninety men out of a hundred would fall, but that the ten survivors would surely manage to hold on to the conquered ground and obtain victory.

German Lines Mowed Down.

But they did not foresee that, heavy as the Allies' losses might be, such blind attack was bound to fail. Their shelling was heavy, but the infantry attacks only led to a horrible slaughter of men. The ten survivors never survived, but were mown down by what the French gunners call "tir de barrage." The French and British artillery fire was indeed too accurate to allow any troops coming out in the open to walk for more than one mile without being destroyed to the last man. Now it has been definitely ascertained from experience that in face of modern artillery fire numbers, however huge, do not tell.

Nobody has learned more from the German mistakes than the French army. They had, indeed, much to learn. Those who have been engaged in the war since the very first day can hardly believe that the present French army is the very same that fought at Mons, Charleroi. They had to spend several months in trying to complete their equipment and to mend their methods. This, by the way, escaped the attention of many outside observers. They were wondering why the French were not pushing on at once. Well, they were making a new army. That new army is now ready, but is still learning every day. The first thing they learned, with their British allies, was how to make a line impregnable. That was the most urgent. But now they begin to think that they also know how they ought to attack.

The general principle underlying the new method of assaulting the enemy's line can be stated in a few words. It consists in doing nothing in a blind way. As compared with the German dashes the French method might be termed the method of the open eye.

Deep Firing "By Map."

Take, for instance, the use of heavy and field artillery. No infantry attack is now launched if it has not been thoroughly prepared by an efficient artillery fire. But it also has been found out that no artillery fire is efficient if the gunners simply fire from a map, without seeing what they are firing at. How the officers commanding the heavy batteries, which fire occasionally from a distance of seven miles, manage to observe their objective, as well as the officers of the field artillery, is a technical detail, but the fact remains that no important attack is every started before not only the batteries but every gun in them is in a position to shell a given point within an approximation of a few yards. The result of this finished way of working has also proved very satisfactory. There is no line of trenches on earth which can stand an accurate and concentrated fire of several hundred guns. During the last week it has often happened that after such a formidable bombardment the troops walked into the enemy's trenches without losing a man.

Infantry is now handled with the same care. No French regiment ever starts dashing on a German position before the commanding officers have gone down to the trenches opposite, have carefully examined the ground and found out how their men must be led in order to incur the lowest possible losses.

All this minute preparation does not prevent the attack from being sudden and violent. The contrary is the case, for it is only by carefully combining all the forces at hand that you can give them their full effect. As a matter of fact, the numerous small successes achieved lately by the French are all due to the method of the open eye. Their most satisfactory side is that they cost comparatively few lives, while previously the smallest attack delivered on the enemy resulted in a tragic number of casualties. But it is also interesting to know that the new method appears to be very efficient, as far as the gaining of ground is concerned.

Weather Halts Offensive.

Why, then, do the French content themselves with pushing the Germans on for a few yards here and there? Why is progress still slow? The answer to these questions was contained in one of the last French communiqués, which said that the slowing down of the offensive must be ascribed only to the present weather conditions. This explanation may have seemed cryptic to the layman. It can, however, be easily understood if it is illustrated with a few instances.

There is a saying among the French gunners that a sunny day means a victory for the French. They call such weather "un temps de Français." The reason is obvious. If, instead of firing from the map, you want to see the ground you are firing at, you cannot do any efficient work as long as the light is not sufficiently good. This, unfortunately, is the case during most of the winter. People of the towns do not take account of this. They do not realise that whenever it rains it is impossible to see five hundred yards ahead, although there is enough daylight to allow anybody to cross a street without being run over by an automobile. Now it has been raining for the last three or four weeks about six days out of seven. In some rare instances it has been freezing. In that case, although the sun comes out, there is a mist all over the ground which makes the gunner curse worse than before.

Lose Boots in Mire.

The conditions have been even worse for infantry. It is all very well to say that a regiment may incur very few casualties by rushing at the proper moment, but how are men to run when they sink in mud up to the knee, sometimes up to the waist? This is not exaggerating it in the least. An attack was recently successfully carried out on a German trench in the north. The men had to run over about four hundred yards of open ground before reaching the enemy's line. They did it. Sixty of them lost their boots on the way. When they returned after the fight to try to pick the them out of the mud they found that the boots had all disappeared—sunk out of sight in the mire. In the same region three horses had to be left in a field from which it had not been possible to drag them out. The same conditions prevail in many other parts of the front. Not only are the trenches full of mud and water, but apparently harmless fields turn out to be dangerous bogs as soon as the men attempt to traverse them. In many cases they have to be rescued by others from being buried alive.

In such circumstances a general offensive made at all costs would be as foolish an undertaking as the German attacks on the Yser and on Ypres. The Germans had good reason to aim at a swift success; the case is different with the Allies, who grow more numerous, better armed and better trained every day. Therefore it is not to be expected that anything will be attempted on a big scale before the ground has had time to dry and the weather has cleared. In the meantime the French army is not inactive; it is working very hard to improve its methods of fighting. A not remote future will perhaps show that these efforts were not made in vain.

Diplomatists' Angora Rabbit Provides Revival Puzzle

Either Animal That Died from Eating a Japanese Print Comes to Life or a "Double" Is Smuggled Into London Home of Messrs. Gunther and Stabler.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]
LONDON, Feb. 13.

"What is home without an Angora rabbit?" This is the motto which will henceforth adorn the home of Mr. Franklin Mott Gunther and Mr. J. H. Stabler, of the American Embassy here, as a symbol of their first experience in joint housekeeping in London.

Both Mr. Gunther and Mr. Stabler recently decided that club life could not compare with the comforts of a "happy home," so together they took a house at No. 51 Lower Belgrave street, in one of the exclusive residential sections. With the house went the furniture, and with the furniture went an unexcelled matronly cook and an Angora rabbit. The rabbit was a great pet, and the American diplomatists agreed to show it every consideration and incidentally return it to the owner when the lease expired.

All went well until Mr. Gunther conceived the idea of helping out the decorations of the dining room with some unframed rare Japanese prints which he treasured. One of the prints was of a lettuce on a green background. He returned home the other evening to find the print gone and the rabbit dead. The cook was heartbroken and the house owner was notified. A cloud hung over the "happy home" which it seemed nothing would dissipate.

Matters continued this way for several days until last evening, when in the midst of a little private supper a loud outcry was heard from the kitchen, followed by a crash of dishes when the cook fell prostrate to the floor. Nearby, doing a jaunty "bunny walk," was an Angora rabbit, apparently looking for more paintings on the wall. Mr. Gunther said to-day that the cook had recovered, but fully believes in the resurrection of the dead. Mr. Gunther and Mr. Stabler believe that Angora rabbits, like cats, have nine lives, but there is a report at the embassy that one of the attachés, after the sad fate of the first rabbit, had succeeded in getting one more like it than the original itself and that it was surreptitiously smuggled into the house last night. Anyway, the rabbit is well and happy to-day and Mr. Gunther has taken his Japanese prints from the dining room.

Realizing that no women workers have suffered more from the war than the dressmakers, the Duchess of Marlborough and the American Women's War Relief have arranged to establish a new work room which will give employment to women of this class.

Ultimately it is hoped to have the work room established in Bond street, and it is not beyond possibility that a permanent Bond street establishment might result from the enterprise. In the meantime work will begin at once at No. 31 Old Burlington street, where, besides providing knitted and other garments for the troops, purchasable work will be carried out and orders fulfilled.

Kings and Queens Her Patrons, But Milkmaid Goes

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]
LONDON, Feb. 13.

Mrs. Emma Kitchen is dead, breaking London's last link with Arcadia. Though she lived to see aeroplanes and automobile buses she was of the Marrie England of gipe and tabor.

Mrs. Kitchen was a milkmaid, and at her historic stall in the Mall, St. James' Park, had sold to kings and queens and commoners for nearly seventy years. Long she stood there with her two patient cows, Blossom and Nancy, a quaint picture in the middle of workaday London.

Unfortunately Mrs. Kitchen did not look the part. Milkmaids should wear Watteau panniers and carry their pails on a beribboned yoke. And they should not be called Emma. There was nothing pastoral about Mrs. Kitchen except her trade. Just a gray, bent figure, ruddy faced and wearing an expansive apron and a white mob cap. There was perhaps one Arcadian touch in her life. She married a harlequin in a circus.

James I. Gave Permission.

The right to sell milk in the Mall has been in the Kitchen family for nearly three centuries. It was in 1653 that James I. gave one John Manley permission to set up a booth behind Spring Gardens for the sale of milk appointing him at the same time "Purveyor to the King. Families waited on daily." At that time the cows in their stalls were reinforced by asses, the milk of which was considered a great delicacy.

"Before proud gates attending asses bray,
Or arrogate with solemn pace the way;
These grave physicians with their milky cheer
The lowsick maid and dwindling beau repair."

Here the bucks of those spacious days would repair to take their morning glass—maybe bringing their own rums—and quaff their elevated canes.

At this same "pitch," Mrs. Kitchen's great grandmother kept her cows and sold their milk, until she died at the age of 103. Her daughter followed, and held the fort until her ninety-second year, leaving her daughter in charge for seventy-nine years. This was Mrs. Kitchen's mother. And the late milkmaid was not the last of her line, for, true to the family tradition, she left the business to a daughter who still sells milk, but on another "pitch." This is Mrs. Orford, daughter of a milkmaid and a harlequin.

By the early eighties the popularity of milk in the Mall had grown so that there were no less than eight stalls there, each with its attendant cows. Two of these belonged to the Kitchen family, one being managed by the late Mrs. Kitchen and the other by her sister, Mrs. Burry.

Interlopers Evicted.

When plans for the new Mall were drawn in 1900 the six interlopers were evicted and their stalls pulled down about their ears, but Mrs. Kitchen was allowed to remain. In 1901 they were moved back a few yards to make way for the new thoroughfare. Thenceforward life became troubled for Mrs. Kitchen. The Office of Works was a prosaic institution, with little sympathy for the archaic and picturesque, and one dark day in February, 1906, it served a cold blue notice on the milkmaids to quit. After 282 years! And in her "bottom drawer" Mrs. Kitchen had the original documents granted to her ancestor by James.

They pleaded and took counsel's opinion and pleaded again, but the Office of Works said, "Out you go." They talked of "users" and "easements" and "right right," but the officials were adamant. They talked of their great-grandmother, their grandmother, of their mothers, but "Out you go" said the iconoclasts, and out they went. Their stall was pulled down, their cows driven home, while the two old women wept loud and long over their spilt milk.

Queen Victoria was among their mother's customers, and a brother of Mrs. Kitchen had been riding groom to the then Prince of Wales. So the matter appealed to King Edward.

His Majesty intervened on their behalf, an interview with Mr. Macdonnell, and as a result the old ladies were granted a new site for their stall behind the Horse Guards' parade.

Infantry Training

The Matter in This Column is from the Official Manual 1911 and is Published According to Orders of the Home Guard

8. The positions of officers, &c., in para. 1 do not apply to movements on or near the battlefield, where the battalion commander is responsible that his battalion is arranged to suit the tactical requirements. For instance, it may be necessary to place the machine guns and cyclists in front of the battalion, and the serjeant-major may be in charge of the ammunition. It will often be important that all the company commanders should be in advance of the battalion to reconnoitre ground, to receive instructions, or to select methods for passing their companies over obstacles on the line of march.

108. Movements in Line, or Lines, of Company Columns from Any Formation

1. These movements are of importance, forming, as they do, the link between close order drill and movements in battle. In carrying out such movements the principles laid down in Part IV are to be considered.

2. Constant practice is to be given in rapidly changing from any formation into one, two, or three lines of company columns, of companies in column of squads, or of companies in column of fours, the number of companies in each line being varied as required.

From this formation, lines of sections in fours or file on irregular frontages should be formed, and then small columns extended as the requirements of the situation dictate.

3. The rapidity of such movements will depend on the clearness and completeness of the explanations and orders given by the battalion commander. He will usually assemble the company commanders and will explain their objectives and relative positions, the company commanders being responsible for the movement, guided only by such signals as the battalion commander would be able to give in battle.

Companies will move into their positions on the battalion commander's order—MOVE.

109. Drill Formations Chiefly Applicable to Operations Against Ill-Armed Enemies.

1. The object of the following movements is to present a fire front in close order in any required direction. These movements must therefore be rapidly and steadily.

2. When the battalion is in line each company will be in line, as in company drill, the captains being three paces in front of the centre of other companies; when fire is opened, they will be where they can best exercise supervision. After the battalion is formed into line the intervals will be corrected by the company commanders. The right centre company, or in deployment and changes of position, the first formed company, of the battalion should not be moved.

PLATE XVII. To face p. 87.

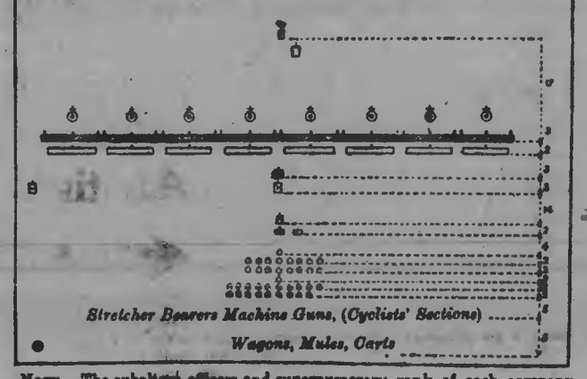
A BATTALION IN LINE.



NOTE.—The subaltern officers and supernumerary rank of each company are as in Pl. XIII, Fig. 1.

Note.—The subaltern officers and supernumerary rank of each company are as in PPl. XIII, Fig. 1.

3. A battalion in line moves and dresses by the centre unless otherwise ordered.

4. The battalion in line will be formed up as in Plate XVII.

110. Deployments from column or quarter column.

1. Line to a flank. DEPLOY TO THE LEFT. REMAINDER FORM FOURS. LEFT, QUICK—MARCH.

The company of formation (i.e. the leading company) will stand fast.

The remaining companies will form fours left and move by the shortest line to the spot where their inner flank will rest. Each will then move parallel to the alignment, and when opposite to its place in line, will be halted and turned to the right.

2. Line to both flanks. DEPLOY OUTWARDS. ONE COMPANY (OR TWO OR MORE COMPANIES) TO THE RIGHT. REMAINDER FORM FOURS. OUTWARDS. QUICK—MARCH

The deployment will be made on the above principle.

The company, or companies, next in succession from the front will move to the named flank.

3. To the right or left when moving to a flank in fours. FACING RIGHT. DEPLOY.

The company on the right will be halted by its commander and turned to its right, the remaining companies will continue to move forward and will deploy into line as above.

Note. In all deployments, to ensure the alignment being kept clear, companies will be formed and halted two paces in rear of it and will then dress up into line.

111. Movements in and from line.

1. Marching in line. THE BATTALION WILL ADVANCE. QUICK—MARCH.

On the caution, THE BATTALION WILL ADVANCE, the senior major will select points for the left squad commander of the right centre company to march on.

On the command QUICK—MARCH, the whole will step off, companies marching by their inner flanks.

ABOUT—TURN.

The senior major will pass through the ranks in order to superintend the direction, the files opposite him making way after turning about. (See Sec. 101, 4.)

The companies will act as in company drill—Sec. 97, 1.

Note. When marching in line, companies encountering obstacles will pass them by forming fours or column of squads, etc.

2. Changing position. CHANGE POSITION RIGHT (OR HALF RIGHT OR QUARTER RIGHT) REMAINDER FORM—FOURS. RIGHT. QUICK—MARCH.

On the caution CHANGE POSITION RIGHT (OR HALF RIGHT OR QUARTER RIGHT) the company on the right (No. 1 company) will be formed by its commander in the required direction.

On the command QUICK MARCH, the remaining companies will each move direct on the outer flank of the company formed before it. On reaching its position in the new alignment each company will be ordered to form at the halt into the new alignment.

3. Forming Column or quarter column facing in the same direction. COLUMN (OR QUARTER COLUMN) ON NO. ——. REMAINDER FORM FOURS. RIGHT (OR LEFT OR INWARDS) QUICK—MARCH.

The named company will stand fast, the remainder will move by the shortest line to their positions in rear of the named company. As each company reaches its place in column, or quarter column, its commander will give the order Halt, Right (or Left) Turn.

4. On the move, forming line of companies in fours moving in the same direction. BATTALION, FORM FOURS. RIGHT. COMPANIES, LEFT—WHEEL. NO. —— WILL DIRECT.

The battalion will form fours right.

Each company will wheel to the left.

The squad commanders of the leading squads of companies will place themselves in front of the flank men of the leading sections of fours who are nearest to the company of direction.

Note. This formation is useful for passing obstacles, or broken ground, or when the advance in line is long.

5. Forming column to a flank. COMPANIES RIGHT (OR LEFT) FORM. QUICK—MARCH.

Each company will form as required.

FORWARD.

The column will move forward.

Got Your Home Mortgaged?

Then, of course, you'll pay off the indebtedness in time. But suppose you should die suddenly—will the mortgagee foreclose, or will your wife be able to meet the payments?

And even if she can, won't it make a big hole in her resources?

Well then, why not ensure its repayment, whether you live or die, by means of an Imperial Endowment policy for the amount of the mortgage.

Hundreds of men have adopted this method. It is the surest way yet devised for protecting the home.

8. Advancing in column. ADVANCE IN COLUMN ON THE RIGHT. REMAINDER, FORM FOURS. RIGHT. QUICK—MARCH.

The company on the right of the line will advance on the word QUICK—MARCH, the remainder will move in fours to the right, and each in succession, as soon as its leading four is in rear of the centre of the preceding company, will be ordered by its commander to incline to the left, and will again be ordered to incline to the left when in column.

Note. This movement may be executed on the move, the words ADVANCE IN and QUICK—MARCH being omitted.

112. Forming line.

1. On the move from quarter column. AT THE HALT, LINE TO THE RIGHT (OR LEFT).

The commander of the rear company will at once form his company at the halt in the required direction. Each of the other commanders will form his company into line in like manner as it gains its proper interval.

2. On the move from line of companies in fours. ON THE LEFT (OR RIGHT) FORM COMPANIES. FORWARD.

The companies will form as in company drill.

The line will advance by its centre, unless otherwise ordered.

3. To a flank from column. COMPANIES LEFT (OR RIGHT) FORM. QUICK—MARCH. FORWARD.

Each company will form as required.

The line will move forward.

113. Echelon formations.

1. Echelon from line. ADVANCE IN ECHELON AT—PACES DISTANCE FROM THE RIGHT (OR LEFT): FROM NO. OR FROM NOS.—

The right, or left, or named company or companies of the line will advance by order of its commander, and the remainder will be advanced successively at the required distance from one another, and will march by the inner flanks.

Note. When an advance in echelon is made from two companies the senior company commander of the two companies will give all necessary words of command.

2. Echelon from column or quarter column. To a flank. ECHELON TO THE RIGHT (OR LEFT) REMAINDER FORM—FOURS RIGHT (OR LEFT) DOUBLE—MARCH

The leading company will stand fast, the remainder will move direct to a flank, each company being halted and turned to the front by its commander when it is clear of the company in front of it.

II. Outwards. ECHELON OUTWARDS REMAINDER FORM—FOURS—OUTWARDS DOUBLE—MARCH

The leading company will stand fast. Even numbered companies will form to the left, odd numbered companies will form to the right.

Note. This is a useful movement, if a column or quarter column is suddenly threatened, and it requires to develop a maximum of fire as quickly as possible.

3. Line from echelon AT THE HALT. LINE ON NO. ——

The named company, if moving, will be halted, the remainder will form line on it.

4. Column or quarter column from echelon. AT THE HALT. COLUMN (OR QUARTER COLUMN) ON NO. ——.

The named company, if moving, will be halted, the remainder will be marched in rear or in front of it to their places in column or quarter column.

Note. The movements in paras. 3 and 4 may be performed on the move. If the caution AT THE HALT is not given the named company will continue to advance in quick time, the remainder gaining their places at the double.

Gained 30 Lbs. in Few Weeks Never Felt So Well

Was Pale, Weak and Thin, and Had Nervous Headaches Before Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is truly wonderful what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does for women who are weak, weary and run down in health. New, rich blood is what is needed in nearly all such cases, and because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new blood it brings cure — not mere relief, but actual cure—in the great majority of such ailments.

With an abundance of rich, red blood coursing through the veins the nerves are strengthened and vigor and vitality are carried to every organ of the human body.

With the nerves properly nourished headaches and neuralgic pains disappear, appetite improves, digestion is good, you sleep and rest well, and gain in strength and weight.

MRS. H. LAICH.

Mrs. H. Laich, Cannington Manor, Sask., writes:—"You will remember me writing you last spring. Well, I gave up my doctor and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This treatment cured me rapidly and I was soon myself again. I was pale, thin and weak, suffered from stomach troubles and liver complaint, and frequently had sick, nervous headaches.

"I was surprised to find that in a few weeks' time I had gained 30 pounds in weight. I never felt so strong and well in all my life. Headaches never bother me any more, and I am grateful for the cure. If people would only give this medicine a fair trial they would certainly be cured."

Everywhere people are talking about this great food cure, which cures in Nature's way, by supplying the ingredients to form new blood, and so overcome weakness and disease by an abundance of vitality. SNIPING LIKE MURDER

OXFORD PROFESSOR FIGHTING IN TRENCHES FINDS IT SO.

New German Shell Is Called the Minenwerfer and Is Two Feet Long—It Smashes the Earthworks and Blows Men to Bits, Stupefying and Poisoning Others—Shot From Distance of 300 Yards.

Oxford University has responded with great enthusiasm to Britain's call for men. Two-thirds of the members of the university are either in active service at the front or training that they may be sent on. No class has responded better than the Oxford dons. All of them up to the age of sixty are in training, the younger for commissions, the older for home defence should need arise.

Professors and students in the medical department (or that part of it not in France with the Royal Army Medical corps) are getting degrees by curing the wounded at home. The examination schools, the Masonic building and the town hall are military hospitals. Many of the college gardens have been turned over to the Red Cross for the exclusive use of convalescents. It was found necessary to keep the Germans, of whom there are some 250, in a place apart.

One very interesting description of fighting in Belgium comes from a Balliol professor of Latin and Greek, who writes back to his junior dean and has evidently found things of more importance than sentence or paragraph structure. He has been a master of scouts since the outbreak of the war and writes from somewhere near Ypres, though the names of towns and units were carefully excised by the censor in France. The letter follows:

"This is the thirteenth day in the trenches, at least I think so, but I can hardly tell, and I have experienced everything but a bayonet charge and a wash. We have been holding trenches in a pine wood—at least it was a pine wood, now it is match wood, soaked, splintered, spattered with wet and blood. There has been no hand to hand fighting. It has all been done by the shell and rifle fire, with pneumatic bombs. The Germans' main trench runs in a line, whose nearest point is 500 and farthest 1,300 yards from us. But in between they have been burrowing up, and in the last few days, when I have been scoutmaster. I have discovered subsidiary trenches, pits and dugouts from within 100 to 30 yards of our line. You can't see them because of the tangled woods, but you can hear the men digging and hacking as soon as you get five yards out. I myself have constantly within the last few days been within thirty yards. This morning I shot at four men in a pit at a range of five yards in the weird light of a damp and frozen winter dawn. It was all like a dream seeing the phantom spade rising and falling behind a mound of damp earth, creeping up pistol in hand through broken and small tree trunks, peeping down into a six foot pit, sighting four ghostly, blue-gray figures and punctuating the whole gray unreality with four red pistol flashes.

"I didn't wait long. I may have hit one or two, but the others had rifles in their hands by this time, and their main line of dugouts was only twenty yards in front of me. I turned, called upon the two scouts who were with me and fled. (I am going to tell you what a brave man I am, because I don't know when I shall be hit, though somehow I feel confident I shall come through, and I want to leave a testimony. You'll think I'm a savage. Sniping is little better than murder.)

"No one who hasn't seen this can realize what it is like. The Germans have a terrible machine which has been brought into play against our trenches in the last three days. Shot from a distance of 300 yards, a two foot long projectile, which one can watch at all points in its flight, goes high into the air and comes down almost plumb at the point aimed at. It is called, I believe, a Minenwerfer—200 pounds of shell. A special corner of our line—not our company section, thank God—has been their special aim. They put these infernal bombs into a circle of thirty yards radius. They smash in the trenches, blow men to bits and stupefy and poison others.

"I had the escape of my life yesterday afternoon. I had reconnoitered all the German positions in front of us, going out daily at dawn and dusk and nearly always coming within thirty yards of our enemy—I and my four scouts. I reckon we have shot some Germans, though I am a rotten marksman, and the twilight and the pine wood are no help to scoring. In consequence I think I have a certain fame at battalion headquarters. We had nothing of the kind before—a great mistake, for now the enemy do not let us move an eyelid above our trenches."

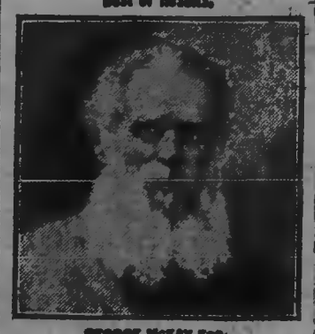
A FAMILY REMEDY FOR MANY YEARS

Used "Fruit-a-tives" With The Best of Results.



GEORGE McKAY Esq.

KIPPEN, ONT., June 17th, 1913.

"I have been using "Fruit-a-tives" as a family remedy for many years. They are the best medicine I have ever tried. "Fruit-a-tives" do me the most good—they never gripe and their action is pleasant.

"I have used them for Indigestion and Constipation with the best results, and I heartily recommend them to anyone similarly afflicted.

These troubles have left me completely and I give "Fruit-a-tives" full credit for all this. A nicer pill a man cannot take."

GEORGE McKAY.

The enormous demand for "Fruit-a-tives" is steadily increasing, due to the fact that this wonderful fruit medicine gives prompt relief in all cases of Indigestion, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Rheumatism, Chronic, Headaches, and Neuralgia, and all Kidney and Bladder Troubles.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. Sold by all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SISTER CITIES.

English and French Towns Have Conducted an Interesting Experiment.

The cities of Puteaux and Suresnes in France, on the one hand, and Keighley in Yorkshire, England, on the other, call themselves "Sister Cities." Their sisterhood has been manifested for some ten years in a most interesting way.

It came about like this, Sir Thomas Barclay, a distinguished English jurist, who had lived some thirty years in France, was talking one day with friends about the Entente Cordiale, which had just been concluded.

"Do you know," he said, "why we like one another, believe one another to be good fellows, and enjoy sincere friendship? It is because we know each other well. Why could not the masses of one nation know well the masses of another?"

"Let us begin!" exclaimed M. Huillard, one of the company present. "I am mayor of Suresnes and member of a lot of societies in Puteaux, the neighboring town."

"And I," replied Sir Thomas, "have a bit of influence in Keighley. Let us get the citizens of Keighley and those of Suresnes and Puteaux into personal relations."

It was done. Keighley had about 45,000 inhabitants. The French cities had about the same number. There was a basis of equality.

The English moved first. In 1905 some thirty workmen of Keighley visited their brothers in Suresnes-Puteaux; they were entertained hospitably. By dint of gestures and loud tones they made themselves understood. They had a gorgeous time, and returned home enthusiastic.

The following September thirty French workingmen made a visit to Keighley. The custom grew. Each year English and French went to see each other. At first the men only made the voyage; then they began taking their wives, and finally they exchanged children. English little ones went to Suresnes-Puteaux to learn French, and French boys and girls came to Keighley to learn English.

They exchanged gifts upon occasions. Suresnes-Puteaux sent to Keighley a work of art; the latter responded with a loving cup.

When the floods came in France, and the streets of Suresnes-Puteaux were inundated, the workers of Keighley raised a relief fund of a thousand dollars for their "brothers." The bonds of fellowship were cemented.

The whole affair is marked by the utmost sincerity. "Why," said a Puteaux man on his return from one of these visits, "upon our arrival our English friends took our train by assault. We were overwhelmed by their cordiality. And they say the English are cold and phlegmatic! Where did they get that? Provencals could not have been more hearty."

"I used to have the most stupid ideas about Frenchmen," said a Keighley workman. "I didn't know them, you see. I could kick myself for my ignorance."

What was done by these two cities might be done on a larger scale. If a thousand towns in Germany had paired with a thousand towns in England and learned to know each other there would have been no war.

We hate people simply because we do not understand them. Hate is a bye-product of ignorance.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.

Strong Motives.

An English school teacher recently gave his pupils a lecture on patriotism. He pointed out the high motives which moved the Territorials to leave their homes and fight for their country. The school teacher noticed that one boy did not pay attention to the instruction, and as a test question he asked him:

"What motives took the Territorials to the war?"

The boy was puzzled for a moment, then, remembering the public "send-off" to the local regiment at the rails way station, he replied:

"Locomotives, sir."

Below the Peg.

The phase "take down a peg" sprung into life with King Edgar. He made it a law to cure the Saxons of their intemperate habits. He had marks, or "pegs," put in their huge drinking cups, above which they dared not pour their liquor under a heavy penalty. So the expression was to lessen a man's self esteem just as the liquor was kept down by a peg.

Burns' Favorite Word.

A contributor has had the curiosity to look up Mr. J. B. Reid's "Burns Concordance" and measure the amount of space devoted to certain words. HOW FAT FOLKS MAY BECOME THIN

By Elizabeth Thomas.

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orilene capsules. Take one after each meal and one before going to bed. Weigh yourself so as to know just how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any druggist can supply you, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1340, Montreal Can.

JAPAN'S DARING WHALERS.

They Risk Drowning to Escape the Infuriated Animal's Tail.

Many of the Japanese whalemen are most expert and daring men. After a whale has been cornered, harpooned and is slowly giving out from exhaustion the nimble expert of the whaling crew must prove his mettle.

The skilled Jap, after jumping upon the animal's back and cutting two gashes in the head, one on each side, through which a rope must be run and tied, cannot always perform his work in one trial. Often the animal makes a deep dive. But the little Jap must hold fast to his quarry and dive also, trusting to his fates that his own air supply in his lungs will last as long as the whale's.

The Jap is safer from being drowned than from being crushed by the infuriated animal's tail. If the little Jap let go it usually means death, so he hangs on to the diving quarry. Frequently these whalemen lose their lives from drowning, but the members of their crew look upon this misfortune with something of a fatalistic regard.

But the main business in hand is the capture of the whale. As the fight progresses and the maddened, frightened animal grows weaker and finally is dying the boat crews row closer to the body and pray for the ease of the departing spirit. Members of the crew will call out the words "Joraku, Joraku, Joraku!" and on the third day after the animal has been hauled ashore a service is held and prayers offered for the animal's future contentment in spirit.

As soon as the animal has been towed to the shore line he is cut up, the Japs making huge excavations and penetrating inside the animal's body as though entering a mine shaft or gallery and eventually making their exit, all covered with blood. It is a gruesome sight, but is looked upon purely as a matter of course among the Jap whalemen.—Exchange.

War Banishes Ragtime.

One of the most noticeable effects of the war on London's life and habits is the practical banishment of ragtime, more particularly the erratic "coon song" type, which seemed to have taken hold of the English people with the unshakeable tenacity of a plague. Up until August 1, it was a veritable outbreak of insanity in the theatres and music halls, hotels and restaurants, clubs and banquets rooms, and in every home. Even the boys on the street whistled it day and night.

Now all is changed and ragtime is forgotten. Since the war began the ear is greeted with two incessant melodies. One of these is Tommy Atkins' marching song, Tipperary, and the other, the national anthem, God Save the King. At the close of the performances in the music hall the audience is expected to stand for quite 20 minutes while the orchestra plays successively the national hymns of the allied countries fighting against Germany.

Taking Care of Him.

A good story is told of Mr. Birrell, the Secretary for Ireland. He is having a fairly busy time just now. Some time ago he arrived at a public banquet rather late, and as he slipped into his place at the table next to a well-known humorist he remarked by way of apology, "I've been so busy to-day. I'm sure I don't know how I managed to get here at all." A few minutes later, when the humorist rose to make a speech, he began, "Mr. Birrell has just said he does not know how he got here. Well, he hasn't had anything"—he leaned over and looked anxiously into Mr. Birrell's wine glasses — "had any more since he came, and anyway, I'm sure that some of us will see that he gets home safely."

Ruskin's Roast Beef.

During a visit to Matlock in 1871 Ruskin was seized with an attack of internal inflammation, which nearly carried him off. Mrs. Arthur Severn, who nursed him, records that at the crisis of this illness "he hungered, to our horror, for a slice of cold roast beef. It was late at night, there was none in the hotel, and Albert Goodwin went off to get some anywhere he could. At last at an eating house in the town he discovered some and came back triumphant with it wrapped in paper. Mr. Ruskin enjoyed his late supper thoroughly. Though we anxiously waited till morning for a result, it had done no harm, and to everybody's surprise he recovered."—London Spectator.

An Observant Boy.

"I wish you boys would be more observant," said a young schoolmaster. "When I was a boy I was always on the lookout, and what I did not see was not worth seeing. I was famous for that. I remember once I was told by a man I met that I was all eyes. What do you suppose he meant by that?"

"Probably he was referring to your conversation," replied one boy, and the other boys looked out of the window as they tried to keep their faces sober.

This shows that ordinary boys have eyes and ears both.—Philippine Education.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed

Is Your Baby Delicate?

WHAT a marked difference there is between the fretful, puny, ailing infant, and the child whose face always bears the smile and look of perfect health and contentment. Mothers should early realize that much depends on How Baby is Fed. The right food given at the proper age means rest and comfort for the mother and a sound healthy constitution for her little one in after years. If, for any reason, Baby cannot be given the natural food, do not select a substitute merely because it is cheap in price. Adopt what experience has proved to be the Simplest and Most Successful Method of Infant Feeding, i.e. The 'Allenburys' Foods. These foods provide a Pure, Complete and Progressive Dietary specially adapted to each stage of a child's development. They are not expensive to buy, when judged by the uniform good results which follow their use; this is the true standard of comparison. The 'Allenburys' Foods are used and recommended by members of Medical and Nursing Professions throughout the world.

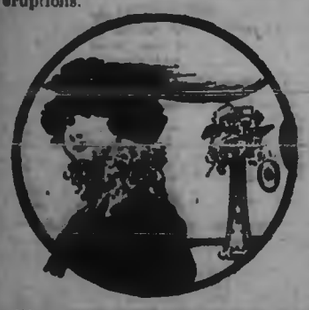
Faces As Fair As An Orchid

Are Possible When Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used After Meals to Clean Up Skin Eruptions And Discolourations.

When a face is covered with blotches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads, etc., Stuart's Calcium Wafers will act like some magical charm. However, there is nothing magical about them. They are nature's own way of cleansing the human blood and preventing it from filling the surface of the body—the skin—with pimples and little skin eruptions.



"With a Face as Fair as a Day in June."

The abolishing of all skin disorders must begin with the blood. Lotions, salves, cosmetics, etc., will do material good. The trouble comes from within and there the remedy must be applied.

If you really desire quick action and at the same time a common sense, natural, harmless blood purifier, then Stuart's Calcium Wafers is this remedy.

The correct and best blood purifier known to science is—Calcium Sulphide. This great cleanser is contained in proper quantities in Stuart's Calcium Wafers and that is why all blood troubles and skin blemishes rapidly disappear after their use.

An unsightly and pimply face due to impure blood is one of the most disgusting sights one can see, and yet all about us, upon the streets, in the theatre, when travelling, etc., we see these horrible results.

There is no need for this condition if you will take Stuart's Calcium Wafers daily and keep all salves, lotions, cosmetics and other harmful preparations from clogging the pores.

Every first-class druggist in this country carries Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which are pleasant to take, harmless, and may be obtained for 50 cents a box. A small sample package will be mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Forewarned: How many times the physician is forced to sadly shake his head and say "too late." If you had consulted him when the symptoms first appeared a cure would have been a comparatively easy matter. Perhaps it was only a little sore on your face, not much larger than a pin head, a yellowish scab formed over it and after a week or so you picked it off and the place looked clean, fresh and as though entirely well. After a few months, when you had forgotten about the first scab, another appeared in the same way [illegible] first. You are a little worried when it appears the third time, but you are afraid to go to the doctor about it for fear he will say it is cancer.

Now, the fact that the Doctor pronounces it cancer, does not change the condition at all. He simply points out to you the real danger to which you were wilfully shutting your eyes. Perhaps it was a small lump in the breast, the same fear kept you from any kind of preventive treatment until what was at first a harmless swelling becomes an incurable cancer.

One of the greatest dangers, however, is the physician who will not or cannot tell his patient the full truth, who says to wait a while and see what develops, to come again in a few months. The time thus lost without doing anything to prevent further development, can never be regained. The little sore on the face is undoubtedly a cancer, the variety known as Lupus, Woalf cancer or skin cancer. Easily cured by proper diet and easily applied external remedies when taken at the start, but if allowed to go on and develop into a malignant condition, the problem is serious indeed

A child has a severe cold, in time a catarrhal condition follows, and it is noticed that the little one does not always answer when spoken to, and after you speak its name rather sharply it looks up in a startled way. Now, what's the trouble? Does the same old fear come and say.

"Don't go to the Doctor he may say the child is going to be deaf unless operated upon and we can't bear to think of operations" Nothing of the kind my dear, anxious mother, when told to "blow hard" the little one forced into the eustachian tube some of the catarrhal matter, an irritation was set up and unless proper treatment is applied now the hearing may be always impaired. A simple matter now, but a condition of lifelong handicap if neglected.

Perhaps it is a case of diseased tonsils In ninety per cent. of such cases surgery is necessary, but that does not mean that all cases of enlarged or inflamed tonsils should be removed. There are many, many cases where propere treatment by the throat specialist can avoid surgery, even in diseased tonsils. Prompt attention with home remedies would prevent the tonsils from becoming diseased or even enlarged. The best kind of practice and the kind that you most desire is the kind that prevents, not only prevents surgery, but prevents even the question of its necessity. The whole aim and object of the Home Health Club articles is prevention and our slogan is "How to get well, and how to keep well, and how to keep young.

NOVELTIES IN UNIFORMS.

Dress Distinctions of Some British Regiments.

There are various novelties, in the way of curious badges, stripes, and ribbons decorating the ordinary regimental uniforms of the various branches of the service to which interesting stories are attached. The custom observed by the sergeants of the Somerset Light Infantry, of wearing their sashes over the left shoulder instead of over the right, is said to commemorate the Battle of Culloden Moor, when, according to tradition, all the officers having been put out of action, the sergeants took command, and to distinguish themselves from their men reversed the position of the sashes usually worn by non-commissioned officers from right to left.

Somewhat similar is the custom of the 8th (King's Royal Irish) Hussars, sometimes known as the "Crossbelts," who wear the sword belt over the right shoulder instead of round the waist. This dates back to the Battle of Saragossa, where the belts of the Spanish cavalry fell a prey to the troopers of the 8th Hussars.

Officers, warrant officers, and sergeants of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers are authorised to wear the "flash," a bow of broad black silk ribbon with long ends, fastened to the middle of the back of the collar. The origin of this peculiarity is obscure, but a report of 1748 notes that "the officers of this regiment wear their hair turned up behind," in what was then known as the "Grenadier fashion," and the "flash" was probably intended to prevent the hair greasing the tunic.

The Welsh Fusiliers, too, observe the custom of having a goat, decked with garlands, led at the head of the drums. On St. David's Day, March 1, the goat, bestridden by a drummer boy, used to be paraded round the mess table with the drums, during the ceremony of distributing the symbolic leek. The goat of the Welsh Fusiliers was killed during a recent action, but the King has just presented the regiment with another.

The only regiment in the British army which wears a badge on both the back and front of the helmet is the Gloucesters, and it does so to commemorate the Battle of Alexandria (March 21st, 1801), in which the 1st Battalion of the regiment, then the 28th Foot, being hard pressed, fought back to back.

The cavalry regiments having the most individual uniforms are the 12th Hussars and the 16th Lancers. The former wear, in place of the regulation blue trousers, sherry-coloured overalls, hence the familiar title of "The Cherubims," while the bandsmen wear greyish busbies in place of the usual black. This latter peculiarity, although it has existed for years, was only recognised by the War Office as recently as 1910. There are other minor variations in the uniform of this regiment, most of which introduces touches of the distinctive cherry color, a shade not worn by any other regiment in the service.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Customs With Us Still

Dickens' birthday, Valentine's Day, Longfellow's birthday: Such an array of special days coming during the month of February will surely afford the most timid hostess opportunities to entertain in the most delightful way and have her parties not only interesting but very enjoyable.

Dickens' Celebration

Lovers of Charles Dickens the world over celebrate his birthday which falls on the 7th of this month, and to any of our readers who may come under this heading, we offer the following suggestions: Ask the guests to come in costume representing a character from one of Dickens' books, or the titles. As the guests arrive, take the name of the character. When all have assembled, pass cards and pencils, then allow half an hour for guessing the character represented.

Dickens' Romance

Another contest is a romance taken from the titles of his books. Each blank represents the title of a book. Pass a copy of the story to each guest and ask them to fill in the blanks.

A young woman by the name of —— is the heroine of this little romance. She was born in —— and was as pretty and as lively as ——. For the purpose of educating his daughter, her father —— left his native city and moved into a large city of educational renown where he rented ——.

He had arranged that his daughter would become the wife of —— and he expected that she would furnish him with plenty of ——. However, she refused to obey him, and was determined to marry ——, so her father, instead of having his —— realised had for a while ——.

He entered into partnership with —— and published ——. This venture was not successful and they were compelled to open ——. This proved more satisfactory and the name of Little Nell and [illegible] soon became ——. Meanwhile —— and her husband had [illegible] on the stage and were travelling [illegible] ——. Their repertoire was ex[illegible] and included —— and ——. In this company was a young man called ——. He was very popular and known by all the members of the company as ——. Owing to jealousy these three severed their connections and formed a new company, which prospered —— and ——. Everywhere they met with large audiences and the financial returns soon warranted their giving up —— and spending their last days in [illegible] and surrounded by comfort[illegible]

Valentine Parties

The invitations to a Valentine party must of course be heart-shaped or at least decorated with hearts. On the invitations this verse could be written:

"Cupid will distribute letters,
On St. Valentine's night;
Love has bound you in his fetters,
Come and loose the seal that night."

For amusement have a supply of bits of colored and lace paper, water colors, pictures and all sorts of material from which to construct a Valentine. When all the guests have arrived, place them at tables provided with paste and scissors. Allow an hour for the preparation of Cupid's missives, put the Valentines on exhibition, and take a vote. Award some little prize for the best work. Place all the Valentines in a box, blindfold each person in turn and let them draw one out. These may be kept as souvenirs.

A Fortune Hunt

Another form of amusement is A Fortune Hunt. Provide each player with a heart-shaped card of a different color. On the cards will be found such messages as these: "Find your fate in a book on the table." When the player gets there he finds another card of the same color which bids him "Look in a vase on the mantle." The only explanation the hostess gives is that "at a given signal all start to hunt and every one must follow where their card leads." As each card points the way to another bearing a puzzling message, the guests get more excited and go scurrying all over the house. The end of each hunt reveals a fortune wrapped around a candy heart. The originality of the fortunes adds much to the fun. This game requires a little preparation, but it repays the hostess for her trouble.

The Stakes of Fortune

This is a game for either children or grown up people. Make heart-shaped rings (four for each player). These may be made of wire and covered with crepe paper. Wind one of the stakes with gilt to represent Wealth. Every time a ring goes over this stake it counts five. The second stake is a tin horn resting on a wreath of laurel. This represents "Fame" and counts ten. The third is a pink stake and covered with pink roses, to stand for "Love." This counts fifteen. "Goodness" is the fourth and is made of white and counts twenty-five. The stakes are placed in different positions of course, wealth being in the most accessible position. The players take turn in throwing the rings, and the count may be any figure decided upon. The player winning the number first is the winner.

A NEGLECTED COLD WILL VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be only a slight cold. Perhaps you start to cough, a little irritation in the throat ensues, then it gets lower down, settles on the lungs and bronchitis sets in, and you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color, and you cough persistently.

If you let the simple cold run it will surely develop into something very serious, and perhaps consumption.

On the first sign of a cold or cough go to your dealer and procure a bottle of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

A few doses will convince you that it is just the remedy you require.

Mrs. J. W. Pearsons, Amherst, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my daughter had a very bad cough which settled on her chest. She had no rest day or night. I gave her everything I could think of, but without doing her the least bit of good. At last I thought of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle for her. She had not taken half of it before she got relief, and with the remainder she was completely cured. Now when any of the family have a cough we always know what to get for it."

Dr. Wood's is 25c and 50.

OXO CUBES at the War

Striking Letters Demonstrating the Value of OXO CUBES

From a member of the London Scottish with the British Expeditionary Force.

And so after all these horrors here I am living in a cow byre some way away from the firing line to recuperate. Like manna, however, your glorious box has arrived, coffee and milk, butter, OXO—oh, joy! Never was seen a more glorious box, and all my cow byre is interested in it. We start to-night on our feast, and I am to thank you both from all my section for being so generous.

Reprinted from the London "Globe," December 14th, 1914.

A gentleman has kindly sent us a letter from his son in the Army Service Corps in which he says:—

I must tell you how delighted I was to get the OXO CUBES. They are great. You should have seen us preparing them. We made a wood fire by the roadside, and boiled the water in an empty petrol can—enough for three of us. The OXO was made in my dixie can, in which we soaked some biscuits. We then placed the can on the fire to boil. All the time it was raining hard, but we were repaid by the satisfaction we got for our efforts.

I shall be very pleased to get some more when you are sending again, as a good cup of OXO before we turn in at night considerably warms us up.

Follow the example of the men at the front, who have proved in emergencies that OXO CUBES give warmth and nourishment quickly and effectively. OXO CUBES build up strength to resist cold and disease; they increase nutrition; they remove fatigue. Added to stews and hashes they make food more nourishing and save expenditure on meat; they are handy for sleigh journeys and outdoor sports—with hot water they make a quick hot meal in a moment; in fact, they exactly meet the needs of all classes.

such an impression on those with whom he came in contact that he must have had a very winning personality and a noble presence. Anyone reading Proverbs must be impressed by his wonderful knowledge of human nature.

So great was Solomon's wealth that the mind is bewildered as one reads of the magnificence of his reign: Ivory, palaces, stately gardens, costly aqueducts, rare tapestry, forty thousand horses, twelve thousand horsemen. With this luxury, as so often happens, came sinning and dissipation.

So in spite of admiration, attainments, possessions, Solomon had never found the most precious possession of all, soul-peace, as the sad words, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity," so clearly signify.—I.H.N.

"Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher, vanity of vanities, all is vanity."—Ecclesiastes i., 2.

It is doubtful if there is any book in the Bible about which there is more diversity of opinion than Ecclesiastes, as some have propounced it most easy to understand, others most difficult.

Into Solomon's life had entered all that is usually considered to count for happiness — honor, fame, wisdom, wealth. Never before and never after did Israel occupy such a position of honor. In Solomon's reign she was able to hold her own with the great monarchies of Egypt and Assyria. The fame of his wisdom had spread so far that the great Queen of Sheba, herself most gifted and famous, came to discuss her soul problems with him.

Cooking by Electricity

By MARIAN TAYLOR

THERE is nothing mysterious about the operation of an Electric Range. It is not only easier, but safer, cleaner and better in every way.

IT does away with flame, fuel and fuss, and provides an absolutely clean and odorless heat that is uniform and under perfect control by merely turning a switch.

THE electric oven is not only economical in operation, but a big saving is effected in the shrinkage of meats. It does away with drying up or shrinkage and all the rich juices of the Roast are retained, and the meat is tenderer, juicier, and tastier than you could have believed possible.

THE "ELECTRA" is a practical and efficient electric Range and sells at a very reasonable price. It is "made in Canada" by the MOFFATS at Weston, Ontario.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Exit Hugo Loubeque.

SERGEANT DALY, plain clothes man of the San Francisco police department, showed scarcely a sign of interest as he was assigned to the mysterious case at the St. Francis.

Swiftly he took in the salient details of the house detective, the discovery of a man's dead body in the suit of a young woman who had registered there under the name of Lucille Love. Then he went immediately to the room and examined the corpse.

Thompson had not been touched. He lay as he had been when Hugo Loubeque looked back at him from the doorway, his body twisted a bit from the struggle with the spy, his right hand tightly clinching the revolver in his mouth. Daly bent over him, uttering a little ejaculation of surprise which whetted the curiosity of the manager instantly. After a long interval he rose to his feet, holding a soiled linen label in his hand.

"Frank Thompson," he smiled quietly. "Here is the name of the tailor who made the suit he wears. I wonder how he ever came to go to Manila."

"Manila?" Frankly curious was the manager.

"Yes—Manila. No wonder that crook hasn't been active in the states for the last couple of years. Wonder whatever pulled Chicago Tom that far away from State street."

"Then he was a crook?"

"It's my turn to ask questions," the sergeant interrupted sharply. "You say this suit was assigned to Lucille Love"—

"A young woman who was arrested yesterday, sergeant, when she was caught in Mr. Loubeque's suit. She came here with Mr. Loubeque and he registered her. Her first night here she created a sensation by paying one of the cabaret to allow her to dance in her place. Yesterday a call came to the office from Loubeque's suit that a hotel sneak thief was in his apartment. When the detectives arrived the place was vacant, but the young woman was caught on the fire escape and arrested, paroled in the custody of Mr. Roller, the big jeweler. It is a case of suicide, sergeant?"

Daly shook his head.

"Suicide! I should rather guess not. Look at the man's gums. The gun was forced into his mouth and the gums badly bruised in the doing of it. Where can I find this Lucille Love or Loubeque?"

Before the manager could answer the telephone bell tinkled. He turned to the detective excitedly, his hand pressed over the phone mouthpiece.

"A Lieutenant Gibson calling on Miss Love," he explained.

"Tell him to wait."

Richard Gibson was little inclined for cross examination when first the two men approached him. Shamed of his unreasoning jealousy of the girl he loved, he had fought the battle out with himself, coming to the conclusion that there must be a reasonable explanation for her conduct. Sergeant Daly regarded him steadily a moment, then told him the reason for his wishing to know everything. Gibson whirled upon the manager, his face livid with rage, fists clinched.

"And you had her arrested—you had her"— Daly held the arm that was about to strike, soothing him with quieting words.

Gibson flung upon his heel and left the hotel, black hatred, suspicion, fear, a thousand and one emotions in his heart. At the jeweler's his tale caused the proprietor to almost have a stroke of apoplexy.

"A murdered man in her suit while she was in the station house!" he gasped. "Then she won't"— He fairly crupt in the depths of his emotions. "Then the necklace I sold must have been stolen!" he finally cried, his eyes flashing vindictively.

"Sold—this necklace sold—who bought it?"

"A Hugo Loubeque—never heard of a millionaire by such a name, but he had the two hundred thousand to buy it, and I let it go."

"Hugo Loubeque!" Gibson grasped the amazed man by the shoulders and fairly shook answers from him.

Dick Gibson rushed from the establishment finally, an idea in his head which he cursed himself for not having thought of before—the house where he had last seen Lucille. Might not, was not, this mysterious Loubeque the one whose hand he had seen dragging her from the window?

Breathlessly he darted up to the door and, finding the lock still unrepaired, dashed inside and up the stairs.

Suddenly he stopped, halted abruptly. He could hear no sound, yet was positive some one was close to him, that he was being watched.

"You wished to see me, sir?"

Silent and suave, his great, brooding eyes holding a light of melancholy and sorrow such as the young officer had never witnessed before, appearing as if by magic and now facing him, was Hugo Loubeque.

"Loubeque"— he stammered.

The international spy bowed gravely, his eyes still fastened upon the young man before him.

And as his eyes sought the carpet, away from the magnetic power of the man, all the rage returned to the young officer. This man was the one who had taken his sweetheart. His eyes roved the room, lighting upon a pair of broadswords crossed upon the wall. He caught the smile on the spy's face when he looked again at him and knew his thoughts had been read.

"What have you done with Lucille Love?" he cried.

"Miss Love," murmured Loubeque, his voice taking on a sighing note that fairly tortured the listener's ears—"Miss Love is on a warship bound for Washington, I believe."

"You know a man was murdered in her suit—that she was arrested as a hotel sneak thief?"

"Miss Love has been through many more trying situations than that," answered Loubeque slowly, "since she pitted herself against me."

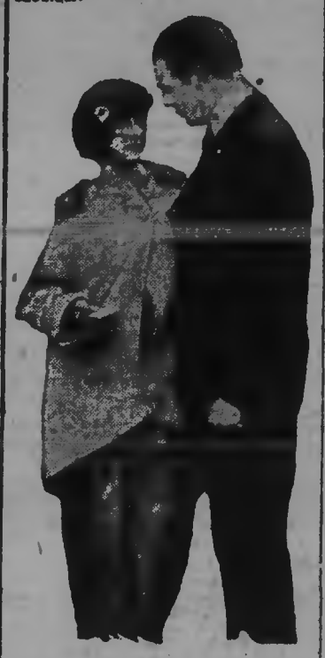
"Pitted herself against you! Then it was you who stole the papers"—

"Quite so." Hugo Loubeque turned upon his heel, but the iron grip of the officer was upon his shoulder, whirling him about so that their faces met.

Like a panther Gibson leaped across the floor, seizing the broadswords.

Easily, by wrist alone, Loubeque played with the man. His eye held no expression save that of one looking very far away, sad, mournful, distant. That look of indifference only served to maddon Gibson doubly.

Furiously he lunged, when suddenly the blade of his adversary whirled, sending out scores of scintillating lights as it danced in the air above his head. He fell back as from a blow, his wrist numbed and deadened by the wrench that had carried the handle of the heavy sword from his grasp. Hugo Loubeque had dropped his own blade to the floor and was studying him quietly, no glimmer in his eyes. Gibson glared over his head. The sword was still swaying from side to side from the fury with which it had been driven into the low hanging wooden beam overhead. Instinctively his hand reached to recover his weapon when Loubeque laid a hand of iron upon his shoulder.



He Placed the Ivory Box in Her Hands.

"That will do," he cried sternly. "Be a man, sir." Again that mellowed light drove the light of anger from his eyes. His lips opened and the voice of him was little more than a sigh: "such a man as Miss Lucille Love deserves."

Gibson looked at him, startled, aghast. Once more Loubeque would have spoken when, from below stairs, came the shrill screech of a policeman's whistle, followed almost instantly by a rush of feet upon the stairs.

The spy's right hand moved along the desk, picking up a small ivory box, exquisitely carved, which he handed to Gibson.

"You will kindly give this to—Lucille—with my compliments and felicitations," he murmured.

Gibson stared at him, wondering at the lack of emotion on his face in this moment of peril. Slowly, steadily Loubeque stepped backward. Then suddenly a yawning panel stood beside him. He stood in the cavity a second, smiling as the door burst open, and Sergeant Daly, followed by a squad of officers, lurched into the room.

"That's him!" Daly's shout turned into a wild yelp of terror, as the floor shot from under the feet of the occupants and they found themselves precipitated into the very bowels of the house.

It was half an hour before they managed to find their way out; half an hour which swallowed up the international spy completely as though it had been the grave.

* * * * * * * *

Desperately, Lucille finished her dressing and turned to look out the hotel window over Pennsylvania avenue. She was alone in Washington.

When the captain of the Terror had spoken of the court of inquiry before which General Sumpter Love was being tried for selling the papers he had received from Washington, she had conjured up visions of him behind bars. But when she realized on reaching the city that he was at a hotel, living quite the same as she herself was allowed to live, her joy had submerged almost every other feeling. It had been four days now, however, and still she had not called up sufficient courage to see him.

All night she had been awake trying to scheme up some method of aiding him. The papers she had recovered, and it seemed that instead of helping she had placed in the hands of the government exactly what they wanted to convict. She determined to appeal to the secretary of war. Surely there might be some chance in an appeal to him. And so this morning, after a long, timorous glance up and down the long avenue, she had started for the army and navy building.

"Miss Lucille Love—Lucille Love"—The secretary turned the card over and over in his hands while regarding her narrowly the while. "I have heard of you, Miss Love, and of the papers. You may rest assured your story will receive every attention in the conduct of the trial of your father. Certainly you know the nation can ill afford to lose such a man just at this time."

"But you can investigate—my story is strange, unbelievable," she pleaded impulsively. "I know that. But if you would only investigate you would find that I tell the truth."

"All details of your story have been proved, Miss Love," gravely, sadly, answered the cabinet minister, "but there is no evidence in your father's favor. What would be the motive for Hugo Loubeque"—

"Revenge," she answered quickly. "Can't you see"—

"If it could be proved"—

He was interrupted by the entrance of a clerk with a card. The secretary frowned, then listened to the whispered explanation of the man, a slight smile upon his face.

"Mr. Gibson—formerly Lieutenant Gibson"—

Lucille sprang to her feet, all confusion. The last time she had seen her sweetheart he had repulsed her.

Gibson entered quickly, halted abruptly at sight of the woman he loved standing there, with the gentle love light in her eyes and the reproach of a maid offended in her form. Slowly, very slowly, he placed the little ivory box in her hands, the box which Hugo Loubeque had given to him. She looked at him inquiringly and his lips parted:

"From Hugo Loubeque with hopes for forgiveness and felicitation."

With trembling fingers she pried open the delicate lid, then gave a sharp cry of disappointment that was echoed by one of mute admiration and amazement from the others as, turning the box upside down, the wonderful ruby necklace fell upon the floor, every blood red facet darting a thousand threats at them. But Lucille's eyes paid the necklace no heed. Instead they fastened upon a little slip of paper in the bottom of the box:

"In account with General Sumpter Love for dismissal from West Point and robbing me of Lucille—

"Theft committed"—

She read no farther, but, sobbing with the abandonment of a child, placed the page from the diary in the hands of the secretary of war.

"I see," he murmured quietly. "You say, Mr. Gibson, Hugo Loubeque gave this to you to hand to Miss Love?"

"Yes sir."

"If you do not object, Miss Love," he said to the girl, with a little knowing smile in the direction of her sweetheart, "I shall take this immediately before the board of inquiry. I think, with your story and the verifications I have gathered of its details, it will not only clear your father, but also return to the army a young lieutenant who had been named captain at the time this unfortunate incident occurred."

Evidently important cabinet officer though he was, the secretary expected no answer, for he did not even glance back at the couple, who were so forgetful of etiquette as to ignore him. But Lucille had her arms close, close about the neck of Richard Gibson, and that young man was only mindful of his burden at the moment.

* * * * * * * *

At his desk General Sumpter Love smiled as the murmur of two voices came to him. His eyes closed wearily and his head sank forward upon his chest, a victim of dreams—dreams of the long ago. It had been hard, giving up to another this daughter whom he had only just regained. And yet—and yet—there was another Lucille—

"Lucille—"

"You called, father?"

Lucille's arms were about his neck, just as they had been about his neck that other time in Manila when she coaxed his consent to her marriage to Gibson. And Gibson, with the straps of a captain, was standing once more in the doorway.

His hand rose to pat the rose petal cheek of her. Then his fingers encountered the necklace about her throat. As though he had struck a snake, his hand recoiled.

"Loubeque's necklace!" he muttered.

The arms about his neck tightened. The cheek was pressed against his own.

"Poor, poor Hugo," she murmured. "Poor, poor man who did not know there was no room for hate in a world that might be filled with love. Poor, poor man."

The three were silent. There was no room for words. Ghosts were all about—whispering, seething ghosts that murmured over and over again—

"Lucille—Lucille"—

Ghosts that had an echo from the lips of a world weary man directly under the earth from them—Hugo Loubeque, alone with his ghosts that murmured always—

"Lucille—Lucille"—

THE END.

GERMANY'S OPERA STARS ARE NOW FED IN SOUP KITCHEN

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE.

BERLIN, GERMANY, Feb. 13 — Among the unusual social problems which have presented themselves in this city since the outbreak of the war the problem of the unemployed artist takes an important place. When the weather was warmer opera and concert singers were not infrequently heard singing in the courtyards of apartment houses in residence districts where music is strictly prohibited.

"The condition of the artists at the present time is pretty desperate" said Prof. Jung-Janotta, when seen on duty at the "Artists' Kitchen." "The position of the music teacher and the painter is the worst. The opera singers at the Deutsche Opernhaus are receiving only half of their former payment, and some of the theatres are paying as little as one-third of the former salaries. Xaver Scharwenka, our president, who has been a teacher, chiefly of Americans, and whose income was exceptionally large hasn't one pupil left. My own pupils have decreased in number from forty to five.

"All the artists whom you see here at the kitchen are entirely without work and without the slightest prospect for employment. We hold subscription teas in the kitchen from time to time, to which women come and bring their knitting. The artists then sing, play, and recite, and the proceeds are divided among them. We shall arrange picture auctions also, so that the painters also may have a chance to sell their works.

"In no other kitchen will you find as good a table set for our price, six cents a meal. These tickets (Prof. Jung-Janotta pointed to two large rolls on the table) are sold to each person, the green for 30 pfennigs, which entitles one to soup, meat, and two vegetables; the yellow for 5 pfennigs, which pays for coffee or dessert. The many musical associations of the city buy rolls of 150 to 200 tickets and distribute them among their members.

"We serve dinner daily from 12 to 3 for more than 200 artists—painters, writers, actors, opera singers, and others. Some of them bring their families, others carry food to their families in baskets. A few are too poor to pay for their meals. They must bring slips from institutions where their cases have been investigated, and their statements verified.

"Although the majority of these artists are Germans, yet we have gone so far as to admit two English artists who wished to continue their work in spite of the war and who were badly in need of assistance. We would also gladly offer the privileges of the kitchen to any American artists whose finances have been injured by the war."

HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS,—"CASCARETS"

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and End Headaches, Colds, Sour Stomach.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Don't Burn and Ruin The Hair With Hot Iron

Straight, lank hair is becoming to but few women and there's no excuse now for anyone looking homely and unkempt on that account. Those who have forsworn the curling iron because of the damage it does by drying and breaking the hair, will be glad to hear that plain liquid silmerine will produce a far better and more lasting effect, without any injurious result whatever. If just a small quantity be applied to the hair at night with a clean tooth brush, a lovely curliness and natural wave will be in evidence in the morning, and there is nothing streaky, sticky, or greasy about it.

A few ounces of liquid silmerine, obtainable at any drug store, will prove a welcome addition to many a dressing table. It is best applied by dividing the hair into strands and moistening each of them separately from root to tip. The beautiful wavy effect will last for a considerable time.

Belgian Officer's Daughter Tells Thrilling Tale Of Clever Escape

Turned Back Once From Holland Frontier on Way From Brussels, She Passed as Wife of Gentleman Who Possessed a Privileged Permit to Cross the Dutch Border and Thus Gained Freedom.

LONDON, Feb. 10 —A Belgian officer's daughter and wife of a London solicitor who happened to be at her old home in Belgium at the outbreak of the war has now succeeded in making her escape from Brussels and tells a thrilling tale of the hardships she had to undergo and the ruses she had to adopt before she was able, after five months' separation, to rejoin her husband in England.

It was not till December 14 that she found herself in a position to make the attempt, when she obtained a conditional passport entitling her to travel within the eastern half of Belgium.

"Then," she says, "I 'contracted' with one of those shady 'general and commission agents' who make a specialty of conveying passengers in unlawful fashion across the Dutch frontier, and left the Belgian capital as one of a party of ten under his guidance."

The railways being closed to them, they had to proceed by easy stages on foot or in country cabs when they could get them to the frontier town of X——, and put up at an inn while the contractor hurried to the "Kommandatur," or office, of the local German administrators. He returned looking "rather glum," saying that they had each to apply in person.

"We entered the Kommandatur, and the trap so cunningly laid for us by the Germans, to find ourselves placed under immediate arrest. Each of us in turn was closely cross-examined and re-examined, both publicly and in private, by a Prussian colonel and lieutenant, and then, certain contradictions having struck our warders, we were searched one by one in a neighbouring room; the women, at any rate in most horrid fashion, hardly an inch of their clothing or of their person escaping the fingers of the searcher, a 'nun,' of whose real profession and sex I am still in doubt.

"On hearing the order for the search one of my lady companions, a well known Brussels actress, swooned, or pretended to. And when a male companion of hers failed to reappear the mystery was explained to us by the old colonel, who told us that a secret code and official reports to the Belgian government had been found hidden away in the lining of his jacket. He was a spy and would be at once conveyed to the citadel of Antwerp and dealt with. 'To-morrow, pouf! pouf!' grimly added the Prussian veteran, by way of comment. As for ourselves, as we were, to all appearances, associated with such a person, we would at least be detained as 'suspects' pending further inquiries."

Not until nearly midnight were they allowed to return to the inn, which they did under an armed escort. "Sadly we sat in the dining room, bewailing our misfortunes, when all of a sudden the young actress, now in tears, confessed to us that she, too, was a Belgian secret agent—in fact the partner of the domed man—and that upstairs, in her bag, there were State papers of considerable importance. She begged us, therefore, as patriots, in case she was arrested, to burn those papers.

Dancing to Burn Papers.

"A little later, about 2 o'clock, in comes a German N. C. O. and an escort to order forcibly her return to the Kommandatur. Completely collected now, she bade us au revoir with a nervous smile and a glance which I shall never forget. When she had gone one of us glided up to the bedroom to fetch the precious papers. The question was how to destroy them without attracting the attention of the sentries placed before our window. There was no other fire burning in the house save in the dining room. Then one of us, again a woman, hit upon a novel plan for disposing of the papers. We moved the table and, as if to pass the time, started dancing all around the room and in front of the hearth. And then as each of our 'merry' party neared the fireplace he or she flung a share of the papers into the flames until the whole lot were consumed. Then upon some abrupt remark by one of the sentries we quieted down very gradually to allay any lurking suspicions in his mind.

"At dawn a German N.C.O. arrived from the Kommandatur and politely told us in excellent French that his chiefs were satisfied of our innocence in the matter, but that as no one could leave the country without a special permit from the Governor General we should have to return to Brussels by the way we had come, this time under German supervision. As for our former guide, he was in a fortress."

But back in Brussels she determined to have another try. "After spending a sorrowful and memorable night in the fortress city I accepted a rather timid offer by a gentleman, who possessed a privileged 'permit' to cross the Dutch border, to accompany him and his wife. He was, however, very much unnerved at the thought of the punishment that might befall him in the event of his administrative and social misdemeanor being found out.

"Still, one fine morning, about five o'clock, off we went, the two of us, in a carriage driven by a courageous 'jobber.' As we drove along we encountered crowds of would-be emigrants, who had been roughly sent back by the German frontier guards, and who shouted to us again and again:—'It is no use trying. They won't let you through.' My escort got nervous at this point, and suggested giving up the attempt altogether. But I would not hear of this, and alternately coaxed and lured.

"So on we go. Our driver, a resourceful fellow, stops at every turn as we near the frontier zone and inquiries as to the attitudes of the German military posts at various points. Every one thinks the business a most hazardous one. But no matter. 'Vorwarts!' as the mad Kaiser would say.

At the Frontier.

"Suddenly we pull up. Two sentries, with fixed bayonets, appear at the horse's head and cry 'Halt!' No joke, this. Only the other day a whole party were shot down for failing to stop when ordered. A moment later both doors of our carriage are simultaneously thrown open by two German officers, one on each side, who demand our passports.

"'Husband and wife'? A timid 'Yes!'

"The danger climax is reached. Will they notice that our passports bear different names and different conditions? The officer who is inspecting my 'husband's' permit grunts his approval, and inquires of his colleague regarding mine. The colleague in reply points out to me that my passport does not authorize me to travel across the frontier. I explain that I should like to see my husband to the frontier [illegible] with a smile, 'Surely, sir, you will understand that wish. It is a pleasure to meet people who speak French so well, and to whom one can explain things.'

"My German officer beams, my reference to his linguistic accomplishments evidently pleasing him, and, with a friendly nod to the driver, says: 'All right, go ahead!' And soon we are in sight of the frontier village —half Belgian, half Dutch. We are both all of a tremble, he and I. There is still a German post to face before we reach the land of freedom. We take leave, with many thanks, of our brave and devoted driver. He says only one thing, 'Be cool! Be cool!'

"Timidly on foot we approach the frontier, in our nervous anxiety almost waving our passports in the faces of the sentries on guard. A N.C.O. appears and glances at my 'husband's' document and as I interpose the remark, 'those officers over there gave us permission to go through' does not even look at mine, but is content to say, 'You may pass.'

"We are across. Oh, what a thrill. Free once more! We can hardly believe it, and to make sure of it repeatedly inquire of the people in the streets if we are in Holland. They laugh. 'Oh, yes, you are quite safe.' And now up rushes an automobile, ever on the lookout for 'fugitives.' A dollar a head will take us to the neighbouring town, whence I can wire to my other 'husband,' who has been waiting for me at Flushing. And as our car whizzes off I proudly pin on my breast the hitherto forbidden cockade of Belgium's heroic black, yellow and red."

KING'S PRIVATE REPORTS.

His Majesty Is Advised of Every thing at the Front.

When King George visited a military hospital on a recent occasion the wounded with whom he chatted were astonished at His Majesty's extensive and accurate knowledge of the officers under whom they had served and also the information he possessed of the movements of the troops on the Continent. As a matter of fact, King George and Lord Kitchener undoubtedly know more concerning the activities of the British troops at the present time than any men in England. Sir John French's private despatches to Lord Kitchener are shared by King George. Almost every day the newspapers report that the Secretary of State for War has visited the King, and it is during these consultations that the vital facts concerning our troops are laid before His Majesty.

Of course, not the slightest rumor of what has occurred at these meetings ever leaks out. Directly the King has left his private apartments a secretary enters and destroys the contents of the waste-paper basket or any odd scrap of paper which might afford a clue as to what took place during the interview. These precautions are taken before any servant is allowed to enter the room. Important military despatches King George keeps locked in his safe and desk, of which there are but single keys, which His Majesty carries with him attached to the end of his gold albert.

It was a wounded soldier who said that "King George carried the Army List in his head," but the enthusiastic "Tommy" in question would probably be more surprised if he knew the full extent of His Majesty's knowledge of military and naval affairs. During his many years in the navy the King had ample opportunity of studying our own and foreign coast defences. He knows every weak and strong spot on the North Sea and Channel coast, and of recent years he has especially concerned himself with the growth of English coast defences. King George has also obtained extensive practical knowledge of naval tactics by taking an active part in all the big naval reviews. His policy on such occasions has always been to manoeuvre with his ships on board one of the war vessels.

GOT YOU!

The Ghurkas—the Terrible Little Men From the Himalaya State.

It was at the military manoeuvres in India a year or two ago. A famous British regiment, which has since distinguished itself against the Germans, was resting at night, after a hard day's marching and counter-marching. Sentries were posted round the camp, and the rest of the tired soldiers were soon sleeping under the wide, velvet-blue Indian night sky.

Above, the stars shone with tropical brilliancy, and in the wide, dim plain, strange faint animal cries were heard at intervals. The English sentries—men from one of our Home Counties—kept a fairly alert look out, but they saw nothing unusual.

Suddenly, in every English tent some small, dark figures arose, each with a big knife in hand. With smiling faces they struck a light, awakened the soldiers, and asked them—in a mixture of English and Hindustani—how they liked the situation. At the same time, every unsuspicious man received a friendly tap on the back, and, turning with a start, found a smiling, dark figure beside him.

It was a Ghurka night surprise attack, and the extraordinary success of it was the grand feature of the manoeuvres for the year. Everyone admitted, including the victims themselves, that had it been serious fighting the entire English regiment would have been knifed to a man—without a sound being heard.

When the Ghurkas work at night they leave their rifles and ammunition, take off their boots, and with their big knife held between their teeth, and a series of small knives carried in their uniform, they creep on all fours through the grass so silently and stealthily that their approach cannot be observed. They signal to each other by some animal's or bird's cry, and they are not seen until they strike.

They are the most terrible fighters in the world, and when they attack in the darkness, in their peculiar way, nothing can stop them—not even electrified wire entanglements. When they unsheath their big curved knife it must be wet with the blood of the enemy before it is returned to its case. The British officers of the Ghurka regiments never put one of their men in prison, or punish him like an ordinary British soldier if he has done anything wrong. A Ghurka is punished by being commanded to give up his big knife. After that he will never be seen in public. He will imprison himself, sitting night and day in the tent or barracks, and never showing himself. For, having lost his knife, he has, according to the Ghurka ideas, lost his honor. If his knife were kept away from him for more than a day or two he would commit suicide.

"Got a Smoke?"

It was three o'clock in the morning and the steamer Ansonia, steaming from Liverpool to New York, was nearing mid-ocean. She seemed to have the entire ocean to herself when a dazzling beam of light suddenly shot out from the darkness and illuminated her decks. A moment later she halted. Presently the dim outline of a British man-of-war could be seen in the shadows.

"Got any smoking tobacco?" came from the warship.

The reply was in the affirmative. Cigarettes and tobacco in goodly quantities were placed in a water-tight receptable and passed over the side. A boat from the warship picked them up. Soon the voice in the darkness bellowed its thanks, the warship steamed away and the Ansonia continued her voyage.

DEADLY ANAEMIA

Nine Women and Girls Out of Every Ten Are Afflicted With This Trouble

It is an unfortunate fact that nine women and girls out of every ten are afflicted with anaemia—which means bloodlessness—in one form or another. The girl in her teens, the wife, the mother and the matron of middle age all know its miseries. To be anaemic means to be pallid, with dark marks under the eyes. You are breathless after slight exertion. You feel worn out and depressed all day. You have no desire for food and often cannot digest what little you do take. Headaches, backaches and sideaches make life miserable. If you sleep at night you do not feel refreshed in the morning and are utterly unfit for the day's duties. If neglected, anaemia almost surely leads on to deadly consumption. Renewed health can only be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the most reliable blood enricher ever discovered. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood; they bring brightness to the eyes, and the glow of health to pale cheeks. They have literally saved thousands of women and growing girls from the grave, and what they have done for others they can do for you if given a fair trial. Here is the proof. Mrs. Wm. Kierman, Watrous, Sask., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with wonderful results. I suffered for upwards of two years with anaemia in a severe form, and was doctoring all the time with no benefit. I was so weak I could scarcely walk. I suffered from severe headaches and at times from backaches that were almost unbearable. The trouble affected my digestion, and this caused additional discomfort. Finally through the persuasions of a friend I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I shall ever be grateful that I did so, as after using nine boxes I was fully restored to health. I would earnestly urge all anaemic women and girls to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for I feel confident from my own experience that they will renew their health."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SMOTHERING OF ASTHMA STOPS QUICK THOUSANDS CURED BY "CATARRHOZONE"

COUNT TEN — THEN RELIEF COMES FROM CHRONIC ASTHMA.

Nothing yet discovered can compare with Catarrhozone in bad, ugly cases of Asthma.

Catarrhozone is the one remedy that can be sent quickly and direct to all parts of the breathing apparatus.

The effect from Catarrhozone is a quick one— you feel better in no time —keep up the good work, use Catarrhozone as directed and you get well.

If your case is curable, if anything on earth can rid you permanently of Asthma, it will be Catarrhozone. It contains that strangely soothing and powerful antiseptic found in the Blue Gum Tree of Australia, and this is fortified by other germ-killing properties which, when so scientifically combined, make Catarrhozone a veriable specific for Asthma, Catarrh and Bronchitis.

Even though many other remedies have failed— even though you are discouraged and blue —cheer up and try Catarrhozone to-day. What it repeatedly has done for others it will surely not fail to accomplish for you.

Catarrhozone is not expensive. One dollar will buy a complete outfit from any Druggist. The money will be well spent because your immediate improvement in health will surpass your fondest expectations. Don't wait—today is the time to use Catarrhozone.

TEN GERMAN SUBMARINES IN NEUTRAL PORTS

LONDON, Feb. 12.—William Duckworth, the Daily News correspondent at Copenhagen, telegraphs:

"I am informed privately from Christiania that during heavy North Sea gales a few days ago ten German submarines put into Bergen, Stavanger, Trondhjem and other Norwegian ports in terribly battered condition, with their crews in an exhausted condition, several being ill.

"The submarines were escored to Norwegian waters by the Norwegian patrol crisers and informed that they must leave within twenty-four hours, according to international rules, or be interned. They remained about twenty hours for rest and carried out some slight repairs."

What Cures Eczema?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription, can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbours unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription. All druggists have D.D.D., 25c., $1.

Drop into our store to-day, just to talk over the merits of this wonderful Prescription, $1.00 a bottle. Ask also about D.D.D. Soap.

DID DURING THE YEAR 1914

They paid their policy holders and beneficiaries over	$ 6,161,287.00
Of which death claims amounted to	1,715,819.46
They earned a surplus of over	1,676,298.00
They distributed in form of profits in 1914	861,762.65
They increased their business in force by 8% to	218,299,835.00
They increased their assets by 15% to	64,187,656.38
They increased their surplus by 13% to	6,503,793.80

Notice the assets and surplus increased much more rapidly than the new business.

Which means that they paid monthly to beneficiaries	516,651.54
Or they paid weekly to beneficiaries	119,227.27
Or they paid daily to beneficiaries	19,907.73
Or they paid hourly (8 hours per working day) to beneficiaries	2,475.88
Or they paid each minute to beneficiaries	41.36

Can you conceive of the help to widows and orphans, the provision for comfort and plenty in old age,—the amount of squalor, crime and poverty prevented, by such munificent payments? Truly it is organized philanthropy

Fighting In The North Increasing In Intensity

ONTARIO TROOPS ARE ALL ACROSS CHANNEL

Bulk of Canadian Contingent Now in France—Reserve Training Depot Left at Salisbury Consists of Western and Maritime Province Men.

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 13.—(Special Cable.)—Although the bulk of the First Canadian Contingent is now in France, there still remains in the neighborhood of Salisbury, a reserve depot of about ten thousand troops. These troops include the fourth infantry brigade, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Cohoe of Welland, Ont., the brigade being composed of the ninth, eleventh, and the twelfth infantry battalions, with the sixth infantry battalion attached. Although Colonel Cohoe is an Ontario man, most of the men in the battalions mentioned above come from either the western provinces or from the maritime provinces. One battalion—the 9th—is partly made up of Ottawa men. Presumably all the others are now in France.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Probably not since the days of ocean travel has there been such a nation wide interest displayed in anything marine as that which marked to-day's sailings from Liverpool. Scheduled to sail were the Lusitania and the St. Paul for New York from Liverpool, and a number of smaller craft for other destinations. Britishers generally realised that there was always the possibility of a German submarine attempt. The Lusitania and the Stl. Paul had their cabins filled.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—Compilations made here by experts indicate from the figures given out by the manufacturers and counting only the articles people will be sure to use and which are affected by the war tax, a man with a salary of $1200 will find his expenses increased at the rate of about 2 3-4 per cent. That is, he will be giving of his salary $33 a year for the war budget directly, with of course many coppers here and there in an indirect way.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—It is understood to-day that the Ontario Government is preparing a schedule of war taxes, one feature of which will be doubling the cost of marriage licenses. Last year there were 27,000 marriages in the province of which 24,500 were by $2 license. The possible doubling of the fee would mean an extra $50,000 dollars revenue.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 13.—Berlin advices received here declare that the Kaiser, now on the eastern battle front, has appealed to Field Marshal Von Hindenburg to order a desperate dash for Warsaw next week, and to sacrifice everything to capture the Polish capital. The reason assigned is declared to be his desire to have the Reichstag vote the proposed new war loan of one and one quarter billion dollars without opposition. The radical element of the Reichstag is declared to have become restive under the demands for war loans and war credits and it is believed by the Kaiser and his advisers that only a sweeping victory will prevent their uttering their opposition on the floor of the legislative assembly.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The Government was advised by the German ambassador this afternoon that an unfavourable outcome of the Wilhelmina food stuff case—now up before the British prize court, will bring German retaliation against England in which the United States may suffer commercially.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Letters received here to-day say that the British battleship Audacious, which was disabled in the North Sea, but whose loss has never been admitted by the British Admiralty, has now been fully repaired in the dry dock and will likely be in commission in a few days.

THE COMMITTEE INSPECT FIRE HALL

Find Everything in First-class Condition—No Chickens in the Cellar—May Purchase a New Horse for the Department.

AN OLD VETERAN

One team of horses.

New lights for the apparatus hall.

One sixty-gallon hot water boiler.

This probably represents the extent to which the Fire, Water and Light Committee will go in providing new equipment for the central fire station. When the Committee visited the fire hall yesterday afternoon, on its annual trip of inspection, it was with parsimonious intentions. It could not be accused of suffering from enlargement of the heart or any malady that would neutralize, much less eradicate the economy spirit that is uppermost in the minds of the aldermen. The Committee foregathered at the hall about 4 o'clock, where they were directed to the sanctum of Fire Chief Howard. After a brief conference it embarked upon its trip of inspection throughout the hall. The horses were hooked up in record time and returned to their stalls where they were subjected to a cursory examination. The committee was of the opinion that two of the grey horses had about outlived their usefulness and should be replaced by younger animals. One of the horses had altogether too much daylight under him and is pretty well bleached out in the hide. The animals are not old by any means, but they have served their allotted time in the fire department and are beginning to slow up. They are good for a number of years in a less strenuous occupation, whether it be back on the concession lines or on the Board of Works Department. For the past number of years the latter has been a clearing house for superannuated fire horses. Here they find a place on a dump cart or a water waggon, where they are usually good for many more years of service in the employ of the City.

An Old Veteran.

There is one old veteran in the employ af the Fire Department that may be sold at an early date. He responds to the name of "Frank" as well as to as many alarms as his health will permit. He represents a legacy from the old volunteer Fire Department and is said to be about seventeen years old. He is a good traveller and for many years has been doing service in the Chief's buggy. His limbs swell occasionally and for some days past he has been undergoing treatment in the equine hospital together with one of the greys which is suffering from a sore neck.

The Committee will probably deal with the question of purchasing some new horses when the estimates are laid on the pruning block. Horses suitable for the Fire Department are usually hard to get, as it has been the policy of the City to purchase nothing but iron greys. Last year the Fire Chief was allowed sufficient funds to purchase one new horse, but owing to the difficulty of procuring the proper type of horses the purchase was never made.

New Boiler Wanted.

A local firm has installed a new

SAVAGE POLICY IS ADVOCATED

Berlin Publication Says That Passengers Must Be Drowned Before German Blockade Will Be Effective.

NOT MATTER OF MONEY

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 13.—Berlin despatches say:

"Deutsche Montagszeitung publishes an open letter to Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz, in which the following savage policy is advocated.

"As long as our blockade only destroys ships and goods it remains for England a question of money. Ships that are sunk are written off as business expenditure and the fight is unequal because Britain puts in only money while we put in our good men.

"Things will be different when British passengers are drowned. Persons acquainted with the psychology of England know that the German blockade will be effective only if it costs the lives of many English women and men."

HOW THE WAR TAX WILL APPLY IN PETERBORO

Drugs, Liquors and Unfermented Wines Will Be Affected—One Cent More on Letters—Not Much Local Demand For Sparkling Wines

NONE FOR CHAMPAGNE

The war tax on wines has gone into effect. The stamp tax on patent medicines, perfumery and letters, etc., does not go into effect until a date yet to be decided, upon according to Mr. W. H. Buller of the Inland Revenue Office. In that case the flood of letters due to smother the city on Sunday, Valentine's Day, will go with the old order.

Mr. P. J. Kenny of the Central Liquor Store, 183 Simcoe Street, states that a three and a half dollar bottle of champagne will cost the purchaser four dollars under the new war tax. Each bottle will bear a fifty cent tax. There is very little local demand for champagne. Grocers are being notified of the war tax on unfermented wines and will act accordingly.

Drugs Will Go Up.

Old price	New price
10 cents	11 cents
15 cents	17 cents
25 cents	cents

The table shows how the new war taxes will affect goods hitherto purchased from drug stores at the rate of 10c., 15c. and 25c. respectively.

OTONABEE FARMERS TO OTTAWA NOW

Will Ask Government for a Grant Toward Erection of Bridge at Foot of Lock Street

A dozen Otonabee farmers, who are interested in the construction of the proposed bridge across the river at the foot of Lock street, held a quiet little meeting in one corner of the Oriental rotunda this afternoon. Deputy-Reeve Ernie Deyell was among the number, with Messrs. Wilson, Shaughnessy, Matchett, Bennett, and others, forming a determined looking circle who believe that it is now or never for the bridge they want. This afternoon's caucus was to discuss the advisability of a trip to Ottawa to solicit Federal aid to finance the work.

The farmers have been holding out big inducements and are openly flirting with the city fathers, who pretend to be looking in another direction. The County Council offer $40,000 toward the bridge, but the city has paid little attention to the offers thus far.

This afternoon the Otonabee men had just about concluded that a deputation to Ottawa would be a step in the right direction. "We simply have to have that bridge," said one man, and Mr. Sexsmith has promised his best support.

TO-MORROW AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH

To-morrow at Murray St. Baptist Church, the secretary of the Baptist Mission to Roman Catholics of Quebec, will tell of the progress of that work. The Baptist denomination have at Grande Ligne, twenty-eight miles from Montreal, a college and church, and other buildings valued at $200,000. In that school there are at the present time nearly two hundred pupils, many of them Roman Catholics. Forty of these pupils professed conversion last year. Besides the work of the school, missionaries and colporteuers cover a large part of the Province of Quebec each year. The work is in every way most encouraging.

GERMAN ATTACKS ON BRITISH POSITIONS FAIL

Enemy Meets With Heavy Losses at Nieuport—Squadron of Ten German Aeroplanes Drop Bombs on Verdon But Official Report Says Little Damage Was Done.

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PARIS, February 13.—Taking a leaf from the book of the allies, the Germans to-day made an attempt to demolish the military depots at Verdun from the air. A squadron of ten aeroplanes flew across the fortress, and dropped bombs, but according to the latest word received here, did practically no damage.

The fighting in the north from Labassee to the sea, is increasing in intensity. The Germans vigorously attacked the British positions at Nieuport but were repulsed with heavy losses. They also attempted to carry the British trenches commanding the Grand Dune, but failed there.

The German artillery is now shelling the positions at Ypres. The French have succeeded in exploding two German mines in the region of Carency. From the Oise to the Aisne great activity is in evidence, with the artillery on both sides engaged.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Although the Admiralty is withholding further details of the great British aerial raid on the German air and naval bases in Belgium, jubilation was expressed to-day because of the feeling that its success will greatly interfere with the proposed German submarine blockade scheduled for Thursday. Yesterday's raid was admittedly the first of a number now planned. Where the next "strike" will be made only the Admiralty knows but there is little doubt but that if the fliers have their way the next attempt will be made against the German bases near Cuxhaven.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Commenting on the Russian retirement in East Prussia the Times to-day draws from it a wholesome lesson on the progress of the whole campaign: "We shall do well," says the Times, "to take seriously to heart Russia's frank statement that her withdrawal signifies that great and long operation is beginning. The process of letting the Germans further exhaust their reserve strength by violent though not very productive attacks will have to be continued for a considerable time longer."

ARTHUR WHITE AND HIS SOLDIER SONS

ALBERT ARTHUR Jr. ARTHUR (Father) OLIVER

The above group includes Arthur White, residing at No. 118, Monaghan Road, and his three sons, who have enlisted with the Canadian Contingents. From left to right they are—Albert, who is in France with the First Contingent; Arthur, Junior, who is also in France; the father Arthur White, who has always been deeply interested in military affairs, and is now with the Peterborough Home Guards; and Oliver, who is at Kingston, Ont., with the Second Contingent. There are few families in the country presenting a better showing of patriotic zeal than Mr. and Mrs. White and their five sons.

THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS FOR ESTIMATING

An Added Attraction for Dollar Day by The Examiner

In the north window of the Peterborough Bookstore is a glass jar full of coppers. To the one who makes the closest estimate will be given a prize of $10.00, and other prizes down to $1.00, in all a total of $35.00 will be given to those making the closest estimates.

You can make one estimate for every dollar you pay into the Examiner Office on Dollar Day — (Wednesday, February 17th.)

If your subscription is run out pay the amount, $4.00 for one year, and receive four Estimate Blanks, or if you pay it quarterly, pay it on Dollar Day, $1.00, and get one Estimate Blank. Estimates given for every dollar paid, whether subscription, old accounts, or new business.

Have a look at the glass jar and see how close you can estimate the number of coppers.

WOODMEN HALL SERVICES.

Elder F. W. Johnston will preach in "Woodmen Hall" over Nagent's drug store, opp. Cressman's, on Sunday at 7 p.m. The topic will be "The Seven Trumpets of Revelation. 8." Don't miss it for anything. And on Tuesday at 8 p.m. "The Spirits in Prison." Who are they, and what is the present? Pet. 3: 18. Sabbath school is held every Saturday at 2 p.m. and preaching at 3 p.m. All are welcome. Bring your Bibles. Hear for yourself.

Estimates Were Considerably Reduced

After the central fire station had been inspected yesterday afternoon by the Fire, Water and Light committee, a meeting was held in the office of Fire Chief Howard. The estimates were laid on the block and carefully dissected. This morning Chief Howard held a post mortem over the remains and discovered that his original estimate had suffered a depreciation of over twelve thousand dollars. The committee spent nearly two hours at their gruesome task, during which time Chief Howard was called away to a fire at box fifteen. By the time he returned the committee were ready to declare an adjournment, promising that they would give the estimates a still closer scrutiny at a subsequent meeting. The Chief put up a hard battle, but the committee was obdurate. The way they went after the estimates is a fair indication of what may be expected in other departments. They allowed the fire department nothing but the bare necessities of life. They may make some change in the way of horses. That's a matter that will likely be discussed at some future meeting.

The original estimates as prepared by the Chief and Ald. Duffus, chairman of the committee, represented the sum of $33,585.50. The estimates as they stand to-day have shrunk to the sum of $20,676.11, or a difference of $12,909.39.

TRY, TRY AGAIN.

The "Lady Minstrels" of St. John's have, it appears, acquitted themselves very creditably—attracting a fair-sized audience the first night of their presentation, and by the merit of this presentation, packing the house the second night. Why not strike again while the iron is hot? While the organization is in smooth running order, why not give a third entertainment for a patriotic or other charitable cause? Our soldiers are now in the battlefield, and in the work of making trouble for the enemy, which we are sure they will do, they will, sad to think, make work for the Red Cross nurses. There is need, urgent need, for supplies for this work; and under the circumstances, the public who speak so highly of the entertainment work of the Lady Minstrels, would doubtless liberally patronize a third presentation in the behalf of so deserving a cause as the Red Cross mission. This suggestion is made without any other authorization than interest in a noble cause, and is given for what it is worth; and if it is worth as much as the Minstrels girls, themselves, would, if acted upon, perhaps result in a substantial addition to the funds of the Red Cross.

SNIPING.

Under the impulse of sniping journalism, our contemporary, the Review "gets in wrong" in a laboured attack upon The Examiner. The only point of this recrudescence of the spirit of rural journalism necessary to refer to—and only in self defence is a reference justifiable—is the charge of the Review that The Examiner "stated an absolute untruth and intentionally at that." The Examiner is falsely charged with saying that the Toronto Star has as large a circulation as any four Conservative newspapers, such as the Toronto Telegram, News, Mail and Empire and World. The Examiner didn't state that. It simply stated in an argumentative way that "the Star by virtue of circulation and reaching of readers, would give as much, if not more (advertising) value than any (not all) of the four other papers." This means that the circulation of the Star is greater than any one of the four papers mentioned—which is, we believe, a simple statement of fact. That is all that need be said. We are only concerned in discrediting a charge of deliberate falsehood. Having done that the rest of our contemporary's article, need not be rescued from the oblivion consequent upon its publication.

HAVE COURAGE.

Canada and Canadians have need to have courage to meet all that our glad participation in the Empire's war brings. We have to make sacrifices and we must meet the demands that this participation makes upon our material means, our homes and our hearts. In these several relations we must enlist, not only our efforts, but our courage. It needs perhaps little courage to meet material sacrifices, but it will need the highest courage to confront what we must soon envisage in greater or less degree. About twenty-five thousand of our Canadian soldiers have passed into France, and are now on the battlefield. They are there to fight, and we have confidence that they will nobly and unflinchingly do their duty, and bravely face all that action involves. The reports we have had from the preparation camps have been sad in a few cases; but with our men in the thick of the fight we must brace ourselves to get news that will cruelly try all our courage and our deepest spirit of patriotic surrender. We must must make up our minds to getting sad news at times, and we shall need all our fortitude. When our soldiers bravely face the perils of battle; face death, and wounds, and hardship, and privation; we, who have only to wait and watch, must meet our share of the sacrifice with equal courage. Shall we in the hour of sad news show less fortitude than they whose loss we may be called upon to bewail? If we could chose the way of death of our dear ones, could we chose a nobler ending than dying in honour in the way of duty to King and country, and home and humanity? In our natural sorrow, at such a sacrifice, we could have no surer passport to the sympathizing heart and divine comfort of Him who gave the highest example of the beauty, and gain, and glory, of sacrifice for others. With the everlasting arms beneath us we can support the heaviest burden of sorrow.

THE NEW TAXATION.

The inevitable has come. Whether or not measures would have had to be adopted to secure an increase of national revenue if the war had not come, the coming of the war has necessitated the new tariff measure. Even if we had had no war we probably should have had to consider means to supplement a falling revenue. Increase of taxation was inevitable any way. The war conditions have interfered with the ordinary course of trade and commerce and industry; and there has been a decrease in trade and a falling off of revenue. Hence we have what is loosely described as a war tax. The new tariff, however, is not directly a war tax. It is not to directly promote facility of war expenditure; but to provide additional revenue for current expenses. The war burden of finance is shouldered upon posterity by the easy way of making loans; and posterity will have to meet it.

Indirectly the new tariff is only a war tariff, in that it will make some of us have to fight pretty hard to meet the attack upon our financial resources. As to the indirect taxation involved we shall not feel that except in the indirect sense. But there is a direct taxation estimated to raise nearly fourteen millions, that some of us will feel. That fact, however, does not mean that we should not meet it. We must be prepared to make small sacrifices as our soldiers are making great sacrifices in the interests of waging a just war. But the burden should fall as equally and fairly as possible, as it does not seem to do. It is estimated that the increase in postal rates will yield a new revenue of about 7 million dollars. If this were distributed equally over the whole population it would not be a matter of remark; but it falls very largely on many a business, which from the manner of conducting its operations, incurs large postal outlay. It is evident that a very considerable proportion of this extra burden of seven millions will fall upon the publishing concerns, many of which will have to pay from $500 to $1,000 each larger postal bills every year. This is not meationed in a complaining way; but it illustrates the difficulty of devising a tariff schedule that will strike equally all round. The publishing business which is rather severely hit, might fairly feel a little burdened when a banker, whom we in Peterborough know well—Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor—describes the tax on bank note circulation as "a shock." He is quoted in an interview as saying:

> "The tax on circulation is a shock to the banking community and will be doubly felt under the existing financial conditions — conditions that make it difficult for banks to maintain both strength and earning power."

If publishing houses and others, with large correspondence, are hit by an increase of from 50 to 75% in their postage bills, considering their volume of business, their capital and profits, and do not seriously complain over paying 7 millions, how can we regard the banking community as getting a "shock" by collectively paying an extra impost of one million dollars, the estimated amount the tax on bank notes will yield? A paltry million dollars of taxation burden spread over the broad shoulders of our twenty-three chartered banks, cannot communicate a very intense "shock" or one that will seriously impair "their strength and earning power." The banks of Canada, some of them with dividends, plus bonus, of from 10 per cent. to 14 per cent.; with a total paid-up capital of 115 millions, and with total assets of 1,575 millions, cannot have their "earning power and strength" very seriously weakened by a tax of one one-hundred-and-fifteenth of one per cent. on their aggregate paid-up capital.

Anyway, the banks, publishing houses, business houses, private citizents, employed and unemployed, will have to pay their share, and their loyalty is good for paying their share as cheerfully as human unwillingness to part with money will permit. We are in this war to a finish, and while our soliders are risking life and limb on the battlefield, we must not, and do not shrink from bearing our share of the necessary burden, where a few base dollars are only at stake.

War Developed Need For Greater Crop Production

Special to The Examiner:

WOODSTOCK, Feb. 12.—That the war did not create the problem in Ontario of the necessity for increased food production, but simply emphasized that situation, was a statement made by N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., during the course of his address here in connection with the Patriotism and Production Campaign. Mr. Rowell reminded his hearers that in 1913 he had spoken right in Woodstock as well as in other places, pointing out the seriousness of the decline of food products and rural population in Ontario and the necessity of grapling with the question and seeing what could be done to increase the food supply.

In this work Mr. Rowell thought the men in the country could not be expected to do it all. City people must also help and Mr. Rowell made two or three suggestions of how the latter could assist. For example, why could they not cultivate some of the farm land which had been cut up into building lots a year or two ago as a result of real estate speculation? Also, why could they not cultivate their own property and garden plots? Mr. Rowell also threw out the suggestion that city men with the necessary means might rent or buy some of the farms available in the Province and not now being used. Such men, perhaps, would not make much money but they at least would do this—first, they would increase the food supply; secondly, they would help to create labour; and thirdly, they would get a much better insight into the real difficulties confronting the farmers of the Province.

ROWELL'S MARITIME PROVINCE CANADIAN CLUB CAMPAIGNING

The following are a few of the Maritime press comments made on Mr. Rowell's speeches before Canadian Clubs in these provinces:

Halifax Chronicle: It is not a mere compliment to a visitor to say that Mr. Rowell's presentation of the issues involved in the war and above all his masterly exposition on the principles upon which Britain's greatness is founded and through which Imperial unity and strength have developed, made his address easily the finest which Halifax has heard since the outbreak of the war. Ontario may well be congratulated upon enlisting in its public service such a gifted leader as Mr. Rowell. The message which he delivered to the Canadian Club will be an inspiration in the days of stress and anxiety which are to come."

St. John Telegraph: "If those who heard Mr. N. W. Rowell yesterday before the Canadian Club of this city could have had their way, they would, no doubt, have anybody in New Brunswick listen to the same speech. Perhaps no one who has spoken in this city since the war began brought out so pointedly the duty of every citizen of the Empire in these circumstances. The address of Mr. Rowell is at once an inspiration an a battle cry. He is now being heard fo rthe first time in the Maritime Provinces and those who had the pleasure of hearing him must all have regretted that he was not speaking in a great hall where thousands could hear him. The Liberals of Ontario have in Mr. Rowell a rapidly rising man and a great leader."

Moncton Transcript, New Brunswick: "Mr. Rowell's speech was a literary treat, a great oratorical effort and breathed a sound spirit of patriottic fervour and views along British democratic constitutional lines."

Moncton Times, New Brunswick: "One of the best addresses yet given under the auspices of the Moncton Canadian Club was delivered by Mr. N. W. Rowell of Toronto, his subject being "Democracy vs. Militarism."

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that an application will be made by the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation for the Diocese of Peterborough in Ontario, Canada, to the Legislature of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act amending the Act of Incorporation of the said Corporation, passed in the Forty-Sixth Reign of Her Late Majesty Queen Victoria, Chapter 65, so as to enlarge the powers of the said Corporation, to borrow moneys on the security of Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange and for such purposes to make, draw, endorse, become a party to and deliver Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange, without the necessity of affixing the Corporate Seal thereto.

The reason for the enlargement of the powers of the said Corporation as aforesaid, is that it requires to borrow moneys from time to time for its purposes in various sums and on such terms of repayment as to render it highly inconvenient to execute and deliver mortgage securities on the real estate of the said Corporation.

ENEMY NOT BLUFFING

Germany Intends to Sink Any Neutral Ship Without Examination

LONDON, Feb. 13. — The Daily News' Copenhagen correspondent says: Britain and America's disbelief in the efficacy of a German blockade of the British coast has greatly angered Germany. The word "bluff" has particularly annoyed the German Admiralty. Certain journals give the assurance that no Danish interests are threatened by the blockade. Other papers, chiefly semi-official, declare that Germany intends to sink any neutral ship without examination if the ship is carrying contraband or steaming to Britain. If any American ship is sunk America must bear the responsibility. Germany will not be influenced from outside quarters.

A well-known member of the German Reichstag, Erzberger, who is closely associated with prominent military circles, writing on the blockade, asks the people not to assume that Germany is bluffing. It will soon appear, he says that the menace is great and earnest, and will be carried out in the most effectual manner possible. No obstacles will be put before grain transports for the Belgian population or the devastated districts of Poland, nor regarding copper shipments from America to Sweden. No Danish interests will be violated. One thing certain is that all American transports with weapons and ammunition will be ruthlessly destroyed. Ehzberger concludes that the German Admiralty and merchant marine are confident that the impending blockade will be fully successful.

A BREAD LINE 600 MILES LONG

Belgian Now Has 1,500,000 People Absolutely Destitute

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—Lindon W. Bates, vice-chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, summarized the Commission's work since its inception last October, 111 days ago, at the Colony Club and told of the destitution in Belgium to show the immensity of its task.

"There are now 1,500,000 people, absolutely destitute, who receive food at bread lines," he said. "The men, women and children who at this moment await the supper dole make a bread line 600 miles long. Soon it will be 2,500 miles long, the distance from New York to Salt Lake City. The 5,000,000 people in Belgium who still can buy supplies at all can pay only the cost price—and their number is fast diminishing. To feed the destitute requires $100,000 a day".

Will Construct New Floors

Tender of John Revoy for Flooring is Accepted

At the meeting of the Board of Health a letter was read from City Engineer Parsons in connection with the Bethune Street sewer. The description of the sewer given by the engineer was "a nine-inch sewer on Bethune Street from Smith Street to a point 66 feet north of the south line of lot 15, plan 127, thence westerly across lot 15, plan 127, to the lane at the north of lot 12, plan 127, thence westerly along the centre of said lane to the man-hole at the intersection of Reid and Stewart Streets." On account of Stewart Street being the boundary from Aberdeen Street nearly to Reid Street, it was not considered advisable, in the engineer's opinion to run the sewer around the block.

The letter was referred to the Board of Works.

The chairman read the following tenders for flooring the north half of the ground floor of the Queen Mary Hospital:

J. G. Graham	$184.00
Griffin and McCormick	175.00
A. Woods	171.80
J. E. Marshall	160.00
Thos. Hoolihan	155.00
J. Revoy (except finishing)	110.00

It was decided to accept the tender of John Revoy.

The following tenders were submitted by the chairman for painting, graining and repairing the woodwork in part of the basement, ground floor and first floor of the Queen Mary Hospital:

W. Forsyth	$165.00
A. Kingdon	420.00
Duncan Bros.	280.00

It was decided to leave the matter of awarding the work to the chairman and Mayor with power to act.

A letter was read from Charles Crowe asking the Board to look into the matter of providing sewer accommodations to 508 Rubidge Street. The matter was referred to the City Engineer.

The chairman reported that he had given the contract for filling the ice house at Queen Mary Hospital to B. Revoy at $26.

It was resolved that the following accounts be paid:

N. Douros	$11.59
Wm. Stock & Sons	5.00
The Cressman Co.	4.79
J. W. Edwards	12.84
Gordon-Davies Co.	2.98
Henry Vernon & Son	3.00
Mrs. F. C. Convery	2.00
Matthews-Laing, Ltd.	9.58
R. J. Soden	6.57
F. C. Cubitt	7.25
Fred Brown	8.70
J. John	8.20

Would Abolish The Gallows

Robt. Bickerdike Introduces His Bill to Stop Hanging

OTTAWA, Feb. 13. — The House yesterday afternoon discussed crime and criminals upon the second reading of a bill introduced by Mr. Bickerdike (Montreal) to abolish capital punishment. Mr. Bickerdike opened his remarks by saying that 1914 will be known in Canadian history as the "hanging year." The mania for hanging people had been greater than in any time since 1837. Three men had been hanged who were probably innocent; one of them, he thought, was innocent beyond all question. Blood guiltiness, in Mr. Bickerdike's opinion, rested upon everyone who took part in a legal execution, including the judge, jurors and crown attorney.

In the discussion Hon. George P. Graham declared himself against capital punishment, but Mr. Edwards (Frontenac) declared that imprisonment in the Kingston Penitentiary was worse than death.

Sir Robert Borden, in adjourning the debate, said that Hon. Mr. Doherty should be given an opportunity to reply. Personally the Premier had no doubt but that the abuses disclosed by the recent investigation had been corrected.

The bill of Mr. Bradbury (Selkirk) to prevent the pollution of navigable waters was given a second reading and was again referred to a special committee.

Postmaster-General Casgrain said the question of the pollution of boundary waters was now under consideration by the International Waterways Commission. It would in his opinion be almost a breach of faith for Parliament to intervene.

Before the House adjourned Sir Wilfrid Laurier inquired when the Prime Minister proposed to make his statement to the House respecting the Ministerial changes which had occurred during the recess.

Sir Robert Borden replied: "I will move the House into supply on Tuesday for the purpose of making the statement and permitting any discussion that may be desired."

FAR SUPERIOR TO CASTOR OIL

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They are absolutely safe, pleasant to take and never fail to cure stomach and bowel disorders. Concerning them Mrs. A. Sanve, Sheerway, Que., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my three children and can truthfully say that I know of no other men to equal them. They are far superior to Castor Oil and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

To You This Secret We Confide
Improve Your Hair With HERPICIDE

The value of Newbro's Herpicide for saving and beautifying the hair is a secret known to thousands. More men and women probably have obtained positive results from the intelligent use of Herpicide than from all other hair remedies combined.

In the majority of cases it is dandruff contagion that makes the hair dull, brittle and lusterless, followed later—in many instances with white, scaly deposits, itching scalp and falling hair. Newbro's Herpicide eradicates this enemy of beauty and (except in cases of chronic baldness) enables the hair to resume its natural lustre and luxuriance.

Discriminating persons speak of Newbro's Herpicide in the highest terms for its almost magical effect upon the the scalp and also for its excellence as a regular hair dressing. Just begin the use of Herpicide without anyone's knowledge and see how quickly your friends will notice the improvement in your hair.

Send 10c in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. 120-S, Detroit, Mich., for trial bottle and booklet
Sold & g't'ed at all toilet goods counters. Accept only genuine Herpicide. Applications at better barber shops

HEAVY DAMAGES ARE CLAIMED

Montreal Boot Co. Enters Suit For Quarter of a Million

MONTREAL, Feb. 13—The Ames, Holden, McCready Company has entered suit for $250,000 against Clarence J. McCuaig.

The action is one for alleged libel, the plaintiffs claiming that it has suffered to the above extent as a result of utterances alleged to have been made by the defendant concerning the quality of boots manufactured by the plaintiff for the use of the men of the first Canadian contingent.

Plaintiffs point out that whereas its factory was under supervision by Government inspectors during the whole period covered by the speedy execution of the Government's order there were other factories executing portions of the order where no such supervision was maintained.

RED TAPE HOLDS WARSHIP

Argentine Republic Cannot Get Dreadnught From U. S. Builders

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 13 — That the Argentine Republic has paid $14,000,000 to an American shipbuilding company for a dreadnought, and that the battleship cannot be taken home, because the firm which had taken the contract sublet it to another firm, became known to-day, when the officers and sailors here to man the Moreno were transferred to two United States battleships.

Charles M. Schwab admitted to-night over the telephone, that the contract for the Moreno had been taken by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company and sublet to the New York Shipbuilding Company. He declined to offer any explanation and referred the matter to Samuel M. Know, president of the New York Shipbuilding Company.

Mr. Knox admitted the contract had been sublet to them, but denied that his company had refused to turn the dreadnought over.

Turks' Bitterness Toward British Veers To Germans Says Returned Missionary

Rev. A. E. Thompson at Bethany Tabernacle Believes the Sultan's Sway Over the 'Holy Land is Drawing to a Close and Result Will Be a Great Opportunity for Missionary Endeavour.

PROTECTING SUEZ CANAL

Turkey's entry in the European war as an ally of Germany has been generally regarded as a fatal step on the part of the Sultan. Press despatches support the impression that the sway of the Turk over the Holy Land which he has held for centuries is fast approaching an inglorious end. To this may be added the opinion of Rev. A. E. Thompson who has just arrived from Jerusalem, Palestine, where he has spent years in the work of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. While he recognizes the critical nature of the conditions that have developed during the past few months in the middle east, Rev. Mr. Thompson said that Turkey is toppling, and that, freed from her dominion, the lands she has controlled will be thrown wide open to Christian missionaries.

Mr. Thompson sailed from Jaffa six weeks ago, and landed in New York with many other refugees from the war zone just last week. Years ago he resided in Peterborough, where he established deeply-rooted associations with Bethany Tabernacle. His present visit is to participate in the special services. Last night he spoke on "The Providence of God in Palestine." To-night he will continue on this subject, "The Divine Plan in Palestine." On Sunday afternoon he will give an address at the annual missionary offering on "Personal Responsibility in Relation to the Divine Commission," and on Sunday night he will preach on "The Missionary Opportunity in Palestine." On Sunday morning Rev. L. J. Long will preach on "The Anti-Christ."

TURKEY PREPARED.

When, in August, news came to Jerusalem of the declaration of war, Mr. Thompson felt sure that Turkey would be drawn into it. There was a spontaneous revulsion of feeling toward England and the British. But a year ago the Turks had sent deputations to England asking her to take possession of Palestine. With the outbreak of war, the name Englishman to the Turks was like the snapping of a red flag before a bull. However, as the war progressed, the feeling had swung back perceptibly. The people grew indifferent, and indications of hostility toward Germans became apparent. When Mr. Thompson had finally to leave on December 27, he had been informed on good authority that a bitter feeling was entertained by the Turk commanders toward the German officers. Resident Germans, too, felt Turkish sentiment was swinging against them, and that in the final issue they would suffer most.

EGYPT AND THE CANAL.

Rev. Mr. Thompson said there are 40,000 Australians, 10,000 New Zealanders and 40,000 Lancashire territorials in Egypt and 40,000 Gurkhas along the Suez Canal. He saw many of the Colonials in Cairo. They are a splendid lot of men, but their discipline falls short by degrees of the British ideal. There has been no stir over the departure of the Khedive. The appointment of a new Sultan of Egypt has been a strong move, as it has been virtually a reconstruction of the whole relationship and making it an Absolute protectorate. The new flag has now three crescents and stars instead of one. Cruisers patrol the whole length of the Canal, which is admirably fortified, and is impregnable to a force of less than half a million men. The eastern side has been flooded for a distance of thirty miles from Port Said. The recently reported attack, Mr. Thompson regards as merely a bluff or an attempt to block the Canal. In Egypt, the people laugh at the idea of an invasion, and everything is quiet.

THE FUTURE OF PALESTINE.

It is understood that France and Britain have not been inattentive to Syria and Palestine. France has openly declared that Syria is to be her sphere. Mr. Thompson believes that Britain may assume charge of Palestine, establishing a Jewish autonomy. In other words, he looks to the freeing of Asia Minor from the control of the Turk, who may, however, be permitted to retain Constantinople.

MISSIONARY OPPORTUNITY.

If these changes come to pass, and Mr. Thompson feels strongly that they will, the result will be missionary opportunities without restriction. Since the outbreak of war, the expulsion of all persons from the allied countries have of course included all missionaries. The Turks have seized the buildings that French, Russian and British Associations had erected, and are appropriating them for their own ends. The schools now serve as barracks; the hospitals retain their identity. But withal the turmoil and unsettled state of affairs, Rev. Mr. Thompson finds great cause for hope in the wonderful change in the Mohammedan attitude toward the west and the western representatives. Prior to the war this had become very apparent. It was undoubtedly the accrued results of years and years of missionary and educational work. The war intervened with startling suddenness, but Mr. Thompson feels confident that when the present storm has passed a brighter dawn will break upon ancient Syria and Palestine.

ALLEGED MURDERER MAY BE ACQUITTED

Wholesale Murder Case—Bronx Prosecutor Hesitates to Exhume Bodies of Victims at German Old Men's Home

NEW YORK Feb. 13—Frederic Mors the mysterious Austrian, who astounded the country by voluntary "confession" of his participation in the murder of eight aged inmates of the German Oddfellows' Home, near Yonkers, where he was employed as a porter, will be taken from the psychopathic ward in Bellevue Hospital to jail The alienists decided he was mentally unwell, but sane.

Even with this psychopathic verdict and if his confession of wholesale murder, is accepted as true, it is possible that neither he nor any one else can ever be made to pay a penalty for any of the alleged crimes. The only way in which it can be proved that any of the eight inmates who died was murdered, as it appeared to District Attorney Weeks, of Westchester County, yesterday, is by the finding of arsenic in the body of some one to whom Mors said he administered that poison. In the opinion of Mr. Weeks, this would not be conclusive proof that Mors or any one named by him in his confession committed the crime indicated.

Weeks Wants Corroboration.

Mors' confession must be corroborated by other evidence than the finding of arsenic in a body, Mr. Weeks said, before a charge of homicide can be made against any one. As the man whom Mors said he poisoned with arsenic died in Bronx County, Mr. Weeks said that the question of whether enough such corrobative evidence had been or could be obtained was a question for District Attorney Martin, of the Bronx, to decide. Mr. Martin, it is known, has not yet obtained such corroboration, and has not been convinced that it may be obtained. He has said, even, that he has not obtained enough corroborative evidence of Mors' confession to warrant his exhuming the body of the alleged arsenic victim to see if the poison can be found in it.

The probability of proving Mors' story by the exhuming of the body was lessened by the report that a tonic containing a solution of arsenic had been given to the man before his death. Dr. E. M. Juster, the physician of the Oddfellows' Home, said last night that he had never administered arsenic in any form to any of the inmates of the Home, but it has been established that the nurses and porters in the Home—other than Mors—sometimes gave medicines to the inmates without the physician's prescription.

May Have Hurried Death.

The position of the officials, according to report, is that Mors may have "hurried the death" of each of the eight persons he named, but that, if he did so, he did so entirely on his own initiative. Those at the examination also received the impression that Dr. Gregory considered Mors wholly or partially sane, although the alienist did not declare his opinion to them.

DR. ROGERS WILL JOIN CANADIANS IN FRANCE

Dr. W. T. Rogers, V.S., leaves on Wednesday to sail with four other veterinary surgeons to join the first Canadian contingent in France. Dr. M. Kennedy of Lakefield, was reported to have volunteered, but the information did not mention whether he had been accepted. It is understood that Dr. Rogers goes with a rank of Major.

MISSIONARY WORKERS COMING AND GOING

Their Paths Almost Met After Years of Work in Foreign Lands

Miss M. Quinn, of Listowel, leaves on Monday for China, where she will resume her work with the Alliance Missions. She has been home about a year and a half. Miss Quinn has many friends in Peterborough, where she was at one time connected with the Barnardo Home work. An interesting incident which all but materialized, is found in the fact that Miss Quinn was baptised here at the same time Rev. Mr. Thompson was baptized. They wished to renew old acquaintances on the present opportunity, but Miss Quinn, now in London, Ont., departs on Monday from Toronto. Rev. Mr. Thompson just arrived in Peterborough last night and has an engagement in Orillia on Monday with his brother, who has delayed a Boston journey for this purpose. Hence the two missionary workers will be unable to meet on Monday. Mr. Thompson arrives from Palestine just as Miss Quinn departs for China. Mr. Thompson, with his wife and family, suffered numerous indignities at the hands of a Turk under-officer when leaving Jaffa. His story of the war zone is found in another columns.

Packed House Greeted Minstrels

The splendid performance by the lady minstrels in St. John's school room last night was again greeted with a crowded house. The show made another big "hit" and the young people in their various parts were accorded a great reception. Some new local "gags" were given in addition to the ones of the night before, the audience being kept in roars of laughter. The vocal duet by Mrs. A. A. Perrin and Mr. Douglas was one of the features of the evening, while Mrs. Frewer's talk on the wire brought down the house. Mr. Eddie Hanrahan sang in splendid voice, "The Veteran's Song," and was forced to respond to an insistent encore.

BOTH ARE NOW IN THE BEST OF HEALTH

Striking Tribute to Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Mr. and Mrs. Tichit Both Searched in Vain for Health Till They Found the Wonderful Twin Remedies.

Rathwell, Man., Feb. 12—(Special)—"Both Mrs. Tichit and myself have every reason to speak well of Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," says Mr. Seraphine Tichit, a well-known resident of this place. "Mrs. Tichit was attacked with nervous Dyspepsia. She saw a number of different doctors and took many medicines, but could only get temporary relief, till she used Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

"For myself I could not eat much, I could not sleep well and I was troubled with bad dreams. I was utterly discouraged, when one of my friends gave me a little book telling of Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. After using them I could eat and sleep well. I also gained twelve pounds in weight.

"Both my wife and myself feel that we owe our health to Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are a grand combination. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys so that they strain all impurities out of the blood. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets digest the food properly, giving the body the nourishment it requires. With proper nourishment carried through the body by pure blood perfect health is assured.

Locomotives For the C.G.E.

Will be Fitted Up and Tested in Peterboro

Two of the electric locomotives designed for use in the Mount Royal tunnel have arrived in the city. They were consigned to the works of the Canadian General Electric Company, where they will be fitted up and equipped with motors controllers and other necessary equipment. Eventually they will be tested out on the track that was recently acquired by the Canadian General Electric Company, from the Grand Trunk Railway. The Company hope to construct a plant in Peterborough, wherein they will be able to manufacture the electric locomotives in this city.

W.C.T.U. MEETING

Yesterday afternoon a parlour meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Knapman, George Street, in connection with the local branch of the W. C.T.U. There was a good attendance Mrs. Whally, the President, gave an excellent address on the life and work of the late Mrs. Yeomans, who was the first President of the Dominion W.C. T.U. Mrs. Lane sang a solo, which was greatly enjoyed.

Train Service May Be Improved

That the outlook is hopeful and Peterborough may expect an improved train service is the opinion of the deputation that waited upon Mr. J. T. Arundel, General Superintendent of the Ontario division of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Toronto yesterday. The deputation, which comprised Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., W. C. Ackerman, T. F. Matthews and B. D. Hall, President of the Board of Trade, was closeted with the General Superintendent, also the District Superintendent, for about an hour and a half. They were promised that the matter would be thoroughly considered and if possible an improvement effected

The memorial which was presented to the officials embodies ten caluses. Among other things it asks for a fast train both ways, a standard sleeper to Montreal, parlour and cafe cars on all through day car expresses and parlour cars on local expresses to Toronto, also a readjustment of the timetable.

MEETING OF OTONABEE RURAL TELEPHONE CO.

One Hundred and Ninety-four 'Phones Have Been Installed —Line Will be Extended to Peterboro

A meeting of the Otonabee Rural Telephone was held in the Town Hall, Keene, on Wednesday, the 10th of Feb.

Messrs. Anderson, Easson and Armstrong gave an outline of the work during the summer.

One hundred and ninety-four 'phones were placed in houses. Our exact financial statement is not available owing to a slight difference between the committee and contractor, who asked for over $1.00 above the contract.

The Railway Board will be asked to deal with the matter.

The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

Moved by W. J. Frater, seconded by David Armstrong, that the Township Council be a committee to handle the affairs in future. Carried.

Moved by John Laing, seconded by Wm. O'Leary, that the line be extended to the City of Peterborough in the season of 1915. Carried.

A "trouble man" is to be appointed at once.

Moved by Dr. Ross, seconded by James McFarlane, that $1.50 be allowed Central and future arrangements. Carried.

A financial statement will be made out as soon as possible.

It is estimated that $25 cash would pay for a 'phone for ten years.

Up to $5	3 cents	5 cents
$5 to $10	6 cents	8 cents
$10 to $30	10 cents	12 cents
$30 to $50	15 cents	17 cents

Postoffice money orders are to have a war tax of two cents. The commission charged on money orders ranges from three cents to 30 cents, according to the amount, on all domestic postal orders. On orders to Britain or the British possessions the commission ranges from five cents to $1. These then will all have to pay two cents in addition.

Postal notes only applicable to Canada and the United States from here are charged from one cent to five cents according to the amount. An additional charge of one cent will have to be paid on all these. Only an amount up to $10 is sent by the postal notes.

Bills of lading and express orders will have a stamp tax of 22 cents. Express orders have the same charge as domestic postal money orders.

One Cent on Messages.

Old rate	New rate
15 cents	16 cents
25 cents	26 cents

One cent on every telegram or cable sent by the public, no matter how many words in the message, is the war tax which the Government will collect.

This applies to all messages originating in Canada and with their destination in Canada. It will also be collected on cables sent to other countries.

A stipulation is made by the Government that the toll shall apply to each telegram or message for which a charge of fifteen cents or more is made." As no telegram is accepted or sent for less than 15 cents, this applies to all.

No additional charge is made where the cost runs over fifteen cents. The tax is the same whether there are five words or five hundred.

DEBATERS SHOWED INTEMPERANCE AGAINST BACKGROUND OF WAR

Held It Up as a Horrible Example With Which Even War Was Incomparable—Got Decision

The hall of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum was packed last night to hear the debate on the resolution "That intemperance has caused greater suffering than war." The question was splendidly contested by both sides. The judges, Messrs. A. Sharpe, J. Maher and V. J. McElderry, of whom Mr. McElderry made a most able spokesman, after a long conference, gave the decision to the affirmative, so well upheld by Messrs. J. New and B. McEvoy. The negative was taken by Messrs. V. McCabe and E. Reynolds. The careful thoroughness with which the debaters had prepared their speeches, was evidenced in their delivery and the enthusiasm of the large audience which heard them. The speakers were heartily congratulated by Rev. Dean McColl and Rev. Father Phelan. The musical programme was composed of vocal solos by Miss K. Masterson and Miss Marguerite Clancy, and two very bright piano pieces by Miss Lillian Hill. Miss Kathleen McCarthy presided over the meeting.

The Committee Inspect Fire Hall

type of light in the main apparatus hall. The old lights fade away to a mere glim beside the new ones. The Committee may decide to purchase them.

It was pointed out that the Department is badly in need of a new hot water boiler. The old one is leaking badly. The boiler is used to supply hot water for bathing purposes. The firemen can hardly be accused of trying to qualify for mermaids, yet at the same time they like to have a plunge about as often as any other clean-living citizen. It is an expenditure that should blunt the ciriticism of the most chronic kicker.

The Committee evenually found its way into the cellar, where Ald. Weir felt constrained to adjust his pince nes and take a closer look at a discarded circular saw, mounted on a frame. This, Chief Howard explained, was used as a target, as the members of the Fire Department are also members of the Peterborough Home Guard. There were a few marks on the face of the target, which goes to show that all of the shots do not find the bulls-eye. The cellar, like the rest of the building, is spick and span. It was suggested that the cement floors be painted. This is a remedy that is adopted in many places to prevent the gritty surface from wearing off and being tracked upstairs.

No Chickens in the Cellar.

Search as they might the Aldermen failed to find any chickens in the cellar This should meet with the approval of Sanitary Inspector Spence, as he has discovered more than one cellar in the City that is doing service as a winter repository for poultry. Needless to say he has taken steps to prohibit the practice on sanitary grounds.

Chief Howard claims to have in Engineer George Jamieson a man who has cut the coal bill of the Department in two. He certainly had a snug little fire under the boiler yesterday. The hot water boiler referred to above, is attached to this furnace

The old ladder truck has been pressed into service until such time as the regular one is repaired. The station is equipped with two ladder trucks, three hose waggons, one engine and a buggy and cutter for the Chief.

The Committee who visited the hall yesterday comprised Ald. Duffus, (chairman), Ald. Weir, Ald. Evans, Ald. Green, His Worship Mayor Buller and City Clerk Armstrong.

ARGUMENT WAS SUBMITTED BY MR. D. W. DUMBLE K.C., IN SUIT AGAINST THE CITY

In the Case of George Street Methodist Church vs. the City —Judgment Awarded in Favour of the City—The Corporation Assessed the Church for $84 for Work That the Church Does Yearly at a Cost of About $7—The Garbage Collection Tax.

Appended is the argument as submitted to His Honour Judge Huycke by Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., solicitor for the trustees of George Street Methodist church in the case of George Street church versus the city. The action bein ginstituted for the purpose of recovering the sum of eighty-four dollars alleged to have been illegally collected by the city, as garbage collection tax. Judgment was awarded in favour of the city.

Mr. Dumble for the plaintiff, submitted:

1st, the assessment in 1913 was a nullity for the following reasons:

Churches are not assessible— they are exempt under the Assessment Act, Sec. 5, Ch. 195, R.S.O., though they are liable for special assessment for local improvements such as roads, sidewalks, sewers, drains etc. These taxes, however, in Peterborough, are a basis of a frontage tax."

The Garbage Act declares that "no lands shall be exempt from the special rate, anything in any general or special Act or in any by-law to the contrary notwithstanding—"

Mr. Dumble submitted that these words, in view of the general spirit of the last, might well be construed, no assessible lands shall be exempt.

That a church of great value might be on a small piece of land, and as churches make no garbage but clean ashes, a rate on the dollar might be very excessive. In this case the tax was $84.00 for what the church does yearly at a cost of about $7.00.

That it was intended to make churches liable under the Garbage Act it should have been very clearly expressed.

Collector Did Not Call.

That neither the by-law of the city nor the contract for removal of garbage make any mention of churches, though both stipulate the number of times the collector shall call for garbage at the different classes of establishments such as restaurants, etc, etc. and the fact that the collector never did call at churches for garbage, and removed none, shows that the draftsman of the by-law and contracts had not churches in his mind when preparing these documents, and the Council adopting the by-law and contracts did not consider that churches were covered by the Act.

Both by-law and contracts not only omit all reference to churches, but these instruments define the word "premises" as follows:

"The word premises under this by-"law shall be deemed to mean and in-"clude one tenement only, and where "any property or building is sub-divid-"ed and in possession of two or more "owners, lessees or occupants of pre-"mises within the meaning of this by-"law."

This definition certainly does not cover churches.

The Special Rate.

Then Mr. Dumble drew attention to the fact that the Garbage Act provides for the manner of collecting the rate. Clause 6 (b) is in these words: "The special rate may be collected or "recovered in the manner provided by "Sec. 500 of the Municipal Act." Turning to Sec. 500 we find it reads as follows:

"Sec. 500. Where a Council has au-"thority to direct or require by by-law "or otherwise that any matter or thing "be done, the Council may by the "same or by another by-law direct that "in default of its being done by the "person directed or required to do it, "such matter or thing shall be done "at his expense, and the corporation "may recover the expense incurred in "doing it by action, or the same may "be recovered in like manner as muni-"cipal taxes."

That means that if a church lawfully required and notified to remove ashes, etc., does not comply, then the contractor of the city may remove it at the cost of the delinquent, or the delinquent may be sued for the cost, or it may be levied on the church property by distress, and if no distress, then the cost of removing may be returned to the City Clerk to be put on the collectors roll and if the collector does not collect it then in due process of law the land assessed or a sufficient portion thereof may be sold for taxes.

Church Removed Ashes.

In this case the church removed their ashes early in the spring. The garbage collector never went to the church and never removed a spoonful of ashes. Query, how much should the city exact? Surely not $84. They exacted that much but gave no value for it, and rendered no service. Should they not, if entitled to anything, be satisfied with the actual cost of removal? Then comes the validity of the Council's action. Was the assessment legal? I submit it was not, for the following reasons:

The assessment was made in 1913. No notice of such assessment was given to the church. The Court of Revision sat in 1913, but the church got no notice. The assessment roll became absolute in the fall of 1913, there being no appeal. Then the following year there was no assessment; the Council in April 1914, by by-law, adopted the assessment of 1913 as and for the assessment for 1914. Then in August 1914 the collector sent out the tax bills and demanded from the church $84. In August there were no sittings of the Board of Trustees, so the treasurer, to save a penalty, paid their demand before the Church Board had any opportunity of having even heard of the claim.

Was the assessment of 1913 legal?

The By-law of the City, No. ——, adopting and bringing into force the Garbage Act, was passed April, 1914. In 1913 there was no law to support an assessment of churches. The assessment roll for 1913 was produced and no assessment of the church property appears on it, save an assessment of lot 1, north of McDonell Street and east of George Street, $84,000.

The Assessor's Evidence.

W. J. Henry, the assessor, in his evidence, says regarding the figures $84,000, "I say I didn't go into that as thoroughly as I should have."

Question: Now I suppose you are prepared to say you would not have put it at that price if you knew that an assessment was to be put on it. Answer: Well, with the information that I have now as to the value of it I wouldn't. I didn't have the same information."

On Mr. Henry's assessment in 1914 for the year 1915, Mr. Henry put the assessment at $55,000, a drop of $29,000.

In the assessment for 1913 the land is assessed at $10,000, the building at $74,000. The land consists of two town lots of one half acre each. On part of one lot is the parsonage on which the taxes are collected, but the entire square of one acre is assessed in one block, instead of several parcels.

Mr. Edward Graham, the contractor, says in his evidence that in one year and seven months he never drew a load of ashes or garbage from the George Street Methodist church, clearly showing that he did not understand that his contract obliged him to as so.

As regards church property, the only tax that could be levied on church property at the time that assessment was made was for local improvements; the Garbage Act not being in force in Peterbrough until May, 1914, there could not be any assessment in 1913 for garbage purposes, and if that assessment was not valid in 1913, the adoption of a bad assessment in 1914 could not validate it.

Assessment Invalid.

The assessment of 1913 was invalid in that it do not set out the several parcels of land composing the church property and put a value on each parcel as required by statute. Many tax sales have been voided by our courts on that ground. See Millar & Patterson, Ont. weekly notes, Feb. 1915 p. 714, and Blakey & Smith (1910), 20 O.L.R. 279.

I submit that provision made for collecting the cost to be charged for removal of garbage is that provided for in Sec. 500 of the Municipal Act and the Garbage Act itself. The cost of local improvements in Peterborough is always a rate on the foot frontage. This proportions the cost to the work done, but a rate on the dollar of assessed value in case of a million dollar church, at rate imposed here— one mill on the $—, would realize $1000 for work costing perhaps less than $10. The provision made in the Garbage Act is fair and sufficient and should be taken as the true interpretation of the Act.

The tax is inequitable and unjust.

We claim to be entitled to recover also because there was no valuable consideration, the church having removed all garbage as they do every year, without knowledge of this garbage tax of any assessment.

Is a Health Act.

The Garbage Act is a Health Act and By-law B of the Health Act, R.S.O., Ch. 195, provides for removal of garbage being removed on the order of the Inspector, and if the order is not complied with, the Inspector may have the nuisance removed at the expense of the delinquent. This is in line with the provisions of Sec. 500 of the Municipal Act.

By-law 1817, entitled a by-law to provide for establishing, maintaining and regulating a system for the collection and disposal of ashes, garbage and other refuse in the City of Peterborough, enacts as follows:

Any person guilty of a violation of this by-law shall on conviction thereof be liable to a fine not exceeding ten dollars and costs and in default of payment thereof the said fine and costs may be levied by distress and sale of the goods of the offender, and in case of there being no sufficient distress out of which the same can be levied, the said offender may be committed to the common jail of the County of Peterborough for any period not exceeding six months unless the fine inflicted and costs (if any), including the costs of the distress and of the committal and conveyance of the offender to the said jail be sooner paid.

I submit that this by-law, No. 1817, is misled and void, on the ground that it goes altogether beyond the power given to councils of cities in that it provides for fine and imprisonment for a period of six months, of persons who violate the by-law; that implies imprisonment for debt which is no longer allowed by Canadian law.

The only power given by the Garbage Act is the power given by Sec. 500 of the Municipal Act.

For these reasons I ask for judgment for $84.

Fierce Time Expected

Preparations Being Made by Allies Next Month

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The Evening Sun has received the following letter bearing on the great offensive movement to be undertaken by the allied armies in Europe in the spring.

The interview with Gen. Foch, printed Feb. 11, states that the armies of Europe are to meet in the spring when each will be on the offensive. I can confirm this extremely important statement by the French mail which came in yesterday. I received a letter from an officer of the 54th artillery now stationed at Lyons. He says:

"I know authoritatively that we are going to take the offensive in March; and also that our chief counts upon 100,000 dead and 500,000 wounded.

"Each of the allies, I am told, is making similar preparations, and it is probable that this will be a battle such as the world has never seen. This time we shall lack neither ammunition nor guns; everything is ready."

BRITISH HOWITZER SUPERIOR TO BIG GERMAN ARTILLERY

An Inflammable Missle Containing Celluloid, Paraffin and Other Ingredients Ignites When Placed in the Sun

LONDON, Feb. 12. — The British army in France is now using heavy howitzers, which according to a report from the official "eye-witness" with the expeditionary forces, have gained ascendancy over the heavy German guns. These howitzers, he states, were used in successful attacks on the German positions in the brickfields south of La Bassee Canal a week ago last night.

"Our heavy howitzers took part in this bombardment, their fire being directed on the railway triangle, the "eye-witness" says. "The boom of these pieces and the detonations of their shells were audible twenty miles away above the roar of the other artillery, while to those close at hand the shrieking of the great projectiles through the air was most impressive, as were the volumes of smoke and debris thrown up. The effect of the lyddite shells was truly terrific, one house being blown bodily into the air, and as they burst among the brick stacks they created great havoc among the enemy.

"The assault was launched against a strong position or 'keep' among the stacks of bricks held by the Germans. Our storming columns rushed the work from three sides at once and captured it with very little loss, for, as prisoners afterwards stated, the noise of the bursting shells was so great and the clouds of dust with which the defenders were surrounded were so thick that they did not observe our men advancing until too late. At the same time trenches to the north of this point, between it and the canal, were stormed by another party. By seizing these points we were enabled to occupy a continuous line southwards from our forward posts on the canal, which formed an advantageous position in front of the brick fields.

"We captured nineteen unwounded prisoners, in addition to many wounded, a trench mortar and machine guns. The Germans left seventy dead on the ground, while our casualties were insignificant.

"The Germans, however, showed no inclination to accept this reverse, for in the early hours of Feb. 7 a body of them advanced along the canal bank shouting out, 'Don't shoot. We are engineers.' This form of stratagem, unfortunately for the enemy, has now lost its novelty. Our men held their fire until the supposed sappers were only a few yards away and then opened with a machine gun, with the result that the 'engineers' fell back, leaving thirty dead bodies in front of our lines. In the afternoon another attack was attempted, but it melted away under our artillery fire and did not arrive at close quarters.

"The Germans rely very much on an incendiary shell for damaging towns, and in their recent bombardment of Armentieres they made use of projectiles of this type packed with candles, composed of celluloid, phosphorus and wax, which material is so inflammable that it will ignite if placed in the sun."

The "Allies" Rifle Parlour

Expert Rifle Practice Indoors for Everybody—The Outcome of the War Times

To be "a good shot" it is imperative that a man must practice, and keep practicing. An opportunity to stimulate the growing desire for good rifle shooting in Peterborough is now offered to our military-loving young men, as well as others. The Allies' Rifle Parlour is the name of the latest new enterprise to be opened Wednesday evening, February 17, in this City at No. 370 Water Street, by two well-known citizens. These spacious premises are conveniently situated on the ground floor, and have a depth of 100 feet by 20 feet. It will be worth the while of all riflemen to walk round and visit these new parlours, and take in the comfort and sport that may be derived in practicing rifle shooting here, day and night, as compared with the experience of the Allies in the trenches.

The targets are situated in the extreme rear of the building, where a series of stationary discs and travelling objects are presented to the marksmen. The target discs are shown in various sizes, and the moving figures of ducks, deer and other decoys are seen running past in regular succession and in various positions for testing long and short ranges. An electric motor operates the machinery, and the whole idea is to test the skill of the marksmen in varied constructions of moving objects, as well as regular target practice.

The entrance to the rifle room has been made interesting and gay with military decorations, naval pictures, portraits of noted generals, the figures of the Allies, and other bunting, including a young Russian bear with a Russian flag in each paw. Mr. Geo. Paxman, the enthusiastic poultry fancier, is the manager, and he may be relied on to make everyone at home and infuses the shooting ardour into his patrons.

Absinthe Must Go

French Chamber of Deputies Passes Prohibition Measure

PARIS, Feb. 13.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday adopted the bill prohibiting the sale of absinthe.

Indemnities will be granted to manufacturers affected by the bill, and will be covered in a special act later. The bill also applies to Algeria and the colonies, and will be proposed for adoption by the protectorates. The measure now goes to the Senate.

During the debate yesterday, Deputy Edouard Lachaud, a Radical Republican, said: "Absinthe suppression is only the commencement. We will arrive at the suppression of all similar appetizers."

An amendment was offered making the prohibitive features of the bill apply also to alcohol and bitters, but it was withdrawn after the statement was made that this would be the subject of a report by a special committee, and that propositions tending to the suppression of all alcoholic extracts were being considered.

American Ship Flew Greek Flag.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople reported yesterday the sinking of the partly American-owned steamer Washington, flying the Greek flag in the harbor of Trebizond during the recent Russian bombardment of the Turkish port. The Washington was reported last night as an American ship.

More Fighting Men Needed.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—That Britain needs a stronger fighting force was made manifest yesterday, when the military authorities called upon all those who signed the recent census expressing their willingness to enlist when asked to do so.

Prof. C. A. Chant On Astronomy

Was Heard in Normal School Last Night in First Lecture in Series of Three—Illustrated by Lantern Slides

Quite a number heard Prof. C. A. Chant, Professor of Astronomy, in Toronto University, when he lectured in the Assembly Hall at the Normal School, last night. Last night's lecture was the first of a series he proposes to give on the practical side of astronomy.

Prof. Chant has lectured here before and is always followed with interest. His lecture last night covered the introduction to the practical side of astronomy: what objects are in the sky and how to look for them. He poined out that it was necessary for prospective teachers to have at least some fundamental ideas about astronomy. He dealt with the theory that the earth is round, and demonstrated this with the assistance of a model prepared for the occasion. All the bodies in the heavens moved. Even the polar star did not stay in the one position, but revolved about the pole. This was demonstrated by a lantern view of the polar star. It was taken with an ordinary camera, with an exposure of twelve hours. The students of astronomy could also take a picture of the star if they so desired and were advised to get away from the artificial lights of the City to try their experiment.

The date of Prof. Chant's next lecture will be announced later.

Rev. R. G. Peever Is Congratulated

On Condition of George Street Methodist Church, at Joint Meeting of Trustees and Quarterly Board

At a joint meeting of the Trustees and Quarterly Board of the George Street Methodist Church, held on Wednesday night last, the following resolution was unanimously passed by a standing vote, all the older members of the Board expressing themselves very strongly in favour of the same.

Moved by D W. Dumble, seconded by A. W. Cressman, the Quarterly Board of the George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough, at its February meeing, deem it but just that they should give expression to their feeling of satisfaction at the condition of their Church. They find the regular Sunday services well attended, the finances very satisfactory, the Sunday School crowded to its capacity, and harmony and peace in all departments and societies in the Church.

They feel that much of this prosperity is due to the faithful labours of the Pastor, the Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., and they hereby offer to him their congratulations and thanks with the hope that he may be permitted to serve this Church for the full term permitted by the law of the Church.

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to harden the oil that strains the mainspring and affects the motion.

People usually wait until something breaks. The other way is the cheapest in the end and a little attention at the right time save the watch.

A COMPLAINT FROM THE SOUTH

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—By last night's paper we notice that the Provincial Board of Health has not authorized the construction of the sewage disposal plant across the river from the Street Railway Wharf, notwithstanding the Chairman of the Board of Works bombastic announcement to the contrary on his return from Toronto the other day. The City paid the expenses of this deputation, and the ratepayers are surely entitled to at least a truthful report of the result. Instead of this it would appear from the published reports that we have been handed a bundle of fatheoods and frothy vaporings. It would also appear that their diplomacy is about on a par with their verocity. The fire salute fired at the chief owner of this property in Toronto by the deputation was: "What do you want for your old swamp?" The stenographers and clerical staff in this twentieth century office haven't recovered yet. We were under the impression that Peterborough had shed its whiskers and moss half a century ago.—Yours truly,

RATEPAYER.

Soldier Boys Are Grateful

Signaller Wood Tells of the Receipt of Christmas Presents

Mrs. Wood, 280 George street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Signaller- Corporal W. A. Wood, with the 57th Company in the 2nd Battalion of the First Contingent. The letter was writen from Salisbury Plain, but Corporal Wood is now in France.

He says:—We had a fall of snow on the 22nd of January, only about two inches deep, that did not stay long. The cold is nothing compared with Canada, so did not bother us much. We are still in the canvas bell tents, and have been told we are almost sure to leave about Feb. 15th. So you see we shall not need any huts, here anyway. As far as we know we shall go over to France from here, and will most likely see quite a number of new place before we are through, though, of course, I may be able to tell you more about later on if we are allowed to. You see the letters are almost sure to be censored, and in that case we shall not be permitted to say very much.

I have not seen the round robin with your name on it yet, but Major Bennett will bring it around when we get a fine day. We had a nice share of the presents from the ladies of Peterborough, and all the boys are very thankful for the same. We certainly are not wanting for anything. If you come into contact with any of the ladies who had a hand in making up of our Christmas boxes, please tell them we thank them one and all for their kindness.

REV. R. E. THOMPSON AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The Rev. A. E. Thompson, missionary to the Jews at Jerusalem, who has just escaped with his life since the war broke out, will preach to-morrow morning in St. Paul's Church on "Providence in Palestine."

Mr. Thompson is an old friend of the pastor, Rev. R. Pogue, and though he has a busy time during his visit in Peterborough, he has consented to take the morning service in St. Paul's Church.

The pastor will continue his special series on the "Signs of the Times" in the evening, preaching on the "Great Apostasy," or "Is the World Getting Better?"

Discovered Bubonic Plague.

HAVANA, Feb. 13.—Two cases of the bubonic plague, authenticated as such, have been discovered here. Three days ago there was one death from this disease. All of the cases are believed to have originated at the wharves used by European steamers.

The sanitary authorities are taking the utmost precaution to prevent the spread of the plague.

SUBJECT OF SPECIAL INTEREST

The subjects in the Charlotte St. Methodist Church to-morrow will be of especial interest. In the morning Rev. Mr. Wilson's address will be in commemoration of the one hundred years of peace between Great Britain and the United States, and in the evening he will speak on "The Empire."

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF PEACE

"One Hundred Years of Peace" will be the subject on which Rev. James Rollins will speak in St. Andrew's church to-morrow evening. To-morrow is the day set apart for the celebration of the century of peace between Great Britain and the United States of America. No other achievement of these great nations in the "century" takes rank with this, and the people of Peterborough may well throng the churches to-morrow in celebration of the great event.

FANNY CROSBY DEAD.

Famous Blind Hymn Writer Was Nearly Ninety-Five.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 13.—Fanny Crosby, the blind hymn writer, author of about 8,000 hymns, died here yesterday morning after a long illness. She would have been 95 on March 24, of this year. She was born in New York State.

Among her best known hymns were, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Jesus, Keep Me Near the Cross," and "Jesus the Water of Life Will Give."

The old favorite songs, "Music in the Air," and "Hazel Dell" were also her compositions.

When she was six weeks old she was made totally blind when her parents followed the advice of an unskilled physician and poulticed her eyes. When she was 15 years old she entered a school for the blind, and later became one of its teachers.

Big Libel Action Is Begun.

MONTREAL, Feb. 13.—A big legal battle is probable in connection with an action begun by the Ames-Holden-McCready Co., Limited, against Clarence J. McCuag of Montreal, for $250,000 damages for alleged slander in connection with shoes manufactured by the plaintiffs for the first Canadian contingent. The plaintiffs claim that Mr. McCuag made statements about the shoes reflecting on them.

Mr. McCuag has engaged Greenshields to defend him. Casgrain, Mitchell, McDougall and Creelman are acting for the plaintiffs.

Disabled Prisoners Exchanged.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—The first exchanges of disabled prisoners of war under the plan of Pope Benedict were arranged yesterday through the Berlin embassy. One hundred and forty-six British prisoners, unfit for further service, will leave Germany Feb. 16 and Great Britain will release 107 Germans. The exchanges apparently are not on a numerical basis, but all those who are disabled will fall within the scope of the order eventually.

SNIPS FROM THE WIRES.

A hurricane, an earthquake and a tidal wave swept Na Man's Island of the Samoan group, killing three persons, as reported two days ago.

Five French aviators dropped bombs yesterday on the Germain military aerodrome at Habsheim, an Alsatian town in the outskirts of Muhlhausen.

Three thousand Villa troops attacking Guadalajara were completely defeated by Carranza troops. The Villa forces lost nearly five hundred in killed and wounded.

The American Embassy was represented in London yesterday at the funeral of Edward Monroe, 105 years old, said to be the oldest veteran of the American Civil War.

Jacob Vogel, former president of the Citizens Bank of Fruitvale, and his wife, were found murdered yesterday in their home in Fruitvale, a suburb of Oakland, Cal.

Jose Caro, Spanish Minister to Mexico, was taken aboard the U. S. battleship Delaware in the harbor of Vera Cruz yesterday after being ordered out of Mexico by Gen. Carranza.

The British steamer Morocco bombed New York yesterday from Aberdeen, Scotland, after a voyage lasting thirty days, during which the steamer struggled for six days in vain to make a single mile over mountainous seas.

Arthur A. Luton, deputy sheriff of St. Thomas, has been appointed by the Dominion Government to deputy collector of inland revenue at St. Thomas, succeeding W. H. Hinks, who has been removed to the London office.

Three Years for Rhoades.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—Three years in Kingston penitentiary was the sentence handed out by Magistrate Denison to Charles W. Rhoades, who pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining $825 from W. J. Fursland by fraud and false pretences. Rhoades used fake telegrams and other documents to make his victims believe he was a man of means, when in reality he was worth nothing. A big consideration in the sentence was the fact that he obtained $1,000 from a poor girl, her total savings, and then married her.

Prince Albert Rejoins Ship.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Prince Albert, son of King George, who was operated on for appendicitis last September, has been passed by the medical board and rejoined his ship.

Cargo Ship Torpedoed.

SCARBOROUGH, Eng., Feb. 13.—The new cargo steamer Torquay of Dartmouth was towed into Scarborough harbor last night in a sinking condition, after either striking a mine or having been torpedoed eight miles east of this port. The damage sustained by the steamer was considerable, one boiled having been penetrated. One man was killed and two were injured.

Prisoners In Siberia.

PEKIN, Feb. 13.—American Red Cross agents report that medical supplies furnished by their organization have been distributed among the 150,000 German and Austrian war prisoners in Siberia. This work is being done by Russian agents, inasmuch as the Russian Government refused to permit an American expedition from Pekin to visit the prison camp.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 12.—The local grain market was quiet today. Oats were steady. The volume of business was light and trades were confined to the local element. Exporters and millers were on the buying side in futures, and transactions were few. Cash demand was practically at a standstill. There was a [illegible] but buyers were holding aloof.

Inspections Thursday were 205 cars, and in night 275.

Wheat futures closed 1¼c to 1⅞c lower, cash 5c to 5½c down, oats unchanged to ⅛c lower and flax ⅝c lower to ⅛c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 12.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat today was very limited and sales of only four loads were made. The demand for local grades of oats for domestic consumption continues good owing to the fact that prices for such are so much lower than Canadian western. Supplies coming forward are ample and a fairly active trade is doing. Demand for American corn is fair, and further sales of car lots were made for shipment from Chicago. The flour market is quiet and firm. Millfeed is fairly active.

Butter is firm with a fair trade passing.

Cheese is quiet and the demand for eggs is fair.

CATTLE MARKETS

LINDSAY EASILY BEAT THE K.C.I.

District Winners Bumped Easterners in Second Round Game by 7 Goals to 0---Limestone City Team Never Had a Chance Last Night and Lindsay Should Go Into the Semi-finals.

(BY A STAFF REPORTER)

The Lindsay juniors made their entry into the O.H.A. semi-finals practically a certainty last night when they defeated the Kingston Collegiate Institute seven at Lindsay in a second round game by 7 goals to nil. While the Eastern Collegians are apparently not down-hearted and are talking of what they will do to Lindsay on hard ice and on their own big rink, they are overlooking the fact that Lindsay's speed and combination will dovetail into just such conditions. From an impartial viewpoint, the Limestone City students haven't the faintest chance of overcoming the big lead, and Cap Simpson's sturdy bunch will pass into the last four to clash with the northern winners.

Of course last night's conditions were tailor-made for the Lindsay team. The ice was very heavy, so slushy that play was stopped in the middle of the second period to have the cushion scraped, and the paper-weight Kingston players never had a chance in the hard going. The easterners are one of the lightest teams seen around here in a long time, two or three of the forward weighing under 120 pounds. Lindsay had a big advantage over them in poundage, and while they did not use their bulk unfairly, the little fellows were naturally bumped around a lot on the smaller rink.

Making all allowances, however, it looks as if Lindsay would have beaten them on any kind of going. Never at any time last night were the visitors dangerous. They could not break away from the close-checking of the Lindsay forward, or circumvent the Lindsay defence, and in the hour's play had not more than two or three good opportunities to score, and then O'Loughlin's cleverness prevented a counter. In the first period, Welsh, the Kingston goaler, stopped eighteen shots, while O'Loughlin was only called upon to handle three, and the gunnery throughout was on the same proportion.

Lindsay played heady as well as good hockey. They adopted themselves to the conditions, using combination in the early part of each period when the ice was comparatively free from slush. Later on, when the surface became cut up they switched their style and batted the rubber down the rink. The result was a pretty steady bombardment of the Kingston nets, and the cool work of Walsh in the flags saved the students from a much worse drubbing.

For Lindsay, the Carew boys were as usual the pick. Art Carew on the wing played grand hockey all night. He went down the rink fast in spite of the slush, while his shooting was as deadly as ever. "Chuck" Carew was everywhere and his great backchecking never gave the Kingston forwards a chance. This boy is one of the hardest workers in the O. H. A. and stays on the ice, having only served two penalties this season; one of these came last night and looked like an accident. McElroy showed fine work last night and Sandercock worked hard, while the defence trio were all good.

Walsh, the goaler, Ferguson on the defence, and Stewart, the little centre man, were the pick of the defeated team. Walsh blocked a host of shots and Ferguson saved scores on many occasions by his good checking and quick breaking rushes. He gets away like a shot from a gun, and on hard ice would have probably bagged a goal or two. Stewart is about as big as a minute, but is very fast and clever.

The play varied but little in the three periods. Lindsay's weight and good judgment kept Kingston pretty well penned up and from the start it was just a question of how many goals Lindsay would score. The little Easterners hung on gamely and put up a stubborn battle hoping to keep the Lindsay lead down to reasonable proportions. They never looked like scoring themselves, but they made Lindsay battle for every counter. It was 2 to 0 at the end of the first period and 4 to 0 at the end of the second. There were many penalties, but there was nothing vicious in the play.

The Kingston team is under the management of a former Peterborough resident, Mr. J. W. Kelly, former principal of the East City school. Jack Powell, the old 14th Regiment and Frontenac player, accompanied the team and used his megaphone vigorously. Strange to say, the genial Jas. T. Sutherland was absent. His own team is out of the running, but he generally follows any aggregation from Kingston.

Several players and officials of the Peterborough Club, the former including Harold Morrow and Joe Dwyer, were the guests of the Lindsay Club.

The line-ups were as follows:

Lindsay		K. C. I.
	Goal
O'Loughlin		Walsh
	Defence
Flavelle		Ferguson
Haugh		Carroll
	Rover
C. Carew		Paul
	Centre
McElroy		Stewart
	Right Wing
Sandercock		Toland
	Left Wing
A. Carew		Grattan

Referee—Jacobi.

NOTES ON WINTER SPORTS

The only difference between the merry-go-round at Jarkson's Park and one of the summer varieties that seem to spring into life over night on some corner lot for the special delectation of farmers and children is that in the first case you "go-round" to get warmed up, and in the other, to cool down. Everything else is about equal with the possible exception of the music. But the conspicuous difference between the two amusements is a resultant of the opposite seasons, with winter exercising upon man some of the regenerative influence which all nature receives.

The "big bowl" rink at the Park is, after all, a winter merry-go-round.

This year it has groaned nightly with the throngs of young people who cut the corners, arm on arm, until they barely miss the last car. Those who for some reason are not so armed, slowly unrap their skates, along about 9.30, go home soberly, sip a cocoa, munch cake and browse in a deep chair and read The Evening Examiner. But, on the whole, the Jackson platter, with its decidedly attractive annex, the slide, has added a measure of clearness to many an eye, and keenness to many a morning appetite. Doubtless with the young folk the exercise is a very remote object. It is the possibility of adventure, a time that lures. If the physical exercise of skating were alone considered, the girls with the pretty faces and the mayterious charm that always secures a full card would have a decided advantage. Her less fortunate sister would skate alone with some girl friend, or decorate the platform.

And the average girl, no matter how well she skates, will admit a little pang of disappointment if she does not claim the attention of some young man or gallant. And, as for gallants, you can always spot them—you will see them with the pretty girls, but seldom or never with the wall flowers (pardon the last term). And the evening's skating crowd is the prototype of all others where youth foregathers. Girls, you can't blame father Adam for the gallants. They are a sui generis.

Free Skating.

The City's venture in a free skating such a success that early preparation such a success ha early preparation should be made next year for providing more adequate accommodation. This particular rink has been used for the most part by the children of that section. True, many have come from remoer secions, but this has not been generally the case. A rink in the north end and one in the west end, and others, too, if they can be provided. But particularly is a large rink needed There is no sheet of ice in the City sufficiently expansive. If the City Fathers could provide a couple of acres of skating surface their efforts would be greatly appreciated. Ward rinks will not only attract the children and youths, but it will ultimately get more of the elders out, and the Alderman who has the clearness of vision to see the ultimate good that citizens will receive, will not be prevented from accomplishing this subject by minor difficulties.

Jackson Park.

For years now the Park slide and sheet of ice have been a splendid winter attraction. The social instinct is the only one manifested by Park visitors, a few being so fond of exercise or something else that they always walk out and back. There is some truth in the statement that good health needn't cost you anything.

As a winer pastime snow-shoeing is in a class by itself There are a few devotees in Peterborough, but once more the majority of them are unmarried. Will some one kindly explain why the gayest of the gay during the idyllic days of promise became the gravest of the grave across the border of reality? In the Province of Quebec you might conclude that every one has a pair of snow shoes and complete habiliments. In country places where relatives live within walking distance all their visits are made across the snow-covered fields. Sunday is a favourite day. In the morning, after Church, it is nothing uncommon to see whole families loping from the end of a car line across country to friends or relatives, and ten or twelve miles is a comparatively easy distance to cover. The Canadians of Quebec have adapted themselves to winter with complete surrender. Of ourselves it might be said as a superficial explanation of our difference to winter sports, that are summer Canadians with our winter desires yearning for Palm Beach, Miami, or Bermuda.

The Silent Places.

Snow shoes solve the difficulties of visiting your summer haunts in their winter garb. Tastes differ, but for us a clear, cold winter night under a big bread moon, and around you the majestic silence of the open country.

Some there are who snow shoe for the only reason that a friend arranges a little select party and after much neurotic tension the line trails off toward the nearest township. That the aforementioned parties often consist of couples that manifest marked affinities is not to be wondered at, and the presence of more than one pair might be explained by the fact that at home "mother" usually reads in the next room and she's not deaf. However, there is a charm to the open places, and stumbling over a fence rail, if rather disconcerting, has its compensations.

Others prefer the silence of the woods. In the day-time you observe so few signs of life, rabbit or squirrel here or there, snowbirds and chick-a-dees hopping about in the stately old cedars and pines. The quiet recalls the lines of Byron:

"There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is society where none intrudes,
By the deep sea, and music in its roar;
I love not Man the less, but Nature more
From these our interviews, in which I steal
From all I may be, or have been before,
To mingle with the Universe, and feel
What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

Very Little Skiing.

Yet another wholesome and pleasurable winter sport is skiing. While the snow shoes have come to us from our aboriginal Indians, the ski was developed in Europe, especially by the Norwegians. It is a most exhilarating and thrilling sport when one masters it, but the novice is early taught to keep to the easy slopes until he has acquired conrol of his feet. There are a few who ski in Peterborough, but they are indeed few. The plain fact is that the most people prefer to kick their toes at a hockey match than to get out and enjoy the paricular pleasures that winter affords us. The same with skating. If the young people really loved skating there would be numbers of fancy skaters in contrast to none that we know of among the younger folk. Curling alone remains a real winter sport enjoyed on its merits, a winter sport with the largest number of whole-hearted devotees, and without extraneous attractions

HOCKEY

The Brock Street Rink was the scene of an interesting game of hockey on Saturday morning from 10-11, between the St. Peters and Sacred Heart schools. The Sacred Heart won by a score of 2-0.

The line-up:

Sacred Heart—Goal, Ranger; defence, Dorie and Coursey; centre, W. Ranger; rover, Collins; right wing, Birke; left wing, McCarney.

St. Peters—Goal, Connors; defence, Wolfe and White; centre, Hickey; rover, Calloran; right wing, Rutherford; left wing, Drenan.

The stars for the Sacred Heart were Collins, W. Ranger, Coursey and McCarney. For St. Peters were Captain Wolfe, Rutherford, Drenan and Connors.

An exciting game of hockey was played this morning at the Brock St. rink between 10 and 11 o'clock when the Sacred Heart School team clashed with St. Peter's, the former winning by a score of 2-0. Had it not been for the magnificent work of Conners in the net the score would have been much larger.

The line-up:

Sacred Heart—Goal, H. Ranger; R.D., P. J. Dorie; L.D., C. McCarney; Rover, W. Ranger; Centre, F. Collins; R. W., J. Coursey; L.W., F. Burke.

St. Peter's—Goal, Connors; R.D., Calorne, L.D., Wolfe; Rover, White; Centre, Hickey; R. W., Drennan; L. W. Rutherford.

W. M. O'Brien refereed to the satisfaction of both teams.

Toronto Mail: Tetrault, the man that is claimed to have played for Peterborough in the intermediate O. H. A. under the name of Moines, turned out yesterday morning to practice with the Shamrocks and will be in uniform tonight for the Irish against the Torontos. A railbird who witnessed the Shamrock practice yesterday morning stated that Tetrault was in his opinion the same player who had played for Peterborough this season. Skinner and Geo. McNamara were also out to practice, and will be able to play part of the game against the Blue Shirts. The latter are in the best of condition and figure on making it three straight over the Shamrocks.

BOWLING

In the Y.M.C.A. Bowling League, last night, the Beginners took two out of three games from the Belmonts, tightening their grip on first place in the League race. The Beginners have only to win one game from the Engineers in the next series to win the championship.

Last night's score:

CURLING

The Ladies' Tankard of the Ontario Curling Association will be decided at Peterborough on Thursday next, and Secretary Pearcy yesterday announced the following draw and regulations:

Preliminary, 9:30 a.m.

Kingston vs. Peterborough.
Byes—Toronto, Belleville, Toronto Granite.

Semi-Final, 2:30 p.m.

Winner of preliminary vs. Toronto.
Belleville vs. Toronto Granite.

Final, 7:30 p.m.

Winners of the afternoon.

If a club drawn in the preliminary round is successful also in the semi-final draw, the skips of this club shall elect as to whether the final game will be played on Thursday evening or Friday morning. If not successful the final game shall be played on Thursday, unless the players of the two clubs are agreed as regarding the playing of the final game Friday morning.

The umpire will be pleased to present individual prizes to the winners of a game to be played Friday, the 19th, four rinks to compete, providing the final game has already been played, but if the final Tankard game is being played on Friday morning the three remaining clubs to draw, the one securing a bye to play the winner of the other two for the umpire's prize.

A special coach will be attached to the 8.10 a.m. G.T.R. train on Tuesday for the curlers attending the Oshawa bonspiel.

Five Cobourg rinks skipped by E. Giulet, F. M. Field, A. B. Roberts, W. Delay and W. Titford, will attend the Oshawa event.

Degrees For Volunteers.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 12. — Arrangements are being made by the medical faculty for a special convocation at Queen's University on Thursday next for conferring degrees on the students who are entitled to them and who are going overseas. Twenty-five have been selected to go as dressers to England.

WRITER ASKS THREE QUESTIONS

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I would like to ask three questions of Mr. Irving of the Gospel Hall, through the medium of your paper:

1. If eternal torment is the penalty for sin, why did God tell Adam it was death? Gen. 3-17.

2. If the dead are really more alive than ever, how can there be a resurrection of the dead? 1 Cor. 15-42. Dan. 12-2.

3. Why does God tell us to love our enemies, if He designed a place of torture for His enemies before they were born?

ADDRESSED CHILDREN

Almost every seat was filled last evening when Mr. R. Irving addressed the children's meeting in the Gospel Hall. His talk to the children was on the Prodigal Son. Mr. Irving explained God's easy artless way of salvation through Christ, to the little folk, with the help of some views which the child mind could take in.

After the children's meeting Mr. Irving gave his last lecture on the message of Christ to the churches. All who listened to him felt that what he said was "meat in due season."

The Philadelphian church, he said, was that people to-day, that little flock, with a "little strength," which kept his word and had not denied his name, and who would be kept from the great tribulation, and would be secure and safe in heaven when God pours out his vials of wrath upon a God-defying world.

The Laodicean church represented apostate to Christendom, which the Lord had no good thing to say of, but is about to reject.

R. H. Alford served coffee and refreshments in Lakefield.

CONFIRMATION AT ST. JOHN'S

Right Reverend Bishop Reeve of Toronto will administer the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation in St. John's Church to-morrow morning at 11 a. m. The ordinary service will be shortened on account of the Confirmation service. Thanksgiving for the century of peace with the United States will be offered at the evening service at 7 p.m., when Bishop Reeve will be the preacher.

SHEDS AT CHURCH HAVE LOCK AND KEY AS A PROTECTION

Rev. J. F. Ireland, Pastor of the Methodist Church at Bridgenorth, wishes to reassure all those who drive to the Church that sheds have been provided with lock and key. This has been decided upon in consequence of the fact that last Sunday several horses were interfered with during Sunday School by some person or persons, believed to be boys. The sheds may be used for tieing up horses on any day of the week, and the accommodation is welcome to all. The key to the sheds may be secured on application at the parsonage.

Funeral on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the above residence to the Little Lake cemetery. Service at two o'clock.

Its thinness is in the movement

Come in and let us show you how a new, mechanically correct arrangement of wheels reduces the size of the ordinary movement about one-half.

Then you will understand how this watch can "fit your pocket like a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this genuine thin model timekeeper is from complete watch to appear thin by such methods as omitting the flexible dust protection cap to the back case, or putting a bulky disc movement in the centre of a thin edged man's case.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model watch—the Gruen Verithin.

Prices: $25 to $250

THE MORNING MUSICAL SOCIETY.

Two very interesting papers were read at the meeting on Thursday of the Morning Musical Society. In the first Mrs. Allan continued "The History of Music." The second by Mrs. Meserve, traced the "Development of Music in Italy," and served as an introduction to the study of the "Italian School."

The papers were followed by piano and vocal numbers from Donizetti and Mascagni.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Drs. Frederick and Kelly will be out of the city for about ten days.

Miss M. J. Barnard has returned from a pleasant week's vacation at the "Old Homestead," South Monaghan.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Orchard, of Rochester, N.Y., are visiting Mrs. Orchard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Noyes, East City.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Telford, of Bridgenorth, returned to-day from Toronto, where they were visiting during the past week.

Mr. William Taylor, Chatsworth, Ont., announces the engagement of his youngest daughter, Myrtle, to Mr. Sexton V. Moulton, only son of Mrs. J. H. Moulton, Toronto, the marriage to take place February 24, at Peterborough, Ont.

Miss Pauline Audette of 39 Crescent Street entertained a number of her young friends to her birthday party last evening from five o'clock until ten. They spent the evening in games and other amusements, and she received some very pretty presents from her girl friends. The evening broke up wishing her many happy returns.

DECODING BRITAIN'S REPLY.

About One-Third of Note To U. S. Has Already Arrived.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13. — Transmission of the first instalment of Great Britain's supplementary note in answer to the American protest against interference with neutral shipping by the British fleet was completed yesterday, and the State Department's cable experts began deciphering it. About 3,000 code words have been received, and it is understood that twice as much more is to come, and it probably will be two or three days before the communication is ready for consideration by Secretary Bryan.

It is understood that among the new matters introduced is the recent German decree expropriating the grain supply of the Empire.

One of the principal arguments set out in the note is understood to be in support of the British Government's policy in taking suspected ships into port for inspection to determine the nature of their cargoes.

Forty-ninth Anniversary

Of George St. Church—Rev. Dr. Young of Toronto Will Preach

To-morrow is the 49th anniversary of the George Street Methodist Church, when special services will be held. Rev. Dr. Young, of Toronto, and a former pastor, will preach at all services. Dr. Young was greatly beloved while pastor here, and he is still remembered by many who profited under his pastorate. Since leaving here he has successfully filled the pulpits of St. James' and Dominion Methodist Churches, Montreal as well as serving the Methodist Church on the Mission Board and the General Conference by working on many of the most important committees. Peterborough Methodists will give him a glad welcome, together with his many other friends.

On Monday evening a congregational meeting will be held, when reports of the various departments will be given, as well as a short programme and address by Rev. Dr. Young. Refreshments will be served.

Fishing For Saws In Chemong Lake

May Sound Like a Joke But Not When They Have Been Stolen From You

Jim Cullen and Joe Young, of Bridgenorth, have been cutting ice on Chemong Lake this week, using two special saws which can be purchased only in Montreal at $6.50 each. They had left them out over night, merely placing them between blocks of ice. Thursday night they disappeared, and one of them has not yet been recovered. The other was observed through ten feet of water on the floor of the lake, and was successfully fished out. The men have had to send to Montreal for a new saw to replace the one they have been unable to find trace of.

Meeting of Boy Scouts

For the Purpose of Re-organizing Troop Number Five

A meeting of all scouts of the "Old Vth" is called for next Friday evening at 8.15 p.m. at 461 Bolivar Street. All scouts who were in the independent patrol under Scoutmaster Heron are cordially invited to attend.

The purpose of re-organizing this troops is to bring the older scouts together for summer camps, etc. This troop has discontinued its meetings during the winter, but it is hoped that all of the old scouts will show some enthusiasm in this matter.

As was the custom last Fall, a weekly "Scout Story" will be published on Saturdays in this paper, as well as items of interest to Scouts. All boys wishing to join this troop must fill the following qualifications:

1. Be over 12 years of age.
2. Be 4 ft. 6 in. or over in height.
3. All boys must possess at least the "tenderfoot badge".
4. He must also have a good character and good morals.
5. He must be willing to submit to "Scout laws".

OBITUARY

MR WM. LOCKINGTON.

Mr. Wm. Lockington, aged 67 years, passed away about 10.30 o'clock last night, at his home, near Nassau. He was born in Port Hope, son of the late Mr and Mrs. George Lockington. Thirty-three years ago he removed to Smith Township where he has followed the occupation of farming.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Miss Eva, five sons, Messrs. Harry, Haileybery, Alex. of Brantford; Frank, George, and Bert at home.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 o'clock Monday afternoon, from the family residence, Lot 24 of the Third Concession of Smith Township, to Little Lake Cemetery, for interment.

Farmers' Market Well Attended

Prices Show Little Change From Last Week—Eggs Down in Price

There was a predominating number of buyers on the farmers' market this morning, with the result that a limited quantity of produce found a ready sale. Prices showed little change from last week. Eggs were down a little and the supply more plentiful than it has been for some time. Fowl was up a little in price with a limited demand.

On the outside market there was a fairly good supply of meat. Like the inside market, the buyers were in the majority. There were probably more 'conversation' buyers than cash ones. The market is a veritable clearing house for pent-up gossip that has accumulated throughout the week. As usual the war formed the chief topic of discussion. Old battles were fought over in much the same manner as they have been fought over on paper during the past few weeks.

The Prices.

The prevailing prices were as follows:

Potatoes, per bag, 65c to 70c.
Apples, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.
Onions, per peck, 30c to 35c.
Carrots, per bag, 50c to 60c.
Cabbage, per head, 5c to 10c.

Dairy and Poultry.

Turkeys, each, $1.65 to $3.
Geese, each, $1.50 to $1.75.
Ducks, each, 80c to 90c.
Chickens, each, 50c to 75c.
Butter, per lb., 32c to 33c.
Eggs, per doz., fresh, 30c to 32c.
Beef, 11c to 13c. lb.
Pork, 11c to 12c lb.

Czar's Forces Are Preparing For Stubborn Resistance

ANTI-AMERICAN FEELING IS GROWING IN BERLIN

GREAT BATTLES IMPENDING ALONG THE LONG BATTLE LINE

Extending From Near Tilsit in East Prussia to the Austrian Province of Bukowina---Important Engagements Will Soon Be Fought With Decisive Results.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—Great battles are impending all along the long battle line extending from near Tilsit in East Prussia to the Austrian Province of Bukowina. The Russian retreat continues, says the War Office, but despatches from a dozen points to-day indicated that the Czar's forces are now organizing lines and preparing for stubborn resistance against the combined armies of Germany and Austria. The Prussian frontier north-east of Insterburg and the River Sereth region in Bukowina engaged attention of the War Office to-day. Here the most important engagements of the next fortnight, it was confidently predicted to-day will be fought out with decisive results. Von Hindenburg's armies sweeping the Invaders out of Prussia has encountered a more desperate resistance than the Russians first offered when they began their retreat last wek. The rear guard of his enemy is attempting to check the German onward movement by infantry charges.

The evident purpose is to check Von Hindenburg's progress, while the main body of the Russians takes positions along the frontier for a strong defence.

In Central Poland despatches to day said that the woods are delaying operations in front of Warsaw, but that Gen. Von Mackensen is preparing for a new drive toward the Polish capital. The Russians who tried to reach the Prussian fortress of Thorn are now retiring slowly along the right bank of the Vistula to a defence of Warsaw.

Saturday Night And Sunday War Bulletins

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—It is reported here that last Thursday a British aeroplane endeavouring to reach Brussels was brought down by a German machine. Both occupants were picked up dead.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Discussing the American notes to Germany and Britain, the Temps recalls correspondence fifty years ago declaring, not the flag of the vessel constituted its nationality. Italy allows the use of its flag by belligerents.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—President Poincare and Minister of War Millerand on a tour of inspection of teh battle front were received enthusiastically by the Alsatian veterans of the Prussian war.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 13.—Heavy fighting all day on both sides east of the Prussian frontier where the enemy is being steadily reinforced for a new dash for Warsaw, the German attempt to cross the Skraw river was frustrated with loss.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—The German Press indicates a growing indignation and echoes complaints that the United States is afraid to take the issue with England on any subject.

PARIS, Sunday (3 p.m. official), Feb. 14.—The bombardment in Belgium of Nieuport-les-Bains, also of our trenches and city of Ypres continues. There is intermittent cannonading from Lys to the Aisne, and fierce fighting in Lorraine, results unknown. In Alsace the enemy has taken the offensive, but are impeded by our sky patrols.

VIENNA, Feb. 14.—An Austrian official statement issued last night claims 290,000 prisoners taken at present series of battles. Nothing to report in Russian Poland and West Galicia.

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—A German official statement says they took the village of Norroy from the French, north of Pont a Mousson, also a hill to the west, taking two officers and 151 men prisoners.

CAIRO, Feb. 14.—A British force annihilated a force of 200 Turks and Arabs under German officers who were preparing an attack on the British Station at the entrance of the Gulf of Suez on Friday.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—A Berlin official statement says German troops have entered Uganda, British East Africa.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 14.—An official statement says Russian troops have entered and occupied the fortified heights in the region of Swidnik and Lupkow Pass, capturing one thousand prisoners on the left bank of the Vistula. Our artillery successfully bombarded the enemy's columns.

PARIS, Feb. 14. — The French statement says the Allies blew up a series of mines at Ba Boisselle. The enemy bombarded the villages of Bailty and Tracy. At Le Ved our heavy artillery reached the railway station.

KAISER IS IRRITATED BY THE FEELING OF HIS PEOPLE

Towards the United States as Result of Note Sent to Germany Regarding Warning to Neutral Ships---Comments of the Press.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

THE HAGUE, Feb. 14.—Kaiser Wilhelm is irritated at the growth of an Anti-American feeling in his capital. He has let it be known that he disapproves. Some of the angry comments of the Berlin press and Berlin newspapers to-day exhibited more restraint in dealing with the United States note. This information was contained in despatches from Berlin to-day. It carried semi-official confirmation of the report that the Emperor has invited United States Ambassador Gerard to his headquarters near the eastern battle front to discuss the situation admittedly serious.

The United States ambassador, advices said, has accepted the Kaiser's invitation. He will leave for East Prussia, accompanied by Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg and will endeavour to acquaint the Kaiser with the exact attitude taken by the United States toward Germany's warnings to neutral vessels that on and after Feb. 18 they will sail the English waters at their own peril.

The majority of Berlin papers to-day toned down their attacks upon the United States, apparently under the direction from the government. The Lokal Anzeiger, for example, said that while Germany might expect nothing from the British but "a purely shopkeeping conception" of international matter, such treatment is now anticipated "from the young, proud, Americans through whose veins flows such an immense quantity of German blood."

The Tageblatt, however, was an exception, and to-day warned America that she must not conclude that Germany is afraid of her.

Thunder of Battle Rolls From Baltic To Caucasus

Russia, Single-handed, is Fighting Armies of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey, With Forces Stretched Over Positions for 1500 Miles

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 15—(Cable to New York Herald)—Visualize two lines of soldiers facing each other and reaching, shoulder to shoulder, from New York to Omaha, Neb. Picture each of these men, bayonet fixed, in furious charge on the opposing line, and you have the situation as it exists on the eastern battle front this morning. Nothing in the history of the world, military observers declare, can equal the spectacle presented on the long, seemingly interminible line that reaches from the Baltic Sea to the Persian frontier.

In the American civil war a battle-field five miles in length was extraordinary. Yet in this great war battle is following battle in one continuous thunder of rifles, artillery and hand to hand combat over a field 1,500 miles long. From Tilsit, in the northeast corner of East Prussia, where German reinforcements apparently are holding the Russians in check, through the marshes of southern East Prussia and Poland into the passes and over the defiles of the snow-covered Carpahians to Bukowina and on the lofty Caucasus the armies of the Tsar, single handed, are fighting the forces of Germany, Austro-Hungary and Turkey.

The latest available official reports of the fighting show Russia's greatest success of the day to have been in the Carpathians, where the Austrian statements indicate the Austro-German offensive has broken against the Russian defence and the bitter weather encountered in the mountains. While the Teuton allies in the eastern part of the range seem to have been strong enough to compel the Russians to retire from Bukowina, the Russians appear after the fierce battles of Sunday last to have almost complete command of the middle and western portions of the mountains.

While the Tsar's forces have held their lines against Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army, which attempted last week to break through to Warsaw, they are now called upon to defend the positions which they have won in East Prussia and Northern Poland.

The Germans are transferring men and guns by their splendid strategic railways, and have assumed the offensive on the East Prussian border and on the right bank of the Lower Vistula, where an advance has brought them into the district of Sierpic, which the Russians occupied a short time ago.

It is impossible to say yet whether the next big battle will take place in this district, or in East Prussia, as Grand Duke Nicholas, with whom the initiative remains, has not disclosed his intentions. He may either strike between Tilsit and Insterburg, in East Prussia, or threaten to cut Field Marshal von Hindenburg's communications with Thorn by a movement along the Lower Vistula.

Except for a somewhat more severe engagment than usual in the Argonne and another in Alsace, in which the Germans and the French both say they have been successful, the calm continues along the western front.

In the meantime the Powers engaged in the struggle are putting their houses in order for a continuation of the war. The German Emperor has returned from the eastern front to Berlin to confer with his generals, including General von Moltke, who was retired after the first great stages of the war.

Financial experts in Berlin are reported to be arranging for the flotation of another internal loan of $1,250,000,000. It is said that Russia also contemplates floating an internal loan of $250,000,000.

In England the increased cost of living for the moment occupies the attention of the government, and while the Premier, Mr. Asquith, has declined to assent to the fixing of maximum prices steps are being taken to improve the situation. The government, too, is considering means to carry on a more stringent campaign against German trade.

A German submarine has again made its appearance off the coast of Holland, where it attempted to torpedo the British steamship Laertes, which, when ordered to stop, hoisted the Dutch flag for the protection of her neutral crew. A torpedo fired by the submarine, according to one report, passed along the vessel's side as she slipped away at full speed, and the submarine sent a shell after her.

Peace Sunday Was Observed

In the Churches Yesterday—Primate Prepares Prayer to Commemorate Peace

Yesterday was observed in the churches in Canada, the United States and throughout the Empire as Peace Sunday in commemoration of the hundred years peace between Canada and the United States. The following special prayer for the day was prepared by the Archbishop of Runertsland, Primate of all Canada:

"O Lord God Who rulest the nations of the earth, we bless Thy Holy Name that Thou has caused us to live in peace for an hundred years with our neighbours, and we pray Thee to continue this Thy mercy to us and to bind us ever more closely together in concord and brotherly love. We beseech Thee also to grant Thy blessing to Thy servants, our Sovereign Lord King George and the President of the United States of America, to their Councils and to all who are put in authority under them. Imbue with wisdom the Governor-General of the Dominion, the Lieutenant-Governors of the provices, and the legislators of the Empire, that all things may be so ordered, and settled by their endeavours upon the best and surest foundations, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us for all generations, through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Amen.

UNSUCCESSFUL ATTACK ON THE WINTER PALACE

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

CETTINJE, Feb. 14. — Austrian aviators made an unsuccessful attack upon King Nicholas' winter palace at Rieka, according to despatches received here to-day. Bombs were dropped within a few rods of the palace, but did little damage. The King, Queen and Princesses Vera and Fenia saw a thrilling fight between the palace guards and the aviators who were finally driven off.

Attachments have been invented for converting an ordinary bicycle into a motor cycle.

Paint made from the oil of a species of Manchurian bean is both water and fire proof.

MEALS IN BERLIN RESTAURANT LIKELY TO BE BREADLESS

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Feb. 13, via London—The customers of Berlin restaurants after February 22 must either bring pocketful of rolls or a bread ticket with them, otherwise no bread will be obtainable. This is the solution arranged to-day by the Berlin authorities for the one really difficult problem in the scheme for placing Berlin residents on a two-kilogram bread ration.

Arrangements for the issue of bread tickets to family households were easily made and the authorities settled the problem for hotels and boarding houses by authorizing the issue of day tickets for every person registered.

The newspapers, quick to grasp the new regulations, suggest that dinner invitations in the future bear alongside of the stereotyped "R. S. V. P." the initials of the German equivalent for "bring bread with you."

Code words have been suggested for persons who are due to arrive at hotels during the night so they may telegraph ahead from trains if they wish rolls with their morning coffee. Trading in bread tickets will be difficult, as the tickets are not transferable and are good only for the week during which they are issued. Similar regulations probably will be made for all cities of more than twenty-five thousand population.

According to the Lokal Anzeiger, a state regulation of another essential of German life is impending. The Bundesrath is considering a law limiting the consumption of malt to sixty per cent. of the present quantity permitted to be used and reducing the beer production correspondingly. The barley thus saved will be available for human consumption as barley grits or as food for cattle.

"Drown Women Passengers" Enemy's Diabolical Slogan

LONDON, Feb. 15—The Daily Express correspondent telegraphs from Amsterdam:

"Germany is beginning to realise that the impending blockade of England may not, after all, be sufficient to bring about Great Briain's doom; and the German press, under instructions from Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz's press bureau, is launching schemes to improve the blockade.

The Deutsche Montagszeitung publishes an open letter to Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz in which the following savage policy is advocated:

"As long as our blockade only destroys ships and goods it remains for England a question of money. Ships that are sunk are written off as a business expenditure, and the fight is unequal because Britain puts in only money while we put in our good men.

"Things will be different when British passengers are drowned. Persons acquainted with the psychology of England know that the German blockade will be effective only if it costs the lives of many English women and men."

AEROPLANE RAID ON OTTAWA

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Feb. 14. — Sir Robert Borden received a telegram from Brockville to-night at 10:30 stating that three aeroplanes had passed over Brockville proceeding in the direction of Ottawa. Col. Sherwood, Chief of the Dominion Police, was summoned, and at 11:15 ordered all lights out on Parliament Hill, and at 11:20 the city lights were also turned out.

First Exchange Of Prisoners

BERLIN, via London, Feb. 15. — The first exchange of disabled prisoners of war, in accordance with the project of Pope Benedict, was arranged for to-day through the Berlin Embassy. One hundred and forty-six British prisoners unfit for further service will leave Germany on February 16 and Great Britain will release 107 Germans.

The exchanges apparently are not on a numerical basis, but all those who are disabled will fall within the scope of the order eventually.

YOUNG BELGIANS SENT INTO GERMANY

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

AMSTERDAM, via London, Feb. 15. —The Telegraaf says it learns that 200 young Belgians who obeyed a request of the Germans and reported themselves have been arrested and sent to Germany. Only those of the Belgians whose parents were able to give security for them were permitted to stay at home.

The newspaper declares that more than ninety-five per cent of the Belgians liable for military duty did not obey the German order and that the Germans now are inflicting heavy fines on the community in which they reside and on their parents for alleged disrespect to the order.

The Telegraaf adds that more than thirteen hundred Belgians who attempted to cross the Dutch frontier have been arrested and that twenty-seven have been shot during the last two months while endeavouring to make their escape. Twenty-five smugglers have also been shot.

Indians May Kill A Deer

If in Actual Want of Food Says the Ontario Gazette

Notice of the recommendation of the Minister of Public Works is given that where an Indian is in actual need of food and makes application to the nearest game warden he may receive a permit to kill one red deer for his own use at any time before 31st March, 1915.

Simple Living

Economy

isn't scrimping one's food, or subsisting on an unpalatable diet, but it's cutting out indigestibles, surplus quantities; and planning meals to balance up essential food values.

The ordinary diet is generally deficient in some of these values, such as the mineral elements, the lack of which is often responsible for anemia, listlessness, nervous breakdown, and general inefficiency.

A daily ration of

Grape-Nuts

FOOD

has been a boon to thousands. Made of prime, hard wheat and malted barley, it contains all the nutriment—including the vital mineral elements, phosphate of potash, etc., which Nature has bountifully stored in these rich food grains.

Grape-Nuts is long-baked, very easy to digest, and comes ready to eat from the package. A crisp, appetizing food that combines good, simple living and true economy.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

She knew she hungered for this man. Why had she waited too long? Why had she been so tardy in discovering her own heart? At least she might have had memories.

Her thoughts ran into pictures of what life together might mean for them, their companionship in the high, wild places, where each had work to do. She wanted her "hunter home from the hill."

A great oak table, fashioned in keeping with the massiveness of the house, stood before her. On its top was a littered array of papers and heavy volumes, dictionaries, encyclopaedias and a copy of Fox's "Book of Martyrs." These things all seemed to be an accusation now. They were as much the symbols of what she had done in the mountains, as the rood over a steeple is the symbol of a church. And what had it all come to? The last act of the drama she had staged was being brought to climax out in the dark woods where the man she loved was trailed by human blood-hounds, set on the chase by captains of progress.

Then with a violent start she sat up. Now she knew she heard a sound; there could be no doubt this time. It came from out beyond the front door, and she bent forward, listening.

It was a strange sort of sound which she could not make out, but in some subtle way it was more terrifying than the clatter of rifles. It was as if some heavy, soft thing were being dragged up the steps, and rolling back. She rose and took a step to the door, but halted in doubt. The sound died and then came again, always with halting intervals of silence between, as though whoever were dragging the burden had to pause on each step to rest. Then there was a scraping as of boot leather on the boards and a laboured breath outside, a breath that seemed to be agonized. She bent forward with one hand outstretched toward the latch and heard a faint rapping. It was seemingly the rap of very feeble fingers, but that might all be part of a ruse. Was it a friend or an enemy out there just beyond the thickness of the heavy panels? At all events she must see.

She braced herself and threw the door open. A figure which had been leaning against it lurched forward, stumbled over the threshold and fell in a heap half in and half out. It was the figure of Anse Havey.

How far he had hitched himself along foot by foot like a mortally wounded animal crawling home to die, she could not tell, but for one horrified instant she stood gazing down on him in stupefaction. He had gone out a splendid vital creature of resilient strength and power. He had come back the torn and bleeding wreck of a man, literally shot to pieces as a quail is shattered when it rises close to a quick-shooting gun.

In the next moment she was stooping with her arms around his body, striving to lift his weight and bring him in. She was strong beyond all seeming of her slenderness, but the man was heavy and as she raised his head and shoulders a sound of bitten-off and stifled agony escaped his white lips and she knew that her efforts were torturing him.

It was an almost lifeless tongue that whispered, "I was skeered . . . that I . . . wouldn't get here."

Then as she staggered under his inert bulk he tried to speak again. "Jest help . . . drag me."

The few yards into the hall were a long and terrible journey, and how she got him in, half hanging to her, half crawling, stopping at every step, she never knew. Still it was done at last and she was kneeling on the floor with his head on her breast.

No wonder they had left him for dead and gone away content. He looked up and a faint smile came to his almost unrecognizable face. The blood which had already dried and caked with the dust through which he had crawled was being fed by a fresher out-pouring, and, as she held him close to her, her own bosom and arms became red, too, with the spilling life current, as red as the flower pinned in her hair.

She must stanch his wounds and pour whisky down his throat, before the flickering wisp of life-flame burned out.

"Wait, dearest," she said in a broken voice. "I must get things you need."

"It ain't—" he paused a moment for the breath which came very difficultly —"hardly . . . worth while . . . I'm done."

But she flew to the cupboard where there was brandy. She tore linen from her petticoat and brought water from the drinking bucket that stood with its gourd diper on the porch.

Bue when she pressed the flask to his lips he closed them and shook his head a little.

"I ain't never touched a drop in my life," he said, "an' I reckon . . . I might's well . . . finish out. . . . 'Twon't be long." For a while he lay gasping, then spoke again weakly.

"Just kiss me . . . dearest . . . that's what I come for."

She went on bathing and stanching his wounds as best she could, but a spirit of despair settled on her. There were so many of them and they were so deep and ragged!

"I didn't . . . come for help," he told her and through the grime and blood flashed a whost of his rare and boyish smile. "I'm past mendin' now . . . I came because . . . I'm dyin' . . . an' I wanted thet your arms . . . should be around me . . . once more."

"You sha'n't die," she breathed fiercely between her teeth. "My arms shall always be around you."

But he shook his head and his figure sagged a little against her knees.

"I know . . . when I'm done . . ." he sai, slowly. "It's all right now. . . . I've done got here. That's enough . . . I loves ye."

For a time she wondered whether he had lost consciousness, and she laid him down slowly and brought cushions with which to soften his position. It was almost daybreak now.

She sat there beside him and as her heart beat close to his he seemed to draw from it some of its abundant vitality, for he revived a little, and though his eyes were closed and she had to bend down to catch his words his voice grew somewhat stronger.

"I ain't never felt lonesome . . . before . . . but out there . . . dyin' by myself . . . the last of my family . . . I was . . . I had to come. . . . Dyin' ain't like livin'. . . . I had to see ye once more."

"You aren't dying," she argued desperately, "you sha'n't die."

"Yes," he said, "I'm dyin' . . . an' now the sooner . . . the better . . . I reckon."

She bent lower and held him very gently close to her heart. "You are suffering horribly, dearest," she groaned.

"It ain't that. . . ." His breath came with great difficulty. "They'll come back here. They'll get me yet . . . an' I'd ruther die first."

She laid his head very gently on the pillows and rose to her feet. In the instant she stood transfigured. Deep in her violet eyes blazed such a blue fire as that which burns at the hot heart of a flame. Around her lips came the grim set of fight and blood-lust.

The crushed flower on her bosom rose and fell under a quick tempest of passion. The skirt of her evening gown had been torn in her effort to carry him. Somehow one silk stocking had sagged above her slipper. His blood reddened her white arms and bosom. She drew a deep breath and clenched her hands. The disciple of Peace had gone and there stood now in its stead the hot-breathed incarnation of some Valkyrie hovering over the din of battle and urging on the fight.

Yet her voice was colder and steadier than he had ever heard it. She pointed to the door.

"Get you!" she exclaimed scornfully. "No man but a Havey crosses that threshold while I live. I'm a Havey now and we both live or we both die together. Get you!" Her voice broke with a wild laugh. "Let them come!"

No bitterly bred daughter of the hills was ever so completely the mountain woman as this transformed and re-born girl of the cultured East. She moved about the place with a steady, indomitable energy. With strength borrowed of the need she upset the great oaken table and barricaded the door, laughing as she heard the clatter of pedagogic volumes on the floor. Fox's "Book of Martyrs" fell at her feet and she kicked it to the side.

She went and stood before her rack of guns and her lips curled as she caught one up with all the fierce desire of a drunkard for his drink. She stood there loading rifles and setting them in an orderly line against the wall. She devastated her altar of peace with the untamed joy of a barbarian sacking a temple.

Then she turned and saw in the man's eyes a wild glow of admiration that burned hotly above his fever, and she said to him, once more, "Now let 'em come."

He shook his head, but strangely enough her love and awakened ferocity had strengthened him like brandy, and he pleaded, "Drag me over where I can get just one shot."

Then Juanita blew out the lamp and stood silent in the hush that comes before dawn. She did not have to wait long, for soon she heard hoof-beats in the road, and they stopped just at the turn.

"Hello, stranger!" she shouted, and it took all her strength to command her voice. "Halt where you are."

There was an instant's silence in the first misty gray that was bringing the veiled sunrise.

A stifled murmur of voices came from the road, and she caught the words, "He's in thar all right." A moment later someone called out sullenly from the shadows.

"We gives ye three minutes ter leave thet house. We're a-comin' in an' we'd rather not ter harm ye. Git out quick."

CHAPTER XXXVII

"Ye can't save me, dearest; it's too late for that. For God's sake go out," pleaded Anse Havey tensely.

Her answer was to cry out into the dawn in a voice that could not be misunderstood, "Anse Havey's in here. Come and get him. D—n you!" and for added emphasis, she crouched behind the overturned table and fired a random shot out toward the voice that had offered her amnesty.

From the earlier chapters of the evening the men out there knew that the school property was empty save for the man and the girl, and they knew that the man was wounded.

Their peering eyes, in the dim gray of dawn, could just make out an empty door. Back of it was one woman, and they were five men. Ordinarily they would have moved slowly and cautiously, coming up from several sides, but now every minute was worth an hour at another time. It behooved them, when full daynight came, to be well away on their flight from sure vengeance. The obvious demand of the exigency was to rush the place.

Killing women was, even to them, distasteful, but they had offered her immunity and she had declined.

At a whispered word they started forward.

GOING MAD FROM THE TERRIFIC PAIN

Prominent Merchant Thinks His Life Was Saved By "Fruit-a-tives".

DAYDALE, ONT., JUNE 15th, 1913.

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to Inflammation of the Brain, but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives", and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness".

Relic of the Lutine.

Another relic—a 12-pounder gun—recovered from the wreck of his Majesty's ship Lutine, has been mounted outside the main entrance to Lloyd's, and is an object of much interest to visitors to the Royal Exchange, London. This is the fourth gun of the kind which has been salved from the wreck. Three other weapons were taken up about 20 years ago. One was presented by Lloyd's to Queen Victoria, one to Queen Wilhelmina, and the other to the Corporation of London. The one last named is at the Guildhall Museum. Many other interesting relics of the Lutine are to be seen at Lloyd's. The best known of these is the Lutine bell, the tolling of which always indicates the receipt of news of the gravest importance to all interested in shipping. The Lutine, which was wrecked off the coast of Holland in 1799, carried a large amount of specie. As the result of salvage operations, which have been carried on from time to time, specie of the value of nearly $250,000 has been recovered.

India and the War.

Contributions by ruling princes of India to the war expense of Great Britain now amount to $4,000,000.

This sum includes $2,000,000 from the Nizam of Hyderabad and $1,650,000 from the Maharaja of Mysore. Besides this amount $950,000 has been subscribed to the Prince of Wales relief fund and the Indian relief fund.

A further sum of nearly $150,000 has been given by the chiefs in the form of heavy motorcycles, telescopes and kindred equipment, and $130,000 has been given by Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, who has also presented a motor ambulance consisting of 41 automobiles for the use of the troops in Europe and is arranging for the establishment of a convalescent home in East Africa.

In addition to these gifts many of the chiefs have presented numerous horses, mules and camels and even their private automobiles. A hospital ship which is splendidly equipped is another of their donations.

First Cantilever Bridge.

The first cantilever railroad bridge is the one across the Firth of Forth at Queens Ferry, Scotland. It is nearly one and a half miles in length. Fifty-one thousand tons of steel were used in its construction, employing as many as 5,000 men at one time. It cost $16,000,000 and fifty-six lives. The workmen began at either end and worked toward the centre. When they met and undertook the last connection it was found that the two ends lacked a small fraction of an inch of reaching far enough to allow the the insertion of the bolts that were to complete the span. For a time this was a puzzle, but was finally solved by an ingenious workman who suggested expansion by artificial heat, and it was forthwith supplied by means of burning kerosene oil under the steel girder.

Italy Adds To War Loan.

ROME, Feb. 13.—The Italian Government yesterday appropriated 170,000,000 francs ($34,000,000) for further military expenditures up to July, 1915.

Jellicoe Honored.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—King George yesterday conferred the grand cross of the Order of the Bath on Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, commander of the British home fleet.

G. T. R. Is Guarded.

MONTREAL, Feb. 13.—President Chamberlin of the G. T. R. said yesterday that the company's property at Portland, Maine, was being guarded, but would not say as to the possible existence of a general plot of destruction as reported.

"It is true that extra precautions to guard the company's property are being taken at Portland, Maine. Owing to conditions that are general knowledge, the G. T. R., in common with all other large corporations, thought it advisable to adopt precautionary measures, but no alarm need be felt by the traveling public."

Not Just What He Meant.

"So many men marry now for money," she said. "You wouldn't marry me for money, would you, Harry?"

"No," said Harry absently; "I wouldn't marry you for all the money in the world."

And he was amazed when she exclaimed, "Oh, you horrid, horrid wretch!"—Exchange.

Nest Eggs For Jam Pots.

When a large glass jar of jam or preserves is opened and it is not the housekeeper's desire to use it all at once she is often in a quandary to know how to dispose of what is left when the first few spoonfuls have been removed. The best method yet suggested is this:

Let the housekeeper have a small stock of china nest eggs, which can be bought for about a cent apiece. When she removes part of the contents of a jar let her drop into it enough of the china eggs to raise the contents to the top again; then replace the cover. Of course the china eggs should be dipped into boiling water first in order that they may not introduce the germs of decay.—New York World.

The Farmer Must Be Trained.

Today the advanced tiller of the soil must come up to his calling as fully equipped for service as the lawyer, the editor, the doctor, the captain of industry, for the curious fact has developed that the calling in which the unlettered and untrained man was once supposed to have as good a chance as the educated one is now the calling in which wide and varied knowledge is as imperative as in almost any other known calling men.—W. M. Harwood.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. E. M. Moore, Shortsville, B. O., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

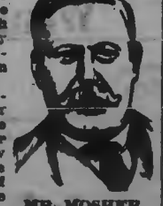
Was Troubled for Years With Kidney Disease

And This Treatment Cured Me—This Statement Endorsed By a Baptist Minister.

The great majority of people are familiar with the extraordinary curative powers of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. But for the benefit of those who are not we continue to publish from day to day reports from persons who have been actually cured.



MR. MOSHER.

The case described in this letter was an extreme one, and the writer was in a very low condition when he began the use of these pills. The cure was so marked that Mr. Mosher's pastor did not hesitate to vouch for his statement.

By their unique combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure in complicated cases which defy the action of ordinary kidney medicines.

Mr. W. H. Mosher, Brockville, Ont., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and firmly believe there is no medicine to equal them. I was troubled for years with kidney disease, and this treatment has cured me. When I began the use of these pills I could only walk from my bed to a chair. Now I can go to the field and work like any other man. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are an excellent medicine."

This statement is certified to by the Rev. E. H. Emett, Baptist minister of Brockville, Ont.

By awakening the action of liver kidneys and bowels Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure Constipation, Headaches, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney Disease, Liver Complaint and Backache. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Her One Weakness

A Story of Old Virginia

By EUNICE BLAKE

That peninsula which lies between Chesapeake bay and the James river is replete with interesting associations. It was there that the first settlement was made in North America, there sprang up the patriarchal system of the plantation, and there occurred one of the most noted struggles in a war that resulted in the downfall of that system.

The second of these periods is the most delightful to contemplate. The descendant of the cavalier had become the planter. His sons were fine men; his daughters were possessed of many virtues. The age of chivalry had not yet given way to the more matter of fact existence that has pervaded the south since the war between the states.

About Williamsburg, the seat of William and Mary college, were scattered families who were the flower of the Virginia aristocracy. Edward Fitz-Herbert, a planter living in this section, was blessed with sons and daughters who had grown up among customs that had been inherited from the defenders of King Charles I.

At this time, when the family of Mr. and Mrs. Fitz-Herbert were passing from youth to manhood and womanhood, an invalid, Bleeker van Tromp, went from New York to Williamsburg, hoping that the climate of Virginia might restore him to health. There he met Eugenia Fitz-Herbert, a typical southern girl, with a wealth of raven black hair, a complexion like the mingling of the magnolia and the rose, and a bewitching figure.

If there was one virtue among the southern planters of those days more prominent than others it was hospitality. Bleeker van Tromp brought letters to the Fitz-Herberts and was received and introduced by them to the planters of the peninsula. Eugenia Fitz-Herbert was drawn to him through pity for his lack of strength, induced by ill health, and he was drawn to her on account of an attractiveness that captivated all who knew her.

The life lived by these people was very like that of the country gentry of England. They gave house parties and rode to hounds. Eugenia was a fine horsewoman and fond of hunting, but, since Bleeker was not strong enough to engage in the sport, from the goodness of her heart she often made excuses to remain behind when hunting parties were formed that she might alleviate his disappointment. For while his body was weak his spirit was eager for action.

Naturally this attention drew him closer to Eugenia. Indeed, it was not long before he worshiped her. Her father and brothers noticed the growing attachment and frowned upon it. It was ideal for a husband for this row of the family being some man of prominence, some commanding figure upon whom the people of the south would look as a leader. Van Tromp, whatever might be his talents and attainments, was not strong enough even to enjoy the manly sports of a Virginia gentleman.

Eugenia, understanding this contempt held by her father and brothers for the want of vigor on the part of the man she loved, was troubled. When it was referred to by one of them she replied with fire in her eye that fortunately there was a way by which a weak man might show that he was equal, if not superior, to a strong man if it became necessary to do so, and she referred to the code duello, where the weaker could pull the hair trigger of a pistol with the same facility as the stronger.

This defect in her lover continued to trouble Eugenia. She nursed it and brooded over it, not because she considered it a defect, but because she was conscious that her family and her associates regarded Van Tromp as one who could not take a position in the community in which she lived such as she would desire. At any rate, she felt so deeply on the subject that she failed to conceal it from her lover.

Not only did the New Yorker learn it from Eugenia, but one of her brothers, who was friendly to him, said to him one day:

"Bleeker, why don't you challenge a fire eater and shoot him? That will satisfy everybody, and they'll let you alone."

"Because," was the reply, "I don't care to kill a man simply to prove that I'm not a coward."

There came to the peninsula from New Orleans a creole named Le Bouf, who was received in the social circle of the planters and, being a young man of aristocratic manners and having an aggressive way with him, was very popular with the women. He was not a man to brook any obstacle to his desires or advancement and was inclined to treat those whom he considered his inferiors with a silent contempt more galling than outspoken superiority.

What are now states united in reality as well as in name were then separate colonies, in many respects antagonistic. There was certainly nothing in common between Louisiana, which was mostly French, and New York, which was a mixture of Dutch and English. France and England were apparently antagonistic, and the Louisianian's sympathies were all with France. This and the fact that he was absorbed in himself antagonized him against Van Tromp, and the latter's delicate physical condition induced Le Bouf to treat him as one unworthy of any consideration except the most formal politeness.

The two men might have existed in the same social circle indefinitely had not Le Bouf been charmed by Eugenia Fitz-Herbert. As soon as he began to pay her noticeable attention she saw that the fact troubled Van Tromp.

To analyze a woman's reasons for an act is usually a hopeless task. Eugenia gave Le Bouf some slight encouragement. Why she did so no one could tell. Some thought it an ordinary desire to pique him with a view to assure herself that she held him in thrall. Some thought that she had been captivated with that aggressive air of superiority which the creole assumed over most of those with whom he came in contact. The event proved that she was influenced by neither of these.

When a man loves a woman and another man intrudes himself between him and her, unless she makes a quick decision between the two, there is liable to be trouble between the men. Eugenia, while she did not change in her treatment of Van Tromp, gave Le Bouf just enough encouragement to cause him to think he might win her. The blood between the rivals grew hotter apace, and it was not long before, one evening while [illegible] the men [illegible] the neighborhood were regaling themselves at the tavern, Le Bouf spoke contemptuously to Van Tromp. Instantly all conversation ceased, the party being shocked by the act. Had the creole spoken the same to any other of the men present there would have been resentment, followed by a duel. What would the wrathful do?

Van Tromp seemed pleased rather than irritated. Taking a glove from his pocket, he drew it lightly across the face of his insulter.

"This is all wrong," exclaimed one of the Virginians. "Mr. Van Tromp is an invalid."

"Gentlemen," said Van Tromp, rising, "I have never approved of the method of settling disputes more prevalent in the south than with us in the north, but I confess that it is a boon to me. I may not be able to stand up against an enemy with a rapier, but I need no strength to fire a pistol. If I am challenged the choice of weapons rests with me, and I shall choose the latter. And, furthermore, I propose to kill my enemy."

There was a cold bloodedness in the speaker's tone that impressed those present and sent a chill to Le Bouf. Nothing more was said at the time, the party breaking up. The sympathies were with Van Tromp because he was an invalid, because he was much liked and because the creole's assumption of superiority had prejudiced them against him. One of the young men offered to stand in Van Tromp's substitute in the affair, but he declined the offer with thanks, expressing surprise that it had been made.

Le Bouf saw at once that he was in an unfortunate position. He was compelled to challenge Van Tromp, who he knew had the sympathies of the others present and would, when the affair became known, elicit the sympathies of the planters generally. On consultation with others he was advised to send Van Tromp an apology for the words spoken at the tavern. [illegible] and a reply was returned that the apology was not accepted.

He then reluctantly sent a challenge, which Van Tromp placed in the hands of a friend with instructions to choose the derringer pistol used in duels. The seconds arranged that the meeting should take place in a secluded spot the next morning, the second after the insult.

It was impossible to keep the meeting a secret. The afternoon previous to the meeting a brother of Eugenia said to her:

"Gene, Van Tromp is to have a chance to prove his mettle. He's going to meet Le Bouf tomorrow morning."

Eugenia turned pale.

"When and where?" she asked eagerly.

"Nobody knows. It's only known that they're going to fight."

Eugenia said no more, but sought the cabin of Sam, a negro, who adored her and would have given his life for her. She instructed him to discover and let her know the time and place of the coming duel. Sam gained the information from the servants of the principals, the negroes having him in wait for it at the keyhole.

The next day, when, in the gray of the morning, two duelist parties had assembled, Eugenia rode up to the ground, jumped from her horse and advanced to a point between them.

"I am to blame for this," she said. "It must go no further."

The principals stood still and said nothing.

One of the seconds, after an embarrassing pause, asked Le Bouf if he would withdraw his challenge.

"Certainly," he said. "Anything the lady commands."

"Do you permit the withdrawal?" Van Tromp was asked.

"No."

Eugenia looked at him reproachfully.

"Not for my sake?"

"No," was the firm reply. "Let us proceed."

Eugenia went to him, kneeled before him and begged him to yield. He was obdurate until she assured him that should blood be spilled it would be on her account and it would wreck her life. Then he threw down his pistol and walked away.

But he never forgave her for the one little bit of feminine weakness that had led her to place him at enmity with a fellow being.

Bovril is an essential "munition of war" for those at home. In addition to its own fortifying powers (it takes a joint of beef to make a bottle of Bovril), Bovril has the unique property of making the other foods you eat nourishing. HAD DYSPEPSIA

So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes: "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago, I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I took six bottles of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

British War Lottery.

The British Government lottery for the benefit of the wounded and relatives of slain soldiers has opened. The lottery is based on that which proved so successful in 1803. Tickets are $2.50 each, divided into five identically numbered portions. The poorer classes may buy a fifth part of one ticket. The prizes range from $50,000 down. The lottery will produce $10,000,000 clear for the charity.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

THE HOME MERCHANT

Adapted From the Danville, Ill. Press

The home merchant. Who is he?

He is the chap who gives you credit when you are financially broke, and carries your account until you are able to pay.

He is the chap who gives you back your money or makes exchanges when you are not satisfied with what you have bought.

He is the chap who stands behind his guaranty, and makes restoration of all losses that you may sustain on the goods you buy.

He is the chap who meets you at the door with a handshake, and lets you out with a message to the "kids," and a real come-again goodbye.

He is the chap who meets and greets you on the street every day in the year, and takes a neighbourly interest in your family and your affairs.

He is the chap whose clerks and bookkeepers and other employes live in Peterborough and spend their money with you and with other Peterborough people.

He is the chap who pays heavy taxes to help support Peterborough schools, and build Peterborough streets, and maintain Peterborough fire departments and police departments, and parks, and lighting and water service.

He is the chap who helps support Peterborough churches and hospitals and charity organizations, and Peterborough lodges and commercial clubs, and talks for Peterborough and boosts for Peterborough every day in the year.

He is the chap who visits you when you are sick, sends flowers to your family when you die, and follows your body out among the trees and tombs as far as human feet may travel with the dead.

He is the home merchant — your neighbour—your friend—your helper in times of need.

Don't you think that you ought to trade with him, and be his friend and his helper in the time of need?

Don't you know that every dollar that you send out of Peterborough for merchandise, is sent to strangers — to men who never spend a dollar in Peterborough, to men who would not trust you for a box of matches, to men who would turn you over to the police if you should enter their offices?

You don't save much, frequently nothing, when you send your money out of Peterborough and you take all the risk yourself of short weight or measure and of getting damaged or inferior goods. And don't you know that the growth and prosperity of Peterborough depends very largely upon the success and prosperity of the home merchants? Out-of-town people judge our city by the appearance of our stores and the degree of enterprise shown by our merchants. And our home merchants can not succeed unless home folks give them loyal support.—The Danville (Ill.) Press.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR BLACK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay grey! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally, and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

DAYS OF RHEUMATISM NOW OVER! WONDERFUL MIRACLE WORKED BY "NERVELINE"

Its Strange Power is the Marvel of Thousands it Has Cured.

You will welcome the good news that "Nerviline" rapidly relieves the most excruciating pains.

Nerviline penetrates deeply into the tissue and possesses pain-subduing power at least five times greater than anything heretofore discovered. Its curative influence upon rheumatic pains is really wonderful.

Nerviline is offered to the people of this community under a positive guarantee of its reliableness.

As a curative agent of severest pain every rheumatic should test this great remedy.

Rheumatism is the greatest test Nerviline has to meet. It cures pains, big and little, but to rheumatics especially it is a great blessing, just as it is to those who suffer from neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, stiffness or enlarged joints.

Remember this: There is nothing harmful in Nerviline.

You can use it freely on your child ren for their aches and pains. It is dependable, reliable, safe. Nothing to equal good old Nerviline as a general family remedy.

Get the large 50 cent family bottle; it is far more economical than the 25 cent trial size Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

SUGGESTS RELIEF THROUGH WAGES

If a man is able to work, but will not, then he should wait for his meals; in other words: No work, no food.

Of course, we realize we are in the midst of abnormal conditions, where men have been thrown out of employment through circumstances over which they had no control; but unemployment will be prevalent in Peterborough for some time to come, and it will be the duty of our City Fathers to get their heads together and devise some comprehensive scheme to meet the emergency.

Conditions are not going to right themselves as soon as the war is over. Indeed there will be greater distress then than now. Several millions of men are now receiving employment in the ranks. As many more are busily engaged manufacturing munitions of war. When the war ends they all will be thrown out of work. It will be a miracle if there is not a revolution, precipitated by bread riots, such as they had in England at the close of the Napoleonic war; and the terrible depression following the S. A. war.

Admitting that the war will end next fall, it will be well into 1917 or 1918 before the labour market will have adjusted itself to the new conditions.

Therefore, we might as well face the problem now as wait until the patriotic fund has been exhausted; if all reports are true it will not be long.

Everyone realizes that the present haphazard way of dispensing charity should be replaced by a more efficient organization. There should be some organization where work could be supplied to those who are willing to work, and thus enable a man to preserve his self-respect. To extend help in the form of charity to a man who is able and not willing to work for his living, is to do him a very serious injury by sinking him deeper in the mud of pauperism.

Enforced idleness is a most weakening menace to the community. First it breaks down a man's respect for himself and his family. Next it practises fraud on the merchants and landlords. Then comes the dispenser of charity who, through countless interfering personal questions, scars the soul almost beyond repair, when there is scarcely any spirit, dignity or self-respect remaining. That is the reason the search for the deserving poor is often a difficult result. It is a search for people somewhere respectable and at the same time entirely void of self-respect.

Our own J. Hampden says: "Unemployment is a disgrace to civilization," as it must be true. This would be a golden opportunity for him to try his hand at removing the disgrace, at least from the city he represents.

The Canadian winter is the cause of much unemployment, yet we would not change it if we had the chance. Instead, we should adjust ourselves to it, by creating certain lines of activity which could be pursued regardless of the weather. The doing of this would make all the difference between poverty and plenty.

The Peterborough branch of the Industrial Association of Ontario, through their energetic secretary, Mr. Edward Langley, is doing an excellent work in securing positions for those seeking employment, but their efforts fail when the supply of work ceases.

It should be the duty of the City Council to create work. This can be done, and with profit to the community.

—Paul Penman.

THREE ADVANCES IN SUGAR IN THE LAST WEEK

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week: Office of Publication, Feb. 11th, 1915.

The grocery market during the past week has been visited by three advances in sugar on the Canadian market, totalling 50 cents per hundred pounds. While the market began to show some signs of strength the week prior to the advances, it was never thought that it would run up so rapidly. There are too, prospects for higher prices. One of the chief reasons for the advances is the fact that freight rates from Cuba to New York have almost trebled since the middle of January the rate has advanced from 6 cents per hundred to 31 cents, due to the British Government requiring so many bottoms for its own use. This created a scarcity of tonnage when the Cuban crop came on and this made sugar actually scarce. Into the bargain the making of the Cuban crop was deluged by heavy rains and the anticipation of another war-tax by many has still further aggravated the situation. Should there be an extra war-tax imposed—which from the standpoint of reason does not seem probable—sugar is sure to advance the extent of the extra tax. In about two weeks the refined market in New York has advanced $1.05 per cwt., as compared with 50 cents in Canada, so if would appear that further rises are in sight. Should the freight situation be relieved there would, however, be a strong tendency to ease up the situation. The market in therefore pretty much of a speculation.

If sugar maintains its strength or advances further, there is every reason why jams, jellies, and all kinds of preserved goods will go up. Last year manufacturers of these goods used very much cheaper sugar than will be possible this year. Price of sugar before the outbreak of war was about $2.50 a hundred less than to-day. This year's marmalade has been made with dear sugar and if sugar maintains a position above $6 wholesale, jams, marmalades, etc., are sure to advance. The high price of wheat will for similar reasons soon force up manufactured prices.

In the past couple of weeks cocoa has advanced on the primary markets some 6 cents per pound, the cause being the heavy buying by United States buyers acting for European Arms. Cocoa is a food with a high value and the nations at war are anxious to have plenty on hand. This market is still advancing.

Carries Lesson To The Allies

Foe's Victory in the East a Note of Warning, Says the London Times —Allies Over-Optimistic

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Commenting on the Russian retirement in East Prussia the Times to-day draws from it a wholesome lesson on the progress of the whole campaign. "We shall do well," says the Times, "to take seriously to heart Russia's frank statement that her withdrawal signifies that a great army is being formed in the beginning. It may be interpreted to mean that no general Russian advance may be expected for some time to come. The process of letting the Germans further exhaust their reserve strength by violent though not very productive attacks will have to be continued for a considerable time longer.

Allies Over-Optimistic.

"Probably the necessity thus disclosed will be found to apply to a considerable extent to the western as well as to the eastern theatre. If this conclusion is accurate it will serve to chasten the very large assumptions built during the last few days upon precautionary measures instituted in Germany with regard to food supplies. The Germans are by no means starving. They are not short of munitions of war and they are able to rush their new formations to the front ahead of our own.

Allies Not Yet Ready.

"These factors will govern the situation for a period, the length of which cannot yet be determined, and the public had better make up their minds to the prospect. It does not mean that the enemy will materially improve their position. If the heavy slaughter before Warsaw last week and their severe losses in the Carpathians gave the measure of their chances they will make little real progress, but the hour has not yet come when the allies can strike simultaneously and decisively."

EXERCISE BENEFICIAL TO WOMEN

Strength Often May be Gained by Judicious Activity on Part of the Sick.

The woman suffering from the ills of her sex often loses ambition and will not exert herself in the least, her muscles become flabby, her circulation bad and nerves wrecked. Another woman suffering from the same ills will lay out for herself a system of convalescent exercises of deep breathing even before leaving her bed. If the woman will but write Dr. Pierce at the Invalids' Home, Buffalo, N.Y., she can get free medical advice in such cases, also a 1000-page book with advice on Hygiene, How to care for the sick, Sex problems, Diseases of women, etc., all for 3 dimes or 30 cts. in stamps to pay for mailing (duty prepaid.)

Sick women— thousands of them have been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription. It is a woman's tonic that has a singleness of purpose in curing the disease of women only. The dull, sunken eye with its dark circles which comes of suffering is banished—so too is the sallow, sunken cheek, the shrunken form — when this "Prescription" is used. It is a temperance remedy because made without alcohol— of native roots and herbs.

Women who suffer should not wait till a breakdown causes prostration. If you are anxious to correct the derangement, to overcome irritability and nervousness, waste no time, but get Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription in liquid or tablet form this very day at any medicine dealers and tomorrow you will know that you are on the highway to health and happiness.

British Call on Australia to Export All Beef Available

Special Cable to The Examiner:

SYDNEY, Feb. 15 — The British Government has requested all the Austrian States to obtain all the meat available for export during the war, as large quantities will be necessary to meet the needs of the British army and France will require a considerable supply. The Commonwealth Parliament has passed unanimously a bill authorizing the measures necessary to this end.

All meat packing establishments on South Island have been closed down, owing to the shortage in shipping facilities.

TRAIN STRUCK CUTTER, THREE WERE KILLED

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 15.—Alex. D. McLean, formerly of Adjetemogh township, his son, Ross, aged 17, and his daughter, Elizabeth, aged 20, were killed at Bellarivw Sunday night when an express running 50 miles an hour crashed into their cutter, 5 minutes after they had left church for home. Jean, aged ten, sustained internal injuries which may cause her death.

Can you reach it?

Is the telephone within reach?

Is it within the reach of each member of your staff?

When you or your assistants want to use the telephone, do you have to walk across the room and perhaps wait until someone who may be using it has finished?

When a customer wants to talk to you or to a member of your staff can he get you on the minute, or is the "line busy"?

Your answer to these questions will indicate pretty accurately the status of your business.

The cost of an extension telephone figures out at only a few cents a day. You should have one within reach of every man in the office!

If you have a Private Branch Exchange, an additional line to Central will care for business the value of which may outweigh a hundred times the expense of the extra line.

To have inadequate telephone equipment nowadays is to be penny wise and pound foolish—plus!

DESPERATE FIGHT WON BY THE ALLIES AT NONOY

Three Day Battle in Lorraine Finally Ends in Victory for the French Who Have Driven the Enemy From the Heights Surrounding the Position.

BRITISH CAPTURE GERMAN TRENCH

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PARIS, February 15.—The defeat of the Germans in a three day battle around Nouvay and Xon, in Lorraine, and the success of the allied infantry along the road from Bethune to Labassee, were claimed in the despatches received here to-day.

The Germans have been driven from the heights surrounding Nouvay, after three days of furious fighting. Reinforcements brought up by the enemy to enable the Germans to retain their hold on the positions they captured on Saturday, arrived to late.

They spent their force in an unsuccessful attempt to take another fight captured by the French early on Sunday. The British forces west of Labassee have assumed an energetic offensive movement along both banks of the canal leading toward Bethune. A British regiment charged the German positions and captured more than 250 yards of trenches.

An official statement from the war office this afternoon commends a band of French chasseurs who finding themselves surrounded by the Germans in the Vosges executed a brilliant bayonet attack on this; several of the chasseurs cut their way through the German lines and escaped; the others were taken prisoners.

Violent bombardment continues in Belgium and at several points to the south, notably at Soissons, the war office announced this afternoon.

German shells have set fire to several buildings in Soissons that had escaped the previous bombardments. Near the assessat British gunners have been successful in silencing German mortars.

LONDON, February 15.—A terrible epidemic is sweeping the Polish villages held by the Germans around Lodz, the Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph wired here to-day. Emperor William, now at the eastern battle front, has abandoned his proposed visit to Lodz. The American Red Cross doctors are making heroic efforts to check the epidemic the despatches say, but are fighting against tremendous odds. The German military hospitals, the correspondent wired, are full of typhoid victims. Some days ago it was announced that Lodz had been reoccupied by the Russians; this may account for Wilhelm's new plans.

LONDON, February 15.—"England is fully prepared to cope with the German submarine raiders," First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill told the House of Commons this afternoon, though he did not go into any details concerning the plan of defence.

"England's reply to the German threat will not be ineffective," said Churchill; "We shall see to it that Germany is not permitted to adopt a system of open piracy and murder."

WAR HAS COST THE ALLIES TEN BILLIONS SO FAR

Lloyd George Makes the Announcement in the House of Commons To-day—No Danger of Failure in Resources

MOST EXPENSIVE WAR

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Ten billion dollars has been expended by the Allies thus far in the most expensive war from the standpoint of human lives, dollars and war material, ever waged, said Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the House of Commons this afternoon. The Chancellor, however, assured members that there was no danger that England's resources or the resources of any of her allies would be exhausted in the near future.

It's All Coppers In The Glass Jar

Numerous Inquiries as to the Jar of Coppers in the Peterborough Bookstore Window

Numbers of people who are interested in the glass jar of coppers in the bookstore window next the Examiner Office are enquiring as to whether the jar is filled with coppers or not.

For the information of all we wish to say that there is nothing but coppers in the jar, and it is filled with Canadian coppers alone.

DOLLAR DAY.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Peterborough is not only aiming at business as usual, but at unusual business. In inaugurating a Dollar Day for 1915, it is following up the great success of last year, which resulted in merchants disposing of a large amount of goods and in giving the public an opportunity of securing exceptional values. This year the increased sales resultant from a Dollar Day, and the splendid bargains open to the public, will be more welcome than ever. The public will be interested in knowing that next Wednesday, Feb. 17, will be Dollar Day, with all the merchants and business men in Peterborough, when special articles will be offered at the price of $1.00. Judging by the experience of last year these dollar parcels or articles will be exceptional value and besides that, exceptional values will be given in articles of other amounts of value. The public will thus have demonstrated the fact that applies every day in the year, namely that the merchants and business men of Peterborough have stocks of a quality equal those of any city and at prices as favourable as those offered by the merchants or mercantile houses of any other city. Thus the public by patronizing home merchants will not only get as good goods and as good values as they can do by dealing with mail-order houses, but will be helping themselves by keeping the dollar at home, to serve the purposes of developing local prosperity. Every added dollar we can put in circulation in Peterborough will have its share in helping in the general prosperity.

The Barrie Building When Completed

Finished appearance to George Street's Newest Modern Building. The front will be of bronze, glazed tile and glass, and will be a decided acquisition to the mercantile section. The work on the front will be begun this week, and the building should be ready for occupation by the end of March.

WERE TOY BALLOONS

Brockville Woke Up This Morning and Wondered What It Ate Before Going to Bed

A WATERTOWN JOKE

Special to The Examiner:

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Feb. 15. — Toy balloons sent up from Watertown by town cup-ups caused those aeroplane scares at Brockville, Ont., and Ottawa.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 15. — There are no further details this morning regarding the alleged crossing of the St. Lawrence river at this point by aeroplanes supposed to have come from Morristown, N.Y., which news was telephoned to Ottawa, with the result that the Dominion capital was thrown into consternation and darkness. Brockville this morning woke up and wondered what it ate before going to bed last night.

Despite the assurance from New York State that the aeroplane scare last night was nothing more than a joke, Canadian officials to-day were carrying on an investigation. Colonel Sherwood, head of the Dominion Police, stated that the matter may be taken up with the American authorities.

Hotel License Was Transferred

To Peterboro' Man—Will Take Possession at Once

LINDSAY, Feb. 15—At a meeting of the License Comissioners held Saturday the application of Mr. James Houlihan, of Peterborough, for a transfer of the King Edward Hotel license was considered. The Commissioners gave the application favourable consideration and the new proprietor will take possession at once. He was formerly a bartender at the Grand Hotel in Peterborough.

Mr. A. J. Ashmore, the late proprietor, will reside in Lindsay.

Successful Euchre Party

A very enjoyable progressive euchre party was held in the rooms of the Commercial Travellers' Association on Saturday evening. There was a large attendance, and the evening passed most pleasantly. The ladies' prize was captured by Mrs. Overend, while Mr. J. E. Firth won the gentleman's prize. Refreshments were served and the affair was a great success.

CARGO FOR PRIZE COURT

Grain and Food Stuffs on the American Steamer Wilhelmina Are to Be Decided Upon

ANNOUNCED TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The British Government to-day brought to a head the controversy revolving about the detention of the cargo of the American steamer Wilhelmina.. It was announced in the House of Commons that the Wilhelmina's cargo of grain and food stuffs will be submitted to the prize court. To-day's announcement coming three days before the German "blockade" of England is to go into effect, indicated that the British Government intends to settle speedily the claim of certain American shippers that cargoes of foodstuffs may be sent to Germany without being converted to the use of the German armies. Just what will be the attitude of the Government before the prize court is not exactly known.

PETERBOROUGH "PROFESSIONAL" AT PARRY SOUND

The Parry Sound North Star in its report of a Patriotic concert given at Parry Sound, thus refers to the singing of a Peterborough boy:

"Mr. Edward Hanrahan, of Peterborough, sang the only professional song, "The Veteran's Song," and his splendid full, round, sonorous bass voice was a real treat, but he declined to respond to a very hearty recall."

The Star's classing Mr. Hanrahan as a "professional" is a very distinct compliment, for it could only have got this idea from the artistic manner in which he must have sung his selection. Many professionals would be glad to be able to sing it so well.

PETERBORO' INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATIONS' RECORD

Mr. Ed. Langley, who has charge of the local branch of the Industrial Association of Ontario, has received a complimentary letter from the provincial secretary upon the work accomplished in Peterborough. The letter stated that Peterborough had the best record of all the communities in Ontario. It is felt that if more general support were extended to Mr. Langley by his committee and other citizens the securing of work for the unemployed would show even a better record. The Industrial Association was organized for the purpose of linking up the unemployed with whatever work offered.

LOCAL BOYS MAY HAVE FACED FOE FOR FIRST TIME

Ontario Brigade to Which Peterborough Company is Attached Reported to Have Been in Action in Recent Fighting in the North

PREPARE FOR BAD NEWS

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—According to cables this morning one of Canada's infantry brigades of the first contingent has taken its place in the trenches and it is thought here that to the first or Ontario infantry brigade has fallen that honour. This brigade is composed of the first, second, third and fourth overseas battalions, and is made up entirely of men from the Ontario infantry regiments commanded by Col. M. S. Mercer, of Toronto.

It is quite possible, however, that the 3rd or "the Highland" brigade, commanded by Col. R. E. W. Turner, of Quebec, may be one that has been sent first into action. This brigade includes the 48th Highlanders from Toronto, commanded by Lieut.-Col. John Currie, M.P., and containing many men from other parts of the province. In any event, it is quite evident that many Ontario boys are already in the thick of it, in addition to the Princess Patricias. The general impression here is that Ontario had now better brace herself for the casualty lists which will hit home and very severely.

From the above despatch it looks as the Peterborough boys have had their baptism under fire. The local detachment forms A Company of the 2nd Battalion of the Ontario brigade, in command of Major Geo. W. Bennett, of Peterborough, so that if the Ontario brigade has been in action, the local boys have had their first clash with the Germans.

FRACONIA HAS ARRIVED SAFELY AT LIVERPOOL

Cunard Liner From New York Failed to See Any German Submarines in Her Voyage Across Atlantic

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

Examiner Special:

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 15.—The Cunard liner Fraconia, New York to Liverpool, arrived here to-day without encountering any of the German submarines reported off the west coast of England. Special precautions were taken, however, to guard against attack. The Fraconia sailed from New York February 6th. Each night her port holes and sky lights were blanketed, and only her star board and foremast lights were displayed.

Lookouts were doubled, but the Fraconia's course was not altered. On last Monday night the Fraconia practically hove to all night, and as she was passing through a huge ice floe, her siren sounded all night.

Was Found Dead In His Chair

Mr. Alexander Yetts of Smith Passed Away Suddenly

Mr. Alexander Yetts, of Smith Township, was found dead in a chair in his bedroom at his residence, ot 14, Con. 5, early this morning. He had been suffering from asthma for some time, and instead of going to bed last night he went to sleep in a chair in his room. When the members of the household got up they noticed a light in the room, and going in found that Mr. Yetts had died.

The late Mr. Yetts was well-known in Smith Township, where he has lived for about fifty years. He was born in Scotland seventy-nine years ago, and came to this country when a boy, living for a number of years in the Township of Asphodel. After removing to Smith Township he has travelled quite a lot, visiting a number of places. He never married, and is survived by his sister, Miss Mary Yetts.

The funeral will take place from the late residence, ot 14, Con. 5, Smith Township, at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery for interment. Service will be conducted at the residence at 2 o'clock by Rev. Jas. R. Rollins.

Cossacks Say They Need Only One Arm To Defeat Turks

Petrograd, Feb. 12.—The Cossacks do not hold a very high opinion of the prowess of the Turks, if a story told by a Russian army surgeon recently returned from the front is to be believed.

"Early in the fighting," he said, "I operated upon a Cossack who had lost an arm. When he was about recovered, I asked him what were his plans for the future.

"'I'm going to enlist in the Caucasian army,' was the reply.

"'But how can you with only one arm?' I enquired.

"'We Cossacks don't need more than one arm to beat the Turks,' answered the soldier in all seriousness.

"Since then I have made a practice of asking every Cossack who had to undergo a similar operation as to his intentions and almost invariably I received the same reply."

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.

The third annual pancake social will be held to-morrow evening at St. George's church parish hall. Supper from 6 till 8 p.m., and a concert at 8.15 p.m. All friends of St. George's and St. Alban's Missions are cordially invited.

COMFORTS FOR THE HOSPITAL

Sale May Be Inspected on Wednesday Next

The citizens of Peterborough and any friends interested in the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe, Kent, England, are invited on Wednesday afternoon next, Feb. 17, to the reception room at the armouries to inspect the hall which is to be sent to the hospital. The room will be open from 3.30 o'clock until 5.30. There will be no charge for admittance, but the Peterborough Progressive Club will be glad to receive any donations that may be handed in to help to defray the expense in sending the bale. Any tobacco, socks, mufflers, ec., brought in that day for the comfort of the soldiers can be packed and sent with the things.

Mayor Boller has kindly consented to come in about 4.30 and give a short address. d2

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, FEB. 15, 1915

RESULTS COUNT.

The Toronto News is responsible for saying—"No doubt free trade has greatly injured British agriculture and affected the British workman disadvantageously." How? Such a statement would stand a little more firmly if it were supported by a little proof. To make another assertion. There is no doubt that the conditions of land-tenure in Great Britain have greatly injured British agriculture. But if that is true what does it prove in respect to disparagement of Britain's policy of free trade that has made her the richest country in the world? the banker of the world, the money centre, the centre of influence and power? A trade policy that produces, or permits such results, doesn't seem to be a bad one—for Great Britain; much better perhaps than helping the workingman by taxing his bread. Trade, not taxation, is the way to national wealth, national health and national strength.

BENEFITS OF SYSTEM.

Our "slow-going" British cousins sometimes discredit this character as ascribed to them by more rapid, but in the end less effective nations. Kitchener is a refined type of the British characteristic of throughness and effectiveness combined. He might not, however, be so successful, not be able to do things so promptly and cleanly, if he had not the splendid system of national organization behind him as recently examplified. As an example of the efficiency which characterizes the British railway system, a writer in the Westminster Gazette points out that the expeditionary force was despatched to France eighty trains a day—that is one every twelve minutes from dawn to dark—were booked to arrive at Southampton from all points of the British Isles, and during the ten days or while the embarkation lasted, every single one of those trains arrived according to schedule.

Here is an example of the beauty and usefulness of system made possible by organization. If we could apply something of such system to our municipal administration we should have better results and avoid the waste of effort and waste of money, upon the achievement of ineffectiveness. A smooth-running mcahine is only systematic operation based on organization. If we could persuade our civic rulers to effect organization that would permit the general application of system, we should have infinitely better results from a lesser expenditure of money.

THE AIR SHIP SCARE.

Canada may not be exempt from hostile air raids and it certainly is not exempt from the thrills of threatened air raids that are principally air. The story from Ottawa and Brockville seems to be circumstantial enough in all except results. Ottawa acted wisely in taking precautions against possible dropping of bombs; but the very fact that up to this hour—11:30—a lapse of twelve hours—there are no reports of any dropping of bombs in the Capital is reassuring. If the three aeroplanes had really represented dangerous possibilities they would have done their work without so much delay. That nothing has happened give grounds that nothing was intended to happen. It is more than possible that the whole thing is a scare pure and simple—more imagination than matter.

It is not to be doubted, however, that there are German sympathisers in the United States enough, with access to funds enough, and with willingness enough, to organise a raid on Canada and emulate the exploits of home baby-killers. But in the present state of tension between the relations of the United States and Germany; at a time when an overt act originating in the United States, might convert neutrality into hostility, it seems improbable as it would be dangerous for German sympathisers, for the sake of knocking about some bricks and mortar, and killing a few innocent persons to bring the United States as another and powerful enemy upon Germany's already over-burdened back There is no doubt that such a raid or raids would be inspired and financed by Germany. If the United States permitted hostile raids to be organized on its soil it would also imperil the entente cordiale—popular if not official—that now exists with Great Britain; it would get into more trouble. Switzerland and Holland have objected even to German or other belligerent war ships flyin over their territory; so that the United States would incur a serious responsibility by permitting air-ship raids to be organized within her boundaries.

SPYING REBOUNDS.

The espionage system of Germany has given that country a good many jolts—showing that the German refuge of spies corresponds to, and is equivalent to the Scriptural "refuge of lies." Repeatedly the war lords hvae been fooled to their undoing by the false reports of their spies. Another instance of the unreliability and lie-ability of the German spies is the battleship Lion, which was the chief factor in sinking the German warship Blucher in the North Sea. We read in Bernhardi's latest book, the following disparagement of the Lion, based on the reports of German spies:

The latest English ships have not come up ot expectations, and some have shown grave defects. This applies particularly to the ships Orion and Lion. But also the first Dreadnoughts are defective. It is obvious that England will find it extremely difficult to obtain a decisive victory over Geamany on the sea.

The German spy system and her blundering diplomacy founded upon it, are responsible for the war, and will be responsible for Germany's undoing, and furnish another instance of "The engineer hoist with his own petard." Encouraged by false information as to the resources, naval and military, of her enemies, she brought on the war. She has also miscalculated Britain's naval strength and resources on land and sea. British Dreadnoughts have fully come up to expectations, except in the matter of opportunity of getting a chance at the low-lying German navy. With all of Germany's sea sniping the British navy is stronger to-day than when the war opened. The Audacious, which was injured in the Irish Sea by a mine or torpedo, is now sound and afloat, as powerful as ever. The Queen Elizabeth, 2,000 tons heavier than the Audacious, the greatest battleship ever built, has splendidly passed her trial and is now at Portsmouth with her full crew on board. She makes 25 knots an hour, and is specially armoured to risist aeroplane attacks.

Meet your friends at the Carnival Tuesday evening, Brock Street Rink.

The Newspaper For Good Results

Magazine Advertising Proves Unsatisfactory

The great advertising campaign inaugurated last July by the National Commercial Gas Association for the purpose of popularizing the use of gas and gas appliances has come to an untimely end after a career of six months.

The cause of its failure was the use of magazines, national mediums, instead of newspapers, local mediums.

Probably in recent years there has not been a more significant advertising fizzle scored by any public service association than that of the National Commercial Gas Association. So far as results were concerned, they were of a most disappointing character.

The idea of undertaking an advertising campaign was first suggested at the annual convention of the National Commercial Gas Association two years ago. A committee appointed to report upon the matter at a later meeting recommended that a fund of $250,000 be raised to carry on the campaign.

Finally it was decided that mediums of national circulation should be employed. Therefore the experienced advertisers among the members of the association raised their voices in protest. They contended that as gas was a local product it should be advertised in local mediums.

Robert Livingston, the advertising manager of the Consolidated Gas Company, who has probably had more experience in gas advertising than any other representative of a gas company, predicted that the campaign would be a failure if carried out on the lines adopted. He contended that the money should be spent in the newspapers because they reached possible consumers; that the getting of business was a local proposition, and that the local company could not profit by any advertising done outside its field.—Editor and Publisher.

The Call to Make Made-in-Canada Journeys

Five thousand pleasure trips to New York, Boston or Philadelphia are made each year by persons living in Montreal or Toronto. They go to see the latest plays, to get a glimpse of a gayer world, to visit the big stores of metropolitan cities. They spend each on an average at least a hundred dollars, that is five hundred thousand dollars into the already fat pockets of Uncle Sam.

No one blames anyone for seeking a change of air. Indeed if one deserves blame, it is he who sits at home twiddling his thumbs. We need an occasional change for the sake of our bodies and for the sake of our brains, but why not in these times take our airings East or West or North instead of South? Why not make little journeys through our own fair Dominion?

When we come back from New York what do we bring with us? A vague memory of bright lights, of rather expensive dinners, of coastly taxicabs, or seven hundred and thirty-two tips to waiters, we never want to see again, of a hotel bill—Gee whizz!—what a bill!—of being lost in the big crowd. Did we buy anything? Yes, a new hat and a coat and a few souvenirs, but the money went so fast we did not buy all we wanted, besides we were afraid of the customs.

Now, come to think of it, wouldn't a hundred dollars spent on a little journey through Canada give just as much to remember that was worth remembering? Wouldn't it give us an added pride in this great country of ours?

We have much to be proud of. There is the Evangeline country and the Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia; there is the lovely St. John Valley from Fredericton to St. John, the city of Loyalists; there is old Quebec, the fortress city guarding the great St. Lawrence. Then up North are the Laurentians, which, with their lakes and mountains and good fishing, are playgrounds without rival. What is there South of the line to equal the shores of the St. Lawrence from Montreal to Toronto, the Picturesque Capital City of Ottawa, the jolly Summer life in the Muskokas, or the Kawartha Lakes, or along Lake Huron, the backwoods north of Lake Superior, Winnipeg and the thousand miles of golden grain stretching to the Rockies, or the five hundred miles of snow-capped peaks, of preciptous canyons, and foaming torrents which lie between the prairies and the Pacific Coast?

Surely we have here within our own gates the grandest country in the world. Let our travel this year be made in Canada. Uncle Sam won't miss us. Indeed he will probably come up himself to see our beautiful country and envy us our splendid heritage.—Southam Press.

Temperance Women Denounce "Wet" Canteen

The following resolution was telegraphed to Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, from the officers of the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union:

It is with amazement and alarm that we learn of the re-establishment of the "Wet Canteen," in the Canadian contingent, and the British War Office have the consent of your Government in so doing.

We desire to point out that this is poor encouragement to the mothers of Canada, to give their sons in this awful war,—for most of us have greater dread of the effects of strong drink upon our boys than of German bullets.

We hope your Government will make an early pronouncement to show that you have kept, and intend to keep faith, with the mothers of Canada.

Signed on behalf of the officers:

Mrs. E. A. Stevens, President.
Mrs. Helen Detlor, Cor.-Sec.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Wheat collapsed in price today 9½c a bushel, the most sensational break since the beginning of the war. Almost complete arrest of export sales had much to do with forcing speculative holders to unload for a short time on a gigantic scale. Rallies followed, but the market closed extremely nervous, 5 1-8c to 5 1-4c lower than Thursday night. Other net losses were corn 7-8c to 2-4c, oats 3-4c to 1c and provisions 10c to 20c.

Cornmeal—Yellow, 90-lb sacks, in car lots, $2.20; in small lots, $2.50.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 13.—The wheat market today was nervous and excited, and fluctuations were wide, with prices on the down-trend. May wheat was sold at from $1.50 to $1.54½, and July at from $1.51½ to $1.54½. The decline for the week on wheat was 9¾c to 7½c, and on oats 1¼c to 1⅝c.

The cash demand was fair for all grades of wheat, and a keen demand for No. 1 northern was in evidence at Port William Oats of the lower grades were wanted, while flax was quiet. Offerings generally were fair. Millers were buying cash wheat of all grades up to No. 5, and reported at the same time fair sales of flour Inspections totaled 179 cars, as against 97 last year, and in sight were 230 on Saturday.

POINCARE IN ALSACE.

Flags Hidden Since 1870 Used To Decorate the Houses.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—President Poincare and Minister of War Millerand, who are on a tour of inspection of the western battle front, were received enthusiastically by the people of Alsace. Tears of joy streamed down the faces of the older inhabitants, while younger persons, dressed in the national Alsatian costume, presented hand-made gifts to the French chief executive. The houses in the province were decorated with tri-color flags which had been hidden in Alsace since 1870. The mayors of the various towns expressed their gratitude at the deliverance by France in voices choked with emotion.

President Poincare inspected the French trenches and decorated several officers and men for valor.

The President said that he was well satisfied with the healthy appearance of the troops and he also commended the remarkable strength and cunning of the fortifications.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that an application will be made by the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation for the Diocese of Peterborough in Ontario, Canada, to the Legislature of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act amending the Act of Incorporation of the said Corporation, passed in the Forty-Sixth Reign of Her Late Majesty Queen Victoria, Chapter 65, so as to enlarge the powers of the said Corporation, to borrow moneys on the security of Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange and for such purposes to make, draw, endorse, become a party to and deliver Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange, without the necessity of affixing the Corporate Seal thereto.

The reason for the enlargement of the powers of the said Corporation as aforesaid, is that it requires to borrow moneys from time to time for its purposes in various sums and on such terms of repayment as to render it highly inconvenient to execute and deliver mortgage securities on the real estate of the said Corporation.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—I was glad to read in last night's Examiner that raffles and lotteries are now being placed in the catalogue of "criminal offences," a place that should have been assigned to them long ago.

It grieves me, however, to notice that our clever Crown Attorney has made one exception.

Hockey may be raised for charitable purposes, a "shadow of law."

I am reminded of the fourth minister who blamelessly left the pulpit of his people: "Weel friends, the kirk is verra badly in need of siller, and as ye're unco fond of siller, and as we will have failed if you do not contribute we will have to see what a bazaar can do for us." To my mind, it is time that the funds both of churches and charitable institutions, should be raised honestly.—Yours, etc.

J. M. SLIMON.

Baptist Parsonage, Lakefield.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR MR. IRVING

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—If man has a storehouse soul, will Mr. Irving give us one text through which Paul, when he says that "absent from the body, we are present with the Lord," will Mr. Irving tell us what Paul means by "Gain," if not "Heaven"? Paul says, also, that "I will not be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." Paul says, also, "I wish you to remember this to the Ephesian elders, that the remains of Jesus must DO Paul leave the body of Jesus

COULD NOT GO TEN STEPS

FOR THE PAIN IN HIS KIDNEYS.

When you get a pain in the back you may rest assured that it comes from derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back should be strong and well.

Doan's Kidney Pills regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist. What more needs to be said? While Doan's Kidney Pills are not a "balm for every ill that flesh is heir to," they are a positive, never-failing remedy for every disease that has its inception in the improper action in those delicate little filters of the blood, the kidneys.

Mr. Adelard Cleroux, Eganville, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for four years. They were so bad, at times, I could not go ten steps for the pain they caused me. My doctor could not do me any good. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought five boxes, and now I have been cured for over three years. I will recommend them to whoever may be suffering from kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

and allow his spirit to jump out of his body and walk to Colosse? This must be the meaning if Mr. Irving's idea is correct. Paul, however, was alive when he said these words—not dead. Remember this, Mr. Irving.

He referred in one of his sermons to Isaiah 14. 9, to prove there was a place of torture beneath the earth. Will Mr. Irving read the margin of his Bible which gives the correct Hebrew and he will notice that the word "Hell" means the grave in that scripture, and therefore when it says that Hell (the grave) from beneath is moved to meet thee at thy coming, no doubt Mr. Irving will see that his proof text doesn't fit. The grave will be moved when Christ comes, and this text proves a resurrection at Christ coming and not a present hell fire.

We would like also to ask Mr. Irving if his pet theory, "Once in grace always in grace," be true, why it was that Judas fell from grace, also Esau? And how does he get rid of Ezekiel 18. 24?—Yours truly,

Confirmation At St. John's

Right Reverend Bishop Reeve Performed the Rites Yesterday

The holy rite of Confirmation was performed by Right Reverend Bishop Reeve in St. John's Church, yesterday morning. There was a very large congregation and candidates to the number of forty-five were confirmed, twenty-three girls and women and twenty-two youths and men. Two of the women candidates were from St. George's parish. In the afternoon a young man from St. John's, who is confined to his home, through illness, was confirmed at the sick-bed. The candidates included a number of representative people of the City. Special confirmation hymns were sung and the service was very impressive.

The Bishop addressed the candidates and preached the sermon, taking for his text part of the 15th verse of the 3rd Chapter in The Gospel according to St. Mathew: "For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." He said there was a very close comparison with the passage, and the Confirmation service, and that was why he chose those words as his text.

Bishop Reeve spoke at length upon confirmation, why we ought to be confirmed, and what ought to follow confirmation. We ought first to be confirmed because it was Apostolic origin, Scriptural in character, continuous in its practice. It was a service of prayer from beginning to end. Above all it was a service of blessing.

What Ought to Follow.

Many people had an objection to confirmation. They did not see where they would be benefitted or where they would be better by being confirmed. They argued that they could receive the same blessing in another way. When our Blessed Lord presented Himself before John for baptism, John said: "I have need of baptism of Thee." The Lord's answer was to suffer it to be so now for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. He knew it was the right thing to do, when he observed an ordinance of that kind. He did it for the sake of others. For the sake of an example it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness as well.

Looking on the Lord's conduct and what followed, we could understand what should follow confirmation. When He came up ou of the water after his baptism, the Heavens opened unto him and the Spirit of God came upon Him. He also had the acknowledgment of God as His Blessed Son. We might take the example of the Lord for ourselves. We were to come for a confirmation not only as a Church ordinance but for the blessing which would follow. The indwelling of God the Father, God the Son, and God, the Holy Ghost, would help us and keep us. God would do His part and it but remained to do our part, trustfully, earnestly and truly. If we yielded ourselves to Him we need to have no doubt about the blessing.

We were not to expect a visible expression as was presented to our Lord but there should be a visible expression in our lives.

If assailed by doubt or temptation the Spirit of God would always be with us. If in the face of temptation we felt weak and trembling we could look up to that help which would be given unto us by God. The Spirit would be a guide, a support, would be a Spirit of discernment helping us to choose the right thing when we were at the parting of the ways, as it were. The effect would be according to the Spirit that worked in us. It might be that some time in our lives we would have a bitter cup to drink. That was where the love and affection of the Spirit of our Heavenly Father came in. If He did not remove the cross He would give us the strength to bear it.

"Centenary Peace Celebration" In Charlotte St. Methodist Church

"Behold How Good and How Pleasant it is for Brethren to Dwell Together in Unity."

"Two empires by the sea,
Two nations, great and free,
One anthem raise.
One race of ancient fames,
One tongue, one faith we claim,
One God, whose glorious name
We love and praise."

The morning service of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, yesterday, was of a special nature, commemorating as it did "One Hundred Years of Peace" between the two great English speaking nations of the world. The Canadian Ensign and "Old Glory" were draped side by side behind the pulpit and on the face of the organ. The Choir rendered music appropriate to the occasion.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson took as his text, Isaiah 11:9 — "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea"; also Micah 4:3, "And He shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Some time ago the Executive of the Canadian and American Peace Associations decided on February 14th as a fitting day on which to celebrate the century of peace that has blessed the relations between Canada and the United States, ever since the Treaty of Ghent which was signed on Christmas Eve, 1814, and finally ratified at Washington one hundred years ago this week.

To some it may seem strange to celebrate peace, when the world is at war, but Mr. Wilson was of the opinion that this very fact makes it all the more suggestive, that England and United States, in so far as Canada is concerned, are wholly unprepared for war.

The civilization of the Anglo-Saxon is commercial, rather than warlike. "The Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." These two quotations might be taken as a compendium of the relation between two Christian nations.

The greatest achievement on the North American continent to-day lies—not in her vast network of railways, not in her world-wide commerce, but in the marvellous fact that two nations of the proudest, most ambitious breed, have lived side by side, peaceably, for one hundred years, without a fortification of any kind along their three or four thousand miles of imaginary boundary line.

There have been numerous occasions for war, but they were differences of head and not of heart. Truly, peace rules the day when reason rules the mind.

Both nations have had cause for hostilities many times. During the American Civil War, England gave many signs of favouring the South, but there was one masterful hand in Britain, Queen Victoria, who favoured the Union.

Chaplain Searle, in addressing a large public meeting after the war, referred to Victoria as the "Saviour of the Union."

Since the settlement of the Alabama claims and the claims on account of the Fenian raids into Canada, there have arisen the Venzeuelan affair, and President Cleveland's ultimatum to Britain, an ultimatum that would not have been taken from any other nation without retaliation; the Atlantic Fishery disputes which were settled at The Hague; different boundary awards, and even within the last few weeks the shooting of the duck hunters; all of which have been amicably settled; while wars in other parts of the world have been going on all the time caused by provocations no greater, and, in many cases, much less. Europe, on the other hand, thinks that disputes cannot be settled without the sword.

The last war was caused by the famous Berlin Decree of Napoleon, declaring a blockade of all England's ports, (on paper). In retaliation, England declared a blockade of France and her allies, and it turned out a real blockade; (how history repeats itself!). This brought great trouble with United States, which was aggravated by England searching all American vessels for deserters. Accordingly the Democratic party, which was always unfriendly to Britain, declared war on the 18th of June, 1812. The Republicans, however, were adverse to the war, and on the day of the declaration all the ships in Boston harbour carried their flags at half-mast.

The war party relied upon the disaffection of the provinces of the Dominion, but as one man they joined forces against their enemy, even the American emigrants being most loyal to the flag.

The conflict was brought to a close by the Treaty of Ghent, but not before our beloved General Brock had been sacrificed at Queenston Heights. His body was buried with military honours at Fort George, the British flag, as well as the American flag, across the river, being at half-mast. Since then we have witnessed many examples of true friendship between the two countries.

It was only a "scrap of paper," but it was signed by two self-respecting nations, and has been faithfully kept. We entertain no fear of hostility.

The European nations declare: "In time of peace prepare for war," and we now see the very flower of their manhood being ruthlessly slaughtered on the battlefields.

The nations of the North American continent, by their example, teach the world that the only civilization that can stand is that based on the Gospel of Jesus Christ. "Peace on earth, good will to men."

Some would have us believe that a long peace has a tendency to weaken a nation; yet our soldiers are successfully holding in check the best trained army the world has ever seen since the time of Caesar.

War, sometimes is necessary. We as a free born people, would rather die than give up our liberty; better be bleeding conquerors than bleeding slaves. We love peace, but not peace at any price.

Germany, for the last thirty-five years, have rejected the teachings of the Man of Galilee; they have dethroned Christ, and enthroned Odin. They say "Let the weak perish, the strong have a right to the earth."

Viewing bleeding Belgium and Poland, we realize that nothing can bring peace, but the triumph of principles, when the cross of the great Peace Maker shall have triumphed over the War Lords that devastate the earth, when the kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdom of God, as pictured by John in his remarkable revelation: "And I, John, saw a new heaven and a new earth; the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven . . . And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

—Paul Penman.

ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED

Rev. Dr. Young, of Toronto, Was the Special Preacher at George Street Methodist

Large congregations turned out yesterday to hear Rev. Dr. Young, of Toronto, who preached at both morning and evening services in George Street Methodist Church. The occasion of Dr. Young's visit to his former pastorate was the forty-ninth anniversary of the church. Ephesians 4:21, formed the keynote of the speaker's remarks at the evening service. He laid particular emphasis upon the last sentence of the verse, which reads: "As the truth is in Jesus."

"We have many forms of truth," said the speaker. "We have mathematical truths, philosophical truths, and political truths. The latter always in our own party. The word truth is a most comprehensive term and comes from many sources. Our text speaks of truth from Jesus. There is a close relation to truth and the teacher, the sermon and the preacher. The closer the relation the more effective the teaching, and the more powerful the sermon. In a sense never equalled by any preacher did Christ achieve the art of applying truth to the people. We discover truth not by studying Greek, theories or even the creeds of the apostles. Such creeds represent the expressions of certain men who existed in the sixth century. We may take them as a guide or comparison, but the real truths is that as laid down in Christ."

Continuing Dr. Young said: "We are living in what has been called an age of enquiry or an age of doubt. The greater part of life is taken up in trying to reason out the whys of life. It is possible to doubt or speculate upon certain problems concerning the fundamental principles of Christianity and retain purity and integrity in life, but not upon those which effect our moral status. Right and Wrong constitute two fundamental facts that have been pressed home to us since infancy. When we moved out into the world we expected to find the same broad line distinguishing these two facts but instead, found that they were so intermingled as to make it difficult to determine the difference. There is a difference between right and wrong which nothing can eliminate. Never were we in greater need of the message of truth as to-day. 'Why do we live?' is a question that is often asked. I can readily understand the man who has made a success in life standing on the threshold of eternity and saying—'life is not a riddle,' but not so the man whose life has been a failure and who has had to fight his way against apparently insurmountable odds. Belief in the truth as laid down by Jesus, even though life may appear to be a failure, proves itself a mighty success by reason of its tendency to lift men up. Lest anyone should doubt the truth of the eternal life let his mind wander back to the first Easter morn when Christ stood at His own sepulchre and said: 'Behold I am alive forever.' That is the real truth in Jesus."

Operations On A Minor Scale

Only Two Engagements of Importance—Enemy Occupying Town of Norray

PARIS, Feb. 15.—Military operations in France and Flanders continue on a minor scale, the infrequency of important fighting surprising the military critics who had expected a resumption of hostilities of a violent nature while the Germans and the Russians were locked in a desperate struggle on the eastern front.

The official communique of the French War Office to-day tell of only two operations of moment, one in Lorraine, near Pont-a-Mousson, where the enemy occupied the town of Norroy, against which strong counter-attacks are being sent, and the other in the Champagne district, where the Germans have again bombarded Rheims.

The night communique announced that the fighting at Norroy continues. In addition to trying to drive the Germans from the town the French troops are endeavouring to recapture a nearby hill on which the enemy had gained a foothold.

The fighting yesterday consisted entirely of artillery actions, with the exception of an attack on the allied outposts at Signal de Avea, near Pompe-Mousson, which resulted, according to the evening statement, in a slight advantage for the Germans and of an unimportant encounter in the valley of the Leuch.

"One Hundred Years of Peace"

Subject of Splendid Sermon at St. Andrew's Last Night

The Rev. Mr. Rollins chose as his text I. Samuel, 20:16, "So Jonathan made a covenant with the House of David," but intimated that the real text was to be found in current newspapers and magazines, and on the lips of men and women:

"One hundred years of peace, the outcome of a covenant made one hundred years ago, magic words against a background of war, not among all nations of the earth, but between two kindred peoples, whose flags lie in friendly embrace.

One hundred years ago the horizon was storm swept just as it is to-day The war of 1812 may have enriched our history with a series of magnificent victories, but the greatest victory was the treaty which ended the conflict. That treaty did not secure the terms which were deemed absolutely necessary; each party to it modified their demands again and again until little was left of the original contentions except the wish for peace.

Neither had been exhausted by the war, neither had to give up. Great Britain had been engaged in a titanic struggle with Napoleon. America's European trade had been ruined as a result of Napoleon's famous Berlin decree, which declared a blockade of all British ports. A situation was created remarkably like the one that has developed to-day, against which United States has entered a vigorous protest, as she did then.

Respecting the interference with commerce the United States had as great a grievance against France as against Great Britain, but Britain not only investigated the cargoes of American ships for contraband of war, but claimed the right to search American ships for deserters from the British navy, maintaining that once a man is a subject of the King, he is always a subject. This naturally worked great hardship to the Americans, and they insisted on its abandonment. This, more than anything else, was the cause of the war. Yet, not a word about it is to be found in the treaty. Britain, on the other hand, demanded the creation of a buffer state west of the Mississippi for the protection of the Indians, yet no such state was created, and not a word concerning it is to be found in the treaty.

It did, however, provide for the cessation of hostilities, the release of prisoners, the restoration to each of all losses, peace with the Indian tribes, and the appointment of a boundary commission to define the line between Canada and United States. It was signed Christmas Eve, 1814, in the City of Ghent, but in those days news did not travel as fast as it does now, and the final shot was not fired till January 8th, 1815.

Three years later another treaty was made whereby the boundary between Canada and United States was disarmed, and the fleets on the Great Lakes reduced to four boats of a kind that would not do much harm, and for one hundred years not a shot has been fired across a line of four thousand miles, stretching over hill and dale, over mountain and valley, over rolling prairie and rolling water; a boundary line longer than all the lines of Europe, upon which millions of money have been spent on forts and war equipment, and vast sums each year for maintenance, and which have not prevented Europe from becoming a veritable shambles to-day.

During these long years there have arisen many sharp differences, but for the most part we have kept our heads, as well as our tongues, which has tended to increase our respect and confidence in each other.

While the Government of the United States is endeavouring to maintain neutrality in the present conflict we have no doubt of their attitude to us and our cause.

It will do no harm for us to see more of each other. It is remarkable how personal acquaintance, along with a sympathetic recognition of each other's idiosyncrasies or peculiarities work for peace, tending to build up a solid body of good will. Common ancestry, a common tongue, and ties of blood are not lightly severed.

During the Spanish American war it was feared that the European nations might become embroiled in it, until Great Britain let it be known with whom she would throw in her lot.

We are realizing more and more the great fact that we stand for the same things, cherish very largely the same ideals and aspirations.

Before us the two flags of the Anglo-Saxon peoples of the world: One, for a thousand years, has braved the battle and the breeze; has inspired men to deeds of heroism, and has floated in the interest of peace and liberty, offering protection to those who have sought its shelter; the other a glorious flag also, with its blue and white and red, with its stars and stripes, that emblem of liberty and union.

As the speaker looked down the long vista of years ahead, he wondered if we would ever see the blending of these two flags into one ensign, with not a colour missing, not a star nor a cross wanting, a flag to float over the Anglo-Saxon fraternity in the interest of peace for the whole world.

The thought is good enough to come true.

May we so live with our great neighbour that it will be impossible for any exigency to arise which will force us to settle the dispute by recourse to arms. May the peace of one hundred years grow into a peace of one thousand years.

"O God of love, O King of peace!
Make wars throughout the world to cease;
The wrath of sinful men restrain,
Give peace, O God, give peace again!"

War Expenditures To Be Legalized

Municipalities Will Be Authorized to Issue Debentures

Reeve Bertram, one of the members of the Executive of the Onatrio Municipal Association, states that the Hon. W. J. Hanna had given the members of the executive of that association an assurance that both the direct and indirect war expenditures made would be legalized. The direct expenditure to cases where relief work is given to unemployed. In the latter cases, if it is desired to issue debentures, a copy of the by-law must be submitted to the clerk of the private bills committee of the Legislaure for sanction.

Go with the crowd Tuesday evening. Carnival Brock Street Rink.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The postponed meeting of the Finance committee will be held this evening at 8 o'clock.

It has been decided to hold a men's mass meeting in the Empire Theatre Sunday afternoon next at 4.15 o'clock. Mr. H. H. Stevens, M.P., of Vancouver, will address the meeting, using for his subject, "Canada's Duty to Her Immigrants." Mr. Stevens is considered the leading authority in the Dominion on the subject of immigration, and is a very enthusiastic and entertaining speaker, so it is expected that the theatre will be filled to its full capacity.

Mr. Alexander Mowat, School Inspector, addressed the Life Problem Club of the Association, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Mowats address was on the development of the countries of the world of the past century along the line of Nationalism and Liberalism. He showed that the spirit of the past century as well as the present time was looking towar self-government on the part of the common people.

Mr. Mowat showed that Great Britain leads the world in the development of Democratic government and in all but exceptional cases, gives the common people the right to govern themselves. Russia's development along this line has been slow, but since the Japanese-Russian war considerable progress has been made.

Austria had been making some progress toward popular government before the war. France has attained a very high development along this line.

Germany, controlled by the Prussian military spirit, has placed but very little power in the hands of the common people. The Kaiser feels he is accountable only to God for his actions. The German ministers are not accountable to the people, but to the Kaiser only. Therefore it is only natural that Germany could not be in sympathy with the popular government of the other countries of the world.

Mr. Mowat did not belittle the development of the German people, for he says that in education they rank very high, but the course of the German people is the Prussian rule.

Taking a look into the future Mr. Mowat expressed his opinion that the war up to the present is only a preliminary to the warfare that we will see this coming summer. He believes that Germany will be driven back to her own boundary, but as she has so thoroughly entrenched herself, it will require a great investment of men and money before she is subjected.

Mr. Mowat's address was of the greatest educational value to the young men who listened to it and a hearty vote of thanks was given to him.

Big fun at the Carnival, Mardi gras, Tuesday evening, Brock Street Rink.

To Encircle With Mines

Germany Aims to Surround British Isles

SPECIAL CABLE:

CHRISTINA, Feb. 14.—Reports from Germany printed in Scandinavian newspapers indicate that the German naval authorities regard the painting of national colours on neutral ships to be an insufficient precaution, since the greatest danger threatened is not from torpedoes, but from mines. It is intended to scatter mines from German submarines especially constructed for the purpose, and the plan will be vigorously pursued in all parts of the proclaimed area.

DISCUSS PLAN FOR REBUILDING BELGIUM

LONDON, Feb. 13.—A comprehensive plan for the rebuilding of towns and cities of Belgium was discussed at the opening to-day of the International Conference of Garden Cities.

"From the ashes of the devastated towns and cities there shall arise a newer and finer Belgium," said Mr. Herbert Samuel, president of the Local Government Board. "Among the 200,000 refugees who were welcomed to England there are about two hundred architects. Our idea is to bring them together and to place at their disposal our experience for the development of Belgian towns along modern lines."

Delegates at the conference include representatives of the United States, France, Holland and Spain.

THE BARRIE BUILDING WILL BE COMPLETED BY END OF MARCH

Twenty-nine Offices included in its Interior—A Number of Them Have Already Been Taken—Modern Office Conveniences Provided.

SOME OF THE DETAILS

The completion of the Barrie Building is expected by the end of March. Since Christmas the work has been pushed along steadily, and the building has gradually developed about its steel skeleton. Some delay in the shipment of ornate tile from the Old Country has held up the construction of the front, but with the arrival of the tile this week, the entire exterior will soon be finished.

In the meantime the interior work has been progressing rapidly. The heating, plumbing and electric wiring are practically completed. A vacuum cleaner process for all the offices and stores in the block is being installed. The elevator machinery has arrived and is being erected. As soon as the front is closed in, the plastering will be undertaken, all the partitions having been already put in.

A Splendid Front.

The accompanyin gillustration taken from the architect's plans gives a good idea of the fine appearance the Barrie Building will make. The front presents a wide expanse of glass, which will admit a flood of light from the west. The other sides of the building have been as generously provided with lighting facilities. Glaze tile, glass and bronze constitute the only materials used on the entire facade, and the main effect of the harmony of bronze and tile can be appreciated only in the finished structure.

Offices Rented.

The building includes two stores, one of which will be used by Barries Ltd., twenty-nine offices which can be rented singly or in suites and the Barrie factory on the fourth floor. It is understood that some of the offices have already been rented and others are under contemplation. The plans may be seen in the present store occupied by Barries Ltd., at the corner of Brock and George Streets. All modern conveniences and office ideas are offered in the new building. The basement extends under the sidewalk and is lighted by prism gratings. A lane on the south side permits access to the rear, where a goods elevator has been provided to accommodate all floors. It might be remarked that the basement will be thoroughly equipped and lighted for store purposes.

Passenger Elevator.

A glance at the illustration again shows the two twenty-five frontage stores with the intervening entrance to the offices on the second and third floors. A modern passenger elevator service is being provided, the whole accommodation being built after the ideas employed in the big city "sky-scrapers."

May Complete Lot.

It has been stated that the owner of the south half of the lot on which the Barrie Building has been erected, recently intimated that he was prepared to build a similar block as soon as the demand warranted it. With the promise of a tenant for one of the main stores he will undertake the work. In any case, it should not be long until this property is entirely built up. It is generally admitted that the Charlotte Street section is exerting an increasing influence and is regarded as a strong contender with the older and more established blocks on George Street.

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Fire, Water and Light Committee has practically decided to eliminate from the estimates summer uniforms for the firemen. This is the same policy that was carried out last year.

Prima Facie Evidence.

Hanging in the hose-tower at the Central Fire Station is a fifty-foot length of hose in two pieces. Fire Chief Howard claims that it was cut in two by a street car at a recent fire. The Chief showed it to the Fire, Water and Light Committee Friday.

The Estimates.

Friday afternoon the estimates for the Fire Department received their initial baptism of fire at the hands of the Fire, Water and Light Committee. This is only a preliminary to the knock-out blow that they will receive later on.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

Leave of Absence.

Dr. Roberts, Medical Health Officer of Hamilton has been given indefinite leave of absence by the City Council. He has been appointed Captain in the 2nd Stationary Field Hospital, Canadian Overseas Force.

LENTEN REGULATIONS WERE READ YESTERDAY

And Bishop O'Brien Authorized a Collection for the Belgians on Sunday Next.

The regulations for Lent which begins on Wednesday of this week were read in the three Catholic churches of the city. Included with this letter from Bishop O'Brien to all the clergy of the diocese of Peterborough was a communication authorizing a special collection for the relief of the Belgians to be taken up on Sunday next. His Lordship touched upon the sacrifice King Albert's people had made, their present dependence upon the charity of the world and other reasons coming right home to Canadians which should impel them to give within their means to this collection.

Copies of Cardinal Mercier's pastoral letter were distributed among the three congregations.

VILLAGE OF NONOY FALLS INTO HANDS OF THE ENENY

Paris and Berlin Reports Agree That There Has Been a Desperate Struggle on the Banks of the Moselle

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The most severe fighting of the day in the western area occurred in Lorraine. From both the Paris and Berlin official reports it would appear that the Germans have had the better of the struggle.

Desperate fighting is in progress to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, where the Germans already have captured the village of Norroy and obtain a footing on the surrounding heights, having occupied what is known as "Hill 365." The Berlin report states that 151 French prisoners were captured in the actions in this vicinity. Paris is silent on the question of losses, but the midnight offical report admits that heavy fighting is in progress, with the result in doubt. The acknowledgment is made that the Germans occupy Norroy, but it is stated that counter-attacks are being directed against them.

In Alsace, according to the Paris statement, the Germans have begun an offensive throught the valley of the River Lauch. Two columns are reported as advancing along the north and south banks of the river. French ski patrols have hampered the advance of these troops, according to Paris, but outpost fighting already has occurred and contact of the main armies is but a matter of hours. Singularly the Berlin official report makes no mention of this new movement.

Yesterday's report from the French War Office said:

"From the seat of the Meuse no infantry action is reported. There have been artillery duel in Belgium, between the Oise and the Aisne and in Champagne.

"In Lorraine, in the region of Pont-a-Mousson we have delivered a counter-attack against the enemy who had occupied Norroy and who had gained a foothold on a neighboring height. The engagement continues.

"No late advices have been received respecting the operations in the valley of the Lauch, in which the advance posts are engaged."

"In Belgium, the bombardment of Nieuport-Les-Bains, of our trenches in the dunes, and of the City of Ypres continued. Our artillery delivered a counter bombardment of the enemy's batteries.

"From the Lys to the Aisne there were intermittent cannonades. Near Nouiette a detachment of the enemy which attempted to advacne upon our trenches was stopped short by the fire of our infantry.

"In Champagne there has been quite intense activity on the part of the enemy's artillery upon our front, before Rheims. The city has been again bombarded. Our fire upon the German trenches appears to have accomplished good results.

"From the Argonne to the Moselle the day was calm. In Lorraine German forces moved against those of our advanced elemnets which occupy the signal station at Xon, northeast of Pont-a-Mousson. The results of the battle are not yet known.

"In Alsace the enemy has taken the offensive through the valley of the Lauch with two columns, advancing along the north and south banks of the river. The march of these troops is reported to have been delayed and impeded by our ski patrols. They are now in contact with our most advanced line.

"A violent snowstorm is raging in the Vosges."

NEW DREADNOUGHT IS NOW READY

Queen Elizabeth Passes Tests and Takes Crew of the Audacious

LONDON, Feb. 15—H. M. S. Queen Elizabeth, Britain's newest Dreadnought, passed her trials last week, and is now waiting at Portland with her full crew on board. She is a ship of 27,500 tons, 2,000 tons more than the Audacious, whose crew she has taken over. She carries eight fifteen-inch guns and 16 six-inch with 12 anti-airship guns and four submerged torpedo tubes. She was built at Portsmouth, and was completed in October last. The Queen Elizabeth is equipped with Parsons turbines, and burns only oil. She is heavily armored against aerial attack and the estimated cost is $12,000,000. The designer estimates she will make 25 knots.

COMMANDEERED OAT SUPPLY

German Government Will Take Over Food Supply for Horses

BERLIN, Feb. 15.—(Via London.)—The Bundesrath yesterday decided to expropriate all the domestic stocks of oats, with the exception of seed oats and the grain necessary for fodder for horses. The order becomes effective to-morrow.

The Bundesrath also raised the maximum price of oats by 50 marks ($12.50) per metric ton.

The action of the Bundesrath, of federal council, in expropriating the domestic stocks of oats is a further step in the direction of the German Government's policy of conserving the food supply of the country. On Jan. 26 the federal council ordered the seizure by Feb. 1 of all stocks of corn, wheat and flour.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Herbie Reynolds, who died Friday, Jan. 15th, 1915.

(By F. A. Conners.)

In a little snow-white casket,
In the corner near the wall,
Lies the form of little Herbie,
Who has answered to the call;
It was the voice of Jesus,
As he said, "Come unto Me,"
And Herbie answered softly,
"Yes Lord I'll follow Thee."

He is gone to be with Jesus,
In that land of light and love,
Where with Jesus all the ransomed,
Are gathered safe above;
And we'll go some day to join him;
In that mansion bright and fair
Where we'll never know earth's sorrows,
And there'll be no parting there.

Now there comes to you this message,
Who are here and well to-day,
They're the precious words of Jesus,
And to you they softly say,
"Come unto Me ye weary,
And I will give you rest,"
Take My easy yoke upon you,
And your soul shall then be blest.

We are passing, swiftly passing,
As the hours speed away,
We may be gone to-morrow,
Who are here and well to-day,
So to you I bring this message,
Now beneath His chastening rod,
Make ye ready for the journey,
"Prepare to meet thy God."

In loving memory of Herbie's birthday, Feb. 15th, 1915, by the family.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF SAINT VALENTINE

The Origin of the Day and the Customs Which Its Observance Has Rendered Popular Are Interesting

Yesterday was the Feast of Saint Valentine, the patron saint of love. The origin of the day and the customs which its observance has rendered popular are interesting. Saint Valentine is believed to have been a bishop who suffered martyrdom under Claudius II. at Rome, or according to others, under Aurelian in 271 A.D. on February 14 th.

The old idea was that the birds began to mate on that day; hence the practice of young people choosing their "valentines" on that day by sending missives of an amatory or satirical nature, generally anonymously. The day was formerly very generally observed in Great Britain, but it has now fallen very largely into disuse. In the United States and Canada it is an occasion of much amusement to children and young people and various cards and mottoes are exchanged. A similar custom once prevailed in France on the first Sunday in Lent. It is thought that it might have been a remnant of the pagan festival in honour of Pan and Juno.

Probably the greatest change in the quality and character of "valentines" has been noted within the last ten or twenty years. For a long time previous to this practically the only valentines which could be purchased in America were grotesque and often insulting caricatures which were intended to lampoon in a most objectionable manner the one to whom it was intended to be sent.

Gradually, however, these odious valentines have been supplanted by more artistic and less acrimonious creations. As a matter of fact the great firms which have supplied the world with their Christmas and New Year greeting cards have each year paid increasing attention to the production of valentines of a high artistic standard.

The sentiments expressed on these valentines have also undergone a great change and for the most part express distinctly amatory thoughts. As the mistletoe and holly have become the outward and visible sign of Christmas tide, so the big red heart fashioned from various materials has become the insignia of St. Valentine's Day.

The day is very popular as a date for children's parties and juvenile entertainments. The appropriate decorations for such functions make a strong appeal to the younger set and the sentiment of the day is particularly adapted to children. From this then it will be seen that St. Valentine's Day is each year becoming more what it should be—a feast of love and tender thoughts.

Curious In Regard To The Garbage

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Last summer the City went to some expense in erecting an incinerator to handle the garbage and other refuse incidental to a City of this size. Some time ago we were informed that there was not sufficient refuse collected to keep the incinerator going.

For some time past I have been much surprised to see three or four rigs appear in the West Ward driven by young boys, and consisting principally of three or four barrels, into which they dump any or all garbage that appeals particularly to them. One of the rigs which appeared this morning belongs to one of the prominent butchers of the City. Do you suppose he is having this garbage collected to be fed to swine, which will later be offered for sale in his market?

Such a state of affairs would be impossible in many cities where the health regulations would not permit of such refuse being used in this manner. Is it possible that the present garbage collectors have sub-let this part of their contract with the City to different parties?

Surely if all the garbage, etc., was taken to the incinerator the officials would not have to complain of being unable to keep the fires going all the time.—Yours truly,

CURIOUS.

Peterborough, Feb. 15, 1915.

U. S. Parcel Held Up.

LUXEMBURG, Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, Feb. 15.—The German military authorities here have refused to transmit a package containing the American consular agent's accounts because it was sealed in an envelope addressed to the State Department at Washington. The package, under instructions from the commandant, was returned to the agent unopened.

Interference by the German authorities with United States official correspondence already has elicited a protest from the State Department at Washington.

Big Revenue Expected.

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—The war tax of one cent on letters and postcards, when it comes into effect, will yield a very considerable revenue. During last fiscal year the number of letters mailed in Canada was 673,000,000 and postcards 64,000,000, a total of 737,000,000. If the same number were mailed in the coming year, they would pay in war taxes $7,370,000. Even allowing for a substantial falling-off in business and social letters, the revenue should be at least four or five million dollars.

Italy's Grain Supply Safe.

NAPLES, Feb. 15.—The wheat being unloaded from the steamers May Mills and Argilino, which have just arrived from New Orleans, will augment the supply of grain already in Italy there will be sufficient for Italy's need until the end of April, it is estimated.

The Sewage Disposal Site

Threatens to Become a Very Contentious Subject

Saturday's issue of the Examiner contained a letter supposed to have been written by a South End ratepayer in which the writer undertakes to condemn Ald. Green for his alleged statements respecting an interview which he had with the Provincial Board of Health. He attempts to make it appear that Ald. Green said that the Provincial Board of Health had authorized the construction of the sewerage disposal plant across the river from the Street Railway Wharf, whereas what Ald Green actually did say is that the "Provincial Board of Health would back the City up as far as it was practicable.

Upon his return from Toronto, Ald. Green said that there was little or no doubt that the Provincial Board of Health would back the City up in its attempt to secure possession of the site selected by the City" The foregoing statement does not in any way indicate that the Provincial Board of Health has actually authorized the construction of the plant on the site selected, as inferred by the writer.

Mr. E. A. Peck's subsequent statement which is apparently endorsed by the writer, simply states that the Provincial Board of Health has not decided just where the City will be permitted to locate the plant.

Ald. Green, as well as the whole Council, is well aware of this, but at the same time they are assured of the support of the Provincial Board just the same as the Townships to the south are assured of Mr. E. A. Peck's support when it comes to a question of selecting some other site.

Mr. Peck, as a lawyer, is representing his clients, while Ald. Green is trying to justify the confidence that was exppressed by the electorate on Monday, January 4th.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Spanish Government has made application to the powers in order to obtain joint action to end what is termed to be a state of anarchy in Mexico.

Three Chinese are dead and three are in the hospital wounded in Vancouver, as a result of a Tong war which broke out early Saturday in the midst of the celebration of Chinese New Year's.

Students of Toronto University in arts and medicine, registered for the session of 1914-15, who enter upon active service, are to be granted their year in full. Medical students in their fifth year will be granted their degrees.

Shipping circles in Havre now consider it practically certain that the British steamer Oriole was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. There is equal certainty that the London Trader shared the fate of the Oriole.

The White Star Line steamer Arabic arrived in the River Mersey yesterday from New York. The voyage across the Atlantic was uneventful. The British flag was flown throughout the trip. No submarines were sighted.

Paris is still feeling the lack of fuel. There is said to be plenty of English coal, but it comes in great blocks and there is not enough help to break it up at Rouen, the coal port of Paris, so as to make it available for the retail trade.

Socialists Discuss the War.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Representative Socialists of the allied countries met in London yesterday under the presidency of James Keir Hardie, Socialist member of Parliament for Merthyr Tydfil, to discuss the international situation.

The subject of peace was not discussed, as the delegates had decided that "no hope of peace could be entertained until German militarism was crushed."

'Twill Be A War Session

Moratorium Will Be Chief Item on Legislature's Programme

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—The Ontario Legislature will convene to-morrow for the first actual war session held in more than twenty-five years. This will be the first occasion for the calling of the local House under conditions vitally affecting all Canada, and it is generally understood that all important legislation proposed will be handed with the present conditions in mind.

A combination of circumstances this year will make the new session of unusual interest in its preliminary stages. In addition to a new representative of the crown officiating at the open, a new Speaker, Hon. Dr. Jamieson, will control the affairs of the House, and Premier Hearst, with his honors fresh upon him, will assume the guidance of the Government.

Adjournment will be made on Wednesday in honor of the memory of the late Premier, Sir James Whitney, and business will begin on Thursday.

The war promises to be reflected in all the deliberations of the members. One of the most important measures will be a Government bill providing for a moratorium. Its purpose will be to prevent the hasty foreclosure of mortgages and the unfair action of those in a position to bear heavily on others under financial obligations to them.

Great interest centres in the Government bill on highways. Provision has been made for the expenditure of $30,000,000 on Ontario roads, and arrangement will likely be made for the advancing of the first instalment. That the beginning of this project would assist in solving unemployment difficulties is taken in some quarters to argue for a material beginning.

Temperance legislation of a more or less radical nature is also expected. There will be a measure proposed for the purpose of restricting the drinking of intoxicants by uniformed soldiers. Increase of revenue will be sought in all likelihood by increasing the bar sales tax or raising license fees, and the Government may decide to place all licenses under one broad commission.

Supplies For The Red Cross

The local branch of the Red Cross will forward to Toronto on Feb. 19th a box containing supplies, for the Red Cross Hospitals in England and Northern France. The needs of the men in the trenches are very great, and the Society feel they should have the support of all in trying to meet these needs.

Articles for soldiers in the trenches will be forwarded by the Red Cross free, if marked "Soldiers' Comforts" and will be distributed where the need is greatest by the Canadian War Contingent Association of which the Hon. George Perley is President.

Supplies will be received at the Y. W. C. A. for the above box, not later than Thursday, Feb 18th.—L. J. Davidson, Secretary Red Cross.

Used Some Grossly Insulting Language

Herbert Baker Was Fined $8.35 in Police Court This Morning

There was the largest number of cases in Police Court this morning that there has been for months, and there was some variety too. From a plain drunk to charges of using abusive and insulting language and the aftermath of an adjourned "family" case.

ABUSIVE LANGUAGE.

Herbert Baker pleaded not guilty when he faced a charge of having used abusive and grossly insulting language to Herbert Peoples, on George Street, on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 11.

In the evidence it was shown that there has been a feud between Baker and Peoples for a couple of years. Some time ago Baker was before Chief Thompson and promised to let Peoples alone in future. He did not deny being near Peoples on the night in question, but claimed he did not make any remarks to him.

Dennis Conley was accosted by Baker after Peoples passed. Baker said he did not think much of him for being friendly with Peoples. He got the impression that Baker had a few drinks and was looking for a row.

John Sutherland knew of the feeling between the two men. He did not know who was to blame.

Baker was fined $5 and costs of $3.35, amounting in all to $8.35, with ten days to pay, and in default, ten days in gaol.

Mr. Widdifield defended Baker.

WAS INSULTING TOO.

Wm. Teevins pleaded guilty when charged with using grossly insulting and profane language in a public place, Charlotte Street. He was fined $2 and costs of $3.75, which he paid.

PLACED ON LIST.

Cyril Moher, aged 21 years, was placed on the prohibited list. He has been drinking whenever he gets a chance, and has members of his family who need his support. He has just returned from the lumber camps.

WILL KEEP AWAY.

Tom McCliggot will pay his wife $4 a week and keep away from her. That was the agreement he had come to with his wife since the case was aired in Police Court last week.

Mrs. McCliggot was not very enthusiastic about the last part of the arrangement. "He is my lawful husband and I would very like if he would come home to me, but I must have support," she remarked.

The Magistrate will make an order for separation, the husband to pay $4 a week to his wife.

Big night at the Carnival, Tuesday night, Brock Street rink.

Effective Feb. 15, in the Face of the New War Tax

Goodyear TIRE PRICES Again Reduced

For the Third Time in Less than Two Years, Saving the User in All an Average of 37 Per Cent.

When war began we resolved to keep our factory wheels moving. And now the new war tax, severe as it seems to some, has only fired our determination more.

By March 1 we will double the capacity of our plant at Bowmanville, Ont.

And instead of raising our prices we announce a radical reduction.

Yet every particle of material that goes into Goodyear Automobile Tires is subject to the War Tax. And this Company—not its Customers—will pay this extra cost.

We will also give the user more in tire value than his money ever bought before.

Due to Gains

In other years as rubber came down in price, we lowered our tire prices apace.

As men and methods improved, we improved Goodyear quality. To give you the utmost at the lowest fair margin of profit has always been Goodyear's business-religion.

As our out-put multiplied, reducing factory cost, our prices came down with it. Last year alone the sales of Goodyear Made-in-Canada Tires were 29 per cent. greater than the year before.

Men bought in numbers more than one Goodyear Tire for every car in Canada.

We offer this—not as a boast—but as certain evidence that proves how Goodyear Tires are winning pluralities throughout the Dominion.

It shows why we double our capacity. It shows why we can lower prices this way.

For this is our third reduction in less than two years. And these three Goodyear reductions have saved you a total of 37 per cent. on tire prices.

GOOD YEAR MADE IN CANADA Fortified Tires

Exclusive Features

Men call them Goodyear Fortified Tires because in five costly ways they combat tire trouble. And these are Goodyear ways—no other maker has them. You get them regardless of price reductions.

Please learn these five—they are listed here:

Fortified Against Rim-Cuts—by our No-Rim-Cut Feature; Against Blow-Outs—by our "On-Air" Cure; Against Loose Treads—by many Rubber Rivets; Against Insecurity—by 126 braided Piano Wires; Against Punctures and Skidding—by our double thick All-Weather Tread.

For a long, long time most tires have sold much above Goodyear's prices. Some makers have asked you one-third higher. A few have sold lower and always will because of less rubber, less science in construction.

But we can give you now, as we have always, more for the money than any rival tire can offer.

We can do it, remember, because of the large number of men that Goodyears are winning. Then also because we are content with small profit per tire.

This policy, in four short years, has put these Tires at the top.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SURPRISES IN OLD COUNTRY SOCCER GAMES

Lancashire soccer enthusiasts may be considered on the lap of the gods of sport at the moment, and resting comfortably. Given a little luck, three of the County Palatine clubs should figure in the semi-finals of the English Cup ties. Four will take part in the third round games on Saturday, but either Bolton Wanderers or Burnley must fall for the luck of the ballot brought the two rival neighbours together. In addition, Oldham have a fair prospect of winning the league championship, as they are a point ahead with two games on hand, and Manchester City may prove the runners-up. Bolton Wanderers made no mistake in their cup relay with Millwall Athletic, and at the third time of asking came away so strongly that the Southerners were seldom in the limelight. The Athletics have the consolation that they came out all right on the financial side, though not so well as last year, when they fell to Sheffield United in the third round. Bolton's task of winning next Saturday will not be so easy of accomplishment as Burnley is to leave nothing undone in an attempt to carry off the cup for the second year in succession.

There were some strange doings in league circles. Bradford City's draw with Aston Villa at Birmingham was not to be wondered at, in view of recent exhibitions by both clubs, but Sheffield Wednesday's hollow defeat at Old Trafford must have gone down badly with the Cutlers. This turn-up in particular cannot be explained away, as Wednesday made no secret of their ambition to get ahead of Oldham on the league table. Another eye-opener was the downfall of Manchester City on the domain of the "Geordies." It was only a one-goal defeat for the Hyde Road boys, but it was a case of the unexpected happening. Chelsea put up a great fight at Anfield and gave Liverpool the fright of their lives. The "Pensioners" carried away a point, which in itself was a worthy accomplishment. The Spurs will long remember Saturday's visit to Ayersome Park. Middlesboro's sharpshooters were out in style and served up a six-goal defeat to the London bunch. Notts County were almost equally swamped by Blackburn Rovers. Oldham v. West Bromwich and Bradford v. Everton were other games down for settlement, but had to be abandoned.

Nothing seems more certain at the moment than that Derby County will next season re-enter the first division, as they seem to have the second league at their mercy, but the club to be promoted with them is still a very open question.

Hearts came very close to dropping a point at Motherwell, but a miss is as good as a mile, and they continue to show Celtic the way to the championship goal, but the Parkhead men are sticking like leeches to what chances they may have of over-riding the Tynecastle lot, and the finish should prove one of the keenest.

Appended are the results:—

HOCKEY

The Park Street seven were badly beaten by the South End seven at the Sacred Heart Rink between 6 o'clock and 7, Saturday night, by a score of 15 to 0. Kenneally, Neary, and O'Connell scoring all the goals. S. Anderson tried hard to score for the losers. J. Guerin handled the bell to the satisfaction of both teams.

The line-up was as follows:

Speaking of the Shamrock game the Toronto Globe says: The Peterborough player whose identity was questioned by the O.H.A., was on the ice for a few minutes in the last period, but, from all he showed on this occasion, there is no reason why anybody should pay him for playing hockey, and it is no wonder that Peterborough did not have him on the team in any important game. He told the O.H.A. sub-committee and everybody else that he met here a week ago that his name was Moinse, and that he never knew a person named Tetrault. His name was announced to the officials on Saturday night as Joseph Tetrault, and it remains to be seen whether the O.H.A., the N.H.A. or the public has been humbugged in the matter.

The Mail says:

Secretary Hewitt of the O. H. A. stated Saturday night that Tetrault, who was in uniform for the Shamrocks, was the same player who had appeared at the O.H.A. meeting under the name of Moines. No affidavits were taken at the O.H.A. meeting so therefore the latter are unable to do anything. As a hockey player Tetrault did not look very good.

Good ice and weather guaranteed for the Carnival Tuesday evening.

Beer Production Limited.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 15. — (Via London.) — Restrictions have been imposed on the production of beer in Germany, to become effective Feb. 15 according to The Lokal Anzeiger From that date until March 1, it is said, the breweries are forbidden to use more than 50 per cent. of their usual quantity of malt, and after March 1, they must not exceed 40 per cent. The authorities later will fix definitely the amount of malt each brewery may consume.

Gas Explosion Caused Fire.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 15. — The four-storey building of Aldrich, Howey & Co., furniture dealers, was destroyed by fire and five other buildings in the retail district were damaged by flames which started late yesterday afternoon from an explosion, presumably of natural gas, in the furniture store. The damage exceeds $100,000. Eugene Woodworth, who was passing the store when the explosion occurred, was hurled fifty feet and was taken to a hospital in a serious condition.

Italy Warns Germany.

ROME, Feb. 15.—The Italian Government has sent a note to Berlin concerning Germany's war zone decree and its menace to neutral shipping. The note, though different in tone, thoroughly sustains the stand taken by the American Government.

Its thinness is in the movement

Come in and let us show you how a new, American facility, coupled with refinement of wheels reduced the size of the ordinary movement almost one-half.

Then you will understand how this watch can "be worn as a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this genuine thin model timekeeper is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as sacrificing the usable dust protection strip in the back case, or putting a hobbled time movement in the center of a thin edged man's case.

OBITUARY

JAMES GALLAGHER.

The death occurred yesterday morning at the House of Providence of James Gallagher, at the age of seventy-seven years.

The funeral took place this morning from the Church of the Immaculate Conception to St. Peter's cemetery.

CAUGHT BLUFFING.

Mrs. Pankhurst Calls Upon London Hooligan to Make Good.

Mrs. Pankhurst is reminding London men that last year, and the year before, when they were mobbing and in every possible way insulting the women who sought to speak for suffrage in Hyde Park and at other places, their bellowing cry then was that if war should come they would have to protect the women, and that women, unable to protect themselves, should not have an equal right of suffrage with those whose duty it may become, at any time, to protect them. "You did not then think," says Mrs. Pankhurst in laying her verbal lash over the shoulders of the men of Eastcheap and Whitechapel, "that the time was so near at hand for you to come to our defence. We women can neither fight nor vote. You can do both. We call on you for that protection you promised to give us when you denied us the ballot. The German is at the gate. Will you protect us or must we protect ourselves?"

There has been a frightful mortality of officers in the British ranks since the British troops engaged the enemy, says the St. Louis Daily Globe Democrat, editorially. That fact attests that the old British traditions have been maintained by the "first line," recruited almost wholly outside of London. We took occasion to say, while women were being maltreated by London hooligans, that men good for such work were not likely to be good for anything else, and that London is not England, though it holds so many people. If anything could make the London cockney enlist, the scorn of Mrs. Pankhurst ought to do it. His hand has been called, and he is caught bluffing. After the war he will be as ready as ever to charge women's meetings in Hyde Park with the cry that women are not fit for military service. Should conscription come, many of this gentry will no doubt be seeking to prove that they are no more fit than women for active service.

Thirty Million Cartridges.

How much ammunition does a modern army use? We shall not know until after the war what the German and the allied forces have been expending; but we know what the Germans used in 1870-1. The total for rifles was 30,000,000 cartridges; for field artillery, 362,000 rounds. It is worth noting that battles are much less costly in ammunition than sieges. The siege of Strasburg alone cost, weight for weight, three times the amount of ammunition used in all the decisive battles and actions throughout the whole war. Of course, these figures are a mere bagatelle compared with those of the present campaign, with its millions of soldiers and its quick-firing guns and its hot [illegible]

Burglars of No Mean Ability

Confessed to Having Practiced Their Art in Bethany, Port Hope and Other Places

LINDSAY Feb. 15. That Simpson and Yorke, the two burglars who were sentenced to two years each in the pen, are, to use a criminal term, "bad pills" is the firm opinion of Chief Short. Both practically confessed that they were no mean slouches at the business, but had been on the war path for a long time past. Simpson made the boast that it was the first time he had been caught, and it would be the last.

For months past burglaries have taken place at Port Hope, Bethany Cobourg, Hastings, Campbellford and other eastern towns and the Chief is inclined to think that the above two men were the culprits. One is about 29 years of age and the other 35.

Yorke lived in town for years, and apparently has a mania for getting married. In fact it appears that at the present time a wife and one child are living a respectable life in Lindsay, not having had anything to do with hubby for some time past.

He was also located in Toronto, where according to reports he was again united in wedlock bonds with a young girl of 16 or 18 years. Married life was not congenial and a separation took place, Yorke claiming it was a divorce. It now appears that he and the Duval woman were about to be married.

Mrs. Duval hails from a town east of Lindsay, where her husband and family reside, but the man of the house wishes to have no more to do with his spouse, who was given 48 hours to clear out of Lindsay.

ATTACK ON TOR FOILED.

Force of Turks and Arabs Killed or Captured By British.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—A force of 200 Turks and Arabs, under German officers, who were preparing to attack the British station of Tor at the entrance to the Gulf of Suez, were attacked and either killed or taken prisoners Friday by a British force, according to a British official report from Cairo. One hundred soldiers were taken prisoners, and of the others it is believed that not one escaped death.

The official report states that in January fifty Turks and two German officers approached Tor, believing that the place was undefended. Finding Tor garrisoned by 200 Egyptian soldiers, they sent for reinforcements. These arrived, and a force now numbering a little over 800 occupied a village to the north of Tor.

On their arrival becoming known, a small detachment of British troops landed in their rear, and, advancing over the hills, made a surprise attack on their position at dawn Friday.

ALBANIANS BREAK THROUGH.

Large Numbers Are Now Marching In Direction of Zapod.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—A telegram from Nish to the Havas News Agency says that the following statement was given out by the Serbian Government yesterday:

"Saturday large numbers of Albanians broke through our lines, crossing the frontier in the department of Prisrend. Before superior forces of the enemy, our troops, as well as the municipal authorities, were forced to retreat.

"The Albanians continue to advance in the direction of Zapod, Topoliana and Glavotchnitz.

"The enemy succeeded in certain places in cutting the telephone and telegraph communications."

Two British Airmen Killed?

BERLIN, Feb. 15.—(Via London.)—Repeated attempts have been made of late, by British and French airmen, to reach Brussels. On Thursday of last week, a British aeroplane approached the Belgian capital presumably to bombard the German camp there. A German aeroplane ascended and a fierce fight ensued, ending in victory for the German. The British machine suddenly crashed to the ground and its two occupants were picked up dead.

DEATHS.

PHELAN.—On February 14th, at 618 Rubidge Street, Mr. Peter Phelan, aged 92. Funeral notice later.

PHELAN—At his late residence, 618 Rubidge street, February 14, Peter Phelan, in his 92nd year.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday, at 8 o'clock, from the above residence to St. Mary's Church, Young's Point, thence to St. Mary's Cemetery for interment.

BIRTH.

FLAHERTY.—On Saturday, Feb. 13th, to Mr. and Mrs. F. Flaherty, 273 Thomas Street, a son.

If You Need Anything Dyed

Owing to the scarcity of Dye and the exorbitant prices asked by those who have a small quantity on hand, Mr. Beach would advise all who are contemplating to have Garments, Drapes, Curtains, etc., dyed to have same done at once as the supply of dye stuffs are being nearly exhausted. Remember we are still in a position to give the same satisfactory service as in the past. We advise you to act at once.

GERMANY IS AFRAID

Will Not Attack British Merchantmen if Britain Will Not Stop Foodstuffs

TO SOW MINES

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Count Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, yesterday presented to the State Department a note from his Government announcing that Germany stands ready to consider receding from its announced intention of attacking British merchantmen if Great Britain will withdraw its efforts to prevent foodstuffs from going to Germany for the civilian population.

Otherwise Germany will proceed with her plans, and she reiterated her request that neutral shipping avoid the German war zone and take instead the sea track around northern Scotland.

The war zone decree was frankly called a measure of retaliation against Britain.

Germany's intention of sowing mines in the waters around the British Isles as a part of her submarine warfare against Belligerent merchantmen was announced in a note delivered to the State Department by Count Von Bernstorff.

LESS MEN DIE FROM ILLNESS THAN FROM WOUNDS RECEIVED

77 Per Cent. of the Injuries Caused by Shell Fire---Average of Sick One Per Cent. Compared With Four Per Cent. in Barracks.

Special Morning Cable:

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The military attaches of neutral countries last week visited the French and British battle line, starting from Arras. They report that they found the health of the troops remarkable. Only 200 men in the 11th corps were on the sick list.

Dr. Gaston Cagniard, after five months' observation of the sanitary conditions at the front, declares that all former records have been upset by the present war, the number of deaths from illness being less than from wounds, which is said to be contrary to previous experiences.

In spite of the conditions predisposing to typhoid after the Battle of the Marne, according to Dr. Cagniard, the men sent to hospitals from all maladies decreased 96 per cent. in six weeks, and now are less than one per cent., as compared with an average of four per cent. when the soldiers are in barracks. Seventy-seven per cent. of the injuries sustained by the men are from shell fire, as compared with 15 per cent. in the Franco-Prussian War. Many of the wounds that have the appearance of being caused by dum-dum bullets, according to Dr. Cagniard, are due to the wobbling of the German bullets.

The neutral attaches declare that the allied soldiers are being bountifully fed, and that they are well clothed and in excellent spirits.

SAYS THE AMERICANS ARE SIDING WITH THE ALLIES

Bitterness of Feeling in Germany Against the Americans is Spreading---Fears That Some Serious Crisis Will Occur

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—The American Government press and public apparently does not realize to what extent the bitterness of the feeling throughout Germany against the American is spreading. With the German press daily publishing despatches tending to show that the United States is siding more and more with the Allies, and with reprinting of despatches from English newspapers indicating extreme hostility towards Germany, the German people are becoming worked up to a point which it would be difficult to exaggerate. Officials and American citizens here cannot disguise their fears that some serious incident will occur which will lead to a serious crisis. Wounded officers and men from the front openly charge that the German losses are becoming much greater now since the French are using American manufactured guns and ammunition. This has created an atmosphere which, to put it mildly, is becoming more and more frigid daily for Americans. The Berlin Zeitung yesterday published a pamphlet which, it charged, was prepared by former President Theodore Roosevelt, and urging the United States to join the Allies and crush Germany.

The Berlin Tageblatt reprinted to-day a despatch from an English newspaper which says that American officers have resigned from the army and are applying for naturalization as Britishers in order that they may be eligible for commissions in an American brigade being formed to fight for England two thousand strong.

These are fair examples of statements which are being published, which are creating anti-American feeling. Americans throughout Germany are no longer wearing tiny American flags in their button-holes that were so noticeable and so generally applauded in the early days of the war.

The Embassy and the Consulate here is being deluged with letters from Germans friendly to America, and from German Americans, the tenor of which are: "How can we answer a man who asks us why America sells ammunition to kill our sons and then expects us also to buy agricultural implements from the United States?" A very prominent German society leader who hitherto has been most friendly with Americans, entertaining them in her home, has now caused it to be announced that henceforth Americans will not be welcome. She declares that the resentment of her German friends towards the United States is responsible. The position of Ambassador Gerard and Consul-General Law is now becoming extremely delicate and difficult, both officers being focus points for German criticism.

WHY GERMAN PLANS FAILED IN THE EAST PRUSSIA DRIVE

Rain Prevented Following Up the Russians in Their Retreat, According to Berlin Newspapers—Operations Began February 8th

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—The war correspondent of the Vossesche Zeitung, in describing the recent operations in East Prussia, says:

The German troops assembled northeast of Insterberg. Beginning operations February 8 by advancing a number of columns from a common centre, which was Pillkallen, these columns swung eastward and then southward. The column farthest east operated in the valley of the Szesupa River. Crossing the Russian frontier in the neighbourhood of Schirwindt, and striking the Berlin-Petrograd Railroad around Wilkowiszy, about ten miles east of the frontier, the cavalry swept still farther eastward, and destroyed the bridge at Wilwiszki, rendering impossible the movement of a Russian train to the rear. Ten thousand Russians and 75 transportable kitchens were captured there the night of the 10th.

It was a rainy night, according to the correspondent, and the flanking movement was attended in places with the greatest of difficulties. The provision and ammunition trains stuck fast to their hubs in the snow. The provisions were unloaded and later were carried forward on the sledges of peasants. The advance was partly in the teeth of a furious snowstorm, which prevented the Germans from pushing on throughout the night.

The German cavalry which destroyed the bridge at Wilwiszki was attacked by Russian cavalry, under General Leontovich, advancing from Kovno, but the Russians were repulsed. While these operations were proceeding the extreme German left movement also began, the right wing going in the direction of Johannesburg, where the 57th Russian division, after a stubborn defence, was almost wiped out, losing five thousand men taken prisoners.

Summarizing the East Prussian operations, the correspondent reports that eleven Russian divisions were defeated, some of them being badly cut up. He adds that there are now excellent possibilities for further developments by the Germans, as East Prussia has been completely cleared of Russians.

Several British Submarines Are Operating In Baltic

Entered By Way of the Great Belt, Following in Wake of Steamships Carrying Pilots to Guide Them Through Mine Fields

Special Morning Cable:

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 16.—The Berliner Tageblatt discusses the question whether British submarines are in the Baltic, and gives publicity to two divergent stories. One version is "numerous communications from well informed sources leave little doubt that the recent attack on the German cruiser Gazelle was undertaken by large modern British submarines manned by English crews. Russia possesses no under-water vessels of sufficient tonnage and adequate equipment to operate so far from their base. It was known some time ago that three large British submarines were lying at the Russian port of Helsingfors, and it is also known that a fourth British submarines of the same type maintained communications between the coast of Finland and the Russian naval station in the Baltic. These submarines cannot have entered the Baltic by way of the Sound, because the water there is too shallow, the entrance too narrow, and the traffi in ships too great. They entered by way of the Great Belt, although this is thickly strewn with mines. They accomplished the feat by the simple trick of following closely in the wake of steamships which were carrying a pilot to guide them through the mine fields. At any moment the submarines might have collided with mines, while at times they were forced to conceal themselves by descending to the bottom and resting on the sea bed. This continued for several hours on one or two occasions. Finally they were successful in reaching the Baltic."

The other versions runs: "These British submarines did not enter by the Sound or the Great Belt. They were shipped in sections from England to Archangel, and thence overland to Kronstadt, where they were put together and despatched on war service into the Baltic."

Extra Postage In March

Color of War Stamp Will Be Gold and Denominations Will Range From One to Fifty Cents

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—A misapprehension apparently exists as to the operation of the new stamp taxes, and people are already posting letters with three cents postage, and postal cards with two cents. The new stamps are not to be called for until about the middle of March. They are now being engraved.

The colour will be gold, with the picture of King George, and the words "Inland Revenue War Tax." This stamp will be used on cheques, etc., but whether the same design will be utilized for letters, or a special one be gotten up by the Post Office Department, is not yet decided. The denominations will range from one to fifty cents.

The best tea in the world comes from the hill-top gardens of Ceylon and India. The best products of these gardens are in turn selected for Salada. It contains no cheapening dust, stems or coarse leaves.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

They had only fifty yards of clearing to cross and the girl crouching behind the overturned table did not know how strong they might be in numbers. She know only that in every artery ran a white fire of passion and a longing to avenge. She meant to make her Shrine of Disarmament a crater of death under whose lava no human creature could live. She remembered the caution of a man with whom she had once shot quail. "Take your time when they rise and pick your birds." Now Juanita Holland meant to pick her birds.

She saw figures climbing the fence in shadowy, almost impalpable shapes, and as the first dropped inside and started on at a crouching trot, she aimed quickly, but steadily, and fired.

A little cry of primitive and savage joy leaped from her lips as she saw the man plunge forward in the half light and lie there thrashing about on the ground. Once an English officer had told her, in a drawing-room, that a soldier feels no sense of compunction when an enemy goes down under his hand in battle. She had raised her chin a little and turned coolly away, feeling for such a man only distaste. Now she understood.

But at that warning the others leaped down and came on at a run. The tempo quickened and became confusing. They were firing as they ran and their answering bullets pelted against her barirer and over her head on the walls. She heard window panes shivering and glass falling, and yet her elation grew—two more advancing figures had crumpled into inert masses. Unless there were reinforcements she would stem their oncoming tide. Even a mountain marksman cannot target his shots well while he is running and under fire. It takes championship sprinting to do fifty yards in five seconds—on the smoothness of a cinder path.

Up hill in a copstant spit of fire and lead it requires a little longer.

There were only two assailants left now and one of them suddenly veered and made for the cover of a hickory trunk off to one side—he was in full flight. But the other came on, throwing the rifle away and shifting his heavy magazine pistol to his right hand.

It was easy now, thought the girl—she could take her time and be very sure.

Yet she shot and missed, and the man came on with the confidence of one who wears a talisman and fears no harm. Now he was almost at the steps and his pistol was barking viciously—then suddenly something in the mechanism of Juanita's rifle jammed and it lay useless and dead in her hands. She struggled with it, frantically jerking the lever ,but before she had conquired its balking obstinacy she saw the on-coming figure leap up the steps at one stride and thrust his weapon forward over the table. She even caught the glitter of his teeth as a snarling smile parted his lips.

Then a rifle spoke behind her, a rifle in the hands of the man who had dragged himself to the firing line, and with his foot on the threshold Jim Fletcher reeled backward and rolled lumberingly down the steps to the ground.

"You got him!" she screamed, "you got him, Anse!"

It had been perhaps five minutes since she had called out to the men in the road, but it seemed that she had sustained a long siege. She saw the one man who had fled, crossing the fence and disappearing. Then very slowly she rose and turned to the room again.

Anse Havey was lying on his face and the gun with which he had killed Jim Fletcher lay by his side, but his posture was so rigid and his limbs so motionless that the girl caught at her breast and reeled backward. She would have fallen had she not been supported by the table. Had the fight been lost after all?

Slowly and in a daze of reaction and fright, she moved forward and turned his body over, and laid her ear to his heart.

It was still beating. The rifle had only jolted his weak and pain-racked body into unconsciousness, and as she held his head to her breast, her eyes went roving about the room into which the pallid dawn had begun stealing. Then, hanging by the mantel, she saw the horn that Jerry Everson had given her, faintly catching and reflecting the first of the light.

Why had she not thought of that before? she asked herself accusingly. Why had she not sent its call for help out across the hills long ago? Then there came back to her memory the words of the mountain donor when he had brought it over and had imitated the Havey battle call.

"Don't never blow them three longs an' three shorts unlessen ye wants ter start hell. When thet call goes out acrost the mountains every Havey thet kin tote a gun's got ter git up an' come."

If ever there had been a time when every Havey should come it was this time. She laid Anse's head once more on the cushions and went to the mantel. Then standing in the door, she drew a long breath.

The ridges were vague apparitions now along whose slopes trailed shreds of mist. A gray world of ghost-like dawn spread out with shapes that lost themselves in shapelessness and a chill hung in the air.

So she set the horn to her lips and blew. Out across the melting vagueness of the dim world floated the three long blasts and the three short blasts. She waited a little while and blew again. That signal could not reach Anse Havey's own house, because the ridge would send it echoing back in a shattered wave of sound. It would be better heard to the east, and after a time there came back to her waiting ears, very low and distant, yet very clear, an answer.

It came from the house of Milt McBriar and Juanita's heart, torn and anxious as it was, leaped, for she knew that for the first time in the memory of man the Havey call to arms had been heard and was being answered by a chief of the McBriars, and that as fast as horses could carry them he had his men would bring succour.

An hour later, when the mountain slopes were unveiling in miracles of iridescence and tender colour, Young Milt McBriar and his escort came upon them.

The girl was weeping incoherently over an insensible figure and crooning to him as a mother sings to quiet a fretful child, and on the floor at her side lay a piece of paper rumpled and reddened with blood—a marriage license.

"Milt," she wildly cried out. "get Brother Anse, get him quick!" And she waved the piece of smeared paper in the boy's face.

Kneeling with her on the floor, Milt took the license from her hand and when he saw what it was he very dubiously shook his head.

"I'm afraid," he told her gravely, "I'm afraid hit's too late, ma'am. He kain't hardly live thet long."

"Get Brother Anse," she insisted fiercely; "get him quick. I'm going to be his wife." Her voice broke into a wild sob as she added, "If I can't be anything else, I'm going to be the Widow Havey."

And when Good Anse came, he found Bad Anse still alive, smiling faintly up into the face of the woman who sat with his head in her lap, and they were both waiting.

"I'm right sorry," said the missionary simply when the words were spoken, "thet ye didn't hev a preacher thet could 'a' married ye with due ceremonies, but I reckon I hain't never been gladder ter do nothin' in my life—ef only he kin git well."

"Brother Anse," Juanita Havey told him, as she put a hand on each rough shoulder, "I had rather it had been you than the Archbishop of Canterbury."

* * *

People in the mountains still talk of how, while Anse Havey lay on a white cot in the little hospital, young Milt McBriar set out toward Peril. He stopped for a moment at the house of Bad Anse. Havey and within twenty minutes the hills were being raked. Young Milt killed a horse getting to Jeb McNash's cabin on Tribulation and Jeb killed another getting to Peril. Then from Lexington came two surgeons as fast as a special train could bring them, and thanks to a dogged life spark they found Anse Havey still lingering on the margin of life.

When they removed him from the operating table back to his cot, and he opened his eyes in consciousness, the sun was coming through the shaded window, but even before he realized that, he saw her face bending over him, and felt cool fingers on his forehead.

As his eyes opened her smile greeted him, and she brushed his lips with her own. Then in a tone of command she said, "You mustn't talk. The doctors say you may get well, if you obey orders and fight hard. It's partly up to you, Anse."

Once more there hovered around the man's lips their occasional boyish smile.

"I reckon," he said slowly, "they'll have the hell of a time killin' me now!" Then he added in a tone of more grimness, "Besides, there's a score or two to settle."

The girl shook her head and smiled. Her fingers rested caressingly on the dark hair that fell over his fore head.

"No, Anse," she told him. "I settled most of them myself."

* * *

Even the detachment of the murder squad that had played its part in the woods and started for Peril before the five turned back, did not reach the town, but scattered into the hillsides. When morning brought the news of their attempt they tried to make their escape across the mountains to Virginia.

But there was a grim and relentless system about the movement of two posses that set out to comb the timber. Daring approach no house for food, the fugitives took up their stand at last in a stanch log cabin which had been deserted and died there, grimly declining to surrender.

Of course the railroad came up Tribulation and crossed through the notch in the mountains at the gap, but the railroad came on terms quite different from those which Mr. Trevor and his ilk had planned.

One day there rode away from Holla' College a gay little procession, on its way to the house of Milt McBriar. At its head rode young Milt himself and on a pillion behind him, as mountain brides have always ridden to their own horses, was Dawn McBriar.

That was some years ago and at the big log house there is a toddling, towheaded young person now whose name is Anse Havey McBriar, though his father insists he is to be ultimately known as "Bad Anse" McBriar. So far the name has not been given general recognition, though his mother affectionately calls him "Badness."

One autumn day when the air was as full of sparkle as champagne and the big "sugar tree" just outside the hospital window was flaming in an ecstasy of colour, when even the geese by the creek waddled with the fat comfort of burghers at a festival, Miss Dawn Havey opened her eyes on the world and found it acceptable.

Jeb McNash was riding through the country that October, seeking election to the Legislature.

He drew his horse down by the fence and raised his eyes to the little building up the hillside where the mystery of a new life was sheltered. Then a slow grin came to his lips.

"Anse," he said in his slow drawl, "it's right smart of a pity she's a gal now, hain't it?"

Anse shook his head. "I reckon," he said, "she's got some chance to be like her mother. Her mother made these hills better for being here and besides—"

He looked cautiously about and dropped his voice as if speaking of a forbidden subject, yet into it crept an unconcealable pride:

"Besides, young feller, have you got any more notches on the stock of your gun than she has?"

THE END.

BRONCHITIS

If Neglected Will Surely Turn Into PNEUMONIA.

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold. It starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is of a light color, but soon becomes copious and of purulent character.

You have, no doubt, wakened up in the morning and have had to cough half a dozen times before you could raise the phlegm from your bronchial tubes, and when you do succeed in doing so you find that it is of yellowish or greenish color, and you get some relief right away. When this happens to you, you may rest assured that you have a touch of bronchitis, and if not cured immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia or some other more serious trouble.

Cure the cold, and thereby prevent bronchitis and pneumonia taking a hold on your system.

This can be quickly done by the use of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Rebecca Have, Mahone Bay, N.S., writes: "My little boy, aged six, was always troubled with bronchitis, and when he had whooping cough he was worse. Doctors advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It gave him instant relief, and positively cured him."

Price, 25c and 50c.

How To Make the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and You Save $1. Fully Guaranteed

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering distressing coughs, chest and throat colds is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised to note how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

WOMEN FROM 45 to 55 TESTIFY

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during Change of Life.

Westbrook, Me. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and had pains in my back and side and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. I will recommend your medicine to my friends and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LAWRENCE MARTIN, 12 King St., Westbrook, Maine.

Manston, Wis. — "At the Change of Life I suffered with pains in my back and loins until I could not stand. I also had night-sweats so that the sheets would be wet. I tried other medicine but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. The pains left me, the night-sweats and hot flashes grew less, and in one year I was a different woman. I know I have to thank you for my continued good health ever since." — Mrs. M. J. BROWNELL, Manston, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled in such cases.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralise any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralising the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

LOOKING AT A PHOTOGRAPH.

Better Effects Are Obtained When Only One Eye is Used.

Photographs should be looked at with only one eye to appear best, says F. W. Marlow in an article on "How to Look at a Photograph" in the Photo Era.

"Most photographs, particularly small ones of landscapes, street scenes and interiors, fail to produce their full effect or to be estimated at their true value because they are not looked at in the most effective way," the author says. "Take as an example a print resulting from a camera with a five inch focus lens. Such a print is usually looked at with both eyes open and held at a distance of twelve inches or more. Now a camera is essentially a one eyed instrument, or, at any rate, it views the object to be reproduced from a single point, the optical center of the lens. The object must be looked at, therefore, with one eye only and from a point corresponding as nearly as possible to the optical center of the lens if its characteristics as it is to be reproduced in the camera are to be appreciated.

"Let it be remembered that when a print is looked at with both eyes open binocular vision emphasizes the flatness of the card, and this tends to offset the illusion of greater or less distance produced by the light and shade and perspective of the print. By using one eye the impression of flatness is greatly diminished. If at the same time the eye be placed at the right distance everything is seen under its natural angle or perspective, and the picture unfolds itself, the different objects receding to their proper relative distances, making details very obvious which may be unnoticed if looked at in the ordinary way.

"As a sort of corollary to the above one one eye alone to decide whether a landscape or other scene is worth taking. If with one eye the scene looks flat it will not make a satisfactory photograph."

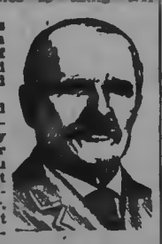
Operation Decided On As Only Means of Relief

But the Writer of This Letter Resolved to Try Dr. Chase's Ointment First and Was Cured.

This is not an isolated case, for we frequently hear from people who have been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment after physicians had told them nothing short of an operation could bring relief and cure.



MR. BEAUVAIS.

If you could read these letters, coming as they do, day after day and year after year, you would realize what a wonderful curative agent Dr. Chase's Ointment really is. Few ailments are more annoying or more persistent torturing than piles, and when this suffering is promptly relieved by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment there can be no doubt as to where credit is due. Friends and neighbors are told of the results and so the good word spreads and Dr. Chase's Ointment is becoming known far and wide as the only actual cure for piles or hemorrhoids.

Mr. Charles Beauvais, a respected citizen of St. John's, Que., writes:—"For 14 years I suffered from chronic piles or hemorrhoids and considered my case very serious. I was treated by a well-known physician who could not help me, and my doctor decided on an operation as the only means of relief. However, I resolved to try Dr. Chase's Ointment first. The first box brought me great relief, and by the time I had used three boxes I was completely cured. This is why it gives me such great pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to everybody suffering from hemorrhoids as a preparation of the greatest value."

PASTOR RUSSELL

Buffalo, N. Y., February 14. — Pastor Russell is here to-day. We report one of his addresses from the text, "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God." (Philippians 2:10, 11.) He said in part:

For six great Days of a thousand years each the world of mankind has been experiencing a reign of Sin and Death. Physicians, both physical and moral, have been unable to effect a cure. God alone is able to roll away the curse which He Himself imposed, and to give mankind His blessing instead.

In the past we have been so intent on following our own sectarian schemes and theories that we have neglected the proper study of the Bible. Indeed, not until our day has such a study been possible for the masses. Only now do they have the Word of God in their possession in convenient form in every family, and only now is education so general as to permit all to read, all to study, all to know the good things of the Divine promises.

The creeds of the Dark Ages did indeed din into our ears the message of the curse. Yea, they distorted it and made it a message of eternal torture; whereas the Scriptures declare that "the wages of sin is death"—not eternal torment. In our darkness we mistranslated and misinterpreted God's Word to our own confusion, swallowing also some interpolations without proper scrutiny. No wonder that we were nauseated by those creeds! No wonder that the intelligent portion of humanity was in danger of being driven into infidelity—away from God and from His Book, which we misunderstood and misrepresented!

Bible students are arousing from their sleep and finding that they have long suffered from nocturnal hallucinations. The true Message of the Word of God is spreading, and with it goes increase of faith, together with joy, peace and godliness.

We have all noted the fact that ours is the most wonderful day of earth's history. Our eyes open wide as we note the contrast between the blessings which surround us and those enjoyed by our fathers. Surely we are all amazed at what we see of progress in invention of labor-saving machinery, of educational arrangements, of improvement in stock-breeding, in horticulture, etc. We reflect further that with the progress of invention the necessity of arduous labor and sweat of face for the daily bread will soon be at an end; and the necessary leisure, conveniences and comforts which will permit every man to be a nobleman will soon be available to all.

What do these things mean? Why have they come suddenly upon us in one generation? yea, and give no indication or slacking, but rather of progressing to still greater wonders! What is the explanation of all this?

The Bible alone gives the reply to these queries. It explains to us the meaning of the reign of Sin and Death which we and our forefathers have shared. It tells us that our sorrows, aches, pains, and weaknesses—mental, moral and physical—are all the results of sin—of the sin which Father Adam entailed upon us by the laws of heredity for the six great Days of a thousand years each, already past.

Then to our astonishment the Bible opens the door of the future and bids us look abroad and see the better Day which God promises. It explains that He has been giving us lessons respecting the exceeding sinfulness of sin, but that all the while He has sympathised with and loved His creatures. It tells us that as a beginning of the Divine purpose of rolling away the curse and of giving instead Divine blessings, Jesus came into the world and died for Adam and his race, "the Just for the unjust," to cancel their judicial obligations—the death penalty upon them—and thus to give them an opportunity in God's due time to return to their former estate, to all that Adam lost—to the perfection which was his when he was in the image of God, and to all that was his in his glorious estate—Paradise.

Chronologically we are already in the great Seventh Day, or Thousand-year Sabbath; we are already forty years into that great Day. This fact explains the blessings which are ours now, which are coming to us increasingly. This progress will continue throughout the great Thousand-year Sabbath of Messiah's Kingdom. The Bible promises that the Messianic reign shall bring blessings to every creature—not only to the living, but to the dead; for "all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and shall come forth."—John 5:28, 29, R. V.

All must be given a full opportunity to come into harmony with the Creator and to attain perfection and everlasting life. Only by personal, wilful, intelligent sin can any one's blessings be turned into the second curse of God, the Second Death, from which there will be no redemption.

Incidentally let us note that the coming of those blessings is, in one sense, premature, in that they have come to us before the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom. Consequently, instead of being happier because of these favors, the world is more unhappy, more discontented, than ever. The Scriptures show that this discontent will culminate in a short, sharp period of anarchy, from which the world will be rescued by the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

The permission of the light and blessings of our day, in advance of Messiah's Rule, the Creator intends shall teach humanity a great lesson respecting their own fallen condition and their need of the very help which God is providing in Christ. None shall have the opportunity of erroneously supposing that God's blessings, coming to unregenerate hearts, will make them thankful and happy. The new heart is necessary to real happiness.

We also incidentally see that if God had sent or permitted the light of our day with its blessings a thousand years sooner, then the discontent of humanity would have culminated in anarchy a thousand years sooner—and before the Divinely arranged time for the establishment of Messiah and His Bride, the Church, in glory for the ruling, blessing and uplifting of humanity.

As we gradually come to realise that we are living in the dawning of the time for the long-promised blessing, this Sabbath Day of earth, when the curse shall roll away, it gives us a fresh interest in all the affairs of the present life, as well as in these features of the Divine Plan which are yet future! The knowledge makes life worth living. Millions of people live a treadmill existence, unworthy of themselves and joyless, because they have not come into the family of God and have not been taught to understand the deep things of His gracious purposes.

The first step is an acknowledgment of the Creator and a consecration of life to Him, and then an application of our hearts to know His will, in order that we may do it. One day of such living is worth more than a year of the aimless meandering common to the masses. All who have entered into this blessing should rejoice therein. All who have not done so should seek the Door, Christ, and be glad to walk the narrow way, following His footsteps into grace and peace Divine.

We may indeed rejoice in the beginning of the reign of right coming to manifestation, in the dawning of the New Day. We may thank God in the glorious spread of knowledge to every clime. We may indeed rejoice in the many comforting, blessing, healing and alleviating of our race. We may thank God that the Day which is ushering in these blessings and which, through irrigation canals and artesian wells, scientific study and teachers, books and newspapers, is making the wilderness to blossom as the rose and many blades of grass to grow where one alone grew previously, bringing increased fruitfulness. But much is to be desired still—much that we cannot accomplish for ourselves. We need an outside influence, an outside power—the very one which the Word of God declares is about to take control—Messiah's Kingdom.

Our blessings thus far are not drawing the masses nearer to God—not making them more thankful, more holy, more reverential, more loving. On the contrary, we are becoming more strifeful, more self-willed, than any previous generation—less inclined as a world than ever before to worship and reverence the God of all grace—less inclined to believe that there is such a Being at all. At the present rate of growth of irreverence, it would seem as though the time might soon come when no knee would bow and no tongue confess, to the glory of God.

But here we look to God to see what provision He has made for present conditions; and as we look, our hearts are cheered. We have the Divinely solemn declaration that the full end of the reign of Sin and Death has come. And we have outlined in God's Word proofs that we are now living in the time when the new Reign of Righteousness shall be inaugurated. We have prayed for it with more or less of faith all our lives: "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven."

Permit not faith to let go her hold; the Word of God cannot fail. As He is bringing to us the temporal blessing promised in His Word and appropriate to this time—the New Dispensation—let us trust Him for every other feature of His promised blessing. He who has begun the good work is able to complete it. If He has promised and has sworn to this Promise, that all the families of the earth shall be blessed in Abraham's Seed, surely we may rely upon it. If we see at present only the Spiritual Seed of Abraham in full harmony with God through Christ, and they not glorified, let us wait patiently for the Lord, knowing that He will fulfil His promises in due time.

The Church, the Elect, are indeed the Spiritual Seed of Abraham. This class, as the Bride of Christ, must be completed and must be united to their Redeemer by the change of the First Resurrection before they will be qualified to share with Him the great work of blessing the Natural Seed of Abraham.—Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

The completion and glorification of the Church will mark the time for the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom. Then will begin the pouring out of the Divine blessing and the removal of the curse. Satan will be bound for a thousand years. The knowledge of God will gradually fill the whole earth. The Natural Seed of Abraham will be the first to receive the Restitution blessings—to return to the image and likeness of God in the flesh, and to have returned to them Paradise conditions and Divine favor. The ancient saintly ones of the Jewish race, we are assured, shall be made princes in all the earth for the correction of their brethren, Natural Israel, and for the instruction and assistance of the people of every nation, kindred and tongue—the living and the dead.

Rapidly the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the whole earth. Corrections in righteousness will be meted out to all not doing their very best to come into harmony with the Divine Law. Blessed rewards of increasing perfection of mind and body will gradually come to the willing and obedient in that Day. The wilful evil-doers shall be cut off in the Second Death. Then, as a result, before the thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom shall expire, every knee shall bow, to the glory of God.

Meantime, also, the blessings of Paradise will be coming to the earth as a whole. God will make the place of His feet glorious. (Isaiah 60:13; 66:1.) Jesus will see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied. (Isaiah 53:10, 11.) All those who have suffered for righteousness' sake during the reign of Sin and Death will be more than compensated therefor in the blessings and joys of the New Dispensation. The knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth. The glorious Divine character will be made manifest, not only to angels, but to men. The infinitude of God's Love, Justice, Wisdom and Power may then be seen by all; whereas to-day, under the reign of Sin and Death, with minds beclouded by the errors instilled by the Prince of Darkness, the opposite condition—darkness—covers the earth, and gross darkness the heathen.

What a glorious consummation is before us! What lengths and breadths of human possibility in perfection we see with the eye of faith! Man was made in the image and likeness of his Creator, and the earth was provided to be his everlasting home. The curse that has rested upon the earth and its king has brought both to angels and to men valuable lessons, which perhaps could not have been learned under any other process of instruction.

The result will be glorious, as described by the Master Himself. There shall be no more sighing, no more curse there, nor sorrow nor pain nor any more dying; for all the things of sin and death will have passed away. He who sits upon the Throne will make all things new.—Revelation 21:4, 5.

The Prophet Isaiah declares that Jehovah will do these things, and that every knee shall bow to Him and every tongue confess. (Isaiah 45:23.) St. Paul applies this Scripture, and declares that it will be fulfilled through Jesus, and incidentally it will be fulfilled by the Church through Jesus. The thought is that in acknowledging Christ and the Church and in bowing to them, the world will be bowing to Jehovah; for the Logos, Jesus, the Redeemer, forever will be the Representative of the Father and His Power. Hence all men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father—not honor the Son as the Father, but as the Father's direct Representative — Heir of all things.—John 5:23; Hebrews 1:2.

The elect Church of the present time already bows the knee to Jesus as the Representative of the Heavenly Father, and already enjoys a great blessing through this special relationship into which she has entered and which is to be completed in her resurrection change. Jesus, as the great King of Glory, and His Bride class, as the great Queen of Glory, will be distinctly separate from the world—sharers of an altogether different salvation. These, begotten of the Holy Spirit, are promised a participation in the Divine nature, which is far above that of the angels, the Apostle assures us.

For the same reason that God is invisible to men, Christ and the Church will be invisible, though all-powerful. The blessings of human Restitution that they will bring mankind will be conveyed through earthly channels, of whom Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets and faithful ones of Israel will be leaders, or princes, as God has declared. These shall not judge by the hearing of the ear or by the sight of the eye, but shall judge righteous judgment.—Isaiah 11:3.

No mistakes will be made; no evil deed shall fail of just recompense; even attempts to commit crimes must cease. Every knee shall bow to the Power then in control, and every tongue confess to the justice of the arrangement. Gradually the new order will appeal to the hearts of mankind, and what at first was obedience by force will become obedience from love and appreciation of righteousness. Eventually all who obey merely because of compulsion will be cut off in the Second Death.

Is 83 Years Old

And Her Heart Does Not Bother Her.

Thanks to MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. McLaren, Commanda, Ont., writes us under date of February 9th, 1914. "Sixteen years ago I took bad with my heart and nerves, and was not able to do anything. I tried a good many doctors, but they did me no good; in fact one doctor gave me up to die. I heard about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I thought I would give them a trial, and after using a couple of boxes I saw that I was improving. I kept on using them for quite a long time. I am eighty-three years old and my heart does not bother me at all.

"I am raising a little girl who was never very strong, and the doctor said that she had palpitation of the heart, so I started to give them to her. She is now twelve years old, and they are doing her more good than I can possibly tell you. I would advise anyone who has a weak heart to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they have done wonders for me.'

GIRLS! STOP WASHING THE HAIR WITH SOAP

Soap Dries Your Scalp, Causing Dandruff, Then Hair Falls Out.

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine, and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong, and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

SUGAR REACHES ELEVEN CENTS PER POUND IN PARIS

PARIS, Feb. 14—Sugar at 11 cents a pound is declared by officials to have reached its highest point. Steps have been taken to encourage the production of the domestic article and officials believe they have solved the general problem.

When the war began there was a food panic. People, with the memory of 1870, recalled through the government's action in commandeering large quantities of food supplies, made a rush for the grocery establishments. Salt and sugar were among the things that were purchased. Sugar, especially, soon disappeared.

Then came the invasion by the Germans of the principal sugar producing provinces and the confiscation of stores on hand. Most of the sugar in France comes from the Nord, Pas-de-Calais, Aisne and Somme departments and the Germans had invaded these. What was still worse three-fourths of the best sugar beet seeds came from Germany and the other quarter from the invaded provinces. The German seed houses were willing to sell their products through Swiss sources. But the French government would not permit this. Then Russia came to the front. She offered a full supply of seeds through the French government at the price that the Germans had asked in the piping days of peace. The offer was accepted.

The French government has taken off the usual duty of $6 a hundred pounds on the seed. But it is admitted the acreage will of necessity be reduced. Still it is believed here that enough ground can be planted to ensure nearly a normal crop and the government will assist in planting and in harvesting it.

Mad Woman of Soissons, Daughters Slain, Follows War to Slab Wounded Germans to Death in The Darkness

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 14.—All the horror of war is epitomized in the tragedy of the "Mad Woman in Soissons." Helpless and unoffending, she is only one among millions of the unknown victims of war.

Last July Monsieur and Madame Mesral were contented proprietors of the Hotel of the Silver Cross at Soissons, in northern France. With them lived their two daughters, young, pretty, docile girls, for whom the thrifty parents were slowly accumulating proper doweries. Pride and long patience had raised the little family to a position of acknowledged respectability.

Germany declared war upon France. In a fortnight Prussian troops entered the city. When they passed, Monsieur Mesral's two daughters were missing. At once their terror-stricken mother started in search of them. A day's march beyond Soissons, she found both her pretty daughters — dead. That discovery unbalanced her mind. "I was the happiest woman in the world," she moaned. "I will never go home until—until."—Then she disappeared.

Gradually out of the hum of rumour grew a terrible, consistent report of a mad woman near Soissons. At dusk after every fight she was said to wander across the battlefield searching out German wounded. These she quietly stabbed to death, crooning: "Don't cry, my little ones; I shall send down to you many, many others like this one."

The tale, whether true or false, adds poignancy to terror. Commanders made efforts to trace the maniac. All failed. Calmer judgment relegated the story to the limbo of dreadful legend.

But one night a French officer was brought into Monsieur Mesral's hotel. Said he:

"I was lying helpless, with a severe wound, between our trenches and those of the enemy, when I heard a stealthy footstep. Out of the shadows came a woman who went about searching among the slain. Presently I heard a hoarse whisper, more like the moan of an animal than human speech.

"'Don't cry, my little ones, don't cry,' the strange woman was staying. 'I shall send down to you many, many more like these.'

"Cold sweat stood on my brow, realizing her mental state. Then she stood over me, staring down. 'You are one of us,' she whispered. 'I will carry you to safety.' And she did. On the way her mind apparently became clearer. 'What did we do to deserve such anguish?' she demanded. 'What can I, their mother, do to repay? Look where the Huns have made a fortress of the quarries. How shall they ever be driven out?'

"Weakened by wounds and pain, I fainted. When I came to, the mad woman was gone. A week later a terrible explosion shook the quarries of Soissons. The galleries were packed with enemy troops. We will never know how many of them perished. Since that day the fighting has been incessant, but no one has again seen the mad woman of Soissons."

AN UNDERSTANDING HEART

(Written for the Christian Science Science)

We find it related in the first book of Kings that when Solomon was asked by the Lord what thing he desired most his answer was, "Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad." And we are further told that "the speech pleased the Lord," and not only was the request granted but riches and honour were bestowed on Solomon, as well. Solomon was aware that in the execution of his duties as a king appeal would be made to him to decide many delicate questions and his desire to do justice to every one and to spare all wrongful suffering no doubt prompted his request. His choice therefore indicated a spirit of unselfishness, since he considered first how he might be best prepared to help others.

When reference is made to this event Solomon is generally spoken of as having chosen wisdom, but what he chose was more than wisdom as that term is generally used. What he requested was "an understanding heart." This is significant, for mortals believe the seat of intelligence to be the head. Men are spoken of as clear-headed or level-headed, and the most successful man, according to selfish human standards, is the one who can outwit his fellows. But the Bible associates true wisdom with the heart. The distinction between mere keenness of intellect and the right sense of wisdom is indicated in the expression not infrequently used regarding a man's actions—"more of the head than the heart," which is intended to contrast coldness and indifference with kindness and consideration. An understanding heart, therefore, was what Solomon prayed for, a heart that could understand his fellow-men, that could sympathize with them, appreciate their difficulties, consider their weaknesses, detect their errors and mistakes and help them to correct their faults and overcome their failures.

The word heart as used in a metaphysical sense, which is also the highest Scriptural sense, is defined by Mrs. Eddy as "Mortal feelings, motives, affections, joys, and sorrows" (Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures, p. 587). It was this heart that Jesus regarded as the seat of impurity on one hand or the means of approach to God on the other, according to its condition. "Out of the heart of men," he declared, "proceed evil thoughts, adulteries fornications, murders . . . All these evil things come from within, and defile the man." But again, "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God."

An understanding heart is what every one needs — a heart that can pity, be patient, tender, forgiving, charitable. Paul gives a wonderful portraiture of the requisite qualifications of a true heart in his description of charity (love) where he says "Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; . . . heareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth." In Science and Health (pp. 365-366) Mrs. Eddy writes, "The poor suffering heart needs its rightful nutriment, such as peace, patience in tribulation, and a priceless sense of the dear Father's loving-kindness." "If we would open their prison doors for the sick, we must first learn to bind up the broken-hearted."

In order to love aright one must understand the controlling power of divine Love; to bring out that which is true and right one must understand the government of divine Principle. Solomon perceived this and so we find him turning to the Lord and waiting to be guided by divine wisdom and Love. Hence the counsel he gives, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding." No wonder he received all the things for which he had not asked! Once the fountain of divine Love has been discovered it is found to be supplied from the reservoir of infinite good.

Christian Science also demands such a close scrutiny of the motives and purposes of one's own heart and the exposure of the errors and weaknesses therein, that one is prepared to be more charitable toward others. He also becomes more alert and of keener discernment, so as to detect the different forms of error in every direction, and to save himself and others from evil consequences. This understanding [illegible] a rebuke to so-called worldly wisdom and sagacity which seeks only the interests of self without regard to the welfare of others. It demands that what has been considered clever business tactics and shrewdness must give place to the better sense of fairness and uprightness. It awakens also a deeper desire for the establishment of right, not just my right, or just another person's right, but the right of all.

It can be readily seen how beneficial this understanding would be to business interests in general if every one in business were seeking and applying it. The truth would quickly reconcile the interests of employer and employee, remove any condition of injustice or imposition, change the fear of failure or loss to a caution against doing wrong or injury to others, replace the greed for gain with a desire for good and supplant the spirit of self-seeking with a desire to bless others. Impractical do you say? It did not so prove in Solomon's case for seeking this unselfishness brought him into possession of riches and honour and he proved the truth and practicability of the declaration of Jesus, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.

Using the fuel as ballast and providing means for quickly moving it from one tank to another, a Connecticut inventor has brought out an aeroplane which he claims always will remain level.

There are more than 100,000 acres of nipa palms in the Philippines, and the government is endeavouring to develop the industry of making cheap sugar and high-grade alcohol from their sap.

French Predict New Era Of Greatness After The War

"France and the France After the War" is the Subject of Much Speculation by Philosophers, Scientists and Physicians

PARIS, Feb. 15—"France and the French after the war" is the subject of much speculation by philosophers, scientists and physicians. Mr. Emile Boutroux, French philosopher, thinks France will come out of the trial better and greater, in spite of all of the destruction of life and property.

"So many human lives taken, so many masterpieces of the past reduced to powder, so much artistic and material wealth annihilated, stupefies us and leaves our souls in incurable pain," he says. "All these sacrifices however, may in certain ways contribute to the betterment of life in our country.

"Our cities and the country contain a great many unhealthy habitations," he declares, "that we were unable to decide ourselves to demolish. We hesitated before the difficulties and before the expense. War has put us face to face with the accomplished fact. Unhealthy and incommodious buildings have disappeared, and will be replaced by constructions conforming to hygenic laws and to the needs of modern life. Many defective conditions of our existence will thus be improved by the reconstruction that will be imposed upon us.

"Death awakens life. After 1870 France pulled herself together and pushed out vigorously in every direction. What shall be its power of development after this terrible trial, above all if the issue is favourable to us?

The cause of the low birth rate resides primarily in selfishness and the disposition to consider only the present or the immediate future. With confidence in the future, with a vast distant prospective opened up, there is awakened a desire to glorify one's self in one's descendants. . . . . A vast career will open up before science, before art, literature, and before practical activity in all its forms.

Fictitious Wants Cast Aside.

'Measures that are most contrary to the indifference of yesterday are today accepted without objection, such as the prohibition of the traffic in absinthe. Civilization has been loaded down with a thousand fictitious needs foreign and harmful to nature; a great many of them are so many chains upon nature and as many causes of fragility and weakness. Now all at once, lacking all these superfluities, we feel no sense of privation. We are conscious, on the contrary, of re-entering upon full possession of our strength and of being better able to dispose of it for the accomplishment of useful work.

"War not only liberates us from selfish passions, but teaches positive virtues; the value of decision, intrepidity, sacrifices of life to honour and to the fatherland; it requires of us patience, and this people who were thought incapable of supporting in silence long and painful trials, this people of whom its enemies said that 'they would come to their aid by insurrection,' remained calm and resolute. * * * The French, it was said, were not apt to act collectively. Their incurable individualism precluded vivacity of mind and talent except to combat one another. Examples, they have given of unity and the efficiency of collective effort will have as important an effect upon France of the future as any other of the lessons of the war."

From the medical standpoint, Professor Chaufford, of the Academy of Medicine, before that Alliance d'Hygiene Sociale, speaking of the mobilisation order and comparing it to one of the great physical phenomena which constantly trouble the universe like earthquakes, tidal waves, etc., says that "the manner in which France supported the shock augurs well for the health of the race after the war.

Find Nervous Stability.

"Adaptation is the greatest law of biology, for we live and preserve our physical and moral life by adapation only. He who is incapable of adapting himself succumbs. The French race adapted itself admirably to this unforseen danger, and to realize this it is only sufficient to remember what Paris and what France were at the moment the mobilization order was published. For the calm confidence with which each one went to his duty we are indebted to a quality that we did not know we possessed perhaps to that degree, nervous stability, to the mastery of ourselves, to the control that we have not lost of our nervous system.

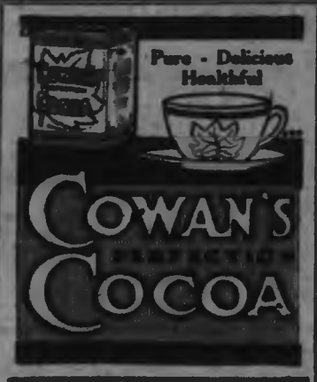
"In a collectivity there are always a certain number of individuals who sufficie for their daily life, but who are unable to accomplish a more arduous task or to support an unforseen shock. When the hour of the trial arrives those succumb. They lose their heads. During the first days of the mobilization a number of such subjects, profoundly troubled mentally, arrived at the hospitals, but in reality their number in proportion to the number of healthy subjects was very small, and many of these troubles were of very short duration. The trial was severe, but it was to our honour, because it bears witness that the French race has not degenerated.

"We knew by long experience that every war involves the outbreak of a great many diseases, and we were very agreeably astonished during the first three months of this war that illness was very rare in all our sanitary stations. The army in barracks reflects the state of health of the civil population with which it is associated. If we were not at war we should now see the disease of the season appear in all our garrisons, but, on the contrary, the army in action is remarkably free from them, and, fortunately, in proportion to the dead, the wounded and the sick there will remain a far greater number who have escaped all the dangers. These will come back heardened, more resistant than they were before, ennobled, ripened and better tempered physically and morally."

This improvd condition of the survivors, Dr. Chauffard thinks, will more than offset the decrease in the birth rate, due to the many deaths, and for that reason he considers that the general physical condition of the French race will be improved by the war.

A Lesson In Hygiene.

Gen. Baden-Powell in his new book, "Quick Training for War," makes a special point of the importance of health to a soldier on active service, and quotes a lesson given by Gen. Sir William Knox to some new men who joined his command in South Africa. The general met the men and marched them straight off to the cemetery. After giving them a lecture on the value of sanitation and hygiene he pointed to the cemetery and said: "There are 750 of your comrades there, not fifty of whom died from wounds. You are 730 strong, and you will all be there unless you obey my orders. I have enlarged the cemetery for that purpose. March off to camp." One of the officers present afterwards told Gen. Knox that the men were greatly impressed by this pointed lesson, and that out of his own company of 130 men he lost in fifteen months only one.



PUT THEM OUT OF MISERY

Murderer Says That Two of Eight Victims Asked to Be Put to Death

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—While on his way from Bellvue Hospital to the Westchester County Jail in White Plains, on a warrant charging him with the murder of "Hanry Horn and others," aged inmates of the German Oddfellows' Home, Frederick Mors made a statement in which he said that "I considered well my actions and then decided that it was my duty to put these old men and women out of their pain, their suffering and the horrors of the long, sleepless nighs".

More had just been declared "mentally unwell" by the Bellvue Hospital alienist and now awaits the action of the grand jury as the first step in a move to inquire into his sanity.

Wanted to be Doctor.

Mors, who is 26 years of age, told of his ambitions to become a physician and this being denied him he gradually acquired some knowledge of medicine and nursing by visiting hospitals in Vienna. He came to this country about ten months ago, he said, and last July obtained employment at the German Oddfellows' Home near Yonkers.

When asked if any of the eight persons he confessed to having killed had requested him to end their misery, Mors said, "two of them."

Why Confessed.

His reason for confessing to the District Attorney of New York City was that he feared an investigation, and that he thought that, according to the law, he would gain immunity by so doing.

Spies and Blotters.

Every Foreign Office of Europe acts on the theory that an army of spies is constantly on the alert to steal its secrets, and infinite precautions are taken to baffle their efforts. The revelations regarding German espionage seem to show that this theory is not so ill-founded.

Very shortly after the first use of blotting paper it was discovered that it was quite possible to cause a blotting pad to give up jealously-guarded secrets by simply holding it in front of a mirror. Long after all the commercial world had forgotten the existence of such a thing, the British Foreign Office used a sand-shaker to dry its important documents.

Then specially manufactured black blotting paper was used, but this was not found to be absolutely spy-proof, and a return to the sand-shaker was contemplated, when someone suggested the simple expedient of a small absorbent roller. These rollers have since been used for drying diplomatic documents. When such a roller has been run up and down and across a document once or twice, the cleverest spy in the world is at liberty to try his hand at deciphering the impressions.

NEITHER ARMY WILL BREAK AWAY AND THIS HAS RESULTED IN ONE OF MOST COMPLICATED PUZZLES

DUNKIRK, Feb. 15.—"What's going to happen when spring comes?"

A Belgian officer, straight from the trenches in Flanders, answered the question for me thus:

"Nothing, in my opinion. The army boards on both sides have got a puzzle to work out that no military men have ever faced in the world's history. Did you ever see two prize fighters get into a clinch and refuse to break apart because each thought the other would get the advantage of him in the breakaway. Well, that's the situation along the line in Flanders to-day, and I suppose, along the whole line. Here are the two armies nose to nose. You can search through military history and you'll never find two armies that have been so close together, without a hand-to-hand battle, as these two vast armies are. Now, how are we going to break apart? You must realize that behind our lines and behind the German lines for many miles the earth has been torn up by trench-makers.

You can't drag artillery over the trenches. You have to bridge each trench, and the more trenches we and the Germans dig now, the harder it will be for either side to move its artillery in the spring, and neither side can advance without moving its big guns. It's going to be a terrible and perhaps impossible job for the artillery on either side when spring breaks. They'll have to bridge the trenches under terrific fire. It will be worse than bridging rivers. It's a new problem for military experts, but only one of a hundred new ones which this war has brought out.

"You know," he added, "it was the Germans who had the new things when this war started. We've found out that years ago they threw away all their old ideas of warfare and started new again, with new ideas and new principles. The Germans from the start have only made new things ready for us. Of course, their huge guns were new. But their trench-making was also new. For instance, the old idea of trench-making was to throw the earth up in a high bank before the trench. But the Germans had a better trick than that. Their idea was to hide their trenches and so they spread out the earth which they took from their trenches in such a way that it was impossible to locate a German trench until you had almost come up to it. The allies were quick enough to adopt the same plan, but we had some nasty lessons first.

Then the Germans introduced a new trick when they borrowed underneath our trenches and blew them up, from below. It took us weeks to get the tools for burrowing. We do as much burrowing now as they do; the Germans started out with a whole bag of new tricks and if they could have gotten to Paris their tricks might have helped them. But they've been so slow that we've learned of their new schemes and, as time goes on, we'll know everything they do about a 20th century war.

"It's an old game played in a new way," he summed up. But it doesn't look like a new game to civilization. It looks like one great murder.

"You civilians miss the point of it" said the Belgian with earnest sincerity. "Let me give you an example. I've done a lot of big game shooting, because I was stationed in Belgian Congo for many years and after I had killed a lion or an elephant I used to watch, with fascination, the faces of the negro bush-beaters. I used to see on them a brutal, animal leer that grew out of the lust for killing. It was always on their faces as they saw an animal die and, in spite of my love for killing big game I used to almost shudder at the smile at killing. But now, I think, that same smile of killing must have been on my face even as I watched the natives, because I've seen it on the face of my soldiers and of my fellow officers, after we've killed a batch of Germans. They look at dying Germans with the same kind of a leer that I used to see on the faces of those Africans.

"Killing is a game," he continued, with the same earnestness. "Men like it. All men like it. In a battle they don't think of their flag or their country or the right or wrong of their cause. They only think of killing; the thought of dying never enters their heads. You'd be the same. Any normal man would be the same. As long as you're well and sound and have plenty of food you'll have the time of your life in war."

"But haven't you ever seen men run away?"

"Never in battle. They run away on long marches, when they are tired, or because they're sleepy, or hungry. Some of them, a few, very few, run away because they can't stand the anticipation of danger. But I've never seen a man run away under fire as long as his ammunition held out and he had a chance to kill. It's very terrible, isnt. But I fear the good God has made us that way.

"You hear a great deal about hardship of the soldiers in the trenches, don't you. That's all very well and all very true. But do you know, that most soldiers will suffer cold, hunger and sleeplessness for many weeks if they are sure that at the end of it all, they are to have only a few little minues of fighting? I know my men as I know my own brother and I know that once they were repaid for weeks of suffering for only ten minutes of a good time. A little later all their hardships were atoned for by 20 minutes good time."

"What do you mean by a good time?"

"Plenty of killing," said the officer, "and then watching the enemy run. Do you know what strikes me as funniest of all?" he concluded.

"What?"

"How little the women of the world know of their men, and how little the men know of themselves until they get a chance to kill."

and sufferings. Here are the makings of a safer Greater Holland! Thousands of Dutchmen must be looking on the map at the present time and thinking such things as this. There, clearly and attractively, is the price of alliance.

The price of neutrality is an intact Holland —and a certain isolation in the years ahead. But still, I admit, a not unhappy Holland, Dutch and free. Until a fresh Anglo-German struggle begins. Yet, be it noted, a Holland a little helpless and friendless if some renascent Asiatic Power should presently covet her Eastern possessions.

The price of participation with Germany, on the other hand, is complete envelopment in the warm embrace of the "good German brotherhood"— the gradual substitution of the German language for the Dutch and a Germanization of such colonies as the allies may still leave for Holland, frequent state visits from Kaisers, and the subordinations of Dutch mercantile interests to those of Hamburg and Altona and (Germanized) Antwerp. And —the everlasting howling everywhere of "Deutschland, Deutschland uber Allies."

Could Free Belgium.

But I have a sort of feeling, for the reasons I have stated, that even without any serious breach of Dutch neutrality by the Germans, Holland may decide presently to put her troops beside the Belgians. And if, as is always possible, the Germans do make some lumpish onslaught upon Dutch neutrality, then I am convinced that at once that sturdy little country will up and fight like the very devil. And do remarkably well by it.

And I think a much stronger feeling that presently the Dutch government will ask the Germans to reconsider their proposed annexation of Belgium. Upon that point Holland has absolutely dictatorial power at the present moment. She could secure the independence of Belgium at the cost of a little paper [illegible] by the mere movement of her army.

The Dutch Hold The Key In The Present Situation

In an article in the New York Times, written by H. G. Wells, but refused publication in Britain by the censor, the author seeks to give his personal views of the position of Holland in the present situation, for he holds that the Dutch hold the key to the problem. For the position of Holland is strong, as the risk of Germany attacking her vanishes daily and she stands well with the allies. Were she now subject to any German outrage, she could strike with her excellent army of 400,000 at Aix la Chapelle, and turn repulse into rapid disaster. Thus they hold a sword at the back of the Kaiser, and they could cut the main communications of the German army in Flanders and capture enough Germans to open up the road to the Rhine, or, in fact, could finish Germany.

What Are the Chances?

Now, says Mr. Wells, against the chances of doing this is her assurance of her freedom, the allies fight for her and the German scare is leaving her people, who have feared it forty years. Then she has the example of the devastation of Belguim before her.

On the other side are the losses Holland is bearing through the war with her army always ready, trade dead and country full of refugees. What if she presently struck to end an oppressive war and end the tension?

And what if she struck also for a hatred of what has happened to Belgium? Suppose the Dutch are not so much frightened by the horrible example of Belgium as indignant. My impression of the Dutch — and we English know something of the Dutch spirit—is that they are a people not easily cowed. Suppose that they have not only a reasonable fear but a reasonable hatred of "frightfulness. Suppose that an intelligent fellow-feeling for a small nation has filled them with a desire to give Germany a lesson. There, it may be, is a second reason why Holland should come in.

Means Greater Holland.

And by coming in, there is something more than the mere termination of a strain and the vindication of international righteousness to consider. There is the possibility and not only the possibility but the possible need, that Holland should come out of this world war aggrandised. I want to lay stress upon that, because it may prove a decisive factor in this matter.

Indeed, in twenty years' time Holland may need to be a stronger country, for then she may lie alone between Britain and Germany — a dangerous position unless she is well prepared and protected. So that the desire to be larger is tempting and she may yet join the allies and France, Belgium, Holland and Britain be hereafter joined for mutual protection. The improved frontier the allies could award Holland as the fruits of war, and crushing of Germanic power are very tempting —and Germany must be crushed!

The Improved Holland.

It is not difficult to map a very much improved Dutch frontier along the Ems, and thence striking down to the Rhine and meeting the iron country on the left bank of the Rhine, whose annexation and exploitation in Belgium's legitimate compensation for her devastation

COMFORTS FOR THE HOSPITAL

Bale May Be Inspected on Wednesday Next

The citizens of Peterborough and any friends interested in the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe, Kent, England, are invited on Wednesday afternoon next, Feb. 17, to the reception room at the armouries to inspect the bale which is to be sent to the hospital. The room will be open from 3.30 o'clock until 5.30. There will be no charge for admittance, but the Peterborough Progressive Club will be glad to receive any donations that may be handed in to help to defray the expense in sending the bale. Any tobacco, socks, mufflers, ec., brought in that day for the comfort of the soldiers can be packed and sent with the things.

Mayor Buller has kindly consented to come in about 4.30 and give a short address. d2

LOVE SPURNED YOUNG MAN ENDS LIFE

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—His tempestuous Brazilian love having been spurned by the young woman in whose smiles he had basked on board ship, Otto L. Buriche, son of a wealthy coffee planter, shot and killed himself in a taxicab in front of the house where she is staying in Brooklyn last evening.

Miss Helen F. Laing, whose father is a wealthy resident of Nova Scotia, told the police, they said, that she had discouraged the young man's attentions following their voyage together from Rio de Janeiro on board the Sao Paulo, which arrived here a week ago last Tuesday, but that he had annoyed her with many telephone communications despite her repeated statements that she could not see him.

Mr. Buriche, who was twenty-eight years old, and two other young men of good Brazilian families, came to this city to study American commerce, they said, on board the Sao Paulo, where they met Miss Laing, who was returning from a tour of South America.

They formed the "younger set" on board the vessel, and during the long voyage they were much together. Ie was said that Mr. Buriche believed his attentions were welcofe to Miss Laing.

Thought His Attentions Pleased.

When the Sao Paulo reached this port Mr. Buriche told Miss Laing he was going to the Biltmore and she informed him that she would stop with her friend, Mrs. A. G. Reynolds, at 621 Third Street, Brooklyn. It was said she gave the Reynolds telephone number to the young Brazilian.

Miss Laing said that Mr. Buriche had called her many times on the telephone and had implored her to accompany him to dinners and dances, but, she told the police, they said that her chilly Nova Scotian temperament would not rest harmoniously with Mr. Buriche's fiery Brazilian manners, and she therefore refused to meet him.

"Ours was nothing but a travelling acquaintance," she said, "and there was no reason to continue it on land."

It was said that he had called her by telephone several times yesterday, but that always someone else answered and informed him that Miss Laing was out.

Thos. W. Locke was waiting for a fare for his taxicab at the Biltmore a little before six o'clock last night when Mr. Buriche engaged him.

"Drive me to 621 Third Street, Brooklyn, in a hurry," he commanded.

Shot in the Taxicab.

Locke drove as quickly as he could and just as he stopped in front of the Reynolds home he heard a shot inside the vehicle. Opening the door he found Mr. Buriche wit ha pistol in his hand and his head dropped forward on his breast.

When Policeman Thos. Keyes arrived, he ran into the house, where there was much excitement, and found Miss Laing, who said the man must be Mr. Buriche.

Girl, Penniless Ends Life In Park

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—A young woman whose identity and motive are mysteries shot and killed herself last night in Central Park.

Dr. H. A. Cone, of No. 329 Central Park West, and Robert B. Bamberger, of No. 1,220 Madison Avenue, entered the park at West Ninety-third Street gate about half-past ten o'clock for a short stroll. A hundred yards inside the park they came upon the young woman sitting on a bench. It was too dark for them to see her face distinctly and as they passed they remarked to each other about her solitude.

They had gone on only twenty feet when they were startled by a shot and turned in time to see the girl topple forward and fall from the bench. They ran back and, lifting her to the bench, found she had been shot in the head.

While Mr. Bamberger remained with her, Dr. Crone hurried to his home, near the Ninety-third Street entrance, and obtained a first aid kit and ran back to the bench. By that time, however, the girl was dead. By her side was a new pistol.

In a hand bag she had carried was a memorandum book in which were written the name and address of A. H. Freund, No. 1 West Ninety-third Street. Mr. Freund went over to the park and looked at the girl, but he said he did not know her. He said it was probable that she was one of several girls who had answered an advertisement for a servant.

She was about twenty-one years old, [illegible] and two [illegible] dress. She wore a black hat, a white shirt waist, a black suit and black shoes. She had no money or valuables.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effercescent litha-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

Mr. H. O. Fisk, maanger of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, has been authorised to purchase ten transformers. The order will likely be placed with the Canadian General Electric Company.

Issue Debentures.

The City Council will be asked to issue debentures for $18,060 to pay for the 1914 expenditure on water mains and service, in connection with the Waterworks Department.

Committee Meeting.

The committee of the Whole Council will meet this evening. It is altogether likely that the salary question will come up for discussion.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

A big break in the intake pipe of the Brockville waterworks system has been discovered. It is thought that sewage flowed through this into the city water.

Claimed the Seat.

Judge Barron heard at Stratford, an action brought by Mr. John C. Hay, of Listowel, against Reeve J. A. Hocking of that town, claiming the reeve's seat. The judge stated that at most the seat could only be declared vacant.

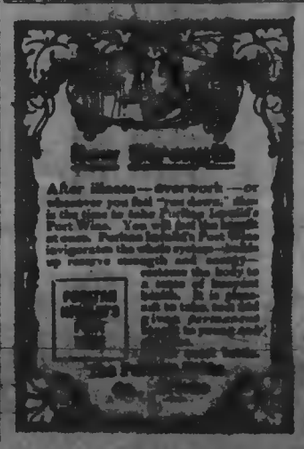
QUICK, SAFE WAY TO REMOVE HAIRS

(Toilet Talks)

Keep a little delatone powder on your dressing table and when ugly, hairy growths appear, make a paste with a little of the powder and some water, apply and let remain on the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. This treatment is safe, harmless and rarely more than one application is required, but to avoid disappointment care should be used to buy the real delatone.

HAILEYBURIAN

HAILEYBURY, Feb. 16.—The Haileyburian has been sold by Mr. W. E Errett, who has been editor for some months past, to Mr. G. R. T. Saul. The change went into effect this week. Mr. Saul is from Prince Rupert, B.C., and for some time had charge of papers in that town and at New Hazelton, B.C.



WITNESS IN LOCAL ARBITRATION CASE

Mr. W. C. Hawkins, referred to in the appended item, taken from a Hamilton exchange, was called as a witness by the Peterborough Light and Power Company in connection with the arbitration that is being waged between the City and Company.

It was Mr Hawkins who calculated the value of the local power plant at five times the gross annual receipts, making the local power plant worth, according to his figures, $357,000.

Following is the item referred to:

Justice Sutherland handed down his judgment on the motion of John G. Gauld, K.C., to have W. C. Hawkins of the Dominion Power and Transmission Company committed to jail for refusing to answer questions in connection with the examination for discovery in the action of C. W. Moodie v. the D. P. & T. company. His Lordship ordered Mr. Hawkins to answer all the questions, as it was imperative that he should do so in the interests of the plaintiff. The case has been pending for some years, but the plaintiff has not been able to secure all the evidence he desires. The judgment was as follows:

"In this case there was a fiduciary relation existing between the individual defendants, directors of the company and the shareholders thereof, inclusive of the plaintiff. He alleges that improper and excessive sums have been appropriated by these directors in breach of their obligation to him. It is necessary for him to obtain particulars thereof. He cannot obtain these at present except through discovery from the defendants. They are expressly in issue in the action and I am of opinion that he is entitled to the disclosure sought in the questions which are involved on this motion. An order will therefore go directing the defendant Hawkins to reattend for examination at his own expense and answer the question referred to in the notice of motion or otherwise that his defence be struck out. Costs of the motion costs to plaintiff in the cause."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Her Convert to the Cause

He Was an Apt Pupil in Two Ways.

By AGNES G. BROGAN

"I am glad you are interested, my dear," said Mrs. Sturtevant. "Young and charming women are needed to keep up enthusiasm in the cause."

Bettie glanced admiringly into the older woman's face. "It was all so lovely," she murmured. "The shaded lights and you, with your silvery hair and velvet gown, making that wonderful speech. Indeed, I was quite thrilled."

"Good," laughed the speaker of the afternoon, "and prettily said, Miss Bettie! Won't you come to our open meeting tonight and inspire others? The fathers, brothers and sweethearts are invited, for, between you and me, my dear, notwithstanding our boasted independence, it is the man's assistance which we need and must have."

So Bettie gladly agreed, bursting in upon her assembled family a short time later in a state of jubilant excitement.

"I am a suffragette," she explained, somewhat incoherently, "and it's the finest thing in the world. Hereafter I shall have a voice in matters which concern me, and men shall not entirely manage my affairs. I am going to another meeting tonight, Dickie," she went on, "and you will have to take me."

Her brother rested knife and fork to look at her. "I have an engagement," he began tentatively.

"What time?" his sister asked.

Dick considered. Lectures and things of that sort usually opened at 8 o'clock. "Seven-thirty," he answered briskly.

Bettie seated herself at the table. "Then you need be only half an hour late for your engagement," she remarked.

"I think I never saw so many beautiful women gathered together as there here tonight," the young man continued.

Bettie leaned forward, eager for a discussion. "That," she explained, "is because they are interested and enthusiastic. All suffragettes are beautiful."

Her companion shook his head decidedly. "I have attended other meetings," he replied.

"You are prejudiced," Bettie accused.

"Not a bit of it," her companion retorted. "Why, my own sister is an ardent worker for the cause."

"And she has not convinced you?" Bettie incredulously exclaimed.

The young man laughed. "Heaven couldn't convince me in a thousand years," he said; "she's too illogical."

Bettie bestowed a contemptuous glance upon him. "'There is no one so blind as those who will not see,'" she quoted.

The provoking young man was about to regard her amusedly. "I am open to conviction upon every subject," he answered. Bettie studied the frank, good natured face reflectively. Here would be a convert worthy of the cause—manly, forceful, with a magnetism of personality that drew one against one's protesting will to look again and still again into the mocking dark eyes. At home in the corner of her desk was tucked an instructive book which Mrs. Sturtevant had urged her to study. She might look it over before tomorrow evening and then—

"Sometimes," said Bettie, "one is not in sympathy with a certain movement because one does not fully understand its purpose. Now, if I could prove to you the benefit of suffrage, could explain its many"—

"You could," the young man interrupted with surprising readiness; "I'm sure you could. May I call some evening and learn your views on the subject? Being mutual friends of Mrs. Sturtevant and all that"—

"Tomorrow?" Bettie suggested, and her companion agreed with alacrity. She leaned back with a sigh of relief. Mrs. Sturtevant would be pleased with this conquest. But that lady had ascended the platform steps. Bettie leaned forward, listening in a glow of pride to that perfectly modulated voice.

"Clever speech," she remarked to the young man at her side, but he quizzically raised his eyebrows.

"Her statistics are wrong," he replied.

"They are not"—Bettie's cheeks were flaming with indignation—"they could not be wrong."

"Then perhaps you will explain to-morrow evening," this exasperating young man went, "how it would be possible for 70,000 people"—

Bettie's red lips closed determinedly. For the benefit of this scoffer she would straighten out those tangled figures if she were obliged to sit up all night, book in hand, in order to do it. As Mrs. Sturtevant's voice droned on and on the young man apparently became less interested. Drawing a paper at last from his pocket, he indulged in desultory scribbling, erasing as he wrote. When Bettie could no longer endure this open inattention she arose to leave the proximity of so annoying a companion.

"If the remarks bore you," she said severely, "you might at least pay the speaker the courtesy of attention." But as Mrs. Sturtevant, graciously smiling, descended the platform the leader's clear voice came to them.

"I now take great pleasure," she announced, "in introducing to you the speaker of the evening, whose generous support of our cause has helped materially to increase its power, whose eloquence has won for us many followers. Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Spencer Brown."

And before Bettie's bewildered eyes her companion arose, with a mischievous smile, and sauntered carelessly toward the raised dais.

"I am still with you," he called, while the cultured audience cheered wildly.

By the instructive speech progressed anger and wounded pride burned in the heart of Bettie. Here he had this deceitful young man, drawing her out in his guileless way, to secretly laugh her to scorn. Wrathfully she clutched her opera glasses and moved toward the door. Dad was there awaiting her coming.

"Let us stay for Brown's speech," he whispered. "It's sure to be worth while. He is the young 'mess of the hour' in Tuxbury, bound to be mayor some day and later more than that, mark my words." But Bettie flounced on down the stairs. So breathless was her flight that she did not miss her opera cloak until some one stood holding it out to her from an upper rung of the stairs.

"If you were not interested in the remarks," reproached a tantalizing voice, "you might at least have given the speaker the courtesy of attention." Bettie gazed in wide eyed astonishment at the tall figure above.

"May I ask you to wait while I restore your property?" the speaker continued. "My pride and dignity have suffered sufficiently in this sudden, hasty exit from the hall without being further obliged to descend bending down the stairs."

A smile trembled at the corners of Bettie's lips; then she dimpled merrily. "You are not 'obliged,'" said Bettie.

"I am," positively declared Mr. Brown. When he had carefully wrapped the cloak about her shoulders he still lingered. "I have a message from Mrs. Sturtevant," he told her. "You are elected delegate to the convention at Bronxhurst tomorrow, while I have been chosen speaker; therefore we shall have to postpone that instructive meeting at your home—unless you would be so kind as to enlighten me during the journey."

There was no reply.

"I have been called a delightful traveling companion," modestly suggested Mr. Brown. He bent to look earnestly into the girl's averted face. "You will go?" he begged.

"But I do not understand the duties of a delegate," she objected.

"A delegate's chief duty," Mr. Brown informed her, "is to see that the speaker is well entertained."

"Indeed?" questioned Bettie.

"Yes," answered the speaker. For a moment their eyes met in laughing challenge; then the girl's lowered before something softly shining in his own.

"I will go," she said.

And long after the door had closed upon her slender figure the young man stood lost in reverie.

"And Bronxhurst just begins the journey," he murmured happily.

The convention at Bronxhurst was eminently successful. The convention hall was crowded and the enthusiasm was at fever heat. Mr. Brown took a prominent part in some of the discussions and gave sound advice. Bettie's attention was fixed upon him with ever increasing admiration.

All things must have an end, and so had the convention. Bettie remembered that the next evening she was to convert Mr. Brown to the cause and wondered if he would appear for the purpose of being converted. As the hour appropriate for an evening call approached, dressed in her most becoming costume, she awaited the coming of the man to whom she was to ex-

MR. H. O. FISKE'S EVIDENCE ON THE POWER PLANT THE CITIZENS WILL PAY FOR Arbitration Board Recommenced Work Yesterday With the Peterborough Light and Power Company's Former Superintendent on the Stand---Will City Have to Pay for Rural Extensions?---Question Not Decided.

The arbitration of the sum to be paid by the city to the Peterborough Light and Power Company for the distributing system acquired under special legislation and under the guidance of the Hydro-Electric Commission was resumed at the Court House on Monday afternoon. The direct concern of the proceedings to the individual ratepayer may warrant a brief review of the more recent steps to reach a settlement. By a special by-law the city secured possession of the company's power distributing plant and paid into Court $100,000.00, which represented the city's estimated value of $94,000 and $6,000 for eventualities. Upon the company objecting that the amount was too small both parties agreed to an arbitration.

The arbiters selected were R. A. Ross of Montreal for the city, Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., for the company, and His Honour Judge Huycke as the third member and chairman of the Board. Opening the first session on January 28th, the company submitted probably the bulk of its statement, which included an approximate valuation of the system acquired by the city at $200,000.

The humble ratepayer will immediately grasp the significance of his interests in the arbitration which is to determine the annual amount the city shall pay the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

Yesterday Mr. M. K. Cowan opened the city's case by calling

Mr. Homer O. Fiske, recently appointed manager of the Public Utilities Commission. Mr. Fiske stated that he came to Peterborough in 1888, when he assumed the superintendency of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. At that time it was owned by the Dickson Lumber Company. In 1912 he became superintendent of the Seymour Power Company, which he held until December, 1914, when he entered the employ of the city with the Utilities Commission.

Poles and More Poles.

Mr. Fiske was on the stand from two o'clock until almost six and with the exception of a few divergent references to meters, transformers, and other electrical equipment, most of the argument was central upon poles. Apparently every fact about the poles which decorate the streets was laid before the arbiters. The life of poles, the length, the cost, the purchase of poles, the effect of the soil on them, these and divers other details one would scarcely believe could be unearthed about poles were touched upon. Again, the ratepayer will understand that the arbitration is something of a prolonged haggle, arguing would be a better term, regarding the value of the whole distributing equipment upon which the city had set her heart. A plain statement of the proceedings is simply this that the company endeavours to show that their poles, meters, transformers, etc., are worth a certain figure; the company introduces evidence to show that the figure is too high. Look at it from the other angle and you find the city estimating the value of the plant and the company submitting that city's estimate is too low.

After a general skirmish over the plant within the city, the two forces rushed into an engagement on that part of the equipment extending beyond the city's boundaries for light service. Mr. Cowan, representing the city, argued that the Expropriating Act, and especially the city by-law, specified only the lines within the boundaries. Mr. Nesbitt claimed that the by-law copied the terms of the Act, which he argued included the transmission lines beyond the city.

"Then if the company had a service extending to Havelock you consider it should be included." Mr. Cowan submitted as an extreme illustration.

Mr. Nesbitt replied that he thought it should.

The arbiters held a consultation to receive Mr. Cowan's objection, but to continue the hearing.

Some Polar Facts.

Mr. Fiske stated that in 1889 there were 275 poles in the Peterborough Light and Power Company's system. They were erected in 1888 and in 1889. One of his first duties was the renovation of the pole system, and only a few of the old poles erected before he took charge were left in use.

In 1901 he made another survey. There were 689 poles in the Peterborough Light and Power Company's and 125 in the Auburn Power Company's systems. The Auburn Company's poles were erected in 1896 and 1897. In 1901 Mr. Fiske made the Auburn survey, because a lease of the plant was about to be taken by the Peterborough Light and Power Company. In 1911 he made another pole count, showing 1,490 Peterborough Light and Power poles and 165 Auburn poles.

To Mr. Cowan, Mr. Fiske said that during his experience from 1896 to 1912 he found the useful life of poles in Peterborough averaged from 10 to 24 years.

On this question of pole life, Mr. Fiske said he saw Ontario Telephone poles, erected on Simcoe Street in 1890 that were taken down in 1914. Out of seven of them, four were quite rotten two feet below the ground. In Mr. Fiske's words, "the y had given way."

Exhibit 18 was then put in. It was a section of the "root" of a pole on Ware Street, put up in 1904 and removed in 1910. It was an exhibition of the extent to which the underground part of the pole was alleged to have deteriorated during 10 years.

Mr. Fiske said that the layer part of the line hardware was of common iron, not more than 20 per cent. being galvanized.

What it Costs to Erect a Pole.

Mr. Fiske submitted a statement showing the cost of the labour involved in erecting on February 5 a pole of 35 feet in height. The figures were obtained from a recent operation in the ordinary course of work and not as a rush operation.

The figures were as follow:
Digging hole, 1 man, 3 hrs.	.75
Peeling pole	.30
Drawing pole	.50
Raising and filling	.70
Framing	.10
Cross bars	.40
	$2.75

The Condition of Lamps.

Of the arc lighting system Mr. Fiske said it was here when he came to Peterborough in 1889.

"How do you replace the lamps?" Mr. Cowan asked.

"We've been fortunate in buying scrap lamps around the country."

"Why don't you buy them from the manufacturers?"

"Because they are not made now, I don't think they have been made during the past 10 or 12 years.

"Where have you been buying these second hand lamps?"

"From Thompson & Co. of Montreal."

Mr. Fiske said the last price paid was $4.20, but he had a faint recollection, he said, that years ago they cost only $2.00 each.

"They're rarer birds now, eh?" observed Mr. Cowan.

The Carbons Absolete.

Going into details regarding the carbons Mr. Fiske said those used are absolete in type. Supplies were secured from Europe, but since the war the supply has stopped. Arrangements were made to get some from a U. S. company, who asked for measurements of the local arc lamps. There were no lamps of that kind in the United States and they did not ordinary make carbons as required for the local lamps.

The Meters.

Mr. Fiske's data as to meters went back to 1898 when, he said, 242 were used and practically all of them were doing duty to-day. They were the Thompson commutation type now obsolete. In 1897 there were 687 Peterborough meters which are not made now. About half of them, Mr. Fiske said, are in use and the other half on the shelf.

Regarding 204 meters in stock he declared them to be scrap. They could not be trusted. The hands jumped a whole division at once, not moving uniformly like the hands of a timepiece. They were liable to register too much or too little. The company scrapped them and put in others.

Replies to Mr. Tilley.

To Mr. W. N. Tilley's question as to the location of the poles erected in 1889 of which he had said 30 p.c. were still in use, Mr. Fiske mentioned the streets they occupy.

Are they in good condition?

They are in bad condition below the ground line. I sounded a good many of them with a pick. I concluded that by cutting off 5 or 6 feet and resetting them, they would last a considerable period

Mr. Tilley presented an inventory of poles prepared by Mr. H. A. Fife in 1912. Mr. Fiske was present with Mr. Fife when the inventory was made.

Mr. Tilley asked Mr. Fife if he had then told Mr. Fife that many of the poles erected in 1889 were good for another ten years.

Mr. Fiske—"We drove around the system, but we did not test one in fifty."

Mr. Tilley endeavoured to secure a statement from Mr. Fiske upon what he had said to Fife on that occasion regarding the condition of the poles and their and their continued duration in service.

The inventoried estimates for poles on Hunter Street from the river to Aylmer, for instance, ranged from 10 to 30 years.

Mr. Fiske stated that he had no recollection of what he had said about particular poles at that time.

Mr. Fiske—You say that I said they were good for 10 more years. I have no recollection of what I said that far back, but I say now that I don't think they would.

Mr. Tilley—If you did not say it you meant that they would stand 10 years.

Mr. Fiske admitted that they might have stood for ten years from that time, but most of them would be rotten below the ground line and liable to give way at any time.

Erecting a Pole.

Mr. Fiske stated that his estimate of the cost of erecting a pole was obtained from the foreman's time slip. He was not present when the work was done.

His cost of digging post holes, 40c. to 60c. each was based on years of experience. One man could dig four or five post holes a day.

Mr. Tilley—This man you mention took three hours. He must have been wasting time.

Mr. Fiske—That was in winter, this month. A recent line cost $7.70 for 11 holes. That was actual work to the Queen Mary school.

The Pole Yard.

Mr. Tilley— Something was said about a lot of useless poles in the pole yard.

Mr. Fiske—They should be cheap. They're the culls of years.

Mr. Tilley— Did you pass any of them?

Mr. Fiske—I'm not prepared to say. It was three or four years back.

Mr. Tilley— Have the poles from the Radial Railway ever been separated from the Peterborough Light & Power Company's?

Mr. Fiske did not know.

Mr. Tilley—Did you not get a letter dated Dec. 4th to meet the Railway people.

Mr. Fiske replied that he was not manager then. The letter did not reach him until February.

Mr. Tilley—I am told you passed all except two piles which Mr. Fife passed.

Buying Poles.

Continuing, Mr. Fiske explained that many poles were purchased from farmers "en bloc"—by the lot. Only the good ones were used, but the farmers would not sell unless all were taken.

Mr. Tilley—Did your company not always demand good ones?

Mr. Fiske—No.

Mr. Tilley read a statement dated Jan. 9th, 1912, showing 118 poles passed by Mr. Fiske, the paper bearing the remark, "Found in good order," as read by Mr. Tilley.

Suburban System.

Then followed the argument as to whether transmission lines extending to customers living outside the city should not be included in the whole.

Mr. Cowan laid stress on the "within the city" phrase.

Mr. Nesbitt pointed to the words "or operated in connection therewith," claiming that this meant outside the city lines in connection with the system within the city.

After Judge Huyoke stated that they would proceed, keeping the two sections separate however, an adjournment was arranged.

HEAVY SNOW INTERFERE

With Fighting in Upper Alsace and in the Vosges—German Offensive Has Been Checked

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 15 — Heavy snowfalls have again interferred with the fighting in Upper Alsace and the Vosges. The attempted German offensive is reported generally to have been checked in that region. Elsewhere along the fighting front the exchanges seemed to monopolize by artillery and both sides have suffered from destroyed advanced trenches.

Extensive movements of troops are reported to be in progress along the line from the Aisne northward, and it is believed here that an effort to retake the ground north of the Aisne, ceded to the Germans because of heavy floods, will soon be undertaken.

The German artillery continues its bombardment of Soissons and through the use of inflammable shells has been able to destroy several blocks of ruined buildings in the centre of the City. At Labassee British heavy mortars have compelled the Germans to withdraw some of the artillery and to replace it with pieces of heavier calibre.

To serve ice-cream without wasting by melting, an Illinois man has invented a can, the bottom of which is lifted by turning a handle, forcing some of the contents into a measure.

HOLLAND PROTESTS

Notes Sent to Germany and Great Britain Regarding Acts of These Governments

STRICTLY NEUTRAL

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

THE HAGUE, Feb. 16—The Netherlands has maintained the strictest neutrality by presenting notes of protest at the same moment to Germany and Great Britain regarding the acts of these Governments in respectively declaring a war zone of the waters around the British Isles and in using neutral flags.

Diplomats here have been awaiting action of this kind, and their expectations were fulfilled when it was announced that the Dutch Minister at Berlin had been instructed to hand the note to the German Foreign Office, the other note being communicated to Great Britain at the same time.

There has been much discussion of the dangers to be encountered in the North Sea, and Dutch shipping is menaced more than that of any other neutral nation, owing to the large number of Dutch vessels passing through the English Channel on the voyage to the Dutch Indies.

TERMINATE THE WAR

Winston Churchill Says Navy Could Do So To-morrow But Sacrifice Would Be Terrible

NIGHT BULLETINS

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 15—Winston Churchill has announced that Britain has lost sixty-three ships to date, but that the British navy could terminate the war to-morrow, but the nation doesn't care to make so terrific a sacrifice of her men. British super-dreadnoughts are being equipped with new fifteen inch guns, the greatest in the world.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 15.—The War Office declares that the Russian troops in East Prussia have again resumed the offensive and another advance towards Berlin has commenced.

ATHENS, Feb. 15.— It is reported here that the Greek minister to Turkey has demanded his passports over the Albanian trouble.

BERLIN, via wireless, Feb. 15.—The War Office claims that the Czernowitz capital of Bukowina has been re-occupied by the Austrian forces.

PARIS, Feb. 15.— Late despatches confirm the report of a further British advance near the coast and the capture of several hundred Germans with field guns.

ALLIES TO ENFORCE A COMPLETE BLOCKADE

Britain Waits the Coming of "Der Tag" With Supreme Confidence --- Precautions Undertaken Will Nullify Any Underseas Raid.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 16.—(Special Cable).—Britain waits the coming of "Der Tag" with supreme confidence. Official aldom generally accepts the announcement of the German submarine blockade which commences on Thursday, as indicating the "beginning of the end." It is felt that this will be Germany's last great blow. Her zeppelins have failed to come up to expectations, and her fleet being forced to remain impotent behind her closely guarded land fortifications, the last weapon available is her great fleet of submarines.

And the British Admiralty very calmly declares that the precautions already taken will absolutely nullify any under-seas raid that may be attempted. There is not a single official of either the army or navy but believes that Germany will mark her doom the moment her submarines unleese their torpedoes at merchant men carrying passengers.

They declare the civilized world will not view with equanimity the sending to the bottom of trading ships with their crews and passengers unwarned and unable to save themselves.

It is considered certain to-day in light of this speech that the combined British-French-Russian fleets will enforce what is likely to prove the most complete blockade ever attemped by belligerents. It is the intention of the government to entirely cut off all German ports from shipping, to drag for their mines and in all probability attempt to force some of the weakest of their defended harbours.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 16.—The militia authorities to-day are investigating a sensational story to the effect that a car of oats shipped in for the Mounted Rifles horses was poisoned by German sympathizers. It is stated that the poisoning was discovered accidentally when an employee took home a pailful of oats that had fallen out of the car and fed them to chickens, which all died.

THE BRITISH CAPTURE TWO LINES OF TRENCHES

Successful Near the Ypres Canal in the Only Infantry Action That Has Taken Place Since Sunday---Situation Generally is Satisfactory.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 16.—3 p.m. Official.—That the British troops who have been on the offensive between St. Elice and the Ypres canal have succeeded in recapturing two lines of outlying trenches previously taken from them by the Germans in a series of assaults was admitted to-day. It was stated at the War Office that at this point has taken place the only infantry engagements since Sunday. Elsewhere along the entire battle front the exchanges are confined to artillery. The previous reports of notable successes by the allies' artillery, in spite of the Germans at several points, notably in Souain and the Argonne regions are confirmed. It is stated that the allies' artillery is being used all along the entire line to silence and dismount V guns. Generally speaking the situation is declared to be satisfactory.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The New York Times says to-day in regards to the German war zone order:

If the German people have not enough to eat or face near and certain prospect of not having enough, it is evidently to renew the suggestion that they should ask what they are fighting for. Certainly not for victory. If there is already a shortage of food, victory is not to be hoped for. They cannot be fighting for terms of peace. The longer the fighting is kept up the harder the terms. If they are fighting only because their Emperor and his military advisers tell them to fight is it not time for them to inquire whether they should not have a voice in the matter. The prolongation of war means only the postponing of an humiliation to multitudes of the German people—means death or life-long sorrow.

Mr. Fiske's Evidence On The Condition of Street Wire And Transformers Submitted To-day

The arbiters of the City's purchase of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's distributing system were presented with another mass of evidence this morning. A small gallery of interested ratepayers listened to the argument, but Mr. Cowan, upon a glance around the benches, found one of the few regulars absent. "Where's Hydro Johnston?" he asked in an aside. At the present rate, the hearing will scarcely be concluded on Dollar Day, but the number of dollars involved in the arbitration precludes passing lightly over even the smallest details.

At the outset the argument turned to the principal topics of the arbitration, costs and values.

Mr. Fiske submitted that the cost of putting in services was from 50 to 75c each. Eleven services put up during January and February reached a total labour cost of $8.02, or an average of 73c.

The Wire Supply.

By figures produced from an inventory, Mr. Fiske stated that in 1889 the company had 19¼ miles of No. 6 arc circuit wire or 10,000 pounds of it. This, he said, was still in existence and would now be 26 years old. Between 1889 and 1896 1,650 pounds of No. 6 wire were purchased.

An Auburn Power Co. inventory, taken in 1901 showed 14,840. This plant was constructed in 1896-7, and some of the wire was purchased second hand. Thus in 1896 there was a total of 26,490 lbs. of arc wire. In view of the figures, Mr. Cowan queried Mr. Tilley as to where he got 11 years for the line of wire. In 1904 when the street lighting contract was renewed 6,452 lbs. were added.

In 1896 there were four forty arc light generators in the Murray Street Power House, and Mr. Fiske believed they were still there. Two of them were really bought in 1887 and 1888. All of them were used in the old Dickson Power House on the east side of the bridge. A fifth was purchased in 1889-90. Of these five machines, Mr. Fiske said, two of them were badly worn, two others were not quite so bad, and a fifth had been scrapped.

The switch board, Mr. Fiske said, was the one used in the old plant and dated back to 1884 or 1885. In 1900 the wooden board was replaced by a marble slab, but the brass switches and fittings were retained.

The belting dated to 1888 he claimed, and to Mr. Tilley stated that he did not know of any new belting in 1901.

Regarding the 10,000 lbs. of street lighting wire mentioned by him as being in use in 1889, Mr. Fiske told Mr. Tilley that as far as he knew it was still in use.

"But do you know?"

Mr. Fiske—"As far as I can recollect all but very little at any rate of that wire is still used."

"You said that when you bought arc lamps now they cost you $4.20?"

"Yes."

"When were the 24 you mention bought?"

"In 1911."

"In the 1889 inventory you put in have you arc lamps there?"

"Yes. 100, listed at $40 each."

"Well, that's what they were worth, and we have them listed to the city at $5.00," Mr. Tilley observed.

Mr. Fiske said he believed most of them had been replaced by cheaper lamps. Some of the cheap lamps bought had to be rewound. Most of them were completed lamps.

Foreman Called.

Mr. Harry Beatty, foreman of the line work under the Utilities Commission, was next called. He admitted to being one of the assets taken over by the city, but not included in the inventory. He had worked three years with the Peterborough Light and Power Co. His evidence had particularly to do with the cost of putting in lighting services, etc., and explained a bundle of exhibit time slips.

Regarding connections to houses, Mr. Beatty said he found most houses now wired before the connection was made; there were a few exceptions.

He had not made out time cards prior to January 2nd. On that date Mr. Fiske told him to make them out for every job, as they might be useful. Employees made out the time spent on various jobs as nearly correct as they could. Mr. Beatty said the men were kept busy all the time.

On the special pole raising referred to by Mr. Fiske as costing $3.75, Beatty said one man started about seven o'clock to dig the hole. About ten o'clock four men arrived and remained fifteen minutes. One man remained until after 11:15 o'clock when the pole was in position.

Mr. Tilley asked that the details of the work on other services be submitted after the noon adjournment.

Tariff Will Be Discussed

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Feb. 16—The Liberals held their first caucus this morning, and discussed at length the various features of the session at programme. The main topic of discussion was the question of the tariff as raised by the new announcements in the budget last Thursday.

The debate on the budget will be resumed next Thursday. The Liberals appear to be determined that criticism shall be offered where criticism is merited. The tariff bill, in its various phases, raises various topics for serious debate, and it is expected that many of the differences which have existed between the two parties will be revived during the discussion.

Final Rehearsal of Choral Society

The Peterborough Choral Society hold the final rehearsal to-night for the concert to be held in the Collegiate Institute next Tuesday. Many members are engaged in several programmes in the City and for their convenience the rehearsal will commence promptly at 8 o'clock, so that they may be on hand for other programmes. The quartette numbers will be rehearsed promptly at 7.30. Every member must be on hand to-night right on time, as the whole of the work to be given will be rehearsed. Programmes will be issued to-night.

ANXIOUSLY AWAITED

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, via wireless, Feb. 16—The beginning of the German submarine operations in British waters is anxiously awaited. In consequence of warnings published to-day to Germans not to be too anxious for results. It is admitted that the possibility exists that neutral ships will be destroyed, but it is insisted they cannot blame Germany, which has given the fullest warning.

The Drawing Power of Dollar-Day Values

Passing up or down George Street and other business streets, one can note how Dollar Day "catches on." SAVING AND WASTE.

The conditions created by the war indicate the necessity of economy on the part of the people. This is not, however, the proper kind, nor does it show the proper spirit of, economy. Compulsory economy possesses no merit, except the doubtful merit of doing an enforced duty. But compulsory economy—saving—is better than none at all. It serves the purpose of forcing realization of the folly of the extravagance of expenditure that has in the past few years become a mania, not only with governments but with the mass of the people. In the matter of government expenditure there has been a tremendous increase in the past five years. In 1909 the ordinary expenditure of the Dominion was 84 millions of dollars. In 1914 the ordinary expenditure had increased to 127 millions; and we are told that the ordinary — not the war — expenditure will, the Finance Minister tells us, in 1915, reach the huge figures of 150 millions, an increase of 66 millions a year in the short space of five years.

It does not lie in the mouths of the people to rebuke or condemn the government for plunging full steam ahead in the matter of expenditure. The people themselves have set the example. For the past few years the country has had the blessing—or bane—of good times; but like the government, they have ignored the "rainy day" idea, and like the prodigal of Holy Scripture, they have "wasted their substance in riotous living"—or its equivalent—in extravagant and unnecessary expenditures—living in luxury, spending up to the last penny regardless of the possibility of the time coming when the money spent in luxuries and pleasures in extravagant eating and drinking, and dress, would be sorely needed. There are no doubt many persons in Peterborough at present who, for the past five years have been earning, or receiving, good incomes, who are to-day, under the blow of the war club, compelled to accept charity. They did not save, but spent—universally and recklessly. They might have lived comfortably, and happily, and at the same time have accumulated savings that would stand their friend when income ceased and hard times came. There are no doubt scores of persons who, in the last five years could, without stinting themselves uncomfortably ,have accumulated savings enough to tide them over a year of enforced idleness, and saved them from the misery of want or the humiliation of accepting charity.

These facts are not mentioned as a reproach; but to impress the idea of the benefits of wise use of our means. We are so much accustomed to spending money carelessly that we do not appreciate its folly; and take distorted ideas of economic conditions. There are some of us who hold up our hands in horror over the idea of an advance in the price of flour of a few cents per hundred-weight, or a few cents' similar advance in the price of sugar; yet we spend in pleasure, in luxuries of the table, or of dress, in party-giving, and in other unnecessary ways, in one day or night, as much as would pay the bill of an average family for the increased cost of flour or sugar for a whole year. Thus it comes about that when the crash comes—for as surely as night follows day, we shall reap what we sow—we are compelled to economize, and it comes doubly difficult when we have not acquired the habit.

It is argued that this is the wrong time to economize—we are told that we must spend as much as we can, in order to keep business going as usual. This may be superficially correct; but if we live up to principle we shall practice economy; and business as usual must take its chance; it must not expect to escape the consequences, any more than ourselves, of reckless, inconsiderate expenditure of our means. If we had all been fairly prudent in good times when there was less appeal in a plea for business as usual, there would have been money available now to keep business going; whereas now the surplus means of the few are demanded to supplement the money wasted in years of prosperity on unnecessary expenditures; so that by the unwise living of the few, the general level of comfortable living is lowered. We need to get new ideas of the value of money, and of its wise expenditure; of the necessity of a little self-denial as we go along in order to avoid compulsory self-denial when misfortunes come, and realize the deep meaning of the homely and wholesome couplet of the old song—

Wherever you wander, whatever you do,
You'll find your best friend is a dollar or two.

PARRY SOUND'S HOME GUARD CHURCH PARADE

Evidences of Patriotic Unity in the Great Crisis—Eloquent Sermon by Rev. Patrick J. Kelly. Formerly of Peterborough.

The following from the Parry Sound North Star will be of interest to many in Peterborough who knew and know the preacher, Rev. Father Patrick Kelly:

No better evidence could be afforded of the unity of all classes and creeds in the present crisis in the history of the Empire than was displayed in the attendance of the Rifle Club at the morning mass of St. Peter's church last Sunday. About seventy members of the Club, headed by their band, marched in the parade and in the ranks all classes and creeds were represented. Presbyterians, Anglicans, Methodists, Baptists, Salvationists and men of no church affiliation joined together with their Catholic brethren in doing honour to one of the Chaplains of the Association, Rev. Father Kelly, who was the first recruit of the new organization. The men marched like veterans and gave evidence of the strength of the second line of Canada's defence, the men of the Home Guard, who are drilling and training for the possible eventuality of fighting in defence of the Homeland. Most of the men are over age for foreign service, but none of them are two old to respond to the call to defend Canada against any invaders. The church was crowded to its capacity, many Protestants accompanying the Home Guard by walking through heavy snows to the church. The service was appropriate to the occasion. Mr. E. Hanrahan, of the Catholic Cathedral, Peterborough, sang two solos and Miss Pansy Dwyer, of this place, also sang a solo. Rev. Father Kelly's sermon breathed the loftiest spirit of patriotism, and, it too shows the wonderful spirit of unity which prevails all ranks and creeds in the British Empire. The speaker took his text from the Gospel of St. John, 12th chapter, 24th verse:

"Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit."

He said in part that Christ spoke of his own death, and of his sacrifice for His people, it was necessary that He should die in order that His sacrifice should atone for the sins of the world. The theme of the sermon was "sacrifice" and was typified by the sacrifice of Christ Himself, who loved us, and gave Himself for us. On the apex of the mountain stood the cross and it typified sacrifice. Men under the old dispensation looked forward to it as their hope and the men of the new dispensation looked backward to it as their salvation. In all reverence he likened the spirit of our soldiers who were giving their lives for their country, to the sacrifice of Christ. "Greater love hath no man in that he laid down his life for his friend." Our soldiers were laying their lives on the alter of their country that liberty and right should prevail and continue. The British constitution, the most enlightened and the most liberal the world has ever seen, was in danger, and our men from the north, the south, the east and the west were sacrificing their lives that it might prevail, and continue. The men who were fighting our battles and the men who are training for the next expeditions should be honoured, and we should give them our best. The men of the Home Guard, most of them could not go to the front of the battle line in Europe, but if the call comes for home defence none would be found wanting. It was a duty to obey the call, but there were home duties and it was for us to help feed and encourage those who represented us at the front. Service and sacrifice were the highest ideal of Christ and we should emulate His example. The address was an able one and especially fitted to the occasion. After the service the parade was reformed and the march home was witnessed by a large number of our citizens, all of whom spoke of the steadiness, precision and military bearing of our Home Guard.

GERMAN CULTURE AND THE PASTORAL OF CARDINAL MERCIER

The suppression of the Pastoral of Cardinal Mercier of Belgium and the indignities put upon him have attracted widespread attention. The New York Times publishes the full text of the suppressed pastoral, and a careful reading of it fails to show what there was in it that could offend Germany or would contraindicate its publication unless it is its recital of what Belgium has suffered as a result of her natural and patriotic resistance to invasion of her territory and outrage upon her neutrality. Belgium resisted the march of the Germans over her soil as a highway to the accomplishment of her ambitions. History holds no record of a more wanton, cruel assault upon a minor nation to satisfy the lust of brutal outrage by a strong nation. What Belgium has suffered from the exploitation of German "culture," as related by Cardinal Mercier, seems to have been the only excuse for Germany showing a disregard for the sanctity of religion and the person of its great minister, as a companion outrage to the outrage against which he protested in the spoliation and ruin of Belgium with a ruthlessness and refinement of cruelty combining pristine savagery and diabolical ingenuity of application:

"Better than any other man, perhaps, do I know what our unhappy country has undergone. Nor will any Belgian, I trust, doubt of what I suffer in my soul, as a citizen and as a Bishop, in sympathy with all this sorrow. These four last months have seemed to me age-long. By thousands have our brave ones been mown down; wives, mothers, are weeping for those they shall never see again; hearths are desolate; dire poverty spreads, anguish increases. At Malines, at Antwerp, the people of two great cities have been given over, the one for six hours, the other for thirty-four hours, of a continuous bombardment, to the throes of death. I have traversed the greater part of the districts most terribly devastated in my diocese; and the ruins I beheld, and the ashes, were more dreadful than I, prepared by the saddest of forebodings, could have imagined. Other parts of my diocese, which I have not yet had time to visit, have in like manner been laid waste. Churches, schools, asylums, hospitals, convents in great numbers, are in ruins. Entire villages have all but disappeared. At Werchter-Wackerzeel, for instance, out of 380 homes, 130 remain; at Tremeloo two-thirds of the village are overthrown; at Bueken, out of 100 houses, 20 are standing; at Schaffen, 180 houses out of 200 are destroyed—11 still stand. At Louvain the third part of the buildings are down; 1,074 dwellings have disappeared; on the town land and in the suburbs, 1,823 houses have been burnt.

"In this dear city of Louvain, perpetually in my thoughts, the magnificent church of St. Peter will never recover its former splendour. The ancient college of St. Ives, the art schools, the consular and commercial schools of the University, the old markets, our rich library with its collections, its unique and unpublished manuscripts, its archives, its gallery of great portraits of illustrious rectors, chancellors, professors, dating from the time of its foundation, which preserved for masters and students alike a noble tradition and were an incitement in their studies—all this accumulation of intellectual, of historic, and of artistic riches, the fruit of the labours of five centuries—all is in the dust.

"Many a parish has lost its pastor. There is sounding in my ears the sorrowful voice of an old man of whom I asked whether he had had Mass on Sunday in his battered church. 'It is two months,' he said, 'since we had a Church.' The parish priest and the curate had been interned in a concentration camp.

"Thousands of Belgian citizens have in like manner been deported to the prisons of Germany, to Munsterlagen, to Celle, to Magdeburg. At Munsterlagen alone, three thousand one hundred civil prisoners were numbered. History will tell of the physical and moral torments of their long martyrdom. Hundreds of innocent men were shot. I possess no complete necrology; but I know that there were ninety-one shot at Aerschot, that there, under pain of death, their fellow citizens were compelled to dig their graves. In the Louvain group of communes 176 persons, men and women, old men and sucklings, rich and poor, in health and sickness, were shot or burnt.

"In my diocese alone I know that 13 priests or religious were put to death. One of these, the parish priest of Gelrode, suffered, I believe, a veritable martyrdom. I made a pilgrimage to his grave, and, amid the little flock which so lately he had been feeding with the zeal of an apostle,

"We can neither number our dead nor compute the measure of our ruins. And what would it be if we turned our sad steps towards Liege, Namur, Audeene, Dinant, Tamines, Charleroi, and elsewhere?

"And there where lives were not taken, and there were the stones of buildings were not thrown down, what anguish unrevealed! Families hitherto living at ease, now in bitter want; all commerce at an end, all careers ruined; industry at a standstill; thousands upon thousands of working men without employment; working women, shop girls, humble servant girls without the means of earning their bread; and poor souls forlorn on the bed of sickness and fever, crying, 'O Lord, how long, how long?'

THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS FOR ESTIMATING

An Added Attraction for Dollar Day by The Examiner

In the north window of the Peterborough Bookstore is a glass jar full of coppers. To the one who makes the closest estimate will be given a prize of $10.00, and other prizes down to $1.00, in all a total of $35.00 will be given to those making the closest estimates.

You can make one estimate for every dollar you pay into the Examiner Office on Dollar Day — (Wednesday, February 17th.)

If your subscription is run out pay the amount, $4.00 for one year, and receive four Estimate Blanks, or if you pay it quarterly, pay it on Dollar Day, $1.00, and get one Estimate Blank. Estimates given for every dollar paid, whether subscription, old accounts, or new business.

Have a look at the glass jar and see how close you can estimate the number of coppers.

FAMINE IN AUSTRIA

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Feb. 16.—A Cabinet Council held at Budapest Tuesday lasted twelve hours. The Ministers dealt exclusively with the question of food supplies. The only way to avert famine appears to be to create a State monopoly. This is considered inevitable, but is delayed for fear of panic. The cost of living is prohibitive, and the poor can hardly keep body and soul together.

Syria, almost the only country in the world in which pistachio nuts are cultivated, produces about half a million pounds of them a year.

May Raise Shop Licenses

Stated That Government May Decide to Increase Certain License Fees in Liquor Business

It is expected this year that if the Government decides on increasing any licenses in connection with the liquor trade that the hotel-keepers will escape the increase and that the burden will fall on the holders of shop licenses, provincial brewers' licenses, brewers' warehouse licenses and provincial distillers' licenses.

For some time past the cost of these last lot of licenses has been the same, but the hotel man had his license fee raised, and, besides that, a tax put on his receipts, as well as having the hours cut down. This year, it is stated, there will be a change and the hotel man will escape.

The license for liquor shops are based on the population of the centres where they do business, and the licenses of brewers and distillers on the amount of money invested.

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to harden the oil—that strains the mainspring and affects the motion.

People usually wait until something breaks. The other way is the cheapest in the end and a little attention at the right time saves the watch.

OTONABEE BOYS APPEAR IN THE POLICE COURT

Several Unusual Charges Are Aired Before Magistrate Dumble —Offending Posters Produced

A SCURRILOUS LETTER

Louis Shaw and Harry Redmond, two young Otonabee men, who were charged in police court last Wednesday with committing wilful injury to cutter and harness, the property of a neighbour, to the extent of ten dollars, contrary to the criminal code," and "unlawfully posting for transmission or delivery by or through the post to the same neighbour, a letter of an indecent, or immoral or scurrilous character, contrary to the criminal code," faced the latter charge before Magistrate Dumble this morning.

Mr. G. W. Hatton represented the Crown, Mr. Widdifield of Messrs. Gordon and Widdifield, the private prosecutors, and Mr. F. D. Kerr, of Messrs. Peck, Kerr & McElderry, for the defendants.

Defendants pleaded "not guilty and Mr. Kerr, on their behalf, elected summary trial.

The case is evidently one of a neighbour's feud. The posters and letters which the defendants are accused of writing are of a very indecent nature. There were a number of exhibits in the court.

Archie Moore, county constable, made the arrest. He warned them that anything said by them would likely be used as evidence against them. Redmond said he had nothing to fear, and that he did not do anything, and they had received one of the circulars or letters with reference to Fitzgerald's and it was put in his father's rural route box. He had also received a telephone message from some lady, and knew it was Mrs. Fitzgerald. The lady said she had more of those cards for him to put out. He said he went up and saw her and she was accusing him of sending them out. After he saw Mrs. Fitzgerald she was satisfied it was not him who did it and they parted good friends.

After Redmond got dressed he went with Mr. Moore to Mr. Shaw's home. To the constable's question as to how he came to Peterborough the Saturday previous, Redmond said he had called for Mr. Shaw and left the horse at Hogan's hotel. Redmond went into the Munro House yard and said Fitzgerald was coming out as he was going in.

Mr. Hatton—"How did the subject of these posters come up between you."

Witness—"He told me he was accused of putting up these posters but did not do it. He said there was some feeling from a chivari."

Mrs. Catharine Fitzgerald, wife of Michael Fitzgerald, and the second witness, identified a letter that had came through the mail box, also a poster she and her son took down a couple of miles from home. They were told about it at the Sacred Heart church. Another poster she took down from a board at Burnham's Corners. The posters were found along public riven roads. She saw the cards in her house. They were brought there by neighbours and members of the family. Exhibit "D" was very villainous looking. She saw it at her brother-in-law's, but did not read it because she was told it was not fit for a woman.

Redmond called upon her at her house to see her about these posters. She did not 'phone him to come. He denied that he ever put them up.

To Mr. Kerr—"I did not accuse him of it. I did not know any reason why he should do it. If anyone came and told me he would do it I wouldn't hardly think so."

Michael J. Fitzgerald did not take any posters down. He saw them all at his home, where his friends brought them. Mr. John Gillespie gave him one. There were so many he did not know which one it was. He did not know who wrote them or posted them.

To Mr. Kerr—Did not read them all. Some made him laugh and some made him angry. He had no ill will towards accused and would not think they would do it.

Joseph Fitzgerald, son of Michael Fitzgerald, did not throw any further light on the matter of the posters. A week ago last Saturday he was in town with his mother. When he went to get his horse the halter had been cut. When he had hold of the lines something struck the cutter and smashed it. He saw Louis Shaw in the act of throwing something. Shaw and Redmond were in the shed and appeared to be hiding from Fitzgerald. There has been some ill-will since a chivaree.

The court was adjourned until 2 o'clock, when Detectives Newhall and Meagher will be called.

At the afternoon session of the Police Court a statement signed by Redmond and Shaw in the presence of Detectives Newhall and Meagher, and Acting Sergeant Kidd, was exhibited. In the statement the prisoners acknowledge that they had thrown the stove in Munro's yard, which damaged Fitzgerald's cutter and wrote all the dirty letters and posters about all the dirty letters and posters about it to hear Mr. Fitzgerald swear.

ASH WEDNESDAY AT ST. JOHN'S.

To-morrow, Ash Wednesday, there will be two services at St. John's—at 10.30 a.m. and 8 p.m. At the latter an address will be given by Rev. F. G. Orchard, M.A., headmaster Trinity College School, Port Hope. This will be the first of a series of services and addresses to be given at St. John's on Wednesday evenings during Lent.

B Squadron To Hold Concert

Attractive Programme Arranged for To-morrow Night

The members of "B" Squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles will hold a concert and at home in the Recreation room of the Armouries to-morrow night, and a most enjoyable evening is expected. The officers will be in attendance and Lt.-Col. Miller will occupy the chair. Refreshments will be served during the intermission, between the first and second parts of the programme. As will be seen from the following, the programme is to be contributed almost entirely by members of the Third Contingent.

Chorus—"O Canada"—Audience.
Quartette, "The Soldier's Farewell"—The Squadron Quartette — Ptes. Harris, Theobald, Flowers and Eldred.
Song, "Selected"—Pte. Rolls.
Song, "Tipperary"—Pte. Keeble.
Recreation, "The Raw Recruit"—Lt.-Col. Miller.
Song, Selected—Pte. Blake.
Dance—Lieut. Rogers.
Song, "Selected"—Sergt. Maj. Willford, 30th Battalion.
Addresses, refreshments, etc.

Part. II.

Song and chorus, "Maple Leaf,"—Pte. Skilleter.
Song—"The Deathless Army"—Pte. W Flowers.
Song, "Thora"—Pte. G. Harris.
Song, "Selected"—Lieut. Rogers.
Violin solo—"Selected"—Pte. Aizerst.
Song, "Selected"—Pte. H. Farr.
Recitation, "Selected" — Lt. Col. Miller.
God Save The King.

Pte. Geo. Young of No. 3 Troop, "B" Squadron, left yesterday for Kingston to take a course in Armourer work. Acting Sergt. F. Hart of the 39th Battalion goes to Kingston to-day for the same purpose.

The regular routine of drills and lectures is going on at the Armouries and both Mounted Rifles and 39th Battalion are showing a marked increase in efficiency.

May Discuss The Salary Question

At To-night's Meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council

The salary question will likely be the bone of contention at a meeting of the committee of the Whole Council that is called for this evening. The committee will be asked to reconsider Ald. Edgar's original resolution calling for a reduction of salaries among the officials of the city hall. The matter is a difficult one to handle, especially when it is known that many of the city officials are getting less than the average wage earner. It has been suggested that all salaries be reduced by ten or fifteen per cent. The only difficulty of such an arrangement is that many of the underpaid officials would suffer. As instance, the case of City Treasurer Adams, whose yearly stipend amounts to five hundred and ten dollars, and Sanitary Inspector Spence with a salary of seven hundred dollars a year.

It is felt by many that if a reduction is brought into effect it should include the police department. The latter is the best paid department in the city. First year constables receive nearly as much as a second year fireman. The latter are on duty twenty-four hours a day and their work cannot be any less strenuous than that of the police department. P. C. Brown receives a salary of nine hundred dollars a year, which is higher than that of the City Treasurer, Street Inspector, Relief Officer, Medical Health Officer, Assistant to the City Engineer, Sanitary Inspector, Plumbing Inspector, Assistant Chief of the Fire Department and a number of other offices of greater or lesser importance.

Those who do not intend to take any active part in the discussion might just as well bring their beds along, as in all probability the meeting will be a long one. A lot depends on the chairman who can accomplish a lot towards restraining undue oratorical efforts.

LOCOMOTOR ataxia

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

First Official Announcement

Opening of The Legislature

Was Marked by the Usual Ceremony—Speech From the Throne

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 16—The first war year of the Ontario Legislature opened at 3 o'clock this afternoon with full State ceremony. A few minutes before 3 o'clock a gubernatorial procession of Colonel Hendrie swung along the Crescent of Queen's Park, and in prompt response the first salute of eighteen guns boomed. There was a guard of honour and a Dragoon escort. All were dressed in khaki.

The speech from the throne said that an emergency measure would be brought before the House to meet the declines in the Provincial revenues.

Amendments to the Liquor License Act were also promised.

Brampton Easy For The Orillia Seven

ORILLIA, Feb. 15—In the first intermediate game of the second round O. H. A., semi-finals, Orillia defeated Brampton by the lopsided score of 11 to 0, and take an eleven-goal lead to Brampton on Friday night The game was devoid of combination, aside from a two-man-combination by Brookbanks and Anderson for Brampton. Individual rushes featured, but both goaltenders blocked many sure-looking goals. The game was a fair exhibition of hockey, despite the soft ice. Brampton are a speedy crew, but are light, and could not get away on the sticky ice. For the visitors, Ingoldsberg and Roberts played well, but the heavy going slowed them up considerably. McClure was bombarded from start to finish, and handled the shots to perfection.

Jupp and McDonald looked the best for Orillia, while the defence was impregnable. Corbould did not have many shots, but handled them well.

The game started briskly, Brampton forcing the play, but Orillia soon carried the game to Brampton's end, and before the period ended had tallied four goals on neat plays.

In the second period both teams pressed hard, both defences blocking individual rushes, and after twenty minutes of hard gruelling the score stood, Orillia 7, Brampton, 0.

The game now slowed up considerably, both teams feeling the effects of the soft ice. Orillia notched four more.

The game was a clean exhibition, there being only one minor penalty against Brampton, who, in their initial appearance, have left a favourable impression.

The teams:

Orillia—Goal, Corbould; right defence, McNab; left defence, Harvie; centre, Ross; rover, Jupp; right wing Draper; left wing, McDonald.

Brampton — Goal, McClure; right defence, Beecham; left defence, Ingoldsberg; centre, Roberts; rover, Brookbanks; right wing, Anderson; left wing, Blair.

Referee—Bernhardt.

Lindsay Win Round From K. C. I. Team

KINGSTON, Feb. 15—On heavy ice that spoiled all attempts at combination, although the play was fast, K. C. I. defeated Lindsay in the Junior O. H. A. match here to-night by the score of 6 to 3. Lindsay wins the round by 10 to 6.

Following is the line-up:

Lindsay		K. C. I.
	Goal
O'Loughlin		Walsh
	Defence
Flavelle		Ferguson
Haugh		Carroll
	Rover
C. Carew		Paul
	Centre
McElroy		Stewart
	Right Wing
Sandercock		Toland
	Left Wing
A. Carew		Gratton

Referee—B. S. McCreath, Toronto.

Berlin Champions Are Out of the Running

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 15—Berlin, last year's intermediate champions, and winners this season of one of the stiffest groups in the O.H.A., were put out of the semi-finals to-night by Wiarton, when the visitors held the locals to a 1 to 1 score, thereby winning the round by six goals. The ice was very heavy, water being noticeable in several places, making playing difficult and overskating the puck was the order of the night. The locals checked hard and fast, but were unable to get more than one goal on account of the heavy ice.

Wiarton came here with a comfortable lead, and played a defensive game, contenting themselves with defending their net from attack. They made one change in their line-up, Porter being dropped and "Dad" Ashley going back on the defence, with Rock taking right wing. Their defence worked hard and checked closely, forcing the locals to shoot from a good distance out.

The moment the Green and White took the ice they started with a rush and bored shot after shot on Johnson. The heavy going, however, soon told, and both sevens settled down to a steady grind, there being no scoring in the first period. Berlin's lone counter came shortly after the start of the second period, when Solomon beat Johnson in a scrimmage. Wiarton evened up in the last period, when Rock got in on the net. The locals tried to work a combination in the early stages of the game, but this was soon given up, and five and six men played on the forward line.

The whole Berlin team worked hard to pull the fat out of the fire, but that the better team won is the opinion of local people, who congede Wiarton to cop the silverware. The line-up:

Berlin — Goal, Hainesworth; right defence, Truschinski; left defence, Seibert; rover, Boettger; centre, Leroux; right wing, Hiller; left wing, Solomon.

New Sunday School For George St. Church

Announcement Made at the Congregational Meeting Last Night Was Enthusiastically Received.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS

The congregation of George Street Methodist church will certainly have new and commodious Sunday school quarters in the near future if the enthusiasm of the congregation meeting last evening is an indication of their feeling in the matter. The suggestion was not a new one, but received a definite start when the members of a men's Bible class subscribed the first $200.00, to be paid some time during the year 1915.

The congregational meeting, which was held in the Sunday school hall last evening was in the nature of a get-together meeting and social when the reports of the different organizations of the church were received and it was attended by a large and representative number of members. An additional attraction was an address from Rev. Dr. Young, a former pastor who conducted the anniversary services on Sunday last. There was also a fine programme of music.

The reports were very encouraging and showed the church work and finances to be in a flourishing condition generally. In the church accounts the receipts for the year were $6,670.94 and payments $6,521.03. Mr. F. Brownscombe ,the treasurer, read the financial statement from the year book which has just been printed, and will be distributed among the members in a short time.

Epwetrh League.

Rev. R. G. Peever was chairman and called upon Mr. C. S. Thompson for his report in connection with the Epworth League. The League has made great progress during the past year and its different departments, which are six in number, are under capable leadership. The membership has increased rapidly. The Junior Department, which meets on Sunday morning, is very popular and Mr. Thompson urged the older members to see that the youngsters attended, also they were given a hearty invitation to attend the Senior League themselves. There is a membership of about one hundred and fifty in the senior.

Last year the League contributed $200 to missions and expected to make it $300 this year.

Mr. G. Carruthers read the report from the President of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Carruthers. Their receipts were $491.19 and there is a balance of $152.70.

Missionary Societies.

Mrs. Jas. Kendry was called upon for a few remarks in connection with the Woman's Missionary Society, Pearl Mission Circle and Fidelis Mission Band. Mrs. Kendry is President of the Woman's Missionary Society, which has a balance of $381.76. She urged all the ladies of the congregation who were not members of any of the missionary organiastions to join. The Mission Circle did some fine work when they held a rummage sale. She thanked all those who had so kindly contributed clothing, etc., in connection with this. By this sale people were enabled to get good clothing at a very much reduced price.

Mr. J. H. Renwick, organist and choir leader, said the choir attendance had been well above the average during the year. The members had contributed much to the dignity of the regular services and were now looking forward to a season of usefulness, in which they hoped to attain greater efficiency.

Two enjoyable evenings were given during the year. The production in March was an artistic as well as financial success, the proceeds being used to provide gowns for the male members of the choir.

The missionary account of the church showed a giving of $2,760.29 during the year and a balance of $339.79. The missionary givings are increasing year by year.

New Sunday School.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Sunday School Superintendent, was called upon in connection with that department. He had some very interesting figures. The number on the roll is now 1004 and there was an increase in the average attendance of forty-two over the previous year.

Mr. Armstrong pointed out the great need for new quarters for the Sunday school. The membership had increased to such a number that it was almost impossible to handle in the present quarters. Mr. Armstrong has been superintendent of the George Street Sunday school since April, 1893 and has watched it grow from a membership at that date of 415 to the present membership of 1004. He is therefore in a position to know the needs of the school. He thought if the people would have the object in view of a new Sunday school and work towards that end, it would be accomplished.

This was the first time the matter had been brought before a congregational meeting, but was evidently anticipated by a senior men's Bible class, which has been recently organized. Mr. Armstrong announced that the first $200 had been subscribed towards the Sunday school Building Fund on Sunday last by the members of this class.

When Grace Church Sunday school was organized it was to relieve the congestion at George Street, but had failed to do so. The speaker thought the only relief would be in a new and commodious building.

The Grace Sunday school membership is now 99, with an average attendance of 68. Mr. A. F. Hagerman is superintendent there.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, one of the oldest members of George Street Methodist Church and Secretary of the trustee board traced the development of Methodism in the City during the past forty years. He thought that the congregation did not need to wait indefinitely to start to erect a new Sunday School. He felt sure the people would come forward with help now. The Church debt was not very large now.

Mr. Dumble has gone into the matter of modern Sunday Schools pretty thoroughly and was in a position to say what kind would be likely to suit the needs at George Street Methodist Church.

Rev. Dr. Young.

Rev. Dr. Young, a former pastor, who was present, was specially interested in the reports. He liked the optimistic note struck for a forward movement. He congratulated Mr. Renwick on the success of his efforts with the choir.

The speaker said that Church work must be carried on in future under conditions not known under present circumstances. The great purpose of the organizations of the Church was to make men, true men, brave men, patriotic men, with true manhood. This true manhood was an asset that always passed at its face value.

A note of appreciation and thanks was moved by Mr. McBain and seconded by Mr. S. J. Stubbs to Rev. Dr. Young for his services in connection with the Anniversary of the Church on Sunday last.

Rev. Jas. Clarry of St. James' Methodist Church made a few remarks on behalf of the other Methodist ministers in the City. Rev. J. P. Wilson of Charlotte Street Church, was also present part of the evening.

After the regular programme was concluded the ladies served refreshments.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Successful Concert Held In Temple

Band and Singing Brigade Gave a Delightful Programme

The concert in the Temple last night by the Peterborough Temple Band, assisted by the Singing Brigade, was a most successful and enjoyable event, and was well attended. Under the new leader, Bandmaster Fred W. Beer, the Temple Band has made progress, and at no time has it been more efficient than at the present. Their numbers last night were artistically played in a manner that reflected credit, not only on the individual talent of the members, but on the leadership of Bandmaster Beer. Their programme was long and varied, and each number was a gem. The numbers by the Saxophone Quartette were greatly enjoyed, as were the songs given by the Singing Brigade and the two selections by the male choir. Miss Ivy Beer's solo, "To you is born a Saviour," was splendidly given. Ald. G. Walter Green occupied the chair, and complimented the band, as did Chief Howard and Mr. R. C. Braund. The programme was as follows:

Opening song.
Prayer.
March—"In the Field," Band.
Song—"A Mansion in Glory," Male Choir.
Saxophone Quartette—"Remember Me O Mighty One," Bandsmen Moyses, H. Wells, James and Band-Sergt. Brown.
Selection—"The Army," Band.
Chorus — "Our Faithful Lord," Singing Brigade.
Instrumental Quartette — "Clouds and Sunshine," Bandsmen F. Robinson, Calvert, S. Richardson and Bandmaster Beer.
Selection—"Rejoicing in the Lord," Band.
Chairman's remarks.
March—"Commonwealth," Band.
Song — "Which way you goin' to take?" Male Choir.
Saxophone Quartette—"Hail Smiling Morn," Bandsmen Moyses, H. Wells, James and Band-Sergt. Brown.
Vocal Solo — "To you is born a Saviour," Miss Ivy Beer.
Selection—"The Better World," Band.
Selection—"Songs of Heaven," Singing Brigade.
Instrumental Quartette—"A Soldier's Tale," Bandsmen F. Robinson, Calvert, S. Richardson and Bandmaster Beer.
Duke Reading, Adjutant McWhinney.
Hymns—"Southport and Wells" ("Book of Ages"), Band.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT LYNN.

The remains of the late Mrs. Robert Lynn arrived in the city on the C.P.R. noon train to-day from Crossfield, Alta.

The late Mrs. Lynn was born in Warsaw. Her husband predeceased her about twenty years ago. Eight years ago she removed with her family to Crossfield, Alta. She passed away at her home there on Feb. 10th.

The body was accompanied to the city by a son, Mr. J. W. Lynn, of Crossfield, and a daughter, Mrs. J. A. Couch, Toronto. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from Bellegheni's Undertaking Parlours to Warsaw cemetery for interment.

The survivors are three sons, Messrs. Oscar and J. W. Lynn, Crossfield, Alta, and Dr. R. W. Lynn, Cardston, Alta; three daughters, Mrs. J. A. Couch, Toronto; Mrs. Davie, Crossfield, Alta.; Mrs. Robinson, North Baltimore, Ohio; also three brothers, Messrs. J. Wasson, Peterborough; Wm. Wasson, Warsaw, and Sam Wasson, Western States; two sisters, Miss E. Wasson, Warsaw, and Mrs. D. Lynn, Essex Co.

VALENTINE PARTY AT THE Y. W. C. A.

A very enjoyable Children's Valentine party was held at the Y.W.C.A. last evening, under the auspices of the Girls' Gymnasium Class, the Loyalty Club and the Good Comrades' Club. About seventy were present. Children's games were played and altogether a very enjoyable time was spent. Refreshments were served.

The head of a Pennsylvania inventor's hammer for piano tuners is equipped with a ratchet so that it will not have to be lifted from a peg every time it is turned.

THE FIRST IRON-CLAD OF ENGLAND

The multitude of men and women who are each day following the history of the great European war scarcely realize that in this day of dreadnoughts and super-dreadnoughts we are not so many years later than in that day in 1860, when England launched her first iron-clad, The Warrior. This is especially interesting in view of the fact that the Warrior plays an important part in the plot of "Milestones," the famous English comedy-drama that Klaw and Erlanger will present at the Grand Opera House, Wednesday, Feb. 24th, and which has already enjoyed a year's run in New York and two years at the Royalty Theatre in London.

The launching of the Warrior in 1860 is the cause of the dispute between John Rhead and Sam Sibley, the young members of the shipbuilding firm of Rhead and Sibley. And from that dispute develops the intensely interesting story that has held hundreds of thousands of theatregoers enthralled, and which will be told here with the big London Company, whose presence here is partly due to the war.

The Warrior was the forefather of the present-day super-dreadnought, and to Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblauch, the authors of the play, it stood for progress, the watchword of this most remarkable of plays.

Though founded on a fact of historic interest in England, "Milestones" is full of romance. Cupid is the busiest character in the play.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—Receipts fair, trade light. Prices lower in many grades. Extra choice heavy steers, $7.25 to $7.50; handy choice steers, $6.75 to $7; good butcher's steers, $6.25 to $6.40; good to choice heifers, 6.40 to $6.60; choice butcher cows, $5.75 to $6; spring lambs, $7.50 to $9; hogs, steady.

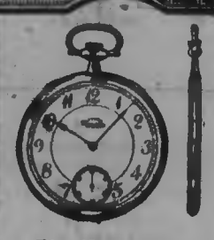
MAY BELL MARKS.

The old favourite stock company, the Marks Bros.' Co. and a strong cast opened a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House last night and pleased a large audience. The attraction was "The Factory Girl," and May A. Bell Marks won fresh laurels by her finished work. The specialties were up to the Marks' standard.



Its thinness is in the movement

Come in and let us show you how a new, mechanically correct arrangement of wheels reduced the size of the ordinary movement space one-half.

Then you will understand how this watch can "fit your pocket like a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this genuine thin model timekeeper from watches made to appear thin by such methods as sacrificing the inside dust protection cap to the back case, or patching a ladies' size movement in the centre of a thin edged man's case.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model watch—the Gruen Verithin.

28 Steamers Speeding Into War Zone

THE ZEPPELINS ARE WORTHLESS FOR PURPOSES OF WAR

Will Face The Peril of The German Torpedoes

More Than 1000 Americans Have Sailed From New York ---Adriatic With 400 Americans and a Rich Food Cargo Expected at Liverpool To-morrow Night.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 17—Twenty-eight steamers, sailing from New York, and carrying more than 1,000 American passengers, are to-day speeding into the war zone to face the peril of the German torpedoes. They will be subject to retaliation ordered by the German Admiralty, beginning to-morrow against British merchantmen.

The big White Star liner Adriatic is due to arrive here to-morrow night or early Friday. She carries about 400 passengers, a large part of whom are Americans, and a rich food cargo. Every precaution will be taken to insure her safe passage through the Irish Sea, in the belief that the Germans may attempt to strike a spectacular submarine blow by sending her to the bottom.

At about the same time the Norwegian vessel Bergenafjord, carrying a number of passengers, will enter the war area established by the German Admiralty.

A dozen freighters and smaller steamers, some of them carrying valuable cargoes, are due to enter the war zone a few hours after the German decree goes into effect. Five of these are British steamers against which Von Tirpitz has promised to send his under-sea raiders.

Trailing these are fourteen other steamers, which sailed from New York for English and Continental ports last week. The Orduna of the Cunard Line, with a large passenger list is expected to arrive here one week from to-morrow, and the Niagara about the same time.

SEES SERIOUS TROUBLE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—Caught between the fires of English determination and German resentment this Government was admittedly seriously troubled to-day at what these foreign nations answers will be to recent American protests.

With German's war zone order effective Thursday, Ambassador Gerard's reply from the German Government to the United States warning was not before the officials early to-day, but they anticipated its receipt before night. The prospect for favourable or compromise reply was considered slight.

At the same time, naught had been heard of the British flag protest answer, but the officials were convinced that Britain will not relent in her plan to drive Germany to starvation. No more did they believe Germany will drop her plans to annihilate commerce in the war zones.

Between these two attitudes the Government officials saw more or less serious trouble for America. Her commerce must inevitably suffer in such an arrangement and the possibility of German destruction of an American or of American lives, was always to be considered.

Millions Of Acres For Settlement

Canadian railway officials are naturally looking forward to a desirable increase in traffic when the immigrant movement, which is sure to follow the close of the war, gets under way. Canada's need is for tillers of the soil and every effort will be made to attract the farming class.

Information received at the Grand Trunk Pacific headquarters in Montreal yesterday from the British Columbia Government shows that the Coast Province has made preparations for the settlement of thousands of cultivators. The final figures for 1914 demonstrate that 1,963 land pre-emptions were taken up in the newly-opened districts of the Province during the year. This figure will show a large increase, it is expected, before 1915 closes for the Government States that there are about 1,500,000 acres of surveyed land ready for the settler along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and tracts of 160 acres can be taken possession of on payment of a record fee of $2.00.

Of the surveyed lands available to settlers, here are 146,921 acres in the Cassir Land District, with 443,600 acres in the Coast district. In the Cariboo District the available surveyed lands total 789,788 acres, the greater proportion of which is along the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, or tributary to the railway, the eastern half of the Railway through the Province being within the confines of the Cariboo District.

A combination truck and jack has been patented to enable one man to lift a heavy barrel and support it while its contents are being withdrawn.

Lack of Food is Causing Anxiety—Strong in Military Sense But Weak In Means of Living

MUST END WAR

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

COPENHAGEN, Den., Feb. — According to a well-known German chemical manufacturer now visiting Copenhagen the Germans are still confident regarding their military strength, but the evident scarcity of food is causing increasing uneasiness.

"We must finish the war by the end of spring," he said to-day, "if we are to avoid disaster. This is the reason for the German war zone proclamation against England. We are strong in a military sense, but we cannot exist more than a few months without food imports. It is impossible to ignore the gravity of the situation, even though the papers try to reassure the people by asserting there is no danger if only they are economical.

"The entire population has already been compelled to accept half the normal quantity of bread, the other half being replaced by potatoes. The problem is, has Germany enough potatoes? The general opinion is that the quantity available will not be enough, and if that is really the case, starvation will surely come.

The foregoing information explains the desperation of Germany's "submarine" blockade policy, which is to go into effect on February 18 (to-morrow.)

Zeppelins Soon To Disappear As A Factor In Warfare

Says Louis Bleriot, Inventor of the Monoplanes and France's Chief Adviser in Matters Aerial

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

"The much vaunted Zeppelins are utterly worthless for purposes of war. They are certain soon to disappear as a factor in aerial navigation of any sort." It was Louis Bleriot, inventor of the monoplane, who was talking. Bleriot, the first man to fly the English Channel in a heavier-than-air machine, is France's chief counselling expert in matters aerial.

"As a matter of fact the Zeppelins have been entirely inactive during the present war. The small abortive raid on the British seacoast line does not count in as much as they failed to accomplish a single thing of military value. Paris and London are perfectly safe from Zeppelin raids. Granted ideal weather conditions and it will not be impossible for Zeppelins to raid these and other cities. But I do not believe that a single Zeppelin that will participate in such a raid will ever escape to the German territory again. They offer a monstrous target when they fly low."

Hydro Engineers Appraised of The Company's Plant

Was Valued as a Scrap Plant---Arc Lamps Are Said to Be Obsolete--Continuation of the Arbitration Proceedings ---A Featureless Session.

A comprehensive invertoried appraisal of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's equipment which the city recently acquired was presented to the Board of Arbitration yesterday afternoon by Mr. R. T. Jeffrey, engineer for the Hydro-Electric Commission. He presented a voluminous report, upon three separate bases, of his estimates of the property under arbitration. He estimated the scrap value of the property expropriated at $36,630, this amount representing what, he said could be obtained for the equipment in view of the termination of the company's franchise ,and supposing the plant were dismantled (scrapped) and sold for what he considered it was worth.

Mr. Jeffrey's second statement showed the replacement value of the property, in other words the cost of reproducing the equipment the city has taken possession of. The list of items totalled $154,999.03.

The third list of costs represented his estimate of the present value of the property ,a total of $83,985.44. This sum, he said, was the replacement value, less a reasonable allowance for depreciation, cost of construction and charges incidental thereto, based on the length of time necessary to construct the present system.

Mr. Jeffrey's statement monopolized the entire afternoon. The above estimates were the pith of his reports, but most of the time was spent in his explanations of the nature of his investigations, the condition in which he found the itemized properties, market prices and various other details necessary to an arbitration hearing, but dry reading in a news column.

Featureless Proceedings.

In his diary ,if he goes in for that kind of thing, Mr. M. K. Cowan, the city's leading counsel, probably scored yesterday as a busy day. He had the floor all to himself—in the morning with Mr. Fiske, in the afternoon with Mr. Jeffrey.. Endless evidence concerning the condition of poles, meters, wire, transformers, cross bars and other electric paraphernalia is naturally of prime importance to the arbitrators, who are drawing down a fee that would be comfortable even when peace reigns. But a session or two of the proceedings would just about convince the average ratepayer that the arbiters are earning money. So dry is the evidence to a backbencher that he could readily understand Mr. Cowan's consuming a pitcher of water during his examination of Mr. Jeffrey, making his own throat drier as he looked on. For the same reason he might regard the occasional sallies of Mr. Cowan and Mr. Tilley at each other as a mental relaxation from the monotony of the dusty details.

On the whole, perhaps it is just as well that only a handful of intelligent ratepayers attempt to follow the argument. Ald. ("Hydro") Johnston missed the Tuesday morning session, but he clocked in after luncheon. To him the Jeffrey valuations must have been a real relish, for having hopped on the Hydro waggon, Ald. Johnston clings to it with the fervour of a first love, or with paternal solicitude, even though it has passed from the concern of the city to the Utilities Commission. The ratepayers as a body are doubtless more helpful at home. In the gallery they might distract the attention of the arbiters, for even the ratepayers will admit that a gathering of theirs in the gallery would not be so vacant as the unburdened benches. And empty benches invite judicial mental concentration." No matter the issue, the arbitration teeters on Mr. Citizen who pays the piper though the notes be not those of Pan.

"How's it coming out?" asks the wise ratepayer who remains away to boost business on Dollar Day.

The ability to answer that question would almost entitle a man to a position of county judge, consulting electrical engineer, or to a place on the Supreme Bench. To a mere observer the proceedings look like a Hop Sing puzzle of statistics, prices, and expert evidence. And, as before stated, one would conclude that the arbiters are earning their money.

A Liberal Valuation.

Mr. Jeffrey stated that he thought he had been liberal (to the company) in all his figures. After an exordial reference to his experience, an extensive one, by the way, Mr. Jeffrey said he came to Peterborough in July, 1913, on behalf of the Hydro-Electric Commission to make an appraisal for the city of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's plant in the city. He found the company's inventory to closely tally, as to quantity, with those he arrived at. He first valued the plant, having in view the fact that the company's franchise had run out and as if the plant were to be dismantled and sold. In plain words, he valued it as a scrap plant. It would not pay to dig any poles out, but they had a value if cut off at the ground line, he said. It would mean 5 feet off each pole. When that was done, and considering that they were second-hand poles, he valued them at half the value of new poles of that length.

He figured the cross arms at 10 cents each, and then took half that price as a scrap sum. The pole hardware was mostly ungalvanized. If not galvanized the iron rusts and bolts stick fast. The arc lamps were old and obsolete and were worth only their scrap value. They might be sold to a contractor for temporary use or to a small municipality, who might use them or some of their parts. All that could be got out of the arc lamp hangers was their scrap value.

Mr. Jeffrey's inventory allowed six cents a pound for arc lamp insulated wire. The transformers would have to be sold as second-hand. For them, he allowed $3 per kilowatt capacity. He fixed a price of $4 each on 4000 meters of smaller amperage, and a total of $6,000 for all the meters of the system.

Mr. Jeffrey doubted whether a purchaser could be secured for four of the generators in the Murray street power house. They would bring only their scrap value.

A fifts generator he valued at $200 and doubted whether a purchaser could readily be obtained.

The miscellaneous equipment consisted of switch board, arresters, wiring was valued by Mr. Jeffrey at $200. He said that there was no market for that type of equipment.

He referred to each item in his summary of equipment.

Pole Life 20 Years.

Mr. Jaffray placed 20 years as the useful life of poles in Peterborough, meaning the number of years satisfactory service would be obtained from them. They might be utilized for three or four extra years but it was not advisable to do so. After twenty years the extent to which they have rotted rendered them unreliable, and they may fall under a wind or a sleet storm. The resulting damage would be greater than replacing the poles after twenty years service. Minutely, Mr. Jeffrey explained how he found his estimate of a 20 year useful life in Peterborough, how he had examined poles which he had seen taken down, and whose age he was able to obtain and the character of the soil in which they had stood. By simply aggregating the number of years the poles had been in use, dividing the sum by the number of poles, he secured 12 years as the average number of years the poles had been in use, thus estimating 8 years of useful life for the city poles in the aggregate from the time of his examination.

To Stamp Out Drunkenness

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 17—A delegation of London ministers who to-day waited upon the officers commanding various battalions now training here, and asked them to work with the Churches in endeavouring to stamp out drunkenness, found especially a strong champion in Colonel Wigle, commander of the 18th Battalion, which leaves shortly for the front. "I think the Government should take away the license of every hotel man who is found guilty of selling liquor to soldiers who already have had too much," he said.

A flat jar has been invented to hold several toothbrushes out of the dust and where they will be subjected to antiseptic vapours rising from a pad.

No Quarter Given or Taken In Fighting at La Bassee

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Wednesday, Feb. 17 — The correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs from Northern France under date of February 16, as follows:

Naturally, the British are getting, as usual, the lion's share of the enemy's awakened gusto. Yesterday there was a fierce massed attack on the British position beyond Ypres, and in the wild, battered region where the long tree-lined La Bassee road runs straight and scarred toward Bethune. In a heavy wedge formation, Germans, careless of the fearful sacrifice of life their action necessitated, penetrated our line. They fought savagely and frantically. There was a hand-to-hand fight, and deadly work with the bayonet, under a hail of shell and infantry fire. Our men rallied with their usual brilliancy. There were heavy losses on both sides. The Germans absolutely flung themselves away, though some prisoners were taken. The action was too hot for much activity in this direction, and there was very little quarter given or taken.

We lost part of two trenches temporarily, but we are now masters of the situation.

Thaw Is Expected To Aid In Halting German Advance

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The Times correspondent telegraphs from Petrograd:

"The German advance in East Prussia had been foreseen, but apparently it is developing faster than had been expected. The Russian arrangements, however, were made in due time, and the troops have fallen back to extremely strong positions. Moreover, the Germans' further advance will be severely impeded by the heavy conditions of the roads and the swampy country after the thaw that recently set in."

The Times correspondent in Copenhagen says:

"The last six Prussian casualty lists published contained only 17,926 casualties, some of which date from August. They do not give the recent heavy losses, but they bring the total of the 140 lists of officers and men killed, wounded and missing up to 671,342. To these must be added 162 Bavarian, 107 Saxon, 114 Wurtemberg and 17 navy lists."

PARLIAMENT WILL CONTINUE THE PROBE ON BOOTS

Militia Dept. Committee's Finding is Tabled by Gen. Hughes and Says Officials Are Not to Blame—The Trouble Was Due to Hurry and Use of Only Available Materials

OTTAWA, Feb. 16. — Parliament will appoint a special committee to investigate the charges that inferior boots were supplied to certain units in the Canadian overseas contingent. Following the suggestion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier last week, Premier Borden rose when the House met yesterday afternoon to state that he agreed that it was in the public interest, as well as due to various manufacturers who had supplied these articles to the Government, that the whole matter should be referred to a special committee of seven members to investigate and report their findings. Premier Borden asked Sir Wilfrid to name three of the seven members from the Liberal side of the House. The committee will probably be formally appointed by the House on a resolution to-day.

The report of the investigation board appointed by the Minister of Militia to deal with the complaints regarding the boots was tabled by Gen. Hughes. While in a general way it exculpates the Department from all blame, it finds that there were serious faults in the manufacture of the boots, and that the specifications were, in many cases, not adhered to. It is admitted that the boots were not suitable for the abnormal weather conditions in England, but it is declared that considering the enormous and sudden demand, the boots were on the whole well made and of good quality.

The whole trouble, according to the board's report, seems to have been mainly due to the lack of time for adequate inspection and the necessity for using whatever materials were available at the time.

GERMANS SPLIT UP

Von Hindenburg in Disadvantageous Position in North

TRAP NOT QUICK ENOUGH

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Conflicting reports come from the eastern front. The Germans claim that Prussia and Bukowina are now cleared of the enemy and that Austro-Hungarian forces have entered the capital of Bukowina. On the other hand the Russians, while admitting a retirement to the East Prussian frontier, are apparently satisfied with the trend of operations.

Mr. Frederick Rennet, Petrograd correspondent of The London Daily News, in a special despatch says:

"Since the great German forces brought their last concerted sweeping movement across East Prussia to the borders of Russia the conditions facing them have imposed a radical change in their tactics. The central aim of the operations was very clearly defined up to the point when the Russians succeeded in drawing out from the gap between swift moving columns of the enemy north and south which were beginning to pass beyond them on both flanks. The Germans now find that they have still to fight combinations of Russian columns inside the fringe of Russia and in the bare, thinly populated plains of northeast Poland. The determined fight that the Russians have maintained at an angle between Russia and Poland along the line of Lyck Grajevo where they still hold the ascendency, has prevented co-ordination of attack by the German army that crossed eastwards on the borders of Poland, and its northern partner which is now held up against the Russian defences on the Nieman.

This arrest of the German combination has led to a noticeable scattering of their operations. Numerous detachments from their southern army have been drawn by the Russians towards the right bank of the Narew, where they are engaged in separate fights on a broad belt of marshy forests, particularly along the Rossage tributary which joins the Narew at Ostrolenka. This enforced dissipation of the enemy is entailed also by the tactics of the Russians in the Suwalki region and further north.

"If Von Hindenburg hoped that his vigorously begun advance was to achieve such complete success that could spare some army corps for the spring campaign against the allies in the west, then the plan has failed. More likely he will have to send substantial reinforcements to link up the broken and scattered lines into which the invading army is now spread in the trackless country along the Narew, and rendered still more difficult by a soaking thaw, it is naturally a barrier to a flank attack in force against the Russian northern communication. With the central campaign in Poland the immediate prospects point to a succession of separate, stubborn battles. Under the cost of trying natural conditions, even when not in contact with the enemy an infantry column with only the barest necessary transportation can cover scarcely six miles a day.

"The Russians are doing well in the Carpathians, and in western Galicia they secured the strong position of Gorlice with control of the railways. The Germans and Austrians together lost heavily in their efforts to reach the eastern Galicia-Kapathia region. In the Stryj valley the Russians made progress southward across the heights covering the Nunkacz road, and the Germans are now on the defensive under the Koziomoka."

Ypres, long the cockpit of the battle of Flanders, again is the centre of a terrific artillery duel, according to official reports received from Paris and Berlin last night.

Terrific engagements continue on the fields between La Bassee and Bethune, about Soissons, and in the region of Perthes as well as in the Argonnes, where the battle around Bagatelle is being waged with renewed fury.

Important actions fought on the hillsides and valleys of the Vosges and in Lorraine are being watched with interest owing to their bearing on the advance against the Rhine line of German fortifications.

German mortars were silenced in the dunes and the invaders' trenches are being fiercely bombarded east of Nieuport.

Suffered Intense Pain in Her Back.

Could Hardly Do Her Housework.

If a pain attacks you in the back "stop and think" what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in a large majority of cases of pain in the back they are—doctor them at once, and doctor them persistently, as it is impossible to have a well strong back unless the kidneys perform their functions properly.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. H. F. Jacob, Lavant Station, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in telling you how much good your medicine has done me. I had suffered from intense pains in my back, and was so bad I could hardly do my housework. My kidneys were also bothering me a great deal. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged, and was looking for some other kind of medicine to try when I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I thought it could not hurt to try them. I noticed a great difference when I had used one box, and to my great relief when I had used three boxes I was entirely cured, and I have not been bothered since. I will not hesitate to recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

DASH WAS A SUCCESS.

British Aviators Caused Huge Damage in Belgium.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 16.—The Handelsblad's Sluis correspondent, in a despatch concerning the raid last week of thirty-four British aviators over portions of northern Belgium, says that at Ostend the sheds of the sea railway station were badly damaged and the Hotel Terminus, near the station, was slightly damaged. The De Smet de Nayer bridge suffered heavily, and all communication with the sea station was broken.

At Blankenberghe, the correspondent says, the station and the railway were destroyed. At Zeebrugge, he adds, the central electric works and a factory were destroyed and the bridges there could not be worked, owing to a lack of electricity. A Zeppelin shed with all contents was destroyed, the correspondent adds.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case"

Mrs. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Financiers Ill-Pleased.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—A neutral observer, who has just completed a journey through Germany and Austria, writing in The Times his impressions of a visit to Berlin, says:

"The open criticism of German diplomacy by all classes seemed to be extraordinary. That the leading financiers were not advised of the war in due time in order to call in loans rankles in their minds. That the country was not informed of the English point of view, or was falsely advised, is felt bitterly."

To Have Perpetually Wavy, Curling Hair

Perpetually wavy, curling hair is now within the means of every woman to possess. All one need do is to get a few ounces of plain liquid silmerine at any drug store and apply a little of it occasionally. This is remarkably effective—even in damp weather—in producing a beautiful lustrous and satiny gloss which bear no evidence of artificial making. It is neither sticky or greasy, and it will not streak, stain or injure hair or scalp in the least.

After one trial, the scorching, hair-destroying curling iron will never more be used. The best way to apply the silmerine is with a clean tooth brush, drawing this through the hair from root to tip. If this is done before retiring, a look into the mirror in the morning will afford a most agreeable surprise.

TIBER RISES 57 FEET.

Flood In Rome Is Now Assuming Serious Proportions.

ROME, Feb. 16.—The Tiber continued to rise yesterday and reached a maximum height of 57 feet. The rain stopped at noon and the sun came out. Hope began to increase that the worst was over. It was argued that the extraordinary rapidity of the current of the Tiber would serve very rapidly to reduce the flood stage.

At several street crossings around the Vatican soldiers had built temporary wooden bridges. These, with the passing of boats up and down the flooded thoroughfares created the impression that a section of Venice had been brought up to Rome.

The embankment near the military college, which was still in course of construction, collapsed yesterday afternoon.

Serious damages have been detected in the Risogimento bridge, and all passage over the structure has been forbidden.

Feud War In Kentucky.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 16.—Letcher and Beverly White, members of a noted feud family, were killed, Beverly Bailey was mortally wounded and several other persons were injured, in a general battle in the Clay County mountains early yesterday. The fight resulted from a fracas in a gambling house.

Bailey is alleged to have shot both the Whites, who were sons of one of the wealthiest men in that part of Kentucky.

CANADIANS UNDER FIRE

A Certain Brigade Reported to Be Now in the Trenches

LONDON, Feb. 16:—The members of the Canadian contingent are now at the front. A certain Brigade of the Canadian infantry moved to their positions on the trenches on Saturday night last.

Capt. Harry Coghill, of Stratford, is now in a hospital in France suffering from pleurisy, due to exposure, but his condition is not serious. Capt. Coghill was formerly of Toronto.

Capt. Rev. A. G. Wells (Anglican) and Capt. Father Edward Gordon Doe (Roman Catholic) are now attached to No. 2, Canadian Stationary Hospital, at Le Touquet, near Boulogne. Capt. Wells is well known in Manitoba and Western Canada in general, and comes from Minnedosa. Father Doe is from Windsor, Ont., and relieves at Le Touquet Major Rev. Father Jolicoeur, senior Catholic chaplain, first Canadian overseas force, who has been with the unit since January last.

Major Jolicoeur will shortly sail from England homewards for St. Catherine, near Quebec, but may possibly go on active service again with the second or third contingent.

Casualties In Princess Pats.

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—The following casualties among the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry were announced last night:

Killed in action, Feb. 3, Frank S. Brown, at St. Eloi. Next of kin, Rev. S. G. Brown, Almonte, Ont.

Feb. 4, Pte. Guy Dwyer, at St. Eloi. Next of kin, M. J. Dwyer, Endicott, N. Y.

Feb. 5, Pte. Charles Hudson, at St. Eloi. Next of kin, J. Hudson, 5 Camp Terrace, Guernsey, Channel Island.

Died of wounds, Feb. 7, Pte. Henry E. Waller. Next of kin, J. E. Waller, 173 Cromwell road, London, Eng.

Wounded—Pte. James Ward, admitted to hospital, gunshot in thigh. Next of kin, Mrs. A. Ward, Aylmer road, London, Eng.

The Sickle of the Sphinx.

The oldest piece of wrought iron in existence is believed to be a roughly fashioned sickle blade found by Belzoni in Karmas, near Thebes. It was imbedded in mortar under the base of the sphinx and on that account is known as "the sickle of the sphinx." It is now in the British Museum and is believed to be nearly 4,000 years old.

Ivory For Britain.

The tusks of an ordinary elephant weigh 120 pounds and are worth $300. It requires 12,000 elephants to supply 650 tons of ivory to the English market. Sheffield takes one-third.

The Joy of Good Health Is Now Experienced

Nervousness, Dizzy Spells and Sleeplessness Are Now a Thing of the Past.

This is a cheerful letter from Mrs. Peacock, and it should bring joy to the heart of many a reader of this paper. Dizzy spells and sleeplessness are symptoms of exhausted nerves, and are the bugbear of many women, who do not know just what treatment to use.

MRS. PEACOCK.

You can read Mrs. Peacock's letter and take courage, for she has proven that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a complete cure for these troubles. So pleased was she with the results obtained that she wants other women to know about this food cure.

Mrs. Thomas Peacock, 28 Hiawatha street, St. Thomas, Ont., and whose husband is conductor on the Wabash Railway, states:—"I was quite run down in health, was very nervous, did not sleep well, and had frequent dizzy spells. Believing this to be the result of an exhausted nervous system I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that this medicine did me a world of good. It entirely freed me of the symptoms stated above, built up my health generally, so that to-day I feel that I am quite well again."

In a more recent letter Mrs. Peacock writes:—"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I would be pleased to tell everybody so."

In nearly every issue of this paper you will find letters about Dr. Chase's medicines. If this one does not describe your case watch for others or write to us. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Impossible

By Jean Mahan Plank

BEFORE me lies a little circular of invitation. Upon it are the prints of two church buildings: one, a straight, oblong box of a "meeting-house," bare and unattractive, with narrow windows and one wooden step in front; the other, the conventional modern temple in which the fiftieth anniversary of the society is being held. I have never seen either of these buildings, yet within their founding is wrapped my whole life's blithe and blissful story.

It was in the bleakest of Januaries, fifty years ago. We as a nation were in the midst of a turmoil that tended to moderate our holiday effervescence, yet the after-Christmas feeling which attacks children of all ages and sizes had descended upon me just enough to make me quarrel, like the spoiled child I was, with my lover, Tom Keane.

A flame warms my cheek even now as I recall how trivial was the fire that kindled the matter which brought real suffering to our two hearts. Tom had not been able to account for the spending of some hours of his time, and under a battery of jealous questionings he tried hard to keep his patience; but I was only nineteen, with an inherited temper,—which, thank God, I've since learned to turn into useful channels,—and even Tom's sunny disposition could not withstand my unreasoning words and actions. He flung away from me, uttering a sentence that sobered me instantly with its significant finality. I think I had not known until that moment, when his strong, handsome face darkened upon me with indignant anger, how very dear he was to me.

That night was wretched enough, but there were blacker nights and days to follow. On the second morning after our quarrel I found my people conspiring to keep the newspaper out of my sight. I shrugged my shoulders languidly, for it seemed to me that the most disastrous news about my country's struggle could not affect me, encased as I was in icy despair with my own private woe. Curiosity, however, is the last emotion to die in a healthy body, so seeing a chance to confiscate the paper, I did. My half-hearted scanning of the pages led me to a notice filed in between the various reports from the seat of war — for social items were of quite secondary importance in those days—just half a dozen lines announcing the sudden marriage of Mr. Thomas B. Keane and Miss Eleanor May Roberts.

I was not of the fainting sort, but I think when I declared my determination to leave my home in Albany and go West to stay with my father's sister, whose husband was the banker in the little village of Meadow Centre, Illinois, my family must have drawn a relieved breath. There were enough woeful scenes about the town without having to bear up under the depressing presence of a love-lorn maiden.

I went away with the feeling that my life was finished. It was impossible to imagine interest in anything human or even divine. I had counted, however, without the stirring personality of the "Rev. Mrs. MacNally," as I have always thought of her through the years. "Elder" MacNally, gentle, kindly old man that he was, seemed ever to drop out of sight in the presence of his paralysingly efficient and capable help-meet. The Elder was a Baptist home missionary who was establishing churches in southern Illinois, and it is quite possible that Mrs. MacNally and her type—strong, energetic, quick-tempered, and at times bitter-tongued—were meant to meet the emergencies of these hard and dreary days. Meager-ly educated the type was too, for it was not expected then as now that a minister's wife should be a college woman of high degree.

Fervent in prayer she must be and was, with a trolley of faith which despite many seeming inconsistencies, somehow managed to touch the divine current.

I encountered Mrs. MacNally on the second morning of my stay in Meadow Centre. My aunt and I had ventured out to the one short business street of the village, and with nearly frosted fingers and toes had taken refuge in Kent & Harris' hardware store. By the red-hot stove stood a tall, bony woman who wore a straw bonnet which had been bound with black velvet ribbon in deference to the present weather. She was warming a pair of shapely, cold-roughened hands before the blaze, and she greeted my aunt with a loud, half-familiar: "Law, Mrs. Winston! You've just come in time."

She glanced a bit suspiciously at my rather fashionable attire and the white fur cape and muff I had received for Christmas. Then she looked keenly into my face.

"Is this your niece? Is she a Baptist too? Oh, I heard you was one, Mrs. Winston—a little bird told me. We're goin' to work all these girls in on our church supper."

At an inquiring look from my aunt, Mrs. MacNally threw back her broche shawl and loosened her cheap fur pelerine, thus revealing the shabby seams of the second-best black silk which was the conventional attire of ministers' wives. She lowered her voice and spoke confidentially to my aunt.

"Yes, we're really goin' to have it."

"But where?"

"Oh, of course none of the houses are big enough, but I just been talkin' to Mr. Kent, and he says we can have this store here. He'll push things back for us and we can get tables next door from Sanderson's—I asked 'em just now. Why, there's ten Baptists of us already, and Captain Brand says that every chip we turn over seems to have a Baptist under it." Mrs. MacNally threw her long body back and opened her mouth in a hearty laugh. "Of course," she added, "we'll have to canvass the town to see if there ain't more, and every place we go we'll just tell about the supper, and that'll advertise it, you see."

She paused, and cast an ominously thoughtful frown at me.

In this way it came about that during the next two days I, who would have been deemed too sensitive and delicate to undertake anything like aggressive church work in my Eastern home, by sheer force of impulsion from an abnormally active personality found myself tramping from house to house in the outskirts of Meadow Centre, knocking with numb fingers upon frosty front doors, and stepping clumsily within to stand and thaw out a bit before I could put the question.

"Are there any Baptists here?"

I found only kindly folk. When they could not claim even a distant kinship to a Baptist they yet promised generally to come to the supper.

"Oh, we'll make at least ten or twelve dollars," remarked Mrs. MacNally lightly on the second evening as we sat before my aunt's grate fire of pine chunks. "mebbe fifteen. Mr. Carter has offered that lot across the street from his house for a hundred dollars. We ought to be able to get up a supper once a month between now and spring, and then there'll be ice-cream festivals and mebbe a candy pull for the young folks. Oh, we'll make it!"

She spoke with loud cheerfulness, gave a swing of her large feet, and crossed one knee over the other. Clasping her hands about the knee she suddenly plunged with equal zest and relish into pungent comments upon the favorite bits of village scandal, the details of which, at the end of a fortnight's residence in Meadow Centre, she seemed to have arranged in orderly files in her memory.

The next day the town was one huge drift of snow. The banks were up to the schoolhouse windows; no mails could come either in or out; report said that a southern-bound train was blockaded two or three miles from the little station; pumps were frozen up, and householders were kept busy thawing them out and carrying in wood to keep their families from freezing up also.

Mrs. MacNally, nevertheless, rose superior to snowdrifts and piercing winds. She had set Thursday night for the first church supper, and Thursday night it should be. Early in the afternoon we carried our provisions to the Kent & Harris hardware store, which had been cleared and swept. No business could be done anyway, so the firm resigned itself to the service of the Baptist enthusiasts.

My aunt and I, muffled to the eyes and carrying huge loaves of bread, cake and blanc-mange, and small pails of cream, found our provisions congealing on the way. The men-folk had been working all day to clear paths in the middle of the streets, for the board sidewalks had simply to be abandoned until a thaw should come. We went through a miniature canyon of snow all the way to the store.

Mrs. MacNally was already there, and the tables with spotless cloths and huge, round frosted cakes in the centre, gave an air of welcome cheer to the big bare place.

After everything was ready and the coffee had begun to simmer in a large wash boiler, we all—eight women of us—sat down by the stove. The usual feminine chatter was hushed, however, for the bare windows revealed the fact that the sky had darkened and the snow was again falling heavily. Mrs. Carter, a pretty, dressy woman of forty, gave a plaintive wail:

"Oh, what shall we do? Not a soul will come out to-night. That's Meadow Centre! Everything's got to be comfortable if they come to a church supper at all."

"And nigh a lot o' food!" murmured Miss Ayres, the milliner, with a suggestive glance toward Mrs. MacNally who had insisted upon an abundant provision. "Enough to feed the whole town, I say."

Mrs. Pendleton, the grocer's wife, pushed back a pair of heavy bracelets from her lean, dark wrists, while the corners of her mouth dropped into some well-worn lines.

"It's just impossible to have any kind o' get-ups here. The folks just won't come out."

The missionary's wife sat close to one of the oil lamps and swung a shabbily clad foot from her crossed knee while she steadily ran a darning needle back and forth in a coarse gray sock of the Elder's. Her face wore a placidly absent look. Presently, as all the women were looking with varying expressions at her, she spoke, and interpolated her remarks with emphatic orders to various docile men-folk who were moving about or sitting on the counters.

THIS WOMAN WAS VERY UNHAPPY

Physically and Mentally Worn Out—Tells How Nervous and Crying Spells Were Ended by Vinol.

Monmouth, Ill.:—"I was weak, worn-out and nervous. I had no appetite and was getting so thin and discouraged, one day I just broke down and cried when a friend came in and asked me what was the matter. I told of my condition and how nothing I took seemed to do me any good. Vinol was suggested. I got a bottle and before it was half gone I could eat and sleep well. I continued its use and now my friends say I look ten years younger, and I am well, healthy and strong. I wish I could induce every tired-out, worn-out, nervous woman to take Vinol."—Mrs. HARRIET GALE, Monmouth, Ill.

There are many over-worked, tired-out careworn, nervous women in this vicinity who need the strengthening, tissue building, and vitalizing effects of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, and so sure are we that it will build them up and make them strong that we offer to return their money if it fails to benefit.

Vinol is a delicious preparation of the extract of cod liver oil and peptonate of iron and contains no oil.

BIG CHILD MAKE UP CROSS OR FEVERISH

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing". Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

PAYS SMALL RENTAL.

And Occupant of Island of Herm Is a German, Too.

The war has brought many surprises, but perhaps the strangest story of all is that revealed by the Home Secretary in Parliament recently in reply to inquisitive members concerning the Island of Herm, one of the Channel Islands group. Herm is an extremely beautiful spot, with a shell beach, such as can be found nowhere else in these latitudes. At one time it supported a considerable population and could do so again. It also had a hotel, now turned into a private residence.

For a good many years the island has been in the possession of Prince Blucher Von Wahlstatt, who bears a historic name, equally honored in England and in Germany and in Austria. Prince Blucher is married to a Russian princess, and it is well known that he disapproves of the present policy of Germany and has incurred imperial disfavor in consequence. Some of his children were born at Herm, and one son, now a naturalized Englishman, was for some time an officer in the Guernsey militia.

The astonishing feature of the case is that Prince Blucher is not, as has always been supposed, a tenant of the British crown. He is a sub-tenant. The lessee to the Island of Herm is held by the "West Bank Liegatts, Limited," of which the Home Secretary professes to know nothing more than its name.

This mysterious company pays the crown a rent of a dollar and a quarter a week for an island larger than Heligoland, containing farms and good pasturage, numerous cottages and a spacious manor house.

The island is seventy miles from Portland and forty from Cherbourg, and has been held since 1889 by a German company. It is unlikely that it has been used for a submarine base by the Germans, but it might have been so used.

Prince Blucher has excluded the public from the island save for one narrow pathway to the shell beach, and has put up an inordinate number of notice boards. The public, which was once able to wander about Herm at will, naturally resents its conversion into the game preserve of a foreign prince.

Some Lonely Islands.

Though scientific progress has made it possible to do a double journey between England and America in a fortnight, there remain many lands with which it takes years to communicate. Off the Scottish coast are the groups of islands known as the Hebrides, Orkneys, and Shetlands.

Of these the most isolated island is St. Kilda, some three miles long and two miles broad. The inhabitants lead lives of great loneliness, for it takes a month to get to the next island, and the sea often makes any communication with St. Kilda impossible for months.

The group of eight Phoenix Islands in the Pacific has a total population of only a hundred and fifty-eight, while another little bit of the British Empire is Fanning Island. This is a landing place for the Pacific submarine cable, and usually there are about a hundred people in the place.

The loneliest of all parts of British territory is the Island of Tristan Da Cunha, in the South Atlantic, which is also the smallest inhabited island in the Empire. It is eighteen hundred miles from land, has a population of seventy-four Scottish Americans, and the inhabitants get news of the outer world usually once every two years.

Origin of Military Terms.

At a time when naval and military terms are in everyone's mouth, it may be interesting to recall their origins. "Captain" is derived from the Latin "caput," meaning a head; colonel comes from the Italian "colonna," a column, the "compagna colonella" having been the first company of an infantry regiment, the little column which the "colonel" led. The title "lieutenant" comes from a word signifying "holding the place"—e.g., a lieutenant-colonel is a sort of understudy for a colonel, a lieutenant looks after a company in the absence of the captain, and so on. The titles of "lance-sergeant" and "lance-corporal" originated in the fact that in the old days the holders of these ranks carried a lance instead of a halberd, round the head of which was twisted a slow match. Their duties were to go round the ranks with these torch-like lances and give fire to the matchlock men just before a battle took place.

Letellier Gets $100.

QUEBEC, Feb. 16.—J. B. E. Letellier, one of the Quebec harbor commissioners, claimed $10,000 from The Montreal Star for an alleged slanderous report. Yesterday Judge Lemieux, in the Superior Court, granted the claimant the sum of $100 damages.

Greek Attache Insulted.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Reuter's Telegram Co. has received the following despatch from its Athens correspondent:

"Difficulties having arisen in regard to the fulfillment of the Porte's promise of satisfaction to Greece for the insult to the naval attache of the Greek legation at Constantinople, M. Tatanas, the Greek Minister, felt compelled to leave Constantinople Sunday, leaving the secretary of the legation in charge of the affairs of Greece."

BUELOW'S MAILED FIST.

Paper Says He Offers Italy Trent or Hand Blows.

ROME, Feb. 16. — (Delayed in transmission.)—The Idea Nazionale, a newspaper published in the interests of the Nationalist party, in its issue of Sunday publishes a forecast of German proposals to Italy, which reads as follows:

"Before the end of February, Prince von Buelow, the German Ambassador to Italy, will present to the Italian Government a concrete proposal for Italian participation in the war on the side of Germany. This consists of the cession by Austria of the Province of Trent and the rectification of the eastern Italian frontier by the addition of a strip of land going as far as the Isonzo river. In addition, Germany will pledge herself to conclude a new treaty with Italy which will afford protection to Italy's Mediterranean interests.

"In exchange, Italy is to take part at once in the war. She will occupy Tunis and help Turkey drive the British from Egypt, which will return under the dominion of the Sultan of Turkey. In addition, the Italian fleet will attack the Anglo-French naval forces in the Mediterranean."

Continuing, The Idea Nazionale says that Prince von Buelow, referring to Trieste, made this statement: "It is impossible to give Trieste to Italy, because this seaport is the lung, not of Austria, but of Germany."

At the conclusion of one of his conversations with the Italian statesmen, Prince von Buelow, according to this newspaper, made use of this phrase: "Either Italy will be friendly toward us, or we will treat her worse than we are treating England."

Must Go To Prize Court.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The cargo of foodstuffs intended for the German civil population, which was seized by Great Britain when the American liner Wilhelmina, anchored in Falmouth Harbor, will be disposed of by a prize court, it was announced in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

Second Contingent To Leave Soon.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 16.—Col. Septimus Denison, commander of the 4th Infantry Brigade of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, is in the city for the purpose of inspecting the local troops of the second contingent to-day. Col. Denison declared that he expected the second overseas force would leave for England any day now. The men of the second contingent he considered very much superior to the rank and file of the first expeditionary force.

Mine Campaign Announced.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — Germany's intention of sowing mines in the waters around the British Isles as a part of her submarine warfare against belligerent merchantmen was announced in a note delivered to the States Department yesterday by Count von Bernstorff.

RUBBER IN COTTON.

British Agents Find Contraband Concealed in Bales of Waste.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The X-ray examinations of cotton cargoes of outgoing British ships, which have been conducted by representatives of the British Government for several months, as a means of preventing shipment of contraband of war, revealed yesterday that bales of cotton waste consigned aboard the White Star liner Cretic, contained rubber. The Cretic is due to sail to-day for Mediterranean ports. The consignee was given by officials of the line as a firm in Genoa, Italy. The consignor, they said, was A. B. Newman of this city.

Alien Suspects Return.

HALIFAX, Feb. 16. — Fourteen "alien suspects" from the first Canadian contingent at Salisbury Plain were marched off the C. P. R. liner Missanabie, which docked here from Liverpool Sunday, and imprisoned in the citadel. Each man was handcuffed to a soldier. Some of them are of German or Austrian birth, but there are others of various nationalities suspected of disloyal tendencies.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, GAS OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" settles sour, upset stomachs in five minutes.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmicist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family fre from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your ohme.

BRITAIN WILL CUT OFF GERMANY'S FOOD SUPPLY

Time Has Come to Reconsider the British Policy on Food Says First Lord of Admiralty—Navy Alone Can Win War

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Great Britain has finally decided to clamp on every ounce of sea pressure to choke off Germany's food supply in retaliation for German submarine policy. This announcement by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the Commons yesterday was greeted with loud cheers.

The announcement of the Government's declaration with regard to Germany's food supplies came almost coincidentally with the receipt of two despatches from the United States, one saying that Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, had informed the Washington Government that Germany was willing to abandon her submarine policy, provided Great Britain ceased interfering with cargoes of foodstuffs, and the other saying that he again had advised neutral shipping to avoid these waters which Germany had declared would become a dangerous military area three days hence.

Mr. Churchill disclosed for the first time the total naval losses as the result of the war. These, he said, were upwards of 5,000 officers and men, a majority of them victims of submarines. Germany's naval losses were about the same.

Concerning submarines, Mr. Churchill outlined what Great Britain purposed to do as a counter to the German policy. In view of what he styled "Piracy and murder," Mr. Churchill said it was incumbent on Britain for the first time to apply "the full force" of her naval power. A formal declaration to this effect, he added, would be made forthwith.

Dealing with the blockade plans, he said:

"We have not yet stopped the importation of food into Germany, but the time has come to reconsider the situation. The allied Governments will probably make a declaration of action, the effect of which will be to bring the full pressure of the British naval power on Germany.

"The pressure of the navy itself could decide the issue of this war."

"The task lying before us is both anxious and grave. We are now to be the object of measures never before practised by a civilized power. So far we have not attempted to stop the importation of food. We have not prevented neutral ships from trading directly with German ports. We have allowed German exports in neutral ships to pass unchallenged. But the time is now when the enjoyment of these immunities by a state which as a matter of deliberate policy has placed herself outside of international obligations must be reconsidered. A further declaration on the part of the allied Governments will be made, which will have the effect of applying for the first time the full force of naval pressure on the enemy.

"It must not be supposed that because the attack is extraordinarily good a reply cannot be made. Losses no doubt will be incurred, but I believe no vital injury can be done. If merchant shipmen act in the spirit of the captain of the Laertes, and observe certain precautions, losses will be confined within manageable limits, even at the outset, when the enemy naturally will make his maximum efforts. Our reply will perhaps be not ineffective.

"When war broke out the German army was not more ready for offensive operations than the British fleet was for the national defence. On mobilization we were able to man every ship in the navy and many old vessels in addition. Scores of armed merchantmen were also provided."

Every ship in the navy which was fit for service, as well as new ships, which were being built for foreign Governments and armed merchantmen, had been fully manned.

During the past three months, said Mr. Churchill, 7,001 British merchant vessels traversed the sea in safety.

Referring to Vice-Admiral Jellicoe's command of the sea with his fleet at various, unescaping and as yet unchallenged," Mr. Churchill said that the Admiralty had moved men at home and abroad, including Belgian and French troops and the wounded to the number of 1,000,000, without an accident or the loss of a life.

A WAR EXTENDING OVER FIVE YEARS CAN BE FINANCED

British Investments Abroad Sufficient to Pay the Huge Cost ---Ministers of Allies Decide That a Joint Loan Would Be Unwise

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 16—The countries fighting against Germany, Austria, and Turkey up to the present time have thrown only a third of their strength into the field. To maintain this force and to bring the remaining two-thirds into action will cost £2,-000,000,000 during the current year.

This announcement was made in the House of Commons to-day by David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who gave the British public perhaps a clearer view of the machinery behind the great struggle than any that had been afforded since the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Lloyd George gave the details of the financial arrangements of the allies as they were decided on at the Paris conference of the British, French and Russian Ministers of Finance, and put into round figures what heretofore had been guessed — the remarkable increase in the productivity and efficiency of the Russian people by the prohibition of the sale of vodka. This productivity and efficiency he placed as high as 50 per cent.

Great Britain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, said, had resources which would last for five years, and France perhaps sufficient for three years. Mr. Lloyd George paid a tribute to the burden that France at present is bearing, and gave a pledge that the allies would stand by Belgium financially until the time for the settlement came."

Britain's Expenses Heaviest.

Mr. Lloyd George emphasized at the outset of his speech that the recommendation of the respective Governments committed Great Britain to heavy engagements. This, he said, was the most expensive war that had ever been waged, in material, in men and in money. For the year ended December 31 next the aggregate expenditure of the allies would be not far from two thousand million pounds sterling. The British Empire would be spending considerably more than France and Russia—probably £100,000,000 to £150,000,000 more than the highest figure spent by either of the two great allies.

Great Britain, he said, had to recruit a new army and maintain a huge navy; was paying liberal separation allowances; had to bring troops from the ends of the earth, and had to wage war not merely in Europe, but in Asia, and in North and East and South Africa. Great Britain and France were the two richest countries in the world—they were the great bankers of the world.

Britain was able to pay her huge expenditure on the war for five years, even allowing a substantial sum for depreciation, out of the proceeds of her investments abroad. France was able to carry on the war for two or three years at least out of the proceeds of her investments abroad. And both countries would have still something to spare to advance to their allies. It was a most important consideration. At the present moment the allies were fighting the whole mobilised strength of Germany, with perhaps less than one-third of their own strength. The problem of the allies was to bring the remaining two-thirds of their resources into the fighting line at the earliest possible moment. This was largely a question of finance. Britain's accumulation of gold was larger than ever before in the country's history. In fact, the position of the three allies was particularly strong as regards the gold supply.

Position of Russia.

Russia was in a different position from either Great Britain or France. She was prodigiously rich in natural resources and had a great growing population, virile and industrious. Russia, since the war began, had enormously increased her resources by suppressing the sale of alcohol. In this way alone she had increased the productivity of her labour by between 30 and 50 per cent. It was as if she had added millions of labourers to her labour reserve without even increasing the expense of maintaining them. But hitherto Russia had been unable to command the capital within her own dominion and to develop these resources.

The war had made this problem still more difficult, especially in financing outside purchases for the war. France had also had special difficulties. People, said the Chancellor, did not quite realise the strain upon this gallant country up to the present. She had borne the greatest strain in proportion to her resources, she had the largest proportion of men under arms, the enemy occupied part of her richest territory, and only a few months ago bankers of Paris could hear the sound of the enemy's guns from their counting houses.

Nevertheless, the old French nation possessed a wonderful confidence. Every visitor in Paris was impressed with the exhibition of a calm and serene courage which was surpassed to be incompatable with the temperament of the Celt. There was a general assurance that the Germans had lost their tide; that now German arms had as remote a chance of crushing France as they had of over-running the planet Mars. That feeling permeated every class and community and was reflected in the money market, where difficulties were passing away.

Success in Financing.

The arrangements made for raising money to promote military enterprises would be crowned with complete success. There were, however, a number of small States that were compelled to look to their greater allies for financial support. There was Belgium, until recently a very rich country, now devastated and desolated. It had to be seen to that she did not suffer until the period of restoration and compensation came.

There was Serbia with as large a population as Ireland, fighting her third war within two years, fighting with a great, fierce courage and brilliancy, but with no wealth, no revenue, no exports, and hardly any manufactures.

There were also other States preparing for war, and it was obviously to our interests that they should be well equipped. Then Great Britain, herself, had her own special difficulties. Two-thirds of her food supply was purchased from abroad. Enormous quantities of raw material were absorbed in war equipments, and her ships were occupied with war transport. She had to purchase abroad for war purposes and create enormous credits to enable other countries to do the same.

Mr. Lloyd George emphasised the fact that there was a danger, but in a conference such as was held in Paris, the fact could not be overlooked that great vigilance must be exercised. The financial resources of the allies had been effectively mobilized so as to be the greatest help to the common cause. Great Britain undoubtedly was still the best market in the world. In a great war all the allies must bring all their resources into the common stock; war could not be made under limited liability principles; the country having more men ready with guns, rifles and munitions must bring them against the common enemy, even although others were unable to make a similar contribution. The same thing applied to the country with a larger navy, or a country with more money.

No Joint Flotations.

"That," added the Chancellor, "was the principle on which the conference in Paris worked. We decided that each country should raise money in its own markets as far as conditions allowed, but if any country needed help for outside purchases, those countries best able would render assistance. The only exception was that Great Britain, France and Russia should contribute proportionately to every loan to the smaller states." The conference, he said, dismissed the idea of a joint international loan, which would have frightened every bourse.

With regard to Russian purchases, the Chancellor said it had been decided that the first £50,000,000 ($250,-000,000) for this purpose should be raised in equal amounts on the Paris and London markets.

Russia need not hesitate to place orders for fear of any difficulty in the matter of obtaining money to pay for them, the Chancellor of the Exchequer then declared. Russian Treasury bills to the amount of £10,000,000 issued in London in the past few days had been over-subscribed.

Much Gold in London.

The speaker then declared there was a satisfactory amount of gold in London. "If, however, our gold reserves fall below a certain point — a pretty point — the banks of France and Russia will come to our assistance," Mr. Lloyd George said.

Russia had agreed to facilitate the export of the products required by the allied countries.

Great Britain, he said, had advanced £30,000,000 for Russian purchases in Great Britain and elsewhere, and Russia had a credit of £40,000,000 in London. France also had made advances to Russia for other similar purposes outside of the Russian Empire.

In conclusion, the Chancellor emphasised the fact that the "Face to Face Conference" of the Finance Ministers at Paris had been entirely successful, and stated that similar conferences should be held for the purpose of co-operation in other spheres.

A despatch from Amsterdam says that the German Government yesterday sent a reply to the American note transmitted by Ambassador Gerard.

Canada's gift ship, the Treneglove, filled with food and other good things for distressed Belgium, left Plymouth Sunday for Rotterdam, having been delayed by the stress of weather.

Two French airmen flew over Strassburg, on the Rhine, Sunday, but did not drop bombs. This is the first time since the beginning of the war that French aviators have appeared over this Lorraine city.

The death of Dr. Wesley Mills, emeritus professor of physiology in McGill University, was announced yesterday in a special cable received by The Montreal Star from Sir William Osler, of Oxford University.

Phillip Schimsler, foreman for the Victoria Harbor Lumber Co., was fatally injured at Victoria Harbor yesterday morning while at work and died shortly afterwards. Mr. Schimsler had been in the employ of the Harbor Lumber Co. for over a quarter of a century.

Charles Cleaver was shot and killed by two robbers in the saloon of Con Feely in Chicago. The robbers escaped. In the robbery of Peter Toccetti's saloon, Policeman Martin Hogan interfered and shot and probably fatally wounded Thomas Ford, one of three bandits.

THEIR MEN AND WOMEN

Here's a Safe Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh.

This, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not put on, I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: Poor stomach and fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed in a means of quickly toning the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and send them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this global waste of flesh building elements and to clog the passage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered concentrative fat-food that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and protesting point.

All good druggists have Sargol, or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and quickly effective.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming many over digestive and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder.

TEN BILLIONS NEEDED.

Allies Will Require That Much To Bring Best of Force Into Field.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The countries fighting against Germany, Austria and Turkey up to the present time, have thrown only a third of their strength into the field. To maintain this force and to bring the remaining two-thirds into action will cost $10,-000,000,000 during the current year.

This announcement was made in the House of Commons yesterday by David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who, with Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, gave the British public perhaps a clearer view of the machinery behind the great struggle than any that had been afforded since the outbreak of the war.

Lloyd George drew cheering by a reference to loans to countries which he said he expected to throw in their lot with the allies. These countries the Chancellor did not name. It was the first time that a reference was made in Parliament of such expectations.

The speaker gave the details of the financial arrangement of the allies as they were decided on at the Paris conference of the British, French and Russian Ministers of Finance, and put into round figures what heretofore had been guessed — the remarkable increase in the productivity and efficiency of the Russian people by the prohibition of the sale of vodka. STOP CATARRH OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dullness, discomfort or dryness. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

SERIOUS SLUMP IN PRICES OF CATTLE

First Week in Lent Has Something to Do With Poor Market

TORONTO, Feb. 16 — A decided slump in cattle prices, the worst for a long time, prevails at the Union Stock Yards, with no immediate prospect of improvement. The men of the market attribute the falling off in prices to many reasons.

The first week in Lent is now a real factor in the Toronto Cattle Market. It used to have a noticeable effect only in Montreal, but many people here in Toronto, in order to have a lot of money to spend on Easter clothes, are not now purchasing meats, and are getting the price down and will not buy until it gets even cheaper.

It appears that the demand for meat outside the City has fallen off. There is not nearly so much meat being shipped to the lumber camps, and what the military camps are taking is largely the canned meat. The trade has been limited outside of that, the meat demand not being nearly what it is ordinarily.

Selling Too Soon.

Another reason advanced for the slump in prices is the fact that farmers are sending in their stock too early. They are getting high prices for their grain and feel that it is just as well to do that now as to feed it to the cattle. Feed is very dear at present and many farmers consider it would not pay to fed the cattle on that account. Consequently a lot of the stock arriving at the market is "unfinished."

Asked his opinion in that regard Hon. Thomas Crawford said he had his doubts as to the wisdom of the farmer following that course. He was inclined to think that properly fattened cattle would pay for their food and the farmer would have the benefit of the manure.

There are hundreds of these "unfinished" cattle left over on the market to-day.

Closing of U. S. Markets.

The closing of the United States markets again is another reason for the falling off in business at the Stock Yards.

Buyers and sellers at the market this morning were inclined to take a rather gloomy view of the situation.

THE CONGESTION FROM A BAD COLD LOOSENED UP IN ONE HOUR

If Rubbed on at Night You're Well Next Morning.

Nerviline Never Fails.

When that cold comes, how is it to be cured? This method is simplicity itself. Rub the chest and throat vigorously with "Nerviline". Rub it in good and deep. Lots of rubbing can't do any harm. Then put some Nerviline in the water and use it as a gargle; this will ease the cough, cut out the phlegm, assist in breaking up the cold quickly.

There is no telling how quickly Nerviline breaks up a hard racking cough, eases a tight chest, relieves a pleuritic pain. Why, there isn't another liniment with half the power, the penetrative qualities, the honest merit that has made Nerviline the most popular American household liniment.

A large 50c bottle of Nerviline cures ills of the whole family, and makes doctor's bill small. Get it to-day. The large size is more economical than the 25c trial size. Sold by all dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

SUCCESSFUL ATTACKS BY THE ALLIES' AVIATORS

German Positions Are Shelled by Artillery and By Bombs Dropped From Air Craft---All the Pilots Returned Safely in Spite of Terrible Fire of German Anti-Airship Guns.

TEN GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

TRENCHES CAPTURED

PARIS, February 17.—The British and Belgian artillery shelled the German positions in combination with an aerial attack of British aeroplanes, and much damage resulted to the German positions. It is officially confirmed that all of the aviators returned to their base unharmed, in spite of the terrific fire of the German anti-air guns in the Champagne district. Last night and this morning the Germans made no less than ten attacks on the French trenches, but all were repulsed with severe losses. In the Argonne region the French captured two hundred metres of trenches and destroyed important German positions with artillery. In the Vosges and in Alsace things are comparatively quiet.

Details of the various engagements now in progress along the battle line from the Swiss frontier to the North Sea indicate that another general battle may be commencing. At the Meuse and in the Vosges artillery exchanges continue while the Germans are again showing activity near Verdun. Near Fontaine aux Chanas, in the Argonne region, a German line of trenches has been captured, together with a pivotal blockhouse. The Germans attacked in force between Four de Paris and west of Bourouilles, but were defeated with heavy losses, and a number of prisoners were taken by the French

READY FOR THE SUBMARINE RAID

Britain's navy is ready to meet the German submarine raid. Just how this latest danger to British commerce is to be coped with is known only to the Admiralty, but there was evidence to-day of a far more confident feeling than has hitherto prevailed. It is known that escorts are to be provided for the British merchant fleet. A few vessels may be held in port, but the majority of sailings, it may be stated on authority will take place on schedule. The destroyer and torpedo boat flotillas have been assigned to patrol duty along steamship lanes. British submarines are also expected to be active, and it is realized that the Germans will try to strike hard at the very outset in order to terrify timid shipowners, and influence them to keep their vessels in their home ports. All of the neutral vessels reaching the British ports to-day from Scandinavian ports had their national colours painted all around their upper works. In addition, all of them had their names very prominently displayed, some of the regular liners having them arranged with electric bulbs forming the letters in their names in order that there could be no mistaking their identity. Any further measures that the British government is to take to harrass Germany are to come under consideration. It is not believed that they will be officially made public until Germany has shown her hand.

WASHINGTON, D.C., February 17.—Relief ships which enter the German navy war zone surrounding Britain will be as liable to attack and destruction as if they were British war craft or British merchantmen, according to the German embassy officials here to-day.

TORONTO, February 17.—The first announcement of deaths, both accidental, in the Canadian expeditionary force in France, apart from the Princess Patricias, was made to-day, and is interesting from its disclosure of the position of the Canadian contingent.

Private F. H. Norris of Toronto was killed by a train at Buxchy, France, while Corporal J. T. McMaster was killed at Gare d'Orleans, Nantes, 215 miles south west of Paris.

There are two possible explanations of this location: The first part of the contingent may have landed at a port in southern France, to be thence taken to the Front, which would explain McMaster's position at Nantes, or as prophesied some time ago some of the Canadians may have been sent to the south of France to train. In the latter case they may have been landed at Dieppe and have gone to Nantes via Buchy.

The landing of men in Southern France would mean an ocean voyage, and would be designed to avoid German submarines. Both men who were killed belonged to Ontario Regiments.

Since Norris was killed at Buchy it is evident that the Fourth Battalion to which he belonged, was wholly or in part, landed at Dieppe, or thereabouts. McMaster who was killed at Nantes, belonged to the First Battalion, which was either landed near here, or sent south from the more northern part by rail.

Examiner Office Open To-night

Pay a Dollar on Your Subscription to the Examiner and Receive an Estimate Blank

The glass jar of coppers in the Peterborough Bookstore window is receiving plenty of attention to-day. There is $35.00, in cash, given away to those who make the nearest correct estimate to the number of coppers in the jar. If you are down town to-night just drop into the Examiner Office and pay your account or subscription, and receive an estimate blank for each dollar paid. The nearest correct estimate receives $10.00 in all. $35.00 is paid.

The Examiner Office is open to-night. The coppers will be counted at 10.30 in the Bookstore window and the names of those estimating correctly announced to-morrow in the Examiner.

Presentation Was Made

Pte. Geo. Eggerton is Guest of Honour at a Supper

An interesting event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Knott, 296 Rogers Street, last night, when a supper was held in honour of Mr. Knott's cousin, Pte. Geo. Eggerton, who is going to the front with B. Squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles. During the evening Pte. Eggerton was presented with a pipe and tobacco pouch. Progressive euchre was played, and the evening was a most enjoyable one.

SUCCESS CROWNED

The Efforts of the Merchants to Make "Dollar Day" One of the Best Shopping Events of the Season

STORES OPEN TO-NIGHT

"One of the best merchandising events of the season!" Thus did one prominent George Street merchant express his opinion of "dollar day." Judging by the activity that was manifested among the stores one might have concluded that it was the Saturday before Christmas instead of the seventeenth of February. Both the city and country benefitted by the buying opportunities that such an occasion makes possible. Early in the morning prospective buyers flocked in from the country. They invaded the stores and eventually departed wearing a look that betokened appreciation of the efforts put forth by the merchants of Peterborough to equal, if not exceed, the success that attended a similar effort of last year. That there was some good buying goes without saying. Residents of both the city and county showed alike the opinion that "dollar day" represents one of the greatest shopping events of the year.

Extra Help Required.

Extra help was required in the majority of the stores. In order to give the late comers and those residing in the City an opportunity to complete their purchases, the stores will remain open this evening until 10 o'clock. Many of the stores introduced special features such as one-dollar packages, which contained goods worth anywhere from two to seven and eight dollars. One enterprising George Street merchant put on a "scramble" for boys. This was staged at 4.30 this afternoon and, needless to say, attracted a large crowd, many of whom secured some valuable prizes in the way of merchandise.

The Coppers in the Jar.

The glass jar filled with coppers, which is on exhibition in the window of Trebilcock Bros., is attracting a good deal of attention. To-night at 10.30 o'clock the coppers will be counted in the store window of Trebilcock Bros. The Examiner will give thirty-five dollars in prizes to the nearest correct estimates of the number of coppers in the jar. The results will be announced in to-morrow's issue of the Examiner. The number of coppers is unknown to any one.

Prize Winners At The Carnival

There was a good variety of costumes at the Mardi Gras Carnival at Brock Street rink last evening, comic and otherwise. The crowd was not very large, though the ice was fairly good. The prize winners were as follows:

Best National Man—Mr. Shook.

Best National Lady— Miss Henderson.

Fancy Dress Lady—Mrs. (Dr.) Morgan.

Fancy Dress Man—Mr. H. Coon.

Man's Comic Costume— Mr. C. Mowry.

Lady's Comic Costume—Miss Jessie Mervin.

Boys' Comic Costume—Willie Lavery.

45 Cars McLaughlin Vehicles For West

Train Load Half-mile Long Leaves Oshawa Past Week —Mr. Banks, Local Dealer, Has Many Enquiries

The Oshawa Reformer of Feb. 5th has the following:

"A whole train load of McLaughlin vehicles for the West. A sight to lighten the hearts of the depressed was observed the past week moving westward on the Grand Trunk Railway. It was a train loaded with McLaughlin carriages and automobiles, about half a mile long, consisting of 45 cars, which left the Oshawa Junction last Saturday morning consigned to the branch houses of the Company in the prairie provinces. Its first stop was Winnipeg. This is the second trainload shipment the McLaughlin people have made, the first one two years ago, but this is the largest one that has been sent out from any factory in Canada this year. By sending their branch houses this large stock of vehicles for sale, the McLaughlin Co. are demonstrating their confidence in the West. The shipment the McLaughlin people sent out Saturday morning represented a value of $157,500, and the freight alone amounted to $7,100. In the midst of such times as our country is passing through, it is inspiring to see one of our own firms with such optimism and confidence in the ultimate income, and in their product, as to venture an investment of such proportions, fully assured that the returns will warrant even greater things. The men in the factory who have produced this splendid shipment, of which citizens, who watched it steam out of Oshawa, were justly proud, may be grateful that they work for a firm, who instead of closing down altogether, as firms all over the country did when the market looked unpromising, had faith in their product and kept their industry running while the worst time of stress was passing, until now, the clouds of industrial depression are apparently beginning to break and roll away. The McLaughlin people are looking forward with confidence to the future. The sound and reliable reputation, years of unfailing quality in their production established has resulted in a steady demand for their products. Such a shipment as they sent from here last Saturday, coming from Oshawa in times like these, should put this town as well as the factory, from whence it came, in the limelight from one end of the Dominion to the other. It is quality which counts in the long run. The firm is running full time and have slightly over 500 men on their payroll at present."

C. R. Banks, Charlotte Street, is the local dealer for the McLaughlin Company.

COLLIER IS SUNK

British Steamer Dulwich Stopped by German Submarine and Crew Are Given Twenty Minutes To Escape

LAND IN FRANCE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

HAVRE, Feb. 17. — Twenty-two members of the crew of the British collier Dulwich landed here to-day, and others landed at Focamp. The Dulwich, loaded, was en route from Hull to Rouen, and on Tuesday was stopped by a German submarine. The crew was given twenty minutes to collect their belongings and take to boats, after which the collier was torpedoed and sank in twenty minutes. The weather was clear but a heavy sea was running. It is believed that this attack was the forerunner of the German submarine raid scheduled to begin to-morrow.

Former Resident Is Dead

Special to The Examiner:

BUFFALO, N.Y., Feb. 16. — Mrs. Elisabeth Alarie, aged 83, widow of Joseph Alarie, who was born in Kingston, Ontario, Canada, and who lived in that city for 38 years and afterwards for seven years in Peterborough, Ont., died on Sunday night, following a paralytic stroke at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Malloy, in Tonawanda, N.Y. Besides her daughter, deceased leaves two sons, Patrolman John Alarie and Frank Alarie, both living in Tonawanda. Interment will be on Wednesday morning in Tonawanda, N.Y.

Rifles Have Long March

Squadron Tramped Out to Downer's Corners This Morning

The local squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles were out for another route march this morning. The distance covered is increased each time out, and this morning the squadron, in command of Capt. Nelson, marched to Downer's Corners via the Locks Bridge and returning through East City and across the Hunter Street Bridge. The men seemed to enjoy the tramp in the fresh air. Route marches will be a feature of the training from now on as long as the weather and the conditions under foot are favourable.

Major Dr. Cameron is nearly through the operation of vaccinating the Mounted Rifles. Some 25 or 30 are done each afternoon and to-day should wind up the process. A number of men who have refused to be vaccinated, will probably be discharged, following the general order to this effect.

No word as to the date of the departure for either the Mounted Rifles or the local members of the 39th Battalion has been received. Recruiting for the 39th Battalion is to be continued until March 1st. The local company is 85 strong at the present time or ten more than the 57th allotment to the second contingent.

Over six hundred soldiers have been recruited in Peterborough for the three contingents. At least seventy-five per cent of these were residents of the city.

Lieut.—Manning To Command.

TORONTO, Feb. 17.—Lieut. H. G. Manning, a Victoria graduate and instructor at the University school, has been given the appointment as commander of the new university platoon of fifty in the second contingent. The men will be picked this week.

Mr. Manning is a son of Rev. H. M. Manning, and a brother of Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton.

SALARIES OF OFFICIALS WILL NOT BE REDUCED

Matter Was Discussed at a Meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council—Division Was 7-4 in Favour of the Present Salary Schedule.

SOME PROPOSED RECOMMENDATIONS

Ald. Edgar's attempt to have the salaries of the civic official reduced, and a change made in the personnel of the engineering department, met its Waterloo at last night's meeting of the committee of the Whole Council. After being under a discoursive fire for about two hours, the proposal was voted upon with the result that it foundered with four hands on board, namely, Aldermen Edgar, Saunders, Weir and McIntyre. This paved the way for the passage of the original report of the Finance committee, which was unanimously endorsed by the committee. It will be remembered that when Ald. Edgar's resolution made its initial appearance it was referred to the Finance committee for a report. The latter did not meet with the approval of Ald. Edgar, so it was decided to refer the proposal to a committee of the Whole Council. The net result of this action is the adoption of the Finance committee's report, which practically endorses the action of the Finance committee in recommending that the salaries of the civic officials remain as they are.

The Report.

The original report of the Finance committee that was endorsed at last nights meeting of the committee of he Whole Council by a vote of 7 to 4 is as follows:

1. Your committee considered the resolution as brought in by Ald. Edgar at the last meeting of the Council in regard to the employment of the Council and recommend as follows:

(a) That it be left to the City Engineer and the Board of Works to decide whether a Street Inspector is required the year round.

(b) That the matter of the salaries in connection with the City Engineer's Department be left with the Board of Works.

(c) That the salaries of the following officials be left as they are at present: City Treasurer, Street Commission, Tax Collector, Assessor, Engineer of the Sewage Pumping Station, Relief Officer, Medical Officer of Health and City Physician, Plumbing Inspector, Sanitary Inspector, Caretaker of City Buildings, City Solicitor, the County Judge as as Police Commissioner, Caretaker of the Town Clock and the Firemen.

(d) That the Board of Commissioners of Police be requested to keep the expenses of the Police Department as low as possible this year.

The Proposed Recommendations.

The recommendations as marshalled by Ald. Edgar and subsequently defeated at last night's meeting, contained the following:

1. That the Engineering Department consist of the following: One engineer, one assistant, one bookkeeper and stenographer.

2. That a male assistant be appointed in the clerk's office at a salary of $900 per year and that Miss Jackson be transferred from the City Clerk's office at present salary.

3. That as soon as the outfall sewer work is completed, one street commissioner only shall be employed from the 1st December to 1st April.

4. That the salary of Commissioner Evans be placed as it was before the last increase, viz., $1,000.

5. That the City Treasurer receive an additional salary of $1,000 per year and that the taxes be collected in his office.

6. That the assessor's salary for 1915 be the same as for 1914.

7. That the Police Commissioners be asked not to raise the appropriation for 1915 over that of 1914, and if possible lower it.

8. That the salary of the Fire Chief be lowered $100 per year and the firemen's salaries be reduced as follows: 1st year men $30 per year; 2nd year men, $40 per year; 3rd year men, $50 per year.

9. That as soon as the money market and business conditions resume their normal state the salary of the Fire Chief, firemen, assessor and street commissioner be placed as at present.

10. That the above recommendation take effect 1st April, 1915.

The following statement shows the net saving to the city by the above recommendations if adopted:

1 Engineer	$1000
Mr. Quartermaine	780
Commissioner Evans	100
Tax Collector	200
Assessor	100

A VERDICT OF GUILTY AGAINST THE DEFENDANTS

Otonabee Boys Convicted of Unlawfully Posting a Scurrilous Letter Are Out on $500 Bail

JUDGMENT ON MONDAY

Louis Shaw and Harry Redmond were found guilty yesterday afternoon by Magistrate Dumble. They were allowed out on $500.00 bail each, given by two sureties of $250.00 each, to appear for judgment on Monday, Feb. 22nd.

The case of Shaw and Redmond lasted until 4.20 p.m. in Police Court yesterday, with an adjournment of one hour at noon. The charge upon which they were found guilty was "Unlawfully posting for transmission or delivery by or through the post to Michael Fitzgerald, a letter of an indecent or immoral or scurrilous character, contrary to the criminal code." Another charge of damaging a cutter was left over until next Monday, and if reparation is made in the meantime, in all probability the charge may be withdrawn.

THE EVIDENCE.

At 2 o'clock Mr. John Gillespie was called. He is a resident of Otonabee, and received one of the exhibits in his mail box. He testified to giving it to Mr. Fitzgerald.

Detective Newhall was in the Police Station when Shaw and Redmond were brought in by Constable Moore. Mr. Sam. Redmond, father of one of the prisoners, came in about the same time and wanted to know how to go about getting bail.

When Acting-Sergeant Kidd was searching the prisoners, Redmond commenced to tell Detective Newhall why he was locked up, and that he did not know anything about the Munro House affair. Constable Kidd told Redmond to keep quiet, as any statements made would likely be used against him. The detective asked how Redmond came into town on Feb. 6th, and who he was with, and was informed with Louis Shaw, and that they went to Hogan's Hotel, had one drink and then to Munro's, but was not in the yard at the latter place. The detective asked why he was so particular about not being in the yard. Redmond then said he was in the yard but not in the sheds.

Redmond remarked that everything that was done out there was blamed on him. When asked what he was talking about, he said there were a lot of cards posted up around Mich Fitzgerald's, and that Mrs. Fitzgerald blamed him. The Detective asked for a sample of his handwriting. Redmond wrote down the words "Pedigree Horses," "Rural Route," and several other words.

The officer then went out and looked over some papers, and coming back said, "I am pretty sure you are the man who wrote some of those cards Mrs. Fitzgerald showed me." Prisoner denied doing it, and said he never mentioned her name. The Detective mentioned one or two posters and letters, including one, "Dick McBride and cheaper whiskey." Detective Newhall ordered the prisoner confined to the cells, and after that Redmond and Shaw made a statement to Detectives Newhall and Meagher and Acting-Sergeant Kidd, which they signed. The statement was presented in Court.

Mr. F. D. Kerr objected to the statement being used against the prisoners, as being under pressure or compulsion from the police. His objection was noted.

The statement was an acknowledgment by Redmond and Shaw that they threw the stone which struck the cutter, and wrote the letters and dirty posters, saying they did it to get Mr. Fitzgerald going, and hear him swear. Their statements were all in the presence of Acting-Sergeant Kidd and the two detectives. The prisoners were told to sign or leave it alone, and they signed, absolutely no pressure or third degree methods being used.

Detective Meagher corroborated the evidence of the former witness.

Mr. Kerr called a couple of character witnesses for the defence.

Magistrate Dumble then found the accused guilty, denouncing them in scathing terms.

OUR STAYING POWER.

Words cannot speak our feeling over the horror of this war. What helps us out is the knowledge of the steady unyielding glacier-like progress of the campaign. We are gaining ground slowly but surely, and the enemy is losing strength; its bag of futile tricks is becoming empty, and the last desperate resort to piracy—raising the black flag—is but the prelude of raising the white flag of surrender. The British Admiralty is ready to meet the submarine menace, which it feels sure will fail as has failed the Zeppelin menace.

We are encouraged to look to the end with confidence. While, at the present moment, as Lloyd George tells us, we are fighting the whole military strength of Germany, the Allies are employing only one-third of their own strength in men. We have behind our reserve strength in men a reserve of financial strength infinitely greater, surer, and more solid, than Germany can command. In speaking of the conference of the Finance Ministers of Britain, France and Russia, Lloyd George stated that though Britain's share of the war expenditure, which would be for the Allies ten thousand million dollars by December next, is far the largest, Great Britain will be able to spend at that rate for five years out of her investments abroad; and France could from the same source keep up the pace for two years without undue strain. When it comes to money and men the Allies have laid in these respects, only one-third of their resources under contribution. On the contrary Germany is virtually shooting her last bolt. The struggle, however, will be long, but in this struggle time is fighting on our side. Staying power is with us; and St. Paul tells us the best soldier is he that endureth to the end.

ARE WE SURE?

While Great Britain is combing the seas for mines and straining every nerve to circumvent the German policy of piracy on the high seas, is Canada doing her share in preventing Canadian nickel from reaching Germany to be used as an instrument of destruction against us? The Germans boast that they have plenty of copper; but they are still trying to get it from Denmark labelled as sugar. Do we know that none of our Canadian nickel is going to Denmark? We send nearly all our nckel to New Jersey to be refined. From there it is sent abroad; and have we any assurance that none of it gets to Germany? The commercial enterprise of United States merchants hides rubber and copper inside cotton bales destined for Geryman. Why may not nickel also find a hiding place in cotton bales destined for Germany? And is it not possible that some of these loaded bales might escape the X-rays? Sir Robert Borden states that Canada has an understanding with the New Jersey nickel refineries that no Canadian nickel is to go to Germany. We have an understanding with the barkeeper not to sell strong drink to a "blacklister." But the sale sometimes takes place. Sir Robert says the British Admiralty approves of Canada's "understanding." He told us that the Admiralty also approved of his naval policy. Yet the Admiralty is loud in praise of the exploits of an Australian navy, while Canada could give no naval help. The point is to prevent Canadian nickel reaching Germany. The only way is to keep Canadian nickel under Canadian control. We don't do that when we allow the bulk of our nickel to go to the United States, to a company whose business is to sell Canadian nickel in the best market; and the best market is where there is the greatest need—and the greatest need is in Germany. Is Germany in the "understanding" that is to prevent her getting Canadian nickel? If she is we know we are safe. Germany is faithful to her understandings, keen in keeping her word; but not a bit more so when it comes to doing business than a commercial nickel refining company. The people of Canada would like to believe in the efficiency of the "understanding," but finds it a little hard to do so. Are we sure?

RUSSIA THE GREAT REFORMER

Even the victims of the irresistible or unresisted appetite for strong drink will admit that it is a great evil, and that they would rejoice if it were banished from their reach. No argument is needed to prove the limitless capacity for evil of strong drink. Russia, that with its vast population, spent 1,000 million dollars a year in strong drink, with a debased people, was lifted in almost a day from a state of national drunken inertia to sobriety and usefulness by abolishing vodka, the Russian equivalent for whisky. Prohibition in Russia means prohibition with absolute prevention of the sale, and consequently of the consumption of strong drink. From the day that prohibition was decreed drunkenness vanished from Russia. The results were at once visible in the peasantry, which under the influence of sobriety seem to become a different people. The marks of degradation and suffering, the pinched look of illness and insufficient nourishment, went from their faces. Their clothing became better and cleaner, and both men and women appeared more neatly dressed. The destitute character of the homes has been replaced with comforts, and the signs of order and thrift. On the mobilization of the Russian army six or seven months ago, the abolition of vodka was made as a war measure; the disorganization due to drunkenness during the mobilization of 1904 was remembered. The enforcement of the order of prohibition for one month was so strikingly beneficial as to justify absolute prohibition of strong drink.

In spite of the general depression caused by the war, the paralysis of business, the closing of factories, and the interruption of railway traffic, the people felt no depression. Savings banks showed increased deposits over the previous month, and over the corresponding month of the preceding year. The average working week increased from three or four days to six days, the drunken holidays at the beginning of the week having been eliminated and the efficiency of the worker was doubled. Women and children who were seldom, without the marks of violence, from husbands and fathers, suddenly found themselves in a comparative paradise; there were no blows, no insults, no physical abuse. There was bread on the table; milk for the children, and fire in the kitchen stove, and something to cook on the fire. Tradesmen found a boom in the sale of meats, groceries, clothing, dry goods, and house furnishing—easily accounted for—the fourteen or fifteen million dollars spent by Russia per day in strong drink was spent for the necessaries of life and the means of comfortable living. Seeing the beneficial effects of prohibition as a war measure by two months of abstinence, the Czar proclaimed that the prohibition of vodka was forever. The military, the industrial, the economic gain was so great as to overcome by its advantages the loss of 500 million dollars a year of revenue derived from the tax on strong drink. France has followed Russia's example by the abolition of absinthe, the degrading national tipple.

We are wont to boast of our higher civilization and to regard Russia as a semi-barbarous country with few of the high ideals we ascribe to Anglo-Saxon civilization. What are we doing in fighting an evil that is sapping the manhood of our country, interfering with national industry, diverting millions of money from productive promotion of commerce and industry? We are hugging it to our bosoms; we are clinging to the liquor traffic; we are cherishing it and protecting it as jealously as if it were Magna Charta. Col., the Hon. Sam Hughes abolished the "wet canteen" as a war measure. The government has restored it and brought down the anathema of the temperance women. We, in Christian Canada, with our superior civilization, can't measure up to the wisdom and sacrifice of "half-civilised" Russia. Our Provincial Government wouldn't look at prohibition in Ontario—because it was a "dodge to get power." Now what will it do with the prohibition demands of an association of the young manhood of the province, composed of all political parties? What will be the excuse now? What new excuse will be forged—what devil's-argument will be used? How will the "Christian" temperance elector reconcile his alliance (by his vote) with an evil so great that "semi-barbarous" Russia has cast it forth?

Ethics and Elements of Patriotism Developed

"Across the smoke of conflagration, across the stream of blood, have you not glimpses, do you not perceive signs, of His Love for us? Is there a patriot among us who does not know that Belgium has grown great? Nay, which of us would have the heart to cancel this last page of our national history? Which of us does not exult in the brightness of the glory of this shattered nation? When in her throes she brings forth heroes, our Mother Country gives her own energy to the blood of those sons of hers. Let us acknowledge that we needed a lesson in patriotism. There were Belgians, and many such, who wasted their time and their talents in futile quarrels of class with class, of race with race, of passion with personal passion.

"Yet when, on the 2nd of August, a mighty foreign Power, confident in its own strength and defiant of the faith of treaties, dared to threaten us in our independence, then did all Belgians, without difference of party, or of condition, or of origin, rise up as one man, close ranged about their own King and their own Government, and cried to the invader, 'Thou shalt not go through!'

"At once, instantly, we were conscious of our own patriotism. For down within us all is something deeper than personal interests, than personal kinships, than party feeling, and this is the need and the will to devote ourselves to that more general interest which Rome termed the pubthing, Res publica. And this profound will within up is Patriotism.

"Our country is not a mere concourse of persons or of families inhabiting the some soil, having amongst themselves relations, more or less intimate, of business, of neighbourhood, of a community of memories, happy or unhappy. Not so; it is an association of living souls subject to a social organization to be defended and safeguarded at all costs, even the cost of blood, under the leadership of those presiding over its fortunes. And it is because of this general spirit that the people of a country through the past, throngs the aspirations, the hopes, the confidence in o life to come, which they share together. Patriotism, an internal principle of order and of unity, an orgonic bond of the members of a nation, was placed by the finest thinkers of Greece and Rome at the head of the natural virtues. Aristotle, the prince of the philosophers of antiquity, held disinterested service of the city—that is, the State—to be the very ideal of human duty. And the religion of Christ makes of patriotism a positive law; there is no perfect Christian who is not also a perfect patriot. For our religion exalts the antique ideal, showing it to be realisable only in the Absolute. Whence, in truth, comes this universal, this irresistible impulse which carries at once the will of the whole nation in one single effort of cohesion and of insistence in face of the hostile menace against her unity and her freedom? Whence comes it that in an hour all interests were merged in the interest of all, and that all lives were together offered in willing immolation? Not that the State is worth more, essentially, than the individual or the family, seeing that the good of the family and of the individual is the cause and reason of the organization of the State. Not that our country is a Moloch on whose altar lives may lawfully be sacrificed. The rigidity of antique morals and the despotism of the Caesars suggested the false principle—and modern militarism tends to revive it that the State is omnipotent, and that the discretionary power of the State is the rule of Right. No so, replies Christian theology; Right is Peace—that is the interior order of a nation, founded upon Justice. And Justice itself is absolute only because it formulates the essential relation of man with God and of man with man. Moreover, war for the sake of war is a crime. War is justifiable only if it is the necessary means for securing peace. St. Augustine has said: "Peace must not be a preparation for war; and war is not made except for the attainment of peace." In the light of this teaching, which is repeated by St. Thomas Aquinas, Patriotism is seen in its religious character. Family interests, class interests, party interests, and the material good of the individual take their place in the scale of values below the ideal of Patriotism, for that ideal is Right, which is absolute. Furthermore, that ideal is the public recognition of Right in national matters, and of national honour. Now there is no Absolute except God. God alone, by His sanctity and His sovereignty, dominates all human interests and human wills. And to affirm the absolute necessity of the subordination of all things to Right, to Justice, and to Truth, is implicitly to affirm God."

—Cardinal Mercier.

ILLUSTRATED TEMPERANCE CONFERENCE

The attendance at the big Temperance Convention to be held in Massey Hall on March 3rd, 4th and 5th, promises now to surpass first expectations. There will really be two conventions, Dominion and Provincial, though the work of each will be so harmonized and unified so as to make one monster gathering of both.

There is particular interest being taken in the Western Provinces and large delegations are assured from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

A unique feature of this year's convention which will surpass anything previously attempted along that line in Canada will be the display of literature, posters, lantern slides, books and general equipment for carrying forward educational temperance work.

The basement will be devoted to this exhibit and display. About 150 different kinds of posters will be displayed. Some of these prepared by British workers, apply particularly to war conditions.

The scientific Temperance Federation of Boston will show a complete set of their scientific charts and diagrams and an attractive plan for the use of these by Churches, Sunday Schools, temperance societies and other organizations.

In the lantern slide department over 500 subjects will be shown covering all phases of temperance work. Leaflets, pamphlets, books, etc., will be in great variety.

The preparations made at this year's convention for entertaining and informing delegates apart from the regular convention sessions are on by far a larger scale than ever before attempted.

Single fare return rates on the Convention plan will be obtainable from all points in Canada. This applies to both delegates and visitors.—Com.

CANADIANS PRAISED.

Patricias Receive High Tribute From Sir John French.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Field Marshal Sir John French, in a despatch issued last night, pays a remarkable tribute to the work and fighting qualities of the Princess Patricias.

The field marshal, speaking of general operations, says: "The troops composing the army in France have been subjected to as severe a trial as it is possible to impose upon any body of men. The desperate fighting described in my last despatch had hardly been brought to a conclusion when they were called upon to face rigors and hardships of a winter campaign. Frost and snow have alternated with periods of continuous rain.

"With regard to these inspections the fine appearance presented by the 27th and 28th divisions, composed principally of battalions which had come from India, is praised. Included in the former division was Princess Patricia's Royal Canadian Regiment.

"They are a magnificent set of men and have done excellent work in the trenches," concluded the report.

May Stop Stock Food.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Recent additions to the list of prohibited exports of Great Britain include many of the sort which might be of use to belligerents in feeding live stock. All sorts of beans, fish, meat, oilcake, offal corn, and a score of other products which might be used by countries at war with Great Britain in the care of cattle, horses and other animals, are now in the prohibited list.

No News of Liner.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 17.—Anxiety is felt concerning the Scandinavian-Amerika liner Oscar II., which left New York Feb. 4, and was signalled 410 miles west of the coast of Scotland Friday. There has been no news of her since. She should have reached here yesterday.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that an application will be made by the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation for the Diocese of Peterborough in Ontario, Canada, to the Legislature of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act amending the Act of Incorporation of the said Corporation, passed in the Forty-Sixth Reign of Her Late Majesty Queen Victoria, Chapter 65, so as to enlarge the powers of the said Corporation, to borrow moneys on the security of Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange and for such purposes to make, draw, endorse, become a party to and deliver Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange, without the necessity of affixing the Corporate Seal thereto.

The reason for the enlargement of the powers of the said Corporation as aforesaid, is that it requires to borrow moneys from time to time for the purposes in various sums and on such terms of repayment as to render it highly inconvenient to execute and deliver mortgage securities on the real estate of the said Corporation.

DANIEL O'CONNELL,
Solicitor for the Applicant.

THE CITY'S PRIVATE BILL TO THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Will Ask For Wider Borrowing Powers and Confirmation of a Ten Thousand Dollar Grant to the Patriotic Fund—Copy of the Bill—Agrument With the C. G. E. and the Township of Smith

Appended is a copy of the city's private Bill that will be submitted to the Ontario Legislature at an early date. If endorsed by the powers that be in the Provincial House it will legalize the city's grant of ten thousand dollars to the Patriotic Fund and will also invest the city with wider borrowing powers. The bill also refers to the agreement that was made between the Canadian General Electric Company and the Township of Smith in respect to a right of way for a testing track for electric locomotives that will be manufactured by the company.

Copy of the Bill

The Bill which was prepared by City Solicitor G. N. Gordon, contains the following:

WHEREAS, The Corporation of the City of Peterborough, has by Petition represented that the Council has by resolution passed at a regular meeting thereof, made a grant of $10,000.00 to the Peterborough Patriotic and Relief Committee and desires to have the said grant authorised and confirmed: that the Peterborough Utilities Commission which has charge of the waterworks and electric lighting and power system of the City has represented to the Council that in and in connection with the completion of the construction of the dam and power development of the waterworks system of the City and in the erection of a Pumping Station and the purchase and installation of the pumping units therein for the said waterworks system, necessary for the efficient supply of water for public and domestic use and the first protection of the City an amount has been expended in excess of the amount of the Engineer's estimated cost therefor, and further amounts were expended for the extension of water mains asked for by the Council to parts of the City which otherwise would have had no fire protection and other necessary extensions and other permanent work over and above expenditures for which debentures have been issued have been made which said amounts together are about the sum of $90,000.00, and has requested the Council to issue debentures for the purpose of repaying the said Commissioners the amounts so expended, which the Council is willing to do if thereunto authorized and for which authority the said Council asks; that the said Peterborough Utilities Commission will require to improve and extend said waterworks and lighting and power systems and for that purpose to borrow money during the construction of the works by way of temporary advances to be repaid when the debentures for said work are issued and it is desirable and necessary that provision should be made for such purposes; that by Chapter 117 of the Statutes of the Province passed in the year 1912 as amended by Chapter 114 of the Statutes of the said Province passed in the 1913 and by Chapter 87 of the Statutes of the said Province in the year 1914 the Corporation of the City of Peterborough was authorised to acquire by purchase or expropriation the property and assets of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, in the City of Peterborough, and it was provided in said act that if the sum to be paid therefor was not agreed on that the same should be determined by arbitration, and the City has expropriated said plant and assets and no agreement having been come to as to the sum to be paid therefor an arbitration is now proceeding to ascertain said sum, but has not been completed; that a By-Law was duly passed by the said Council after being submitted to and approved of by the electors of the said City to provide the sum of $120,000.00 for the purchase and improvement of the said works which said sum was that at which the Commission of Ontario estimated would be required for that purpose and part of which said sum has already been expended for improvements that were immediately necessary in said plant and it may be necessary to raise an additional sum to pay the amount of the award of the arbitrators if by reason of such arbitration and award and the expenses of and incidental hereto the said balance is not sufficient and the Council desires to be in position to provide for same, if necessary; that the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, whose manufacturing establishment is situated in the City of Peterborough having represented to the Council that it contemplated engaging in the manufacture of electric locomotives at the said works provided a testing track of about two and one-half miles in length could be secured the said Council has arranged with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada for a lease to the said Company of a portion of the unused right-of-way of the said Railway leading from Peterborough to Chemang Lake and has also arranged with the City Council and the Council of the Township of Smith through part of which the said right-of-way extends for the crossing of certain highways in said City and Township, and it is desirable that such agreements with said City and Township should be confirmed.

AND WHEREAS, The whole rateable property of the municipality is the sum of $11,522,655 and the existing debenture debt, exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates is the sum of $1,526,925.47, particulars of which are as follows: Waterworks $512.00; Electric Lighting and Power Plant, $120,000; Local Improvements, $157,955.59; Public Schools, $230,150; Collegiate Institute, $74,269.88; Protestant Home, $10,000; General City Debentures, $422,550; and there is in the hands of the Peterborough City Trust, the sum of $376,371.87 as a sinking fund in respect of said debentures.

AND WHEREAS IT IS EXPEDIENT TO GRANT THE PRAYER OF THE SAID PETITION.

THEREFORE, HIS MAJESTY, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario enacts as follows:

1. IT shall be lawful for the Council of the City of Peterborough without obtaining the consent of the electors of the Municipality to grant the sum of $10,000.00 to the Peterborough Patriotic and Relief Committee either out of the current revenue of the year 1915 or by the issue and sale of the debentures of the Corporation for the said amount, which said debentures, if issued, shall be payable within ten years from the date of the issue thereof, and shall bear such rate of interest as the said Council may determine.

2. IT shall be lawful for the Council of the said City without obtaining the assent of the electors of the Municipality to pass a By-Law or By-Laws for the purpose of providing for and authorising the borrowing on the credit of the Municipality of a sum or sums not exceeding in all the sum of $80,000.00 and to issue the debentures of the Corporation for the amounts so authorised and to pay the proceeds thereof to the Peterborough Utilities Commission to replace money expended by the said Commission or by the Peterborough Water Commissioners, in and in connection with the completion of the dam and power development of the waterworks system of the City and in the erection of the Pumping Station and the purchase and installation of the pumping units therein and in the extension of water mains which acts are hereby confirmed and the provisions of Section 31 of the Public Utilities Act shall apply to the debentures issued hereunder.

3. IT SHALL BE LAWFUL for the Peterborough Utilities Commission with the approval of the City Council to make agreements from time to time which any bank or person for temporary advances and loans to meet the cost of any works undertaken by the said Commission under the provisions of The Public Utilities Act respecting the said Peterborough Utilities Commission or the Peterborough Water Commissioners pending the completion of such works and the issue and sale of the debentures of the Corporation to pay such cost or the furnishing by the Council of the money to pay the cost of such works and on the completion of such works, debentures to pay the cost thereof may be issued under the provisions of Subsection 3 of Section 400 of The Municipal Act, which provisions shall apply to any By-Law passed for said purpose and the provisions of Section 31 of The Public Utilities Act shall apply to an, debentures issued hereunder.

4. IT SHALL BE LAWFUL for the Council of the said City without obtaining the assent of the electors of the Municipality to pass a By-Law or By-Laws for the purpose of providing for and authorising the borrowing on the credit of the Municipality of such sum or sums (if any) as may be necessary, in addition to the unexpended portion of the said sum of $120,000.00 already provided for that purpose to pay the amount which may be awarded as payable to the said Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, for its property and plant together with the costs, expenses and disbursements of and incidental to such arbitration and award or which may be granted or incurred in or by reason of the said arbitration or the award that may be made thereon and to issue the debentures of the Corporation therefor and the provisions of Section 31 of The Public Utilities Act shall apply to the debentures issued hereunder.

5. THE AGREEMENT between the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, and the Corporation of the Township of Smith set out as Schedule "A" to this Act is ratified and confirmed and declared to be legal, valid and binding and it shall be lawful for the Council of the City of Peterborough, without obtaining the assent of the electors of the Municipality, to grant to the said Company the right to build and maintain their testing track across any highways in the said City which the right-of-way of the Peterborough and Chemong Lake branch of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada now crosses.

SCHEDULE "A."

TERMS OF AGREEMENT made the fifteenth day of December, 1914,

BETWEEN

THE CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY, LIMITED, Hereinafter called the COMPANY, OF THE FIRST PART:

AND

THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH, Hereinafter called the TOWNSHIP, OF THE SECOND PART.

WHEREAS, the Company has leased from the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada a certain portion of the right-of-way of the Peterborough and Chemong Lake Railway running through the Township of Smith, and being that portion thereof extending from a point on the Grand Trunk Railway in the City of Peterborough, Northerly to the roadway between Concessions Three and Four in the said Township, and propose to repair and to relay rails upon the said parts of said right-of-way, and has requested of the Township, permission to relay such rails across the highway in the said Township on the line of such right-of-way, and to use said right-of-way across said highways, and the said Township has consented thereto subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth.

NOW THEREFORE THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH; that in consideration of the rights hereby granted by the said Township to the said Company the said Company for itself, its successors and assigns, covenants and agrees to and with the said Township, and its successors as follows, namely:

1. THAT the said Company in reconstructing the said right-of-way and relaying such rails across said highways shall place and maintain such highways at such crossings in good condition of repair, and will observe the terms and conditions imposed upon Railways by Sections 126 and 127 of The Ontario Railway Companies Act, and shall erect and maintain cattle guards on each side of the highway at every highway crossing suitable and sufficient to prevent horses, cattle and other animals from getting on said right-of-way.

2. THAT at all times when operating or running cars upon said right-of-way the said Company shall place and maintain a watchman at each junction of said right-of-way with said or any future highways, and that such watchman shall be provided with a red flag or lantern, and shall give reasonable warning to all persons approaching such crossing on such highway.

3. THAT the said Company shall from time to time and at all times hereafter while such right-of-way is used or occupied by said Company well and truly save, defend and keep harmless and fully indemnify the said Township, and their Successors of and from all loss, costs, charges, damages and expenses, which the said Township or their successors may at any time or times hereafter bear, sustain, suffer, be at or on account of the construction and maintenance of such railway across such or any future highways, or the occupation or user thereof by said Company their successors or assigns, or their officers or employees.

4. THAT at the expiration of the term granted by the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada to the said Company, their successors or assigns, the said Company, or their successors or assigns, will remove the rails from said highways and replace such highways at such crossings in their former condition of repair, and all rights of the said Company, their successors or assigns, conferred upon them by this agreement shall thereupon be determined and at an end.

5. AND the said Township for itself and its successors in consideration of the covenants of the said Company hereinbefore set forth do hereby grant and permit to the said Company, their successors or assigns, the right to use and to relay rails upon the said highways of the said Township in the manner and upon the terms and conditions hereinbefore set forth during the term of the said

Why "No Tea or Coffee" For Children?

Many parents who drink tea or coffee would not allow their children to touch it.

The 1½ to 3 grains of the drug, caffeine, in the average cup of tea or coffee, is far more injurious to the susceptible nature of a child than to an adult, but, just as constant dripping will wear away stone, so will the repeated doses of caffeine undermine the strongest constitution.

Parents who would protect their own health as they do that of their children, will see the reason for quitting both tea and coffee and using

POSTUM

(Made in Canada)

This pure food-drink contains nothing that is harmful or injurious, but is, on the contrary, healthful and invigorating.

Postum is easy to make; has a delightful snappy flavour; and is good for both children and adults.

Postum is sold in two forms—Regular Postum, which requires boiling, 15c and 25c packages; Instant Postum, which is soluble in hot water—made instantly in the cup, 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious, and the cost per cup about the same.

"The Signs of The Times"

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—In your issue of Feb. 1st you report a sermon by Rev. Robt. Pogue on the second coming of Christ, the signs of the times and the present disturbance of wars, etc.

The report was followed by the views of a listener. It is gratifying to note that there are listeners who think for themselves, and have the courage to express what they think.

This listener said, after showing his knowledge of history, that he "thought there was something wrong with our present Christianity, that to him the second coming of Christ was the Christ spirit coming to individual man." This sounds like a common sense idea, and seems quite in keeping with Paul in Heb. ix., 28: "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time (without matter) without sin, unto salvation."

Another student's opinion, founded on practical experience and study in this, just so long as teachers and preachers persist in trying to persuade themselves and others that Christ is a person away from the earth to come again at some future time, that Heaven is a place or state to get through death, that man is a material being with a soul inside, made out of the clay of the ground, etc.—so long will we suffer the penalty for this sin, wars and all the rest of, etc.

Mr. Pogue took for his text, according to report, Matthew xxiv., 24 to 28. I would like to remind your readers that this declaration and prophecy of the Great Teacher was made hundreds of years before the birth of Martin Luther, Calvin, Knox, or Wesley, and it takes a wise man to judge and say which is the people in this age who come under the head of false prophets.

We have the Scriptures, therefore the recorded utterance of the same teacher: "By their fruits ye shall know them, these signs shall follow them that believe."

He said again: "If ye would be my disciples deny yourself." What self does he mean, if not this false material sense we entertain, that we are of dust instead of spirit. Nicodemus had this false material conception, to whom Jesus said: "Ye must be born again." Paul was in bondage to it when persecuting the Christians; when he awakened to see this falsity, he exclaimed, "Oh, wretched man that I am!"—Romans vii., 24. When he further awakened from the dream of material existence, to see the true man, the Christ idea, he declared, "There is therefore now no condemnation. Nothing can separate me (the true man) from God." Jesus said (John vi., 63), "The flesh profiteth nothing." If God made a fleshly or material man, and Jesus is again to come in a corporeal form, surely the flesh would not be recognised by him as profitless.

Thousands of years ago, Isaiah, the great spiritual seer, said, "Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils: for wherein is he to be accounted of"—Isaiah ii., 22. When this admonition of Isaiah, and of Jesus, as in Matthew xxviii., 20, is obeyed, "Teach all notions to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," and "Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." When this teaching is practically obeyed instead of the signs in the chapter from which Mr. Pogue takes his text, Matthew xxiv., we shall see the signs as in Mark xvi., 14 to 18. Then we can afford to beat our swords into plough-

"For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Christ and Heaven here, as Jesus taught and demonstrated, by denying, overcoming every phase of matter. Then it will be found that all who have gained this true idea of God and man, the ever-present Christ, no matter of what nationality or what his name may be, or wherever found, are the children of Israel, with one father, even God, as Jesus said, "Our Father."

Thanking you for your valuable space.—Sincerely yours,

An "Old Guy Gunner," With His Traction Engine, Has His Own War

British Officer Tells of "Funny Old Cove" Who Travels About With His Field Piece, Fires When He Is Ready and Has a Little Show All To Himself

While it is said that modern warfare does not give to the individual many chances to distinguish himself, a British cavalary officer in a letter to the London Times tells of a gunner who carries on a little war of his own. Going about on a traction engine, towing his gun behind him, he unlimbers a few shots and goes on his own way. That his work, no matter how amusing, is effective, is told by the officer who says:

"There is one incident I must cite that amuses us mightily. Some time ago, when closer to the lines, we were out exercising one fine morning when the funniest old outfit came along—some old guy gunner with a big gun towed by a sort of traction engine. He was a funny looking old chap. He stopped his caravan, consulted some notes, and swung around into position and let off a couple of shots. The first one over, second short, and it appears he was quite satisfied with the next four, for he started packing up again.

"He had a kind of aeroplane with him, too, on a lorry, also in tow. He was the funniest looking old cove you ever saw; seemed to be running a little show of his own. Last we saw of him was around the corner with his traction engine half mired in the ditch. But it appears he knew what he was about, for he put one of the enemy's guns out of action with the four shots. He made us scream with laughing, but I hope he's going strong still.

"Those little motorcycles—we call them wasps, for they it is that sting us into action. You're snugly between blankets and you hear the snorting and buzzing of one coming up the road. You hope he goes on—but no, he stops outside headquarters. You hold your breath. If he proceeds at once it's an ill omen, as he wants no reply but his receipted envelope and it's "turn out," full parade marching order, first line transports and all.

"He waits, and after five minutes wriggles on his road, coughing and snorting and sparking, and it's all right and you can go to sleep again. The wasps—the beggars always get you on the hop—those are the D. R.'s, or despatch riders, through whom all orders come.

"There was a park of flying men near our last billet. They brought down a Taube with rifle fire from two of our planes that went up after him. They have one very fast biplane there. I heard one very great yarn of a big observer. While he was flying over the German lines and returning against a strong head wind the machine gave a heavy jerk and dip and sent his gun, map case, etc., overboard. Some seconds after the pilot felt a great bump. It was his pal coming back into his seat, from which he had been absent much too long for his own comfort.

"The wings of the machine were riddled with shrapnel and the pilot and observer had to sit tight over their sheets of armour plate. I think they are worthy of the greatest praise. The only thing we envy them is the impossibility of their being turned out at night. They can work only by day. I've seen some of our signallers using the Morse code with a knife and fork to communicate with a couple of refugees who happened to have kept some village post office.

"A little while ago it was marvellous to see some aged women toddling back to a destroyed village to pick up some vegetables. Now of course, the are not allowed to pass, but they take the destruction of their homes with the greatest calmness and philosophy as a rule. There'll be many a farmer blown up next year by bumping into a live shell with his plough, a good percentage of the German shells not exploding. They are using very old ammunition. I have seen butt ends of shells marked 1892, but the beggars are able to go off any time when stirred a bit."

Compromise Is Refused

Britain Will Not Listen to Germany's Proposals Regarding Blockade

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Great Britain received yesterday through Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, Germany's offer to withdraw her threat of a submarine blockade against Great Britain if the British navy would permit the free movement of foodstuffs to the civil population of Germany.

The proposal was presented to the Cabinet at an extraordinary session by Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey yesterday.

According to reliable reports, the German proposal was rejected in its entirety.

Great Britain is already preparing to retaliate against Germany by placing under more stringent control ships destined to German ports, and a proclamation momentarily is expected declaring a blockade of the German coast, or, at any rate, the prohibition of foodstuffs destined for Germany. The Cabinet, with its naval and military advisers, considered the question yesterday, and it is understood the situation is awaiting the formal confirmation of the Privy Council, from which all proclamations emanate.

In the meantime British and neutral vessels are moving as freely as usual, with the exception of those belonging to a few Dutch lines, which have reduced their number of sailings.

Russia Continues Trading.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 17.—While the commercial block between England and Germany has been enforced rigorously, there appears to be no particularly strong feeling against trading between Germany and Russia. Business men from the two countries continue to deal with each other, and commercial travelers from Germany are said to have booked orders for Russia, after meeting their customers by appointment in Denmark or Sweden.

Big Cargoes Near Danc.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 17.—Five freight steamers, with cargoes including nearly 1,000,000 bushels of grain, have left this port for England and Scotland since Feb. 6, and are due to be within the German war zone about the British Isles on or after Feb. 18. One passenger steamer, the Zeeland, is scheduled to arrive at Liverpool to-night.

New French Dirigible a Success.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—A new French dirigible balloon from the extensive Government factory located in the suburbs of Paris, successfully manoeuvered for two hours over the French capital yesterday. Great crowds watched the evolutions of the airship, which has been named Pilatre le Rozier, after the famous aeronaut who died in 1785.

REV. T. K. CHEYNE DEAD.

Former Oxford Professor Was Noted Expert on the Bible.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Rev. Thomas Kelly Cheyne, a noted authority on scriptural writings, died last night.

Thomas Kelly Cheyne, who was born in 1841, was for many years Oriel professor of interpretation of Scripture at Oxford. He was Canon of Rochester from 1885 to 1908. He was a grandson of Rev. T. H. Horne, author of the once popular theological text book on the "Introductions to the Polyscriptures." He was a member of the Old Testament Revision Company in 1884, and was the author of many theological works.

Albanians Defeated by Serbs.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—A Nish despatch to the Havas Agency says:

"The Albanian raiders have been routed and driven back across the Serbian frontier. More complete information shows that the Albanians were led into making the raid by Austrian priests and Mohammedan adversaries of Essad Pasha, the provisional President, by preaching a holy war. The movement is being directed by Turkish and German agents."

What's Doing in Civic Circles--Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The City Council held a meeting which lasted seven minutes. In that time they passed the appropriations for the Board of Education amounting to $84,200, agreeing to pay the amount in monthly instalments.

On Account.

The Council also voted the Central Charity Board, two thousand dollars on account of its requirements for the year. The Board is confronted with an overdraft of about $1,400. After this the Council adjourned to the committee room where a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council was held.

City Will Be Represented.

His Worship Mayor Buller has been authorized to send one or more delegates to a convention that will be held in Toronto on February 24th, to deal with the question of Hydro Radial Railways in Eastern Ontario. It is proposed to make an effort to have a line constructed to Burleigh, taking in the principal points north and south with Peterborough as a centre.

Votes for Women.

A communication from the Canadian Suffragette Association asking for the opinion of the Council respecting votes for married women, was received at last night's meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council. The alderman did not appear to be very enthusiastic about endorsing the proposal.

May Attend Lecture.

The City Council has been asked to attend a lecture that is to be given by President Falconer, of Toronto University, on February 19th. "Perversion of Patriotism" will be the subject of President Falconer's address which is being given under the auspices of the Canadian Club. A number of the aldermen including the Mayor have signified their intention of attending if circumstances permit.

Mayor Will Be Present.

Mayor Buller is slated for a speech in the Armouries at 4:30 this afternoon when a bale of goods intended for the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, Shorncliffe, Eng., will be inspected.

Board of Works.

Alderman Greep, chairman of the Board of Works, has called a meeting of his committee this evening.. The question of salaries in connection with the engineering department as referred to at last night's meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council, may come up for discussion.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

Tired, hungry and penniless, but determined to get to the battle front, August Fardum, a Belgian reservist, en route from Chatham to Toronto by foot, dropped off at London, Ont., and sought aid at the city hall.

Resignations Asked For.

The members of the staff of the city engineer's department have been asked by the Kingston City Council to send in their resignations, in order that a reorganization may be effected.

Will Be Retained.

London City Council decided to retain the services of Industrial Commissioner Gordon Philip, whose dismissal, on the ground of retrenchment, was the subject of a resolution introduced at a recent meeting.

By-law Defeated.

A by-law to raise $60,000 for road improvements met with an overwhelming defeat by the electors of North Bay yesterday.

Belgian Ports Undergo Another British Air Attack

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The air wing of the British navy yesterday made another massed attack on the German positions along the Belgian coast in an effort to destroy or damage the submarine base at Zeebrugge, the guns at Ostend and Middelkerke, and the aerodrome at Gistelles.

According to the official report, good results were obtained. Forty machines were utilized yesterday as compared with 34 in last week's attack.

The official statement concerning the air raid says:

"The air operations of the naval wing against the Bruges, Ostend and Zeebrugge districts were continued yesterday afternoon. Forty aeroplanes and seaplanes bombarded Ostend, Middelkerke, Gistelles and Zeebrugge.

"Bombs were dropped on the heavy batteries situated on the east and west sides of Ostend, on gun positions at Middelkerke, on transport wagons on the Ostend-Gistelles road, on the mole at Zeebrugge to widen the breach damaged in former attacks, on the locks at Zeebrugge, on barges outside Blankenbergue and on trawlers outside Zeebrugge.

"Eight French aeroplanes assisted the naval machines by making vigorous attacks on the Gistelles aerodrome, thus effectively preventing German aircraft from cutting off our machines. It is reported that good results were obtained.

"Instructions are always issued to confine attacks to points of military importance and every effort is made by the flying officers to avoid dropping bombs on any residential portions of towns."

While the British airmen were dropping their bombs on the gun positions, the supply trains and barges and the trawlers used in mine laying and mine sweeping operations, eight French airmen attacked the Gistelles aerodrome, thus preventing the German airmen from making any attempt to cut off the British machines.

The official report makes no report of the airmen engaged, so it is presumed that they all returned safely.

The day was bright and clear, conditions being more favorable than the last time for a raid.

ANNUAL BANQUET

Mr. R. M. Cowan's Class Held Successful Event

St. Paul's church last evening was the scene of a very interesting function, when the young men of Mr. Cowan's Bible class held their annual banquet.

The Chief speaker of the evening was Rev. R. M. Hamilton of Toronto, and secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, of the Presbyterian church of Canada. His subject was "Industrial Conditions and the Church's Duty."

Mr. Roy Byers, President of the class, ably performed as chairman and toastmaster.

The programme:—

Toast to the King— Honoured by singing the national anthem.

Chairman's address—Mr. Roy Byers.

Toast to the Session—Proposed by Mr. D. McDonald, responded to by Sheriff Hall and Mr. Wm. Madill.

Recitation—Mr. W. A. Logan.

Toast to the Board of Managers — Proposed by Mr. S. Taylor, responded to by Messrs. D. H. Moore and J. A. Johnston.

Solo—Sgt. G. Lightheart.

Speakers' Address—Rev. R. M. Hamilton.

Remarks—Rev. Robert Pogue.

Toast to the Ladies—Proposed by Messrs. Ellis and Keyes.

Rev. R. M. Hamilton.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton in his address said that by missions we meant that spirit of love and service that fills one with a desire to be to all men, brothers, irrespective of race or social conditions, without thought of personal gain. By Missions we meant that sense of brotherhood that believed God made of our flesh all nations of the world. Missions also meant fairness and charity of mind that gave all men equal opportunities to live.

We recognized that Jesus Christ was the only Saviour of mankind and that the word of God was the only infallible rule of faith and conduct. Christian Missions was undoubtedly the largest enterprise in the world today.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton referred briefly to the terrible war that rages to-day. He thought if any one thing would solve the worlds' problems to-day it was Christian Missions. Christian Missions as exemplified by the work of David Livingstone in Africa secured new commerce for the world. Christian Missions helped to solve the problems of capital and labour. The spirit of Missionary work was against the establishment of a privileged class and against the liquor habit and similar conditions.

ALSACE DIVIDED INTO WAR ZONES

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BERNE, via Paris, Feb. 17.—Alsace is now divided by the Germans into two great parts—a district of operations and a neutral zone. The frontier is marked by barbed wire fences hundreds of miles in length. All foreigners with a few exceptions have been expelled from Alsace.

Along the border of the Rhine, which constitutes a neutral zone, the subjects of neutral countries are permitted to remain. Many foreigners who were forced to leave Alsace have been brought over the Rhine to Baden and Wurtemburg, where they are put in quarantine for a fortnight before being permitted to return to their homes.

BLOOD WILL TELL

LONDON, Feb. 17.— Many young men have been lost in France by the fact that their blood was out of order and impure when they started out in this campaign as soldiers at the front. Many of them never reached the battle line because they were taken sick in camp, due to stomach and bowel troubles, and with blood powerless to resist. Young men and old men in Canada should be just as watchful of their blood to see that it is pure, that their stomach is acting well and the liver active.

It takes lots of vitality, nervous force and strength to win a race. Blood must be pure and good.

Keep the nerves nourished, the heart strong, the head cool, the stomach vigorous, the liver active with a tonic which has stood the test of time and has a wide reputation, such as Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the world's great Blood Purifier; it enters joints, dissolves the impure deposits and carries them out, as it does all impurities, through the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

If you have indigestion, sluggish liver, backache over the kidneys, nasal or other Catarrh, unsteady nerves or unsightly skin, get Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery today and start at once to replace your impure blood with the kind that puts energy and ambition into you and brings back youth and vigorous action. —Advt.

Would be Illegal.

By the foregoing recommendations, Ald. Edgar hoped to save the city twenty-four hundred dollars. To bring this about it was proposed to dispense with the tax collector and have the taxes collected by the City Treasurer. It was pointed out that such a course might be illegal. In order to avoid such a contingency, Ald. Edgar suggested that one of the City Treasurer's assistants be appointed tax collector, and that City Treasurer Adams be paid the additional sum of one thousand dollars so that the net saving to the city, according to the recommendation, would be about 300 dollars exclusive of postage and delivery charges for tax bills which amount to between two hundred and fifty to three hundred dollars a year. The latter are paid by Tax Collector Green out of a salary of thirteen hundred dollars so that the actual saving to the city would be practically nil.

Ald. Edgar in submitting his proposal for the consideration of the committee, said he had no desire to do anything that would inconvenience the work of the city, but was of the opinion that in view of the strenuous time through which the Empire is passing, some reductions in the salaries of city officials, was justifiable. He admitted that he had discussed the matter with the heads of the respective departments at the City Hall, and was assured that such a course as outlined in his recommendations would be practicable.

Too Radical.

Ald. Duffus opined that the recommendations were too radical to be practicable and that their adoption would tend to prove a detriment to some of the departments concerned. He was in favour of Ald. Stratton's suggestion to have the matter referred to the various committees as the committees were more familiar with the needs of their respective departments than the committee of the Whole Council. As chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, Ald. Duffus felt constrained to go slow in so far as the fire department was concerned. He regretted that Ald. Edgar had seen fit to ask the question as to whether Engineer Jamieson attended to the south end pumping station on the city's time, and thereby received a remuneration of one hundred dollars a year in addition to his salary as engineer of the fire department. His work in connection with the pumping station requires his attention for a few minutes each day. In addition to the duties enumerated above, Jamieson performs the duties of assistant chief at the central fire station, for which he receives a salary of seven hundred and fifty dollars a year, or the pay of a third year fireman. The extra one hundred dollars which he receives for taking care of the south end pumping station brings his annual remuneration up to eight hundred and fifty dollars a year. Ald. Duffus pointed out that Engineer Jamieson attended to the pumping station when the epidemic was at its height in the south end of the city, which was not only a responsible thing to undertake, but endangered his life. Few cities in the Province of the size of Peterborough, operated a fire department at any smaller cost than Peterborough. To prove his contention, Ald. Duffus quoted comparative figures, relative to salaries paid in Peterborough and other cities.

Ald. Johnston declared that one hundred dollars was neither here nor there when it came down to a question of getting good conscientious officials. He instanced the case of Tax Collector Green, whom he characterized as a good honest man.

Has No Diploma.

According to Ald. McIntyre, too much money is being expended in the engineering department, especially as City Engineer Parsons did not possess a diploma. He compared the tax collector's duties with those of a teller in a bank who, he said, would not receive as much money as the city pays for handling its taxes, whereas the teller in the bank would handle a good deal more money in a year than either the city treasurer's office or that of the tax collector.

Ald. Green regretted that Ald. McIntyre should see fit to question City Engineer Parson's ability upon the grounds that he had no diploma for the reason that he left the University of Michigan about two months before he would have received a diploma in the regular way. He did this with the sanction of the Dean of the University in order to accept a lucrative position with a railway company, prior to entering the field of municipal engineering. Ald. Green assured Ald. McIntyre that many of the best and most successful engineers in the country were without diplomas. He instanced a case of where the city paid between three and four thousand dollars to an engineer with a diploma, for services in connection with what Ald. McIntyre had characterized as "digging a ditch," namely the Romaine Street sewer, a work that did not prove a howling success. He did not blame the engineer for it. He thought that the matter as it concerned the engineering department should be left in the hands of the Board of Works as they were more familiar with the department and its needs.

Ald. McIntyre said that engineers without diplomas were apt to make mistakes. He cited the case of a sewer that was constructed on Dickson Street and which he alleged cost the city a thousand dollars to rectify.

This Ald. Green denied.

"Would you employ a man without a diploma to do work with which he was not familiar?" inquired Ald. McIntyre.

"Yes, sir," replied Ald. Green.

A Little Too Drastic.

Ald. Stratton concurred with Ald. Duffus in that Ald. Edgar's recommendations were a little too drastic. He was in favour of having the various committees deal with such matters as concerned their respective departments. To this Ald. Dobbin agreed. He was of the opinion that the chairman of the committees were better able to decide just what was needed.

Here Ald. Weir introduced his original suggestion to reduce all salaries over one thousand dollars, five per cent.

His Worship Mayor Buller expressed his satisfaction at the attitude taken by the committee. He was satisfied that the city was getting good service from the present staff of officials and so far as the City Engineer was concerned he believed that the city had a man who "could deliver the goods."

With that a vote was taken with the above result.

Engineers in India are trying the novel experiment of catching that country's rainfall in reservoirs and using it to produce electric power.

Sixty years' supply of natural gas at the present rate of consumption has been wasted in Oklahoma in recent years according to government figures.

Recent Visit to Trenches Near Soissons and Rheims

New York Herald Man Describes Marvellous Zigzag Trenches With Mazes of Barbed Wire Entanglements and Concealed Batteries and Is Entertained in Underground Home of French General Between Berry-au-Bac and Soissons

In Eastern France.

Riding westward by automobile along the battle front that stretches from Switzerland to the Nort Sea, we turned inward at a point midway between Rheims and Soissons to exchange a telescopic view of operations from one closer at hand.

As one of a party of correspondents representing Holland, Russia, Italy [illegible] government, I was seeing something of the realities of modern war, its terror, its heroism, its tragedies—and even its comedies—without feeling every minute that I was about to be imprisoned or shot as a spy.

Branching off the main road our automobiles began to move slowly along a smaller one leading to the battle front—slowly because of the endless line of transports of every kind, filled with food and ammunition, which were crawling toward the danger zone they dared not reach until night fell.

Within the thick woods were thousands of reserves and countless ammunition waggons, hidden so successfully that one must be in their very midst to discover them. Aeroplane scouts have no chance to get information unless they come in so close that there is no hope of getting back.

It is a marvellous sight to walk through dense woods and see the little towns where the soldiers live. The transport and sappers' camps,and all the reserves also, have well constructed bathhouses, with hot and cold showers, and the comfort under the surface of some of these mountains is extraordinary. I have seen some roasts of beef in these lamplit homes worthy of Simpson's.

A Hidden Gun Booms.

So we went through miles and miles of this until the transport stopped and the automobile moved up a side road through a thick bush and stopped just in time to feel the sudden concussion and hear the boom of a monster hidden gun not a hundred feet away. The captain in whose charge we were was the only one who smiled, and while this vast mountain, alive with big batteries, was bellowing, booming and sending deadly shells among the Germans on the opposite hills a few miles away he calmly mentioned, while smokin ga cigarette, that he thought it was time we had lunch—and we did.

After along up-hill walk we came to the summit, which steeply looked down 1,500 feet into a valley stretching across to the foothills of the tree covered mountains from where the Germans were occasionally firing in a random way at the French guns they had been unsuccessfully trying for weeks to locate.

Up and down the vast valley were ruined towns as far as the eye could see ,and in the centre of them stood Berry-au-Bac. From our coign of vantage we could see the German and French trenches running zigzag and parallel as far as powerful glasses could reach.

At one place they were only six yards apart and at another point their trenches did ours centred in a large rock about as big as a small house. Spurs ran out both right and left, giving it the appearance of a huge cross, while all the four spaces in between were impassable meshes of barbed wire spikes and mines. It is believed to be the most curious formation in all the 250 miles of double trenches.

Home of the General.

We stopped at the underground war home of the General and were introduced to a soldier whose courtesy and charm were of the same character we had exeprienced, since the journey began. His burrow consisted of an eight feet square dugout, a camp bed and an oil stove. In a vault, at one side, a slit as big as a man's arms opening through the face of a precipice, commanded a view of the entire battle valley.

A hundred yards on either side of this residence were batteries of four guns each and gunners ready awiting for the word, waiting for the message by the little wire that stole over the precipice and ran along the valley to Berry-au-Bac, where a few brave men were watching at the telephone to discover the new position of the German batteries.

Suddenly a thrice repeated order reached our Captain, and, on the second, eight runners jerked the cords that furiously let loose eight 155cm. shells that must have found a human mark fully five miles away. Then another volley rang out from the batteries next to us.

The enemy, evidently concluding that our signal as to their position came from Berry-au-Bac, concentrated their fire there, and in an incredibly short space of time at least 200 bursting shells fell among the ruins like fireflies in a swamp.

How any one could still live in that town after the storm of shrapnel had criss-crossed every space in it is a marvel, but some one did, for the telephone kept working, and all our batteries rang out, and kept on ringing out, until not one single, solitary German gun was heard.

The smile that played on the faces of at least fifty French gunners was spiritual.

We returned as we had come, and when that evening the correspondents dined with M. Pol-Roger, the Mayor, of Epernay, another guest was General ——, of Sir John French's staff.

He told me that the French gunners were the best in the world.

ECONOMY IS URGED

Liberals Demand Greater Care in Expenditure of Civil List

OTTAWA, Feb. 17. — The House spent the bulk of yesterday in committee of supply on the civil service estimates. In moving the House into supply, Sir Robert Borden explained briefly the recent Cabinet changes, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reply, in the course of which he criticized Hon. Judge Doherty's acceptance of a civil pension as an ex-judge occasioned a momentary breeze, which soon passed over.

Upon the motion of the Prime Minister, a special committee was appointed to examine into the charges respecting the boots furnished the first Canadian contingent. The committee, which will have power to send for persons, papers and records, consists of Sir J. A. M. Aikins and Messrs. McCurdy, Middlebro, Rainville, MacDonald, Lemieux and Nesbitt.

Sir Robert Borden, in moving the adjournment of the House over Ash Wednesday, asked that Government orders have precedence hereafter on Thursdays and Wednesdays. He cited the example of the British Government, which had taken every day for Government business.

It was agreed that Thursday and Friday of each week should be private members' day, and that beginning with next week the Government orders should have precedence upon every day except Monday. This practically defers the resumption of the budget until next Tuesday.

The House then went into committee of supply upon the estimates for civil government. The discussion of the salary list grew warm at times, the Opposition demanding economy in the future expenditures of the Department.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

The trial of Harry K. Thaw on an indictment charging him with conspiracy, was set yesterday in New York for March 1.

The stock yards at East Buffalo closed yesterday afternoon under state and federal orders because of the re-appearance of foot and mouth disease.

By official order Mardi Gras was celebrated publicly nowhere in France yesterday. In most of the households the day was celebrated, but less pretentiously than usual.

The trial of Gen. Christian De Wet and other leaders of the South African rebellion against Great Britain, who are charged with high treason, began in Bloemfontein yesterday.

John M. Still, a farmer of Mono Township, near Orangeville, sustained loss of $6,500 early yesterday when fire of unknown origin totally destroyed his large bank barn and contents.

News has been received that the Princess Patricias, after a strenuous time, alternating between the trenches and the dug-out, will be given a respite from the rigors of the firing line.

The Canadian Government has asked the United States Government to place guards at the end of the International Bridge at Buffalo, to safeguard this bridge from attack from United States territory.

Lt.-Col. W. H. Sparham, aged 70, a conspicuous figure in the military life of Eastern Ontario for many years, died in Brockville yesterday at the home of his sister, Mrs. T. A. Stapner, after a short illness.

Paper shirts have been issued to Japanese soldiers as a protection against cold.

DR. JAMIESON IS ELECTED SPEAKER OF ONTARIO HOUSE

War Effects and Measures of Relief Occupy Greater Part of Official Document

TORONTO, Feb. 17.—The Ontario Legislature is now under way. With an unusually large attendance gathered in the chamber and galleries and accompanied by formal ceremonies, Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie, from the throne, declared the opening of legislative business for 1915. Speaker David Jamieson was duly installed in his place on the nomination of Premier Hearst and the approval of Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C. Two formal bills were introduced to start the machinery for the year, and after an hour's sitting the House adjourned for the day.

There was a blaze of splendor about the opening of the fourteenth Legislature that will be long remembered. From the mounted escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons, the guard of honor from the 15th Battalion of the second overseas contingent and the officers of the Headquarters Staff in service khaki, there was everything to impress the observer that it was to be a "war session."

After a reference to the death of Sir James Whitney, the speech from the throne goes on to discuss the war and Canada's response to the call for aid.

"While the ultimate triumph of Great Britain and its allies is certain," says the speech, "we cannot fail to realize and deplore the enormous cost which is being paid to achieve that end. Already the effects of the war have proved to be very far-reaching. In addition to the financial stringency and the disturbance of industry, we have been confronted with unemployment in some industrial centres, which has given grave concern to our people.

"These conditions, as well as our obligations to the Mother Country, have received the serious attention of my Ministers. At the outset of the war a substantial contribution in food was made to Great Britain on your behalf, and also a contribution in cash and food for the relief of the brave Belgian people. To relieve the sudden financial strain upon our people, a public assurance was given that an act giving further power to the courts with respect to money secured by mortgages and other similar matters in cases of special hardship arising out of the war. Assurances were also given municipal bodies that this House would give sanction and authority for the expenditure of money by such bodies for patriotic purposes and to relieve unemployment."

Every effort has been made, the speech continues, to provide public work which will afford employment for as many men as possible, and the Government has exerted itself to the utmost to stimulate the production of food.

"Unexpected demands upon the treasury, arising out of the war situation, accompanied as they have been by a shrinkage of revenue owing to the same cause, have resulted in a financial deficit during the past year. You will be asked to consider an emergency measure in this connection."

Reference is also made to the organization of the workmen's compensation board, the highways development, the experimental farms in the north, and the satisfactory year of the Hydro Electric Commission.

"Among the measures which will be submitted to you for your consideration," says the speech, "will be bills to supplement the revenues of the crown, to give further power to courts with respect to money secured by mortgage and other similar matters, to amend the liquor license law, respecting boiler inspection, to authorize the construction of the Toronto and Hamilton trunk road, and for other purposes."

CANADIANS BELIEVED TO HAVE FOUGHT AT YPRES

Violent Movement All Along North-western Front Is Part of Long Planned Attack, Say Prisoners

LONDON, Feb. 17. — The official communication issued by the French War Office last night says that German trenches three kilometers in extent (nearly two miles) have been taken in Champagne, to the northwest of Perthes and north of Beausejour.

It is considered probable that a brigade of Canadians has already taken part in a battle, from the official announcement of the French General Staff that the British troops recaptured yesterday the two parts of the trench which they had lost between St. Eloi and the Ypres Canal the preceding day.

The Princess Patricias were on duty in the trenches near this point, but were withdrawn from the trenches for a rest Monday.

A despatch to The London Daily News from north France yesterday says:

"There is marked signs all along the line of fresh furious German activity. Naturally our own end is getting as usual the lion's share of the enemy's awakened gusts. There was a fierce massed attack on our position beyond Ypres Monday and in the wild, battered region where the long tree-lined La Basse roads runs straight and scarred toward Bethune. It is reported that in a heavy wedge the Germans, careless of the fearful sacrifice of life that the action necessitated, penetrated our line. They fought savagely and frantically. There was hand-to-hand fighting and deadly work with the bayonet under a hail of shell and infantry fire. Our men rallied with their usual brilliancy. There were heavy losses on both sides. The Germans absolutely flung themselves away. Though some prisoners were taken, the action was too hot for much activity in this direction, and there was very little quarter given or taken. The Germans boast that this is only the beginning of a long premeditated and prepared forward movement. They declare that by the end of the week the road to Calais will be open to them in spite of our new forces of field and horse artillery."

Military movements of the first importance are taking place along the eastern line. The German offensive, strongly supported by fresh troops is being pushed with great vigor both along the east Prussian frontier and in Poland, north of the lower Vistula. The Russians now have evacuated East Prussia, except for a small area near Lyck, where they are opposing the German advance, and also are apparently falling back in north Poland, for the Germans yesterday announced that they have occupied Plock and Bielsk, which the Russians recaptured from them a short time ago.

While the Germans claim that they have inflicted heavy losses on the retiring Russian armies, military men here, and the newspaper correspondents in Petrograd, refer to the Muscovite movement as a strategical retirement to the fortified line which lies along the Niemen river through Knovno, Grodno, and Lomza and thence southwest to the fortress of Novoe Georgiewsk.

Heavy fighting also continues in the Carpathians and Bukowina. In Bukowina, the Russians are falling back, but they continue to hold the Carpathian passes further west and are putting up a stubborn resistance to the Austro-German offensive in that region. Here the fighting is taking place in deep snow, and both sides are suffering severely.

The large number of troops that the Germans are using in the east, it is believed by military observers here, will prevent for some time any attempt by the Germans to break the deadlock in the west.

Appeal For Contingent

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—The first official announcement that the Canadian troops are in France was made yesterday morning, and carries with it an appeal which will doubtless evoke a prompt and ready response from all parts of Canada.

Sir George Parley cables urgently for a large stock of field comforts for the use of the Canadian contingent. All kinds of warm clothing are needed, and Sir George undertakes, through the Canadian War Contingent Association, that the requirements of the Canadian troops shall be met as far as possible.

The national service committee of the Canadian women's organization appeals to the people of Canada for a prompt response to Sir George Perley's request. The articles asked for at present are all kinds of heavy woollen articles, especially socks, while later it would be better to confine attention to socks and mitts, woven belts and colored handkerchefs, well-knit socks being the most important. Gifts of money to purchase woven body belts, sweaters, tobacco and such comforts will also be most acceptable, especially if sent promptly.

The following cable was received by the Governor-General yesterday from London from Rt. Hon. Lewis Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary:

"Your Ministers will be glad to learn that the whole of the Canadian contingent are doing well at the front, having safely crossed over to France."

Greece May Break With Turkey.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The relations between Greece and Turkey apparently are becoming more strained. Although Turkey has offered reparation for the insult to the Greek military attache at Constantinople, it is reported that the Greek Minister has left the legation in charge of a secretary, being dissatisfied with Turkey's attitude. The Turkish Minister also has left Athens. This is believed in some quarters to be the first step in the rupture of diplomatic relations between Greece and Turke

GIRL YAWNS AND JAWS STAY OPEN

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Miss Helen Savastano, a stenographer, eighteen years old, of No. 2,408 Walton Ave., the Bronx, was oh, so tired in a Third Avenue elevated train last evening that she yawned.

It was such a whole-hearted yawn that her jaws became locked when they were farthest apart. Becoming frightened, Miss Savastano ran through the train crying hysterically and trying to close her jaws. Various passengers tried to assist her, but in vain.

At the 106th Street Station Dr. Gross was called from Reception Hospital. He could do nothing in a hurry and sent her to the hospital. There after half an hour's work with various instruments the jaws were unlocked, but the girl was so weak that she was kept at the hospital over night.

Sudbury Laundryman Attacked.

SUDBURY, Feb. 17. — As John Williams opened the door of the Sudbury Steam Laundry yesterday morning at six o'clock, he was struck on the head several times with an iron bar and seriously injured. His assailant has not yet been apprehended and no motive is known as nothing in the laundry was missing. Williams will likely recover.

Commander of Blucher Dead.

EDINBURGH, Feb. 17. — Captain Erdmann, commander of the German cruiser Blucher, who was among those rescued during the battle between British and German squadrons in the North Sea, Jan. 25, died here last night from pneumonia. His illness was due to exposure suffered when the Blucher was sunk.

SIMPLE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need) apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles; and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable." Write Dr. Fred Elms, Amherstburg, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

If You Need Anything Dyed

Owing to the scarcity of Dye and the exorbitant prices asked by those who have a small quantity on hand, Mr. Beach would advise all who are contemplating to have Garments, Drapes, Curtains, etc., dyed to have same done at once as the supply of dye stuffs are being nearly exhausted. Remember we are still in a position to give the same satisfactory service as in the past. We advise you to act at once.

WATERY RASH ITCHED AND BURNED

On Arms." Would Tingle and Itch. "In One Great Mass. Looked Scaly. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Rash Disappeared.

"So. Burton, Ont.—"My skin trouble started about seven years ago. My arms began to tingle and itch. A watery looking rash, very fine and close together, would break out every summer. It would itch and burn as the trouble progressed and it became worse when I scratched it. It looked scaly and dirty and in one great mass. My arms were so disfigured I could not wear short sleeves. I could not help scratching it all the time and when I had taken a bath it would itch and burn for about an hour. My flesh was sore from scratching.

"I used all kinds of soap and used sulphur baths but nothing would relieve me. At last I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper and I sent for a sample. The samples helped me so much I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and began bathing with the Soap and water as hot as I could bear it, then I would take a little of the Ointment and put on the skin. I did this every night and morning. I used only two cakes of Soap and one box of Ointment and in less than six weeks the rash had all disappeared and now my arms look natural again." (Signed) Mrs. Andrew Johnston. May 20, 1914.

MOVING PICTURES TO BE SHOWN IN CHURCH

Dr. Fred Stevenson, of Toronto, will Show Pictures in George Street Methodist Church Next Week

Something new in the history of churches in Peterborough will take place in George Street Methodist Church on the evenings of Feb. 22 and 23, next, Monday and Tuesday, respectively, when moving pictures will be shown in the church.

This is a new department in church work and should be well attended. The pictures will be shown to illustrate and impart missionary information to the citizens of Peterborough. Dr. Fred Stevenson of Toronto, Missionary Secretary of the Young People's Department of the Methodist Church of Canada, a general conference officer, is in charge. The films were procured by him at a large cost for use in missionary work. His visit to Peterborough is in the interests of the young people of the city.

Heretofore churches have generally denounced moving pictures as an evil, but Dr. Stevenson finds that it assists greatly in imparting missionary information.

The George Street Methodist people had to first secure the permission of the insurance companies before a moving picture machine could be operated in the church building. There is no charge, but a free will offering will be taken.

"WOODSIDE" HAS CHANGED HANDS

That popular resort at Kawartha Park, known as "Woodside," has been purchased by Mr. David Charlton of Lakefield. With it is included the store and Post Office which will be enlarged to care for the increasing business of that section of the lake. Mr. Charlton intends putting the post office in a room by itself which will greatly facilitate the handling of mail.

For many years this resort was owned by Miss Bertha Brown, now residing in Penticton, B.C., and under her management had become widely known as a most desirable place to spend an ideal holiday.

The new proprietor will make many improvements to the "boarding house," and if his success in handling the store last summer is any criterion, "Woodside" will not be long in regaining its old-time popularity.

INCANDESCENT STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM WAS UNDER DISCUSSION BEFORE ARBITERS THIS MORNING

The Board of Arbitration this morning waded into R. T. Jeffrey's encyclopaedia of properties, costs, condition, values and other details of the expropriated system of the Peterborough Light & Power Company. This black bound, formidable volume runs to over 150 pages, of which Mr. Cowan had covered fifty up to the noon adjournment.

When Mr. Jeffrey made his appraisal of the local company's system upon which the city would base its valuation he had a considerable undertaking and his report affords an indication of what he accomplished. Replacement and present values, prices and seemingly endless other details are included. Each arbiter has one of these volumes Mr. Tilley, the company's counsel, has another, Mr. Jeffrey and Mr. Cowan each have one. Page after page is gone over in order to bring out all the facts of the city's case.

The Incandescent Street Lamp.

Part of this morning's discussion touched upon the incandescent lamps that are in use in various parts of the city as an auxiliary to the arc lamp system.

It's a cheap system, Mr. Jeffrey said of the city's incandescent street lighting system and proceeded into details.

The fixtures are suitable for multiple lamps. The bracket arms are light and flimsy. The reflectors are small and badly rusted. The paint is not staying on them, and they are the cheapest possible kind of fixtures you can buy. The incandescent system is very incomplete. There is no means of cutting off the power to these lamps without cutting off he house services. As a result the street lamps burn all day. To complete the system you would have to string extra wires and put in circuit breakers in order to be able to turn off the light in daytime.

The lamps are 32 c.p. carbons and are very inefficient. The cost for power for these lamps is much higher than if newer type lamps were used. The carbon lamps are not being now. Mr. Jeffrey also classed the reflectors as inefficient.

The Arc Lamp System.

Passing on to the street arc lighting system Mr. Jeffrey termed it very old and obsolete.

It has been in use over twenty years and the operation is causing a great deal of trouble due to the lamps being old and worn out and the difficulty of replacing some of their parts. The arc lamps on this system are the old open direct current carbon lamps.

Mr. Jeffrey said he knew of no system being installed that was putting in arc lamps similar to Peterborough's nor did he know where they could be purchased..

"Do you prefer the system in Toronto?" Mr. Wallace Nesbitt asked.

"Yes, it is better than the old one," Mr. Jeffrey replied.

"I don't agree with you. I think it is worse than ever. At least it is near my home."

"The system is not a good one. It was not installed properly'" Mr. Jeffrey answered.

Mr. Cowan continued the pleasantry by a reference to Hamilton's system, but Mr. Tilley objected on behalf of Mr. W. C. Hawkins of that city, consulting engineer for the Dominion Power and Transmission Company, who gave expert evidence at a former session for the Peterborough Light and Power Co. The lawyers laughingly agreed that while Toronto's system might be the worst in the world, Hamilton's was probably the best.

Continuing Mr. Jeffrey declared that the local arc lamps are of no use except as scrap. The cost of maintenance, cost of power, etc., in this system is altogether too high for the light received, was one of his statements. His opinion of the arc lamp's value was further shown by his allowance for their depreciation of 95 p.c.. Twenty dollars would be the cost of a more modern type of a direct current lamp that could be used on the local system and which Mr. Jeffrey said could be purchased in Toronto.

Condition of Meters.

Mr. Cowan next led Mr. Jeffrey to his inventory of the meters he reported on. I have made practically no examination of the meters on this system, Mr. Jeffrey said, except those in stock. Most of the latter were made by the Peterborough Meter Company. Mr. Jeffrey said he had charge of the meter department of the Canadian Westinghouse Co. for a year, where he did assembling, testing and other work. While with this company he made several tests of the Peterborough Meter Company's instruments. He figured them to have a useful life of seven years in comparison with 15 years, the estimated useful life of most other meters he had tested. Hence he had concluded that the Peterborough Company's meters were short lived and not a satisfactory instrument. Seveny Thompson & Howson commutator meters were also found. Mr. Jeffrey said they were used here for small power work and street railway work. As far as he knew they were not made now except on special order.

At this stage the encyclopedia quoted Mr. R. A. Ross on meters.

"I suppose my friend will permit this entry," Mr. Cowan remared to Mr. Tilley. The point of the aride is that Mr. Ross is the city's arbitrator on the case and one of the foremost electrical engineers in the Dominion.

Mr. Jeffrey had inserted here and there in his appraisal volume opinions of various experts. Yesterday Mr. Tilley objected to their being put in as an exhibit. If the city desired to submit the opinions of these men, they should appear before the Board. As a result of the objection the volume is undergoing a strict censorship with the deletion of the passages objected to.

Just before noon the section pertaining to transformers was opened up.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can transform faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning grey, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the grey hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Grey-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

49,000 TURKS ARE PRISONERS IN RUSSIA

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Forty-nine thousand Turkish prisoners, including 527 officers, have passed through Pyatigorsk, in the territory of Terek, Ciscausia, en route to the interior since the war with Turkey began, according to the Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company.

The same despatch says that Mr. George T. Maye, American Ambassador to Russia, to-day formally communicated to the Russian Foreign Office the German declaration of intention to blockade the British Isles.

ADDRESS AT WOODMEN'S HALL

A theme of special interest was considered last evening by Elder F. W. Johnston, in the Woodmen Hall. Taking for his text I. Pet. 3:19, where it speaks about Christ preaching to the "Spirits in Prison," the Elder said that the supreme difficulty in understanding this passage by the generality was due to the wrong idea that has been preached for many years—that man has within him a "never-dying soul" that goes to heaven or hell at death. This position is untrue, so Mr. Johnston said. The soul of man dies and goes to the grave and remains there until the resurrection. As proof of this he referred to Psalms 78:50, also Ps. 22:29, and 89:48, and Ps. 49:15, etc. The spirit, however, which goes to God, as mentioned in Eccl. 12:7, is not what many people think. The Scriptures show plainly that the spirit is the breath of life that is common to all the animal creation. See Job 27:3, also Jas. 2:26 (margin). Mr. Johnston then showed that the view which people hold concerning the existence and consciousness of the soul after death, was contrary, too.

Actual scientific demonstration: A young girl who had undergone an operation in Los Angeles, Cal., only a short time ago died under the operation and was dead for several minutes. The physician who became alarmed over her death, placed his hand around her heart and by successfully imitating the movements of the heart restored the girl to life. Now, the point in this is not to show the skill of the surgeon, but the fact is that the girl was dead for several minutes and the heart stopped beating. Now, according to popular theology the soul goes to heaven or hell immediately upon the death of the body. Did this girl's soul go? If so, when she was restored, she would know something about it. But did she? No such testimony was forthcoming. Neither did Lazarus, who was dead four days and raised by Christ.—John II. So this notion of the consciousness of the soul after death is scientifically proved untrue, and is also unscriptural. (See Eccl. 9:5, 10, also Ps. 146:4).

After, therefore, showing the reason why people could not understand, I. Pet. 3:19, he there explained it on Scriptural grounds. He proved that the person referred to in this Scripture was not hell, that hell will not exist till the future. And to show how hell will be made he referred to Isa. 34:8, 9. What absurdity, he declared, for Christ to preach in hell. There is no chance after death. He then showed that the prison could not be the grave for people when they died knew nothing, and therefore Christ could not preach to them. What, therefore, is the prison of I. Pet. 3:19? The answer is given in Isa. 42:6, 7; also Isa. 61:1. This proves that the prison is the Spiritual bondage and captivity of the sinner in this life. And the word "Spirits" here mentioned in I. Pet. 3:19, was derived from the Greek "Pneuma," which means "the mud." Therefore, Mr. Johnston said that the common sense reading of this passage would be as follows: That Christ preached to the darkened minds (or spirits) of people who were bound in the prison of sin. He closed with an exhortation to all to get freed from such bondage and that the only true liberty was found in Christ. Hence the reason for Ga.. 5:1.

TO THE VOLUNTEERS

God speed our gallant soldier boys.
In warlike trappings gay,
Who to their country's urgent call
Are answering to-day.
Proud, we'll give them rousing send-off
Though our hearts are aching sore,
For they go to fight the Teuton
On a distant foreign shore.

Dear to them is home and loved ones
And sweet friendships hold sway,
But dearer far, the honour
For which Britons live or die.
Well we know they'll never falter
On stern duty's rugged track,
But will fight, or fall, unyielding,
For our dear old Union Jack.

And they'll show the haughty Kaiser
And his cruel treacherous crew,
What the hardy sons of Canada
From o'er the seas can do.
While brave they venture life and limb
For King and Country there;
Their names will waft to heaven
On the wings of ceaseless prayer.

Fond loving hearts will whisper
The familiar old refrain,
God be with our sons and brothers
Till we meet them once again.
Then the welcome that awaits them
Will awake the echoes far,
When we greet our gallant soldier boys
Returning from the war.

OPENING ADDRESS BY MR. J. W. FITZGERALD

At the Annual Meeting of the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors Which Opened Yesterday in Toronto

TORONTO, Feb. 17 — The twenty-third annual meeting of the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors opened yesterday in the Engineers' Club. Members from all over the Province were in attendance. The convention is the largest in the history of the institution.

President J. W. Fitzgerald of Peterborough in his opening address, expressed appreciation at the excellent showing made by the association during the past year. In giving an outline of the work accomplished he emphasized the necessity of the appointment of a special committee to compile the various survey cases which may come into the courts during the coming year, and urged that this step be taken by the meeting. He also expressed regret at the deaths of three members—Dean Galbraith of the University of Toronto, Thos. C. Keefer of Ottawa, and A. W. Ponton of Edmonton.

In concluding, President Fitzgerald touched briefly on the great European crisis. "We have to thank God," he said, "that we are living in a free and glorious country as part and parcel of the greatest Empire the world has ever seen, and which, with the help of its valiant sons, will retain its supremacy."

The report of the secretary-treasurer, L. V. Rorke, showed that the organization was in a flourishing condition. The recommendation that a grant of $400 be made jointly to the Belgian Relief and Red Cross Funds was passed unanimously, while it was decided to rebate the annual fees of the four members of the society who are now at the front.

City Surveyor Le May gave an interesting paper on the "City and Suburban Plans Act," in which he described the method adopted by the City of Toronto in laying out the roads in the suburban districts and in making provision for rapid transportation.

The early days in surveying in Western Canada were recalled by A. L. Russell of Port Arthur, who gave a paper on "Reminiscences," while F. N. Rutherford of St. Catharines, spoke on "Possessory Titles."

A the evening session J. S. Dobie of Thessalon, gave an illustrated paper on "Stone Crushing," describing the methods used by the quarries at Bruce Mines, and J. S. Lang delivered a review of land surveying, dealing with the subject from its earliest known times. J. W. McCurdy spoke on the subject of aviation.

PIMPLES APPEARED ON HIS FACE AND HANDS.

The primary cause of pimples arises from the blood not being in a good condition. When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples will break out all over the body, but more particularly on the forehead, nose and chin, and although they are not a dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself. What you need, when these pimples break out, is to get a real good blood purifying medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. One that will build up the system by cleansing the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Mr. F. A. McKenzie, Portage La Prairie, Man., writes: "Last Monday I was laid down and unfit for work of any kind. All kinds of food seemed distasteful to me. Pimples appeared on my face and hands, and I seemed to have worse every day. One day a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I did so, and the results obtained were marvellous. I regained my health, I took on flesh, and in a short time the pimples and skin eruptions disappeared entirely. Thanks to the healing powers of B.B.B. I freely recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Guess Work.

Things may come out all right if you trust to guess work, but there is an uncertainty about it and in many cases the results are distinctly unsatisfactory. The household run on guesswork is not managed as it should be. Knowledge full and sure is the only guide, and the housewife may have that knowledge regarding prices, qualities, the best time and the best place to fill her household requirements, by keeping close tab on the advertisements. There is news in the advertising columns that is just as interesting as the other parts of the paper, and which will eliminate guess work.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

VICTORIAS BEAT ST. MICHAEL'S 2 TO 1 IN FIRST GAME

Record Crowd Saw Opening Battle in the Senior Finals in Which Vics Outplayed the Green Shirts During the Greater Part of the Game.

TORONTO, Feb. 17.—Seven thousand three hundred and sixty-six (7,366), a new Arena record for attendance, saw Victorias and St. Michael's clash in the first senior O.H.A. final game, the former getting the verdict by the close score of 2 to 1 in a game that neither team were able to bulge the nets until forty-nine minutes had been played. It was the Vics who broke the deadlock, and then came back with another, giving them two goals of a lead. This was cut down by one when Rankin bulged the net on a five-foot offside.

Better and more sensational games have marked the senior finals than the one last night. Neither team was up to their usual standard, although they were hindered by the sugary condition of the ice, which made it hard for them to handle the puck. The latter seemed to drag over the surface in place of slide, and there was a constant overskating of the disc.

On the play during the three periods St. Michael's had a slight shade in the first, but Vics more than evened it up in the second, and until the last two minutes, when St. Michael's put every man on the line, had a slight margin on the Saints. With fifty seconds to play, Heffernan was ruled off, and was followed by [illegible] Hocking, but St. Michael's failed to get the puck close enough to the Vics' goal for them to shoot.

WEIRD SHOOTING GAME.

It is doubtful if any senior final provided such weird shooting as was done by both teams. The goalkeepers had a comparatively easy night of it, and each net guardian was only called upon to stop about three difficult shots during the evening. Both teams had also chances to score from scrimmages out in front, and tossed them away by wild work. Rankin had a particularly glorious chance to tie up the game just before full time, when he accepted a pass right out at the side of the net, and then binged it wide. Laframme had two chances in the second period on passes in front, but in each case lost the puck between his skates before he had an opportunity to shoot.

Close, hard checking prevailed throughout the game, and with such style of play in vogue, the game was not as spectacular as might be expected. In the early stages St. Michael's were breaking faster than their opponents and getting down on the defence unmolested, but the puck carrier invariably did the wrong thing, and shot in place of passing, or vice versa. This was particularly true of Merrick on two occasions, when he shot, although Rankin was up with him each time.

Victorias used better judgment in their shooting than St. Michael's did, and were not at all selfish with the puck. They tried to work right in close on Bricker, and while they were checked in the first two periods through the brilliant work of Merrick, yet the two goals they did secure were on passes right in front of the goal, thus giving Bricker no chance whatever to stop. They were so close to the nets that on each occasion the player fell right into the goal with the puck.

Once the Vics broke into the scoring game it looked as if they would win farther off than they did, so well were they rushing, although, going on the play in the last two minutes, they were lucky to come out with a one-goal lead, as they got to bunching in front of their own goal, and with any kind of shooting on the part of St. Michael's the score would have been tied. However, on the play in the sixty minutes the winners served up much the better hockey of the two, and deserved the victory.

The officials—Oscar Bernhardt, of Bradford, and Dr. Gilfillan, of Uxbridge—were strict in every sense of the word, and often players were benched when they should have remained on the ice. However, they were very impartial, and treated each team alike in the way of penalties, with St. Michael's getting the only real break of the night when Rankin scored St. Michael's counter on what looked like a five-foot offside. The officials, unlike the N. H. A. men, stayed in the centre of the ice, in place of the sides, and in this way they hampered the play quite a lot.

GUELPH WILL BE BACK IN CANADIAN

GUELPH, Feb. 16—It is practically an assured fact that Guelph will have a team in the Canadian League in 1915. Geo. H. O'Neil, owner of the Erie franchise, arrived in the City on the afternoon train to-day and spent several hours in conference with the Guelph gentlemen who are interested in again putting Guelph on the baseball map.

Mr. O'Neil admits that he lost a lot of money at Erie last year, several reasons being given for his failure to make money, and he has had enough of their game. He made a proposition to-day to sell the Erie franchise back to Guelph for $2,500, being the same amount that he paid W. A. Mahoney for it last year.

The local fans are greatly interested in securing a place in the Canadian League again, and although the deal was not closed to-night there is no doubt but it will be fixed up in a few days and the franchise transferred to Guelph.

It is understood that this will be the only change in the Canadian League circuit this year, it being the intention to keep Toronto in the League.

Mr. O'Neil stated that he had a number of first-class players to turn over to the Guelph purchasers with the franchise and it is altogether likely that Frank Gygli, who managed the Erie team the greater part of last season, will be secured to take charge of the Guelph team. He has offered such old Guelph favourites as Dirbeck, Schaefer, Behan, Wiltse, Hains and several other players to the new Guelph owners. Should this deal go through the League circuit will be complete and the work of getting out a schedule will be proceeded with at once.

JUNIOR CHURCH LEAGUE.

Though the championship series of the Junior Church league is over, the teams will go on playing exhibition games. This week's schedule is:

Wednesday, 6 to 7. All Saints vs. George Street.

Thursday, 6 to 7, Mark Street vs. Knox; 7 to 8, Charlotte Street vs. St. John's.

There will be an important meeting of the League on Thursday, Feb. 18, at 8 o'clock.—Hugh Austin, Secretary Treasurer.

Receipts In The English Cup Games

The receipts from the second round of the English Cup Ties, which was finished last Saturday, showed a welcome improvement over those from the first round games, when it is considered that only half as many matches were played. Four hundred and two thousand people paid $60,700 to see the thirty-two ties on January 9, while the second round, in which only sixteen games were decided, attracted 416,098 people, the gate money totalling $85,895.

In the first round last year $151,420 was taken in, while the second round ties produced $100,065. The Chelsea-Arsenal game was the biggest attraction this season, heading the list, with just a little more than $6,000, while the Bradford City-Middlesboro contest was close up with $5,500.

Many clubs are already feeling the pinch badly through the big falling off in receipts, and when the season closes, at the end of April, serious trouble will have to be met. As little provision can be made for salaries throughout the summer months, unless the war is terminated before next September, the outlook for soccer next season is far from encouraging. The draw for the third round ties, to be decided next Saturday, resulted as follows:

Manchester City v. Chelsea.
Bradford City v. Norwich City.
Southampton v. Hull City.
Sheffield Wednesday v. Newcastle United.
Birmingham v. Oldham Athletic.
Bolton Wanderers v. Barnley.
Sheffield United v. Bradford.
Queen's Park Rangers v. Everton.

Only one tie will be played in London, Queen's Park Rangers entertaining Everton. London's other club left in the competition, Chelsea, will visit Manchester to tackle the City club, where they should force a draw and win the replay on their own grounds.

Burnley, the holders of the cup, will have to work hard in their away tie with Bolton Wanderers, who defeated Millwall so easily last Saturday.

BASEBALL PLAYER INJURED

Charlie Isaac, Toronto Third Baseman, Hurt Playing Hockey

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—The Toronto club nearly lost the services of one of its most promising prospects and Charlie Isaacs, the dashing young third-baseman, all but lost the use of an eye on Saturday. The youngster has been keeping himself in condition this winter by playing hockey and bowling on the alleys and at both games he is quite an adept.

On Saturday afternoon he took part in a hockey contest at the Vermont Rink and in the midst of a scrimmage around the opposing team's goal he was struck accidentally across the face by a stick. A long, deep cut which missed the optic by a fraction of an inch was inflicted and the infielder is at the present time confined to his house. It is not thought that any serious results will follow, but Isaacs' escape was a narrow one. He has decided to put hockey on the black list. "It's a great game," he says, "but I'll let the other fellows play it." Isaacs is slated to hold the third base job regularly for the Leafs the coming season, and if he performs as well this year as he did in the closing weeks last fall should rank with the best in the league.

SUNK BY MINES.

British Steamer Is Blown Up By Two Explosions.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—A despatch to Lloyds from Fecamp, France, says the British steamer Dulwich, Capt. Dudley, bound from Hull for Rouen, was blown up Monday evening twenty-five miles off Cape Antifer by two successive explosions.

The despatch says that seven men of the crew of the steamer arrived in Fecamp Monday night. They reported that none of the men on board the steamer had been injured, and that all of them could have made their escape in the lifeboats.

The Dulwich was a vessel of 2,249 tons and was owned by the Britain Steamship Co.

Garibaldi Predicts War.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—In an interview in The Globe yesterday, Gen. Garibaldi predicted that Italy would mobilise her complete war strength within the next ten days.

Gen. Garibaldi, who is a member of the famous Italian family of soldiers, declared that the war spirit in Italy is growing strongly, and that unless the Italian Government decided to participate in the war, there would be a revolution.

Deaths Now Total 98.

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—Four casualties reported from the Princess Patricia's Monday night bring up to a total of 98 the deaths among the Canadian expeditionary forces since they left Canada. Of this number, 18 belonging to the Patricia's were either killed in action or died of wounds sustained there. The rest died at Salisbury Plain from natural causes.

Another Big Treasury Issue.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The Bank of England, it was announced yesterday, will receive tenders for treasury bills amounting to £20,000,000 ($100,000,000), on Feb. 23. They will be dated Feb. 27 and will be payable one-half in six months and the remainder in 12 months.

Burglar's Kit Found.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Feb. 17.—Hidden under a frame structure on the property of the G.T.R. an employe yesterday unearthed a burglars' outfit, consisting of fuse, candles, dynamite and a bottle containing what is supposed to be nitro-glycerine.

The articles were wrapped in a handkerchief and had evidently been deposited there while a job was being spied out. The police are investigating the matter.

WESTERNERS RUSH TO ENLIST

750 For New Mounted Regiment Secured in Six Hours

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 16.—The enlistment within six hours of 750 good riders, and crack shots at three points in South Alberta, is a recruiting record of which John Herron, ex-M.P. for McLeod, believes he has reason to be proud of on behalf of his Province. [illegible] of three squadrons was ordered, one squadron to be recruited at Pincher Creek, one at Cardston, and one at MacLeod. In six hours the complement was complete, and such was the enthusiasm among the horsemen of the district that several hundred disappointed men were left in the line when the last man required had been recruited.

MILLIONAIRES GO TO HEAR "BILL" SUNDAY

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 16.—Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus, a woman of social prominence, who had been noticed at many of the "Billy" Sunday tabernacle meetings, Sunday [illegible] the choir stand and led her little son and daughter, heirs to millions, and a little niece down to the front and held them up as Mr. Sunday, beaming, reached down and grasped their hands.

With the appearance of the distinguished looking woman and her attractive little charges on the sawdust a murmur swept through the audience. Hundreds of the onlookers recognized Mrs. Altemus and her children.

As soon as Mr. Sunday had finished shaking hands with the youngsters an usher stepped forward and took their names.

It is apparent that what Mr. Sunday has said on the sins of the "idle rich" and the shortcomings of society is not worrying Philadelphia social leaders. The women who lead in social life here merely raised their eyebrows to-day when they were shown copies of Mr. Sunday's statements. They are sure his services at the home of Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, Mrs. O. J. Drexel Biddle and others cannot have inspired his denounciations of card playing, improper dancing, cigarette smoking and cocktail drinking.

Is it possible, they ask, that when Mr. Sunday speaks of society as being "on the hight road to perdition" he is speaking from the standpoint of a man who doesn't know what he is talking about?

"I really do not know whom he means," said Mrs. Stotesbury, "but he must have somebody in mind. I think he's wonderful and sincere in everything."

Eleven hundred and eighty-two penitents was the total for Mr. Sunday, making a grand total of 24,000.

Dr. A. B. Simpson, of New York, who made the closing prayer, expressed a hope that the evangelist would soon be able to go to New York, "that city of sin and sorrow."

Dr. Simpson, instead of standing in prayer, knelt upon the red carpet of the rostrum as he sent up his supplications.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Last night, in a game of basketball, the renouned Intermediates were defeated by the lowly Junior Collegiates. From the start the game was fast and furious, and it was only with the hardest work that the Collegiate five were able to break up the Intermediate's combination, which could only have been obtained after much hard practice. The final score was 18-8. G. Green and Canniff were the Collegiate's best men, while Hamilton was the star of the Intermediates. G. Carsan refereed the game to the satisfaction of all. The line-up was as follows:

Junior Collegiates: Centre, Canniff; forwards, H. Copp and G. Green; defence, Elliott and J. Green.

Intermediates: Centre, Pringle; forwards, Copp and Hamilton; defence, McCracken and Eagle.

RESTRICT MALT IN BEER.

Restrictions have been imposed on the production of beer in Germany, to become effective February 15, according to the Lokal Anzeiger. From that date until March 1, it is stated, the breweries are forbidden to use more than fifty per cent. of their usual quality of malt, and after March 1 they must not exceed forty per cent. The authorities later will fix definitely the amount of malt each brewery may consume.

Local Man Is Accepted From Queen's

Mr E. F. G. Ward, Fourth Year Man at Queen's, Going to Canadian Base Hospital

Mr. E. F. G. Ward, fourth son of Mr. E. W. Wood, 467 Downie Street, dairy instructor for this section, who is in his fourth year in Medicine at Queen's University, Kingston, has volunteered for service in the Duchess of Connaught Canadian Base Hospital, Cliveden, England, and with twenty other final year men has been accepted.

The men of the final year who go will receive their M. B. degree before leaving. Convocation is being held at Queen's to-day, when these twenty-one men will receive their degrees.

Mr. E. F. G. Ward spent last week end with his parents in this city. According to present arrangements they expect to leave on Feb. 19th for Ottawa and shortly after for England.

Mr. Robert Ward, grandfather of Mr. E. F. G. Ward, held a commission in the Canadian militia during the trouble in Canada in 1837-38.

MEN'S BANQUET WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

That the men of Charlotte Street Methodist Church can cook was ably demonstrated last night to about five hundred people who attended the "Men's Banquet," held in the Sunday School quarters. The men did all the cooking and serving, at least they got the credit for the former, and of the latter they gave a good demonstration. Though the pulmotor and ambulance were advertised as being on hand in case of need, no serious results have been reported so far.

Supper started at 6 o'clock, and when the guests from the first tables were finished they retired to the gallery seats to make room for the next group. There was a record crowd, including members of sister churches in the City. Almost every denomination was represented, among whom there were a number of representative citizens, including Ald. Green and Mrs. Green, Ald. J. J. Duffus and Mrs. Duffus, and Chief D. Thompson and Mrs. Thompson.

Fire Chief Howard was master of ceremonies, and to him is due a lot of the credit for the success of the evening. He had able assistants in the men of the church, the different committees, numbering in membership about fifty.

After justice had been done to the good things to eat, there was a very good programme of music and speeches. Upon Rev. J. P. Wilson devolved the duties of chairman.

The programme was as follows:

Victrola selections.

Chairman's address. Rev. J. P. Wilson.

Instrumental—Mr. J. Fisher.

Solo—Mr. E. Naish.

Reading—Mr. Kennett.

Instrumental—Mr. J. A. Robinson.

Address—"Why We're Here," Chief W. A. Howard.

Remarks—Mr. Galbraith.

Instrumental—Mr. J. Fisher

Solo—Mr. M. Staples.

Reading—Mr. R. J. Soden.

Solo—Mr. W. F. Skitch.

Quartette selection—Army Quartette.

The National Anthem.

The speeches and remarks were of a humorous character, the gentlemen explaining the work of the committees in preparing the banquet.

Chief Howard, in his address, "Why We're Here," kept the audience in good humour, providing his hearers with many laughs at the expense of his co-workers, picking on Mr. Galbraith more particularly. Mr. Galbraith was able to come back, however, and the Chief was scored several times.

Altogether the evening was a grand success as an entertainment and financially, the receipts exceeding the expenditures by over $50.00

WAS TENDERED A FAREWELL BANQUET

Masquerade Carnival at Hastings Was a Great Success —Other News

HASTINGS, Feb. 16 — Mrs. C. B. Beamish was the guest of honour at a banquet tendered by the members of the I. O. D. E. in their rooms here, on Thursday evening. The occasion took the form of a farewell, as Mrs. Beamish is soon to remove to Picton.

On Wednesday last, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Beamish a wedding of interest was solemnized, when their daughter, Ella, was given in marriage to Mr. W. Gibbons of Saskatchewan. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbons will be followed to their distant home by the best wishes of a host of friends who extend congratulations on this auspicious occasion.

On Friday evening last the children of the Presbyterian Sunday School were treated to a sleighing party and social by the friends of the school. After an excellent supper had been served a good programme was given and a very pleasant and sociable hour spent together.

Mr. Tom Hill of Peterborough spent Sunday with his parents.

The masquerade carnival on Wednesday night was very well attended and quite a number appeared in costume. Several good prizes were competed for, Mr. Bert Dodd winning in the race again several competitors.

At Grace Church, Winnipeg, on Wednesday last, Miss Georgina Howson was united in marriage to Mr. Gordon Brackenridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Brackenridge of Westwood. Mr. and Mrs. Brackenridge will take up residence at Kerrobert, Sask. The young couple are well known here, and a host of friends follow them with best wishes for a long and happily wedded life.

Mr. C. B. Beamish, the popular manager of the Union Bank, here, leaves during the week for Picton. Whether he has been transferred, several of his friends took the opportunity on Saturday night to present him with a handsome club-bag, and to tender their sincere regret at his removal.

The position made vacant by the removal of Mr. Beamish is to be filled by Mr. J. Thomson of Wheatley. Mr. Thompson is a son of Rev. D. A. Thomson, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church of this place, and John spent his boyhood days here.

A snow-shoe party left town on Wednesday evening and enjoyed a good tramp across the deep snow, returning in good time.

Some of our people went over to Norwood on Monday night to attend the Operetta "The Courtship of Miss Canada," given under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. of that place.

The mild weather of the past few days has materially reduced the snow and already it makes one wish for the approach of Spring.

During the past week some large shipments of live stock left the G. T. R. Station, here; some 600 hogs and also large consignments of cattle. The prices were good.

Mr. Fred Richardson has disposed of his farm to Mr. Norman Rusaw, and has purchased one nearer the Village.

Mr. R. Best of Toronto has been renewing acquaintances here.

The Pastors of the local Churches took the occasion on Sunday of conducting the services in commemoration of the one hundred years of peace which has exised between the United States and Great Britain.

Mr. J. McCarthy spent Tuesday in Peterborough.

Miss J. McMartin is in Peterborough visiting friends.

Mr. G. Oliver and sisters spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Oliver.

Mr. Geo. Laing, of Peterborough, and Mr. E. J. Laing of Norwood have been guests of their sister, Mrs. N. Beavis.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Kelly and little son have been visiting at Warkworth.

Grocer Fined In Police Court

Prosecuted Under Adulterated Food Act and Paid $54.60 Into Court

A local grocer was prosecuted in the Police Court this morning under the Adulterated Food Act and fined $40 and costs, amounting in all to $54.60.

The information was laid by Dominion Inspector Jas. Hogan, in connection with some lime juice the defendant had for sale. It was found to be not up to the standard.

The defendant sold the lime juice as it was received by him from the wholesalers. The fine was paid into Court by the defendant, but if the wholesaler does not make reparation to him he will be able to prosecute. In an instance of his kind the Inspector holds the retailer responsible.

CASE WAS DISMISSED

John Edward Robins, who has been held in custody for the past week on an information of insanity, was discharged when he appeared before Magistrate Langley at the inquiry, this morning.

Drs. Halliday and Greer, who were appointed to examine Mr. Robins, found absolutely no indications of insanity and on their certificates Robins was discharged without any witnesses being heard.

In discharging Mr. Robins the Magistrate said the fees of the Constable and physicians were provided for, and as to the witnesses who were present he did not allow them anything, remarking that it was an unfortunate affair and the witnesses were nearly all relatives, who should be ready to assist in a matter of this kind.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Rev. W. R. Young, of Toronto, was the guest of Mr. B. Shortly while in the city.

Mrs. G. C. Taylor, 197 Murray street, will not receive to-morrow, (Thursday), or again this season.

Mrs. T. C. Elliott, 112 McDonnel Street, and Mrs. T. W. Hall, of Montreal, will receive on Friday afternoon from 3.30 until 6 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Robertson and two children who have been visiting the former's mother and other friends, left for their home in Saskatchewan, returning on the 4.23 C. P. R. train, Monday.

Misses Dean, Palmer, Sullivan, Logan and Smith, of the Conservatory Orchestra, are in Toronto to-day, and will attend the concert by the New York Symphony Orchestra to-night in Massey Hall.

The Examiner has received a letter from Mr. E. N. McWilliams to-day from New York. Mr. McWilliams is in that centre looking up the very newest and American styles in men's hats with the intention of having the styles reproduced in Canadian made goods, thereby doing his part in the campaign to be fought by Canadian manufacturers in pushing Made in Canada goods. Mr. McWilliams will spend a week in New York.

WEDDING BELLS

HARDING—SULLIVAN.

The marriage of Miss Eva Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. S. Clancy, Bellwood avenue, Toronto, to Mr. David Harding, of Montreal, was performed quietly by Rev. Father McCann at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, Feb. 11th.

After a short trip the happy couple will take up residence [illegible] Montreal.

FIGHTING IN EAST INCREASING IN VIOLENCE

Germany Has At Least 100 Submarines Ready

DISTINCT SUCCESSES OVER GERMANS IN GALICIA

Germans Have Been Repulsed With Heavy Losses in Attack From Khava to Vykorotch---1400 Prisoners and Three Machine Guns.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 18.—Distinct success over the German and Austro-German forces in Galicia and the Carpathians and at isolated points along the northern battle line are claimed by the War Office to-day.

It declares that fighting on the left bank of the Vistula is continually increasing in violence, but that neither side has been able to gain any ground.

North of Niemen where the Russian forces have taken up new positions the exchange has been confined to cavalry patrol exchanges with light damage and a balance of success resting with the Russians in Galicia. The Germans attacked in force along the front from Khava to Vykorotch and further east, but were repulsed with heavy losses. In Lubno-Studenne region another German attack was repulsed and 1,400 prisoners and three machine guns were captured.

In the Carpathians at Wyszkow Pass the Germans have delivered a series of impetuous assaults, pushing forward in the direction of the main Russian positions commanding the pass. They were finally checked by a series of bayonet charges, one entire battalion being either killed or taken prisoners.

HOPELESS CRIPPLES

Thousands of French Soldiers Might Have Been Saved Had Doctors Known What to Do For Them

NEW REGULATIONS

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 18.—Thousands of French soldiers are hopeless cripples to-day whose limbs might have been saved had the doctors known what to do for them. This fact was emphasized in an order issued to-day which amends military regulations concerning the care of troops in the field. Hereafter it is made compulsory that each French soldier shall remove his shoes and socks for not less than fifteen minutes twice in every 24 hours. Failuer to do so will involve severe punishment.

Hereafter shoes and stockings of the French soldier are to be made impermeable with hot grease, and he will be required to take both off twice daily.

In addition terms in trenches are to be materially reduced.

NO INTERRUPTION IN CHANNEL SERVICE UP TO NOON TO-DAY

Adriatic and Other Ships From United States Ports Have Reached Destination in Safety---Public and Private Yards Worked Day and Night to Add to German Submarine Flotilla.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 18.—"Der tag" dawned cold, wet and gloomy throughout the British Isles. A driving rain swept over various harbours and checked outside dock labour, but there was no halting of sailing anywhere. British imperturbability was utterly unaffected by the inauguration of the German submarine blockade, there being a most supreme confidence in the navy to prevent any interference with by liners of food ships.

Private advices from Berlin from really dependable sources declare that Germany has not less than 100 submarines available for service in the war zone to-day. Ever since last August the public and private yards have been working day and night adding to the submarine flotilla. These vessels are expected off the Irish coast and at the entrance to the Channel. A typical indication of light-heartedness of the average British club man was betting in clubs last night where many wagers were laid at three to one that not a single merchantman would be sunk before midnight to-night. There has been absolutely no interruption to the Channel service or the general coastwise shipping. Up till noon to-day, London time, no sinking of ships had been reported.

The liner Adriatic and other ships from the United States reached port safely this morning.

CANADA'S TIME OF TRIAL AND WHAT IT MEANS TO US

Yes, although there are no shells or bombs falling in our midst, no shots rattling on our doors, this is a time of trial. It is a time when the world will make note of our power, of our ability to prove a strength to the Empire. We have enjoyed the good will, the advantages, the protection of the might of Britain. We must now exert ourselves to the utmost to prove to the world our high appreciation of these things. It will not all be plain sailing. Individually, in particular, we shall have many things to put up with. We shall have to pay more for our liberties. We shall have to pay more for our living. We shall have to be content with inadequate help. But the land will be spared from devastation. Our houses will not be battered over our heads. Canada will never be laid waste from the same cause as in Belgium, as in Northern France, as is poor battered Poland. It is impossible to believe that we shall ever lie bleeding as are those unhappy countries. This, then, is our hour of trial. Our hour when we can prove our gratitude for, our appreciation of, the blessings that are ours. Our hour when by rising equal to the occasion, by making the best use of our riches, by making two ears of corn grow where one grew before, by increasing our flocks and herds, we can command the admiration of the world. In other words, in this hour of trial we have but to be true to ourselves. Britain has had to fight for every bit of her power, for every inch of land she possesses, for every scrap of the fealty she now has the right to claim. Canada has but to exert herself, to plough only to reap, to sow only to stock her granaries, to develop only to fill her stables and her barns. While she is thus occupied, the great mother that gave her birth, that has been her shield and protector, is calling to her in her own travail to sacrifice herself, no, to profit herself by energetically making the best use of her boundless opportunities.

PROGRESS ON THE ENTIRE FRONT FROM FLANDERS TO ALSACE

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Feb. 18.—The Allies are pressing the Germans hard at every point in France and Flanders with both infantry and artillery. Military critics here believe the renewed activity on the western front is for the purpose of forcing the enemy to keep his armies there at present strength and to prevent him from detaching any force to send against the Russians.

The official communique issued by the French War Office tells of a number of notable successes in violent attacking and counter-attacking.

IN CHAMPAGNE DISTRICT.

In the Champagne district, where the French Monday captured a line of trenches two miles long, further progress of 800 metres was made Tuesday. This front has been the scene of violent fighting for weeks.

The Perthes region is midway between Rheims and Verdun, and the French have been endeavouring at this point to push the Germans back far enough to secure a railway a few miles to the north which has constituted a valuable line of communication for the invaders on this section of the front.

The new allied offensive continuous of yesterday and to-day on the entire front, began on Tuesday. The afternoon communique reports the commencement of these hostilities, and laid especial stress on a severe engagement, fought near Le Four de Paris in the Argonne. Here the Germans attacked in force, but were entirely repulsed, with the losses which the French War Office describes as "huge." East of this district, in the forest of Melancourt, the French also achieved success yesterday, capturing German trenches over a front of 100 metres.

WAR BETWEEN CHINA AND JAPAN NOT UNLIKELY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 18 — It is admitted here to-night that there are prospects of war between China and Japan, relative to negotiations regarding territory recently taken from Germany, and that the United States is much interested.

LONDON, Feb. 18 — Nearly every regular passenger steamer left their British ports to-night in defiance of the German submarine blockade which commences at midnight.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 18 — German steamers put in here to-night with passengers and crews of a number of British steamers sunk during the last few days by the German cruiser "Karlsruhe."

P. BARK—Russian Finance Minister who says that the Allies' markets are closed to Germany forever.

Concluding Chapter of the Hydro Engineer's Inventory of Peterboro' L. & P. Equipment

Said Murray Street Power Station Was a Museum of Electrical Antiquities---Store Arc Lighting System is Out of Date, Said Mr. Jeffrey and Gave His Reasons.

R. T. Jeffrey concluded his description of the expropriated plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, yesterday afternoon, with a reference to the Murray Street power house.

"This station seems to have been used as a museum for the whole plant," Mr. Jeffrey said in regard to the Murray Street power station, which, he continued, judging by the condition of the equipment as a storehouse.

Mr. Cowan—"Sort of a museum for electrical antiquities?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"Yes, and very little of the antiquities could be operated as parts of the plant. Their depreciation is heavy.

Practically none of the equipment, Mr. Jeffrey remarked, excepting a few miscellaneous tools and supplies could be used in an up-to-date plant.

Taking into account their obsolescence and the fact that they had been in use over twenty years, Mr. Jeffrey allowed a depreciation of 95 per cent. on the generators and arc lamp generators in the Murray Street Station. The equipment could be used for another year while a new system was being erected to substitute it. It would not pay to run the system longer than that period. He also said the scrap value would be small for the winding had been done by hand, and it would cost as much to scrape the copper as it would be worth when prepared for sale.

Store Arc Lamps.

Proceeding to the enclosed arc lamps used in stores, Mr. Jeffrey said that as far as arc lamps went they were good operating arc lamps, but obsolete as far as store lighting was concerned. They were not suitable for that service. That they were obsolete, Mr. Jeffrey continued, was proved by the fact that the enclosed arcs have been replaced by nitrogen-filled tungstens in the Brock Street rink and in several other stores in Peterborough and in all probability they would all be superseded by other and newer lamps. The enclosed arcs operate on alternating current and are more compact and modern than the open arc. They are still being manufactured.

Electric Signs.

The Company claimed four electric signs as an asset. They were rented to business concerns who took possession of them when the rentals reached their value. It was stated that $56 or $58 remained to be paid on each sign.

Mr. G. N. Gordon said that they were just paying for light.

Mr. A. B. Colville, who is acting with Mr. Tilley for the Company, promised to submit the contracts and the question was temporarily laid over.

Construction tools, appliances and furniture were detailed down to a watering can valued at 50 cents.

Mr. Wallace Nesbitt facetiously inquired as to how the last figure was arrived at.

Mr. Jeffrey described a machine for thawing water services as an equipment which was practically all of second-hand material.

Again the Poles.

The pole yard was again visited. Mr. Jeffrey said he had gone over them twice. They were poles which the Company did not care to erect, and were either too crooked or rotten to be called good poles. Some could be used by cutting off five or ten feet at the butt ends, thus getting down to their sound parts. The Company allowed them to accumulate and purchased others rather than erect them.

Ten per cent. was allowed for overhead expenses, including insurance, legal, and travelling expenditures, etc. Nothing was allowed for contractors' profit. Mr. Jeffrey did not know of a single plant that had been erected by contract in Ontario. He added that Peterborough lost between $1,000 and $1,100 by the sale of their Hydro debentures below par.

Other details were passed upon and Mr. W. N. Tilley, the Company's counsel, began a cross-examination of the witness.

5,000,000 Germans To Be Exiled

Special Cable to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 18.—The report is in circulation here that, owing to the necessity to restrict food consumption, the German Government intends ordering five million Germans who possess independent incomes and are ineligible for military service to leave Germany for neutral countries and remain there until the war is over.

It is planned, according to the report, that 3,000,000 of these persons shall go to the Scandinavian countries, 1,000,000 to Holland, and 1,000,000 to Switzerland.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and aches and make you well again. 50 years."

THE PRIZE WINNERS IN THE EVENING EXAMINER CONTEST

The Evening Examiner feature for Dollar Day, the estimating of the number of coppers in the glass jar, created a considerable amount of interest, both in the city and with our rural route readers. The correct estimates being about equally divided between the city and country. No one estimated the exact number, but two were within one of it, and will divide first and second prizes equally. Mrs. Walmsley had but one estimate. Mr. Dickson had twelve estimates, and figured it out from all angles. Altogether The Examiner is greatly pleased with the results of its little feature for Dollar Day which was such a pronounced success.

The following is the list of the estimates and the amounts which may be obtained by those successful at the Examiner Office:

Mrs. Walmsley, 575 Aylmer street	3085
S. J. Dickson, R. R. No. 2	3085
Tie for first place and will divide first and second prizes, getting $8.50 each.
Yeates Bros., City, third	3017
I. Edgar, fourth	3043
Gordon Yeaman, 195 London	3080
E. Tremain, R. R. No. 4	3000
V. Magee, 376 George	3000
F. Scott, R. R. No. 1	3000
Ralph Cowan, 292 London	3000
Miss Finnemore, Stewarts Hall	3,000

All equal, will divide the last six prizes of a total of $9.00, and receive $1.50 each.

The amounts earned will be paid at any time at the Examiner Office.

Returned From The Battlefront

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 18.—The Kaiser returned yesterday from the eastern battle front and will proceed at once to Wilhelmshaven where he will confer with the Admiralty officials, according to advices reaching here to-day from Berlin.

PUBLIC INVITED

President R. A. Falconer of Toronto University, will address a public meeting in the Collegiate Hall on Friday night, to which the citizens are cordially invited. His subject will be "A Perversion of Loyalty" as it pertains to the Germans, and dealing as it does with a current subject of great importance, there should be a large attendance. President Falconer comes to Peterborough under the auspices of the Canadian Club. Mr. Duncan Walker, president of the club, will be chairman.

FRENCH COMMEND AMERICAN STAND

A Chours of Praise From the Principal Writers in the French Press

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Feb. 18.—America's reply to Germany's blockade notification has brought forth a chorus of praise from the principal writers in the French press. Even Mr. Georges Clemenceau, who hitherto has been disposed to criticise President Wilson, says the President has spoken the words the American people expected in such a way that Germany has no alternative but to back down.

Mr. Gabriel Hanotaux says in the Figaro:

"The American note to Germany is an act of high historic initiative and the first step toward the inevitable participation of neutrals in the great events which are dividing the world. President Wilson was obliged to pass from discussion to action. What do the measures mentioned in the note mean but that American war ships will fall upon German submarines attacking American ships in total disregard of America's sovereign rights? Either Germany can give in or she can disregard Washington's not and go on with her plan to force England to capitulate. Then President Wilson could not recede from his position."

The proposal made by Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador to the United States, that Germany would withdraw its blockade order if the impost of food was permitted by England arrived too late for comment, but the newspapers caption the announcement, "Official German Blackmail."

Artists Try To Obtain Release Of Celebrated Violinist

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The State Department will be asked to present to the Austrian government through the American Ambassador at Vienna, a petition for the release of Dr. Adolph Brodsky, the distinguished violinist, who is interned in an Austrian concentration camp. The petition is signed by fellow musicians, resident in this country, all of them prominent in their profession.

"Musicians of all nationalities and sympathies," says a statement issued to-night in behalf of the petitioners, "have taken an interest in this effort for one whom they recognize as a master in his art upon the ground that 'art is international,' but the signatures have been confined to those who are American citizens or resident in America, as it is intended to have the petition presented to the Austrian government through our State Department."

Although a Russian by birth, Dr. Brodsky is described as "really a produce of the Viennese schools and his imprisonment in the country which he regarded as his home is one of the bitterest inexplicable incidents of this cruel war." For some years he resided in the United States.

The petitioners state that Dr. Brodsky is in his sixty-fourth year, that his whole life has been devoted exclusively to his art, and that he cannot be regarded as a military or political factor. Admitting the right of the Austrian authorities "to do what they deem proper," the petitioners "profess reliance upon the reputation Austria-Hungary has earned as a generous patron of art and the artist."

Rafel Josefy, Victor Herbert, Josef Stransky, Rubin Goldmark, Professor Horatio Parker, Paolo Gallico, George W. Chadwick, Wallace Goodrich, Arthur Foote, David Bispham, Leo Schulz, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Alfred Hertz and Guilio Gatti-Casazza are among the signers.

Mr. John Garret, of Havelock, was in town last Tuesday.

Mr. John Huffman has returned to town.

Mr. Christie Andrews has opened a grocery in the Metcalfe block.

Mrs. Harry MacLachlan is visiting her cousin, Miss MacLachlan.

Mr. Albert Clysdale, of Lakefield, has been a guest of his sister, Mrs. Edwards.

The February meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church will be held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. B. W. Squire.

Mrs. Crowe and Miss Crowe, of Havelock, were in town on Friday.

Miss Zella Paget, of Havelock, visited Miss Pauline Wier on Friday and Saturday.

Mr. Frank McLeary, of Trent Bridge, has been spending a few days at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. J. Butterfield.

Mrs. Walter Fowlds, of Hastings, was in town on Friday.

On Friday evening, the operetta, "The Courtship of Miss Canada," was presented in the Town Hall, under the auspices of the Local Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, by eighty-seven Norwood people. The play, which was of a very patriotic nature, was attractive in every respect, also instructive and entertaining, and was patronized by a full house.

The following is an outline:

Act I.—The curtain rises with Miss Canada (Miss C. W. Waters) her provinces, and four little winds in position on platform. Miss Canada's address; four little winds sing and scatter maple leaves, then whirl off the stage; Canada and her provinces gradually take other positions and Canada mounts her throne; the provinces in turn bow to and address Canada and take their positions beside her; Cadet drill, after which Progress recites Canadian born; Weatherman and two cities; News army in song; Wheel drill, representing ten organized Societies of Women of Canada; Indian Maid pleading with Canada to free her from the Student who pursues her; Canada tells her that to be a child of hers she must be taught and tells the Student to take her and teach her; the Indian Maid submits; Drill of twelve cities; Winds return bearing messages from the Nations. Curtain falls with all in positions on the stage.

Act II.—The building of the Flag by Provinces, in which the crosses of St. Andrew, St. Patrick and St. George are explained; enter John Bull (Mr. Mills) with England, Ireland and Scotland; John Bull speaks and refers to Flag; Chorus (Hail King Geroge); solos A Song of Homeland (England); Killarney (Ireland); The Scottish Blue Bell (Scotland); Drill (Canada's bouquet) 8 little girls carrying bouquets of different kinds of flowers. At the close of drill each one recites and sits at Canada's feet. Four little winds return with the message that the "Nations are coming a-courting, a-courting, Fair Canada—you"; Herald announces each nation in turn; when all have arrived each in turn proposes; Chorus "Won't You Be My Sweetheart?" Canada thanks the nations for the honours they have shown, but tells them that she has decided to remain single—that she will be daughter in her mother's house, but mistress in her own; Nations decide the best place for them is home and with bowed heads leaves the scene; Provinces, etc., sing "What's the Matter with Father," and Canada's bouquet circle around John Bull.

Act III.—Indian Maid, with dying chief, bemoans loss of her country nd her people's glory; Canada, bowed in grief and remorse for her past, answers; three provinces speak encouraging words to her; Canada rising and returning to her throne, responds to their words and looking forward to a great future glories in her powers; an angel appears, rebuking Canada; in proud humility Canada dedicates herself, her talents, her joys, her girls, her boys, her manhood, womanhood, and her country, to God. All now are kneeling and "Holy, Holy, Holy" is sung.

"God Save the King."

The costumes to represent the different characters were splendid, and the performance throughout was beautiful and very spectacular. The proceeds amounted to $165. By request, it was repeated on Monday night, when $62 were realized.

Dr. and Mrs. Sutton were in Peterborough last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Puffer, of Havelock, were in town on Monday.

On Saturday night a hockey match was played on the Norwood rink between Campbellford and Norwood teams. The result was 8 to 1 in favour of the home team.

On Tuesday, February 16th, from 4 to 6 o'clock, a patriotic Tea was given by Mrs. K. G. Thomson and Mrs. Wilkinson, at the home of Mrs. K. G. Thomson, Ridge street. Admission 15 cents.

Inspector Lees was in town on Monday.

Miss C. Calder, of Campbellford, was home on Monday.

Mr. Casement, of Lakefield, was in town this week.

Quite a large number from Hastings, Westwood, Indian River, Campbellford and Havelock, attended the operetta on Monday evening.

Mr. James Calder was in Peterborough this week.

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. Orpha Turner, 421 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

GERMAN FIELD KITCHENS

Motor Vehicles Haul the Cook Ovens Around After the Army

All civilized nations have long recognised that food supplies play almost as important a part in the winning or losing of battles as ammunition, marksmanship, or personal bravery. The Germans have not failed to appreciate this point, and their methods of feeding soldiers are scientifically carried out under the direction of dietetic specialists, who have devoted years to the study of food requirements of fighting men.

The daily ration includes 36 ounces of fresh bread or 17 ounces of biscuit, 13 ounces of fresh meat or 7 ounces of smoked meat, 4 ounces of rice or 8 ounces of flour or 52 ounces of potatoes, 1 ounce of salt, nearly 1 ounce of roasted coffee or one-tenth of an ounce of tea, and half an ounce of sugar.

For cooking food the Germans use ingenious field kitchens. These are attached to motor vehicles which follow the troops from point to point. The kitchens are fitted with every modern appliance to be found in an up-to-date culinary establishment, and they enable the raw food to be well cooked and served up hot to the men, thereby warming them better than cold tinned foods. When these portable kitchens go astray, however, as they often do, the German soldiers are in a sorry plight, as raw coffee or tea or rice is of little use. Probably this is why the Kaiser's troops often fall back on a diet of maize and horseflesh, unappetising edibles which have been found in large quantities in the knapsacks of German prisoners.

How Kaiser Got Calais

The Kaiser made a sorry boggle of the rush on Calais and the French coast. So the Kaiser found a simpler way to reach his proudly advertised goal. He called the name of Ostend Kalee—the German for Calais.—London Express.

The campaign which produced the most V.C.'s was the Indian Mutiny, in which 182 were won.

ITALY AVOIDS THE

She Refuses To Join Neutrals To Protest Against Blockade.

ROME, Feb. 17.—Rome has refused to join the proposed league of neutral powers with the object of the common defence of neutral shipping against Germany's threatened blockade of British ports. This refusal is on the grounds that Italy is fully prepared to defend her own shipping unaided. Besides, she is determined to retain complete freedom of action. It is further suspected that the proposed league, which originated in Scandinavia, is not disinterested, since it is intended to assure the prolonged neutrality of European naval powers, and also possibly that of America. The Italian Government has formally notified Germany that Italy will not tolerate acts of war against Italian shipping, which the Government considers is unwarranted.

The prevailing impression here is that Germany's reply, which is imminent, will be conciliatory and complications are unlikely, but naturally the slightest incident in regt to lead to serious issues.

AFTER GERMAN TRADE

Canada Can Cut In on the Market For Coal Tar Products

Most of the coal tar products that have in the past been imported from Germany in large quantities, will in all probability now be made in Canada. It has been discovered that most of them, can be obtained as a by-product from the lignites found along the Canadian Northern Railway in Saskatchewan, which when properly handled will form one of the main fuel supplies of the province.

A review of the trade of the past few years, shows that Canada and the United States have been bringing in tar products valued at the point of export at over twelve million dollars, which probably cost double that amount by the time they reached the consumer. Amongst the most important of these commodities are wood preservatives, paraffin, analine dyes and various antiseptics. Millions of gallons of creosoting oils for preserving timber and ties have been imported by Canada and the United States.

As the German supply is cut off it can readily be understood that this is a golden opportunity for the development of a large trade in these products, which can undoubtedly be obtained from lignite at a lower cost than they are being laid down at present.

Shot, Plucking a Duck

A sergeant was wounded in the following remarkable circumstances: He was not in the firing line at the time, but was engaged in plucking a duck, off which his commanding officer was to dine. Suddenly a German shell burst close by, and the sergeant was wounded in the head and back, which brought to an end his attack on that duck!

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make it Thick, Glossy, Wavy, Luxuriant and Remove All Dandruff

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this — moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

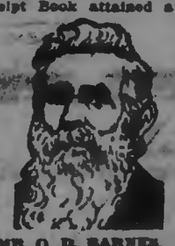
Was Personally Attended by Dr. A. W. Chase

Before He Became Famous as the Author of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.



MR. O. D. BARNES.

Here is a letter from an aged gentleman who consulted Dr. Chase, long before his Receipt Book attained a world - wide circulation or his family medicines became known to the ends of the earth.

Like most people of advanced years his kidneys were the first organs to break down and when doctors failed to help him he remembered the physician who cured him of pleurisy in his younger days.

Mr. O. D. Barnes, R.F.D. 1, Byron, Mich., writes:—"About fifty years ago, when living in Ann Arbor, Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, was called on to treat me for pleurisy. Ever since that I have used and recommended Dr. Chase's Medicines, and have two of his Receipt Books in the house.

"Some time ago a cold settled in the kidneys, causing backache, frequent urination, dizziness, and affected the eyesight. My appetite failed and I could not sleep nights. Two doctors failed to do me any lasting good, so I started using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. The results have been highly satisfactory to me. Appetite improved, I gained in weight, sleep and rest well, and feel strong and well. My kidneys resumed their natural functions, and I believe that my cure was due to Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. I am 78 years old, superintend work on my farm, and can walk in and do some work myself."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Impossible

By Jean Mahan Plank

"WELL,"—she paused to bite off the yarn,—"I'm restin it.—Mr. Jones, if you're goin' to bring in them oyster cans and open 'em fer us you might as well do it now and git it done.—You see, after I carry an armful o' wood up-stairs to our room at Mrs. Stowell's house I don't stand there and hold it. I lay it on the fire, and I don't waste no time worryin' fer fear the flames won't know how to lick up them sticks, either.—Pa,"—she was addressing the Elder himself now,—"you go out and see if the snow has gathered on them steps, an' if it has you take that there broom behind the counter and sweep 'em off. We don't want all them folks tumblin' and breakin' their necks right at the door."

"'All them folks!'" muttered Miss Ayres. "I don't know who they be."

"After I've done what I see to do," continued Mrs. MacNally as if she hadn't heard, "I just drop it into the Lord's hands. And I don't think about it any more. If I go 'round stewin' and worryin' I just keep things upset. But when I give up and stay quiet and think about sothething else, why, it always comes out just right, and a sight better too than I could plan it out.—Say, some o' you folks that's got charge o' the coffee, you better see that it ain't goin' to boil over."

The women all started and ran toward the cook stove which Mr. Kent had put up for us at the back of the store. I moved over to the chair next Mrs. MacNally and snuggled up to the lean, shiny-silk shoulder. I longed for something strong on which to rest my aching heart.

Well, Miss Gertie!" she welcomed me as she adjusted the scant headdress upon her tightly knotted heir.

"But suppose the thing you want," I said in a low voice, "is something—something impossible. Something that isn't exactly wrong to want, because it really is yours, you know that it is, yet it has been made impossible to you. What good will it do to pray for such—" my voice broke, and my head went down upon Mrs. MacNally's shoulder.

She kept on darning, but her "Hum, hum!" was full of sympathy. She seemed to be thinking. "There ain't no such thing," she presently broke out. "What's yours is yours, and nothin' on earth can take it from you. Besides, the Lord can do anything. We can't see how: we're too blind and foolish. But if I felt and knew that the moon belonged to me I wouldn't do any worryin'. I'd just pray, and say right out loud that the One that told me to want the moon knew how to give it to me. And then I'd just go on lightin' candles until He saw fit to give me the moon."

I sat up and dried my eyes. I gazed at Mrs. MacNally as the pagans of old must have gazed at the shrine of the oracle which had given them a convincing message.

My oracle arose at a call from one of the women, and with the darning needle in her mouth went to test the coffee.

I slipped to the back of the store where it was dark, and looked out through a window up into the wintry sky. After I had stood there in silence a few minutes I went back to the tables and said with enthusiasm:

"Now I want to work. I wish someone would come to be served. Give me that biggest tray! Here, Mrs. MacNally, I'm going to carry the heavy things. You take the little side dishes."

My oracle looked at me for an instant with her face set in grim lines; then she wagged her head. "You're a good 'un!" she snapped.

During the next hour a few business men came in to supper, with now and then one of the more venture some from among the wives of the townsmen. But by half past seven it was difficult for the most hopeful of us to keep our faces from reflecting our flagging spirits. Mrs. MacNally ordered us all to take a drink of coffee, and we were just emptying the cups when our leader suddenly sat up very straight. She made me think of my uncle's pointer.

"What on earth's that?" she demanded of nobody in particular.

We hushed our talk. We heard a rhythmic hum of distant voices. An occasional shout from the untrained throat of a man rang through the frosty air. Nearer and nearer came the sounds, among which we could distinguish bursts of laughter.

As we sat, breathless and wondering, the store door was thrown open. Tramp, tramp, tramp! Through the opening came three carloads of hungry soldier boys from that blockaded south-bound train. Shaking the snow from their shoulders and confiscating the tables, the counters, and every available sitting place, they looked like angels to me.

We forgot ourselves and fairly flew to the work, of which we found plenty. I rushed into the thick of the serving over by the coal stove. Nothing seemed too much to do. Mrs. MacNally was so cool and comfortable as if she were dispensing pancakes to her own little family. She even found time to joke.

"Say, you girls, don't you be falling in love with that there young captain with the shinin' epaulets on his square shoulders! He is awful good-lookin'."

I seized my big tray and set it upon a serving table. The boys were chanting:

Pass some soup,
Pass some soup,
Pass some soup—soup—soup!

I lifted a heavy tureen and set it upon my tray. It was well, however, that I did not lift the whole burden, for just at that instant the broad-shouldered young captain strode up between the tables to take the seat to which Mrs. MacNally was beckoning him. He turned toward me and I glanced at him. Our eyes met.

The hardware store and its hospitable appointments disappeared. We stood alone, he and I, gazing spell bound, unbelieving. I think I knew then what it would be to come awake in heaven.

How we crossed the intervening space I never knew, but I found myself wrapped in his arms, and sobbing out my heart upon his.

"Tom—Tom—Tom!"

He raised my head and looked at me staringly.

"Why, Gertie, darling! How—where—" then a flash lit his dear blue eyes. "Why did you run away from me? Your folks would not tell—"

At that I remembered the reason I had run, and I drew swiftly back. My own eyes were blazing now.

"Where is your wife?" I asked coily.

He dropped his arms and stared harder than before. Then he burst into a laugh and seized me again.

"Oh, you little goose! Did you see that notice? Why, it was Tom L. Didn't you know that he had been mooning about Miss Roberts for a year? Oh, my poor darling!"

My head went down again. I had forgotten Tom's third cousin, whom I scarcely knew, indeed having seen him only twice.

I felt my sleeve pulled, then my shoulder was given a vigorous shake.

"My land, child," Mrs. MacNally was saying, "listen to them boys! They're all starving, and they're laughing at you, too."

As I started back, a lusty youth arose to his feet and shouted:

"Three cheers for Captain Keane and the girl he left behind him!"

The cheers rang out, and then they all broke into the familiar song. I turned to run away, but my oracle had fast hold of me.

"Here, them boys at yon far table want the cream. You take it to 'em." Then she added under her breath: "I guess you and me've both found out something about 'the impossible' to-night. I been countin' noses, and we'll make a hundred and thirty-eight dollars. Our lot is more than paid fer."

I pressed her hand and seized the tray. A chanting appeal rose above the clamor:

Want some cream,
Want some cream,
Want some cream—cream—cream!

In spite of the merry glances I must encounter, I didn't mind serving those boys. There was even a touch of motherly feeling in my heart as I went about the tables. Their mischief, too, was tempered by respect, for they knew as well as I that I was going to be their captain's wife.

So I was, the very next day, with dear Elder MacNally blessing us. Tom would have it so, for any time the thaw might come and the train go on its way.

Strange it was that whereas Tom had felt that he must conceal from me as long as possible that he was training this company—so tenderly had I always been handled—he now found his wife buckling on his sword and actually smiling through her white lips.

Although I then entered upon a new phase of suffering—as any soldier's wife will understand—yet there was this difference: The first suffering I had instinctively known was not mine: it was a false condition into which I had plunged myself through my own vain and selfish will. The new suffering was beautiful, sweet and tender, for it came from the hand of God.

As I finished writing the last lines the library curtains parted and old Jim tiptoed to the grate and gave the logs a poke.

"Gen'l Tom jes' come in, Miss Gertie."

"Oh, is the General through with his gardening, Jim? I wish you would ask him to come in here when he can. I want to show him something."

Jim's white coat disappeared. I reached for a check book. What fun for Tom and me to help that church—whose material body we have never seen, yet whose spirit is so closely related to ours—to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary!—Farm and Fireside.

HEART WOULD PALPITATE.
HAD WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

Palpitation of the heart is one of the most common of all heart troubles. The heart will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over the system accompanied by weak and dizzy spells, making you feel that you are surely going to die. When you feel this way what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will strengthen the weak heart and build up the nerve system. For this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better within a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood and finds great relief in using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

How To Get Rid of a Bad Cough

A Home-Made Remedy that Will Do It Quickly. Cheap and Easily Made

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so. Even whooping cough is greatly relieved in this way.

The above mixture makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the finest cough syrup that money could buy—at a cost of only 54 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough in a way that is really remarkable. It also quickly heals the inflamed membranes which accompany a painful cough, and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. Excellent for bronchitis, spasmodic croup and winter coughs. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children like it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex,"—do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

UNDER WATER AND IN AIR

Lieut. Porte Studied Both Branches of Warfare—Likes Flying Best

On the shoulders of Squadron-Commander Porte, the young Irish aviator, rests much of the responsibility of guarding London from attack by the Kaiser's aircraft. He is in control of the Naval Flying Base at Hendon Aerodrome.

When aviation first loomed on the horizon of practical affairs, Commander Porte was a distinguished officer in the submarine service. Flying gripped his imagination, and he and a few brother officers built a glider and experimented with it at Portsmouth, sustaining many bruises, and running up formidable bills for repairs. These experiences made the young naval officer more determined than ever to take up aviation, and eventually he journeyed to France and learned to handle an aeroplane at Rheims.

Having to resign from the navy owing to ill-health, he devoted himself entirely to the science of flying, and speedily built up a reputation as a daring pilot. During the last two or three years he has flown in company with the cleverest British and continental pilots at Hendon Aerodrome, and the great 100-horsepower machine carried him to victory in many air races.

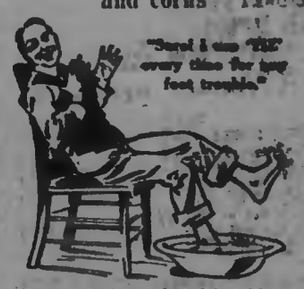
On one occasion Commander Porte was the victim of a dastardly outrage. An unknown person placed a bolt in the engine of his aeroplane, which almost resulted in the young Irishman meeting with a terrible death. Commander Porte took his aeroplane aloft with a passenger, and reached a height of 500 feet before the crippled engine smashed itself to pieces in mid-air. The lieutenant kept his nerve, and by skilful airmanship succeeded in gliding down in safety. The engine of his machine was minutely examined, and it was found that a strange bolt had been inserted into one of the cylinders. The piece of metal was not part of the mechanism of the engine, and had obviously been inserted by some person who bore a grudge against the pilot of the machine.

Commander Porte gained prominence just before the war by trying out a new type of aeroplane, with a view to flying across the Atlantic from Newfoundland to the coast of Ireland. He is probably the only naval man on record who has served his country under the water and in the air, for he has come from the submarine service to the air service.

"TIZ" FOR ACHING, SORE, TIRED FEET

"TIZ" for tender, puffed-up, burning, calloused feet and corns.



You can be happy-footed just like me. Use "TIZ" and never suffer with tender, raw, burning, blistered, swollen, tired, smelly feet. "TIZ" and only "TIZ" takes the pain and soreness out of corns, callouses and bunions.

As soon as you put your feet in a "TIZ" bath, you just feel the happiness soaking in. How good your poor, old feet feel. They want to dance for joy. "TIZ" is grand. "TIZ" instantly draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause sore, inflamed, aching, sweaty, smelly feet.

Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" at any drug store or department store. Get instant foot relief. Laugh at foot sufferers who complain. Because your feet are never, never going to bother or make you limp any more.

Russian Military Marvel

The new Napoleon that the war produced is oddly enough a Russian. He is General Russky. It was Russky who led the Russians against Lemberg, and through his strategy and perseverance the city fell. General Russky is sixty years of age, but a man of aggressiveness and power. He is beloved by his men, who, regardless of the hard driving he gives them, worship him.

His own feats on the battlefield—he is a veteran of two wars—have made him one of the most famous of Russians. He served as a lieutenant in the Russo-Turkish War, and was decorated for gallantry. When the Russo-Japanese War broke out he was sent to the front as chief of staff of the second Manchurian army.

The Kaiser a "Big Noise"

Pharaoh is described in the Old Testament as "a great noise," said Ven. Archdeacon Cody at a war prayer service in Toronto. "There has been more than one 'great noise' since that day. No matter how great may be the military monster, the great noise will pass away, but the word of the prophet will remain."

"CASCARETS" BELIEVE SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Move Acids, Gases and Clogged Waste From Liver and Bowels

Get a 10-cent box now.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, dizziness and sick headache, means a disordered stomach, which can not be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

CONCERNING CHEESE.

The very best way to cut soft or crumbly cheese is with a stout white linen thread, as this cuts perfectly, without the least bit of waste. The more crumbly a cheese is the more easily it is digested.

If buying a considerable quantity of cheese, first test a little piece by melting it in a little milk in a double boiler. If it assumes a granulated appearance it is the right sort to buy. But if it gets tough and stringy, it lacks nutriment and will be indigestible. To keep cheese moist that is in daily use, wrap it in a moist cloth, then cover and set away in a cool place.

Cheese may be kept in a perfect state for a long time by smearing them over with a coating of melted suet, or by covering them with parchment that has been made pliable by soaking in water.

For grating, the dairy cheeses will be found the best. They have the richest flavour for cooking.

A piece of fresh Parmesan cheese grated at home is far better in flavour and stronger than that purchased in the bottles ready grated.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat, Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The waist illustrated shows both possibilities, and the pattern is therefore extremely practical. The set-in sleeve may be made full length with straight cuff, or elbow length with a turn-back cuff. Silk or wash material may be used, plain or figured, and the best effect can be obtained without the use of trimming, except for collar and cuffs. The pattern, No. 7,017, comes in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

German Crown Princess Says Women of Europe Are United Against War

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—"After all, is it not the women and the children who are the real sufferers in war? Theirs is the suspense, theirs the dread of the casualty list, theirs the alternating hope, fear and despair if father, husband or brother is among the missing. The future to them may hold gloom and poverty. Theirs never can be the glory."

It was the Crown Princess Cecilie, future Empress of Germany, who was talking. In the the Cecilian House, the beautiful $400,000 building of the Fatherland's Women's Association in Charlottenburg, I met here. She was occupied, as she has been every day since the war, acting as an angel of mercy, comforting the wounded and aiding their women and children.

"Europe is one vast hospital," she continued. "Isn't it a pity—such a pity? How happy your American women should be. Happy mothers, happy wives, happy sisters. There is none of the heartaches and miseries of war. They have none of the suspense that is ours. Yet to them alone is denied the lesson of self-sacrifice, the unselfish and loving ministrations to the wounded, whether our own or the enemy, the doing of something for the Fatherland. Our German women have arisen nobly."

In the Cecilian House are centralized ten departments of sociological work, including the feeding of a large number of poor children, furnishing pure milk, giving practical courses in housekeeping, conducting kitchens where the poor can get food at nominal prices and depots for visiting nurses and the like. Here the Crown Princess has centralized her activities and especially does she take an interest in the great hospital wards.

The Crown Princess was simply dressed. She is tall, graceful of movement, of the type that is best described as "chic." There is neither pose nor stiffness about her manner. Her brown eyes dance with animation and vivacity. She is a brunette and more of the "international" type than German. Her mother was a Russian Grand Duchess and she is a relative of the Tsar. She speaks German, French, English and Russian.

When I was presented to her by Captain Jackman, she said:

"I understand that you were with my husband at S——, and that you were able to enter the forward trenches. That must have been interesting."

Chats With Soldiers.

The Crown Princess passed into the large festival hall and lecture room, which has now been transformed into a hospital. The first cot she stopped at was occupied by a soldier whose shoulder had been shattered with shrapnel. As she skilfully drew from the wounded man the story of his ordeal he glanced with pride at his iron cross pinned above his cot on the "fever chart."

The Crown Princess inquired about his family and, learning that he had a wife and three children, gave him a bouquet of flowers and a picture of herself and her children as a keepsake.

The majority of the soldiers in the ward were serious cases, and the Crown Princess, accompanied by Frau Excellenz von Alvensleben, and followed by an attendant carrying a great basket filled with flowers, passed on from cot to cot.

At the bedside of the newcomers she would sit down and chat. Her easy manner bespoke compassion and her big brown eyes beamed with unaffected sympathy. To the badly wounded she gave flowers and photographs. To the convalescent she gave cigarettes.

"You would like to know something about the role of the German women in this war," said the Crown Princess when she finally had completed her visitations. "Our women are playing a big and important role. They are voluntarily mobilized for the Fatherland and, as unselfishly and heroically as the men, they are playing their part.

Women's Roles Varied.

"The men fight; the women minister and work. With the Red Cross they console and help widows, care for the wounded, work in the gardens and in the field and anywhere a pair of hands are needed. Even the women in the kitchen are playing an important role and are proving a big factor in this war. With the talk of attempts to starve us out who can say what the hausfrau in the kitchen may not contribute to German's success by new, rigid and systematic economy in food; by planting, raising, canning and preserving large quantities of vegetables and fruits?"

"The German women are heroically giving their all — father, husband, brother—their own strength, work, and services, all—all for the Fatherland. But in the privacy of their own rooms they sometimes weep."

"In your opinion, your Highness, are the German women favourable to the war?"

"I do not believe that any true German mother or wife was for the war or can be. Yet there comes a time when war is unavoidable—when an unwelcome war is forced upon a nation, and German women are mothers of sons who are or who have been soldiers. They knew and realized as perhaps the women of no other country knew and realized, with the possible exception of France what war really meant to them before it came. That they gave freely of their sons to the Fatherland when it was in danger has been shown and is being shown daily. But that they wanted war—ask any mother or German wife."

As I touched upon the attempts being made to engender hatred between the warring nations the Crown Princess remarked:

She Deprecates Hatred.

"Isn't love of Fatherland a great enough motive for fighting, dying if needs be, working or ministering for that Fatherland? Why add hatred to it?"

The Crown Princess praised the generosity and kindness of America to the women and children of all of the warring nations, and especially expressed appreciation over the Christmas gifts sent to Germany.

"I hope they never may be, but I am certain that if your country should be plunged into war, the American women, whom I found so vivacious, charming and beautiful, and of whose interest and work for public welfare I have heard so much, will prove as noble, self-sacrificing and heroic as have been our German women," she added.

She declared that none of her babies had seen their father since the war began.

"The children miss him," she said, "but he has not been back here in Berlin since the war began. He believes that his place is with his army."

Buried In Mud By a Shell

Pte. Harrison Was Wounded and is Confined in a Hospital at Aberdeen, Scotland

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—Believing her husband, Henry Harrison, a private with the Princess Patricias, was still in the firing line in France, and to receive a letter from Aberdeen, Scotland, where he is confined in the hospital with an injured back and suffering from illness, was the surprise that Mrs. Harrison, of 345 Gladstone Avenue, got when she received a letter from her husband to-day.

Harrison is confined in a military hospital in Aberdeen. In a letter he states that while holding a mound in the advanced trenches along with four other of his comrades a German shell ploughed its way into the earth near where they were hiding, throwing the five men some distance. Harrison was hurled on his back and buried in mud. It took some time to extricate him, his comrades working for half an hour under artillery fire.

"Whoever handled the gun and did the sighting had bad eyes," writes Harrison. "I can't understand why the German gunners failed to get us. It was a miracle we weren't all finished on the spot. After an hour's hard work we freed ourselves and managed to crawl back to our lines. It was terrible, crawling on our hands and knees through mud and water with bullets and shells whistling about."

The first notification that Mrs. Harrison got about her husband's injury was in the letter. She received no notification from the military authorities at Ottawa and cannot understand why she was not notified.

"Here I was wondering and worrying how Henry was. Every day I looked for a letter and fearing for the worst. Now that he is in the hospital my anxiety is somewhat relieved. What I cannot understand is why they took Mr. Harrison away up to Aberdeen, over 200 miles from his relatives who live in the Midlands."

Mrs. Harrison has asked the Ottawa authorities to assist her in getting her husband near his relatives. If this cannot be done, she says she will sail for Scotland so that she can be by her husband.

"There were two hundred in the hospital train that I came over on," writes Harrison, "but none of them were taken to the Aberdeen hospital. I don't know why they moved me up here. It is so lonely. I envy the other soldiers, when their friends come to see them. Nobody comes to talk to me, and it is so lonely."

No Trouble to Remove Superfluous Hair

(Toilet Tips)

It is an easy matter to rid the skin of objectionable hair or fuzz, if you proceed as follows: Mix a paste with some water and a little powdered delatone, apply to hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method is absolutely safe; throw the delatone away, does not stain the skin, but to avoid disappointment be certain to get real delatone.

Newspaper Hospitality.

The Metropole of Antwerp, whose premises were burned by the Huns the day after the city fell, has received from a British newspaper the same hospitality that the British nation has tendered to the Belgian refugees. It is now appearing as a page supplement of The Standard—an arrangement which will enable The Metropole to give the refugees a complete service of late war news. It promises its readers the "latest news of Belgium," and is printed in French.

MISSIONS IN WAR TIME

Time of Crisis Arouses Spirit of Generosity—Preacher's Appeal

Dr. J. Campbell White of New York, leader of the Laymen's Missionary Movement in the United States, wants Canada to more than maintain recent standards in missionary giving. Addressing meetings of students and business men in Toronto he urged that the Canadian churches proceed to go on a war footing in the sending of men and money to the foreign fields. In spite of the financial stringency and pressing national obligations he advised all Christians to make united effort to put the missionary enterprise on a permanent footing so that no crisis would again interfere with the great missionary task.

"The mission boards have been going from year to year on a hand-to-mouth sort of financing and the church members have never decided for themselves that the missionary cause is vital and comes first; we see this now for the first time and must act upon it now," urged Dr. White.

"In the last six years the missionary output of Canada has been doubled; the number of workers has increased from under 400 to over 700. Canada has been asked to spare 1,000 men to perform her part in the conversion of the forty million people allotted to her, but this country signifies her willingness to send out a hundred times that number to fight the battles of her earthly king and empire," he added.

"At the close of the Civil War one of the American mission boards, after maintaining its work, found itself with a bank balance of $400,000, and it has never had as large a balance since the war had so aroused the generous spirit of the people," declared the speaker.

"Every day the war costs more than Christendom is spending in a year to Christianize humanity!" concluded Dr. White who is the statistician among missionary leaders.

Be an Optimist

Every optimist in Canada ought to take a pessimist in charge. The cheerful man should gently lead the disciple of calamity to some quiet corner, and there impart to him as kindly as only the true optimist can, the knowledge that this country will still be distinctly visible on any good map of the world when peace is concluded in Berlin.—Saturday Sunset, Vancouver.

The Allies Are Making Progress

Berlin Has To Admit Reverses

GERMANS ADMIT THEY SUFFERED MATERIAL REVERSES IN ARGONNE

Village of Nouay and Hills Surrounding it Evacuated ---Allies Are Making Material Progress and Are Holding Firmly All the Ground They Have Gained

GERMANY'S NOTE TO THE UNITED STATES

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—(Via wireless.)—The German war office admitted to-day a material reverse in the Argonne region. It states that the village of Norray and the hill commanding it, previously captured from the French, were evacuated in the face of a superior force. Before leaving the German troops are declared to have destroyed with dynamite the entrenchments that had been constructed by the French. Very heavy fighting continues to the north of Rheims, about Lille and Arras and to the north of Perthes, where the French and British have succeeded in penetrating the German treaches, only to be driven back later. The series of battles is constantly increasing in intensity, and German reports declare that the enemy is losing men very heavily.

PARIS, February 18.—(French official.)—In the fighting in the woods around Cheppy, the French troops strongly supported by concealed artillery, forced their lines forward to-day. A large section of wooded territory was cleared of the German forces, the enemy suffering severe losses.

In the same sort of fighting south of Bois des Forges, the French advanced their lines a quarter of a mile, and holding the German line of trenches resisted all attempts to dislodge them by the reinforced German infantry.

Artillery duels in the neighborhood of the Aisne and Rheims continued. The official word from the war office was that the allies' batteries had gained "a clear advantage" in this interchange. It was also stated that an advance of several hundred feet had been made north of Malancourt. "All our previous gains have been maintained," was stated in the official communique this afternoon.

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—(Via Amsterdam.)—The text of the German reply to the United States protest against the submarine blockade was made public to-day, and it is as expected a firm reiteration of the German claim that her action is a legitimate retaliation against English methods. In tone the answer is especially friendly to the United States, but it is carefully set forth that Germany took steps she did only after mature deliberation and "because the English measures are a violation of the accepted principles of international law." The German government is declared to be in "accord with the United States that it is in a high degree desirable to avoid misunderstandings which might arise from measures announced by the German admiralty." It is stated that Germany at all times has adhered to the valid international rules of warfare, and agreed at the very outset of the war to ratify the principles of the declaration of London. Germany is declared to be cut off from her overseas supplies by silent or protesting tolerance of the neutral nations, both as regards conditional and actual contraband of war, while Great Britain is with toleration of neutral governments supplied with both.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 18.—Word was received here to-day of serious riots in Schonaburg, a suburb of Berlin, as a result of a shortage of potatoes. The municipality announced that it would conduct a sale of potatoes at cheap prices. Thousands of women and children lined up for hours in a pouring rain in front of the municipal buildings. Finally an official appeared and announced that the potatoes would only be delivered on production of previously issued receipts. The bedraggled women, who were suffering severely from the cold, became furious and assaulted the officials, soundly thrashing them. The municipal building was both partly wrecked before the police arrived and dispersed the crowd.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 18.—In connection with the Zeppelin L—3 which broke down off the Island of Fanoe yesterday, it was announced to-day that the Danish government had ordered two officers and fourteen men, members of the crew, interned until the end of the war. The big dirigible was completely destroyed by fire after she had been landed, presumably started by the crew to prevent construction secrets becoming known.

DOLLAR DAY WAS SUCCESS OF BEST KIND

Merchants Had a Big Day and Citizens Generally Are Satisfied With the Opportunities They Had

CITY A SHOPPING CENTRE

Peterborough's second dollar day yesterday was an unqualified success in every particular. The merchants generally report a big day's business, the customers are satisfied that for them too it was a big day, and from the standpoint of Peterborough as a whole, there will be lasting effects. Such enterprises as yesterday's bringing before the people of the district the resources of Peterborough's stores cannot fail to keep Peterborough in every one's mind as a shopping centre par excellence. There were people here yesterday from all sections of the Midland District. They bought largely, and went home delighted with their purchases and with the treatment they received. That there were genuine bargains in every store in the city is undoubted. A dollar went a long way yesterday in Peterborough, and judging by the number put in circulation, the hard times cry received a jolt. Everybody seemed to have something to spend and the streams of home-bound shoppers laden with parcels made one forget that half the world's at war and financial conditions are bad. The merchants are to be congratulated upon the success of dollar day. Its benefits are not to be judged solely by the cash taken in over the counters yesterday, although that was considerable. The effects will be long continued.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles--Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The question of constructing a sewer on Bethune Street has been shelved for another week. The matter came up at last night's meeting of the Board of Works, but owing to the absence of Aldermen Johnson and McIntyre who are intersted, it was laid over for another meeting.

The Estimates.

The estimates for the Board of Works Department are ready for the pruning knife. As there is very little difference from last year it is not likely they will be reduced to any appreciable extent. Only bare necessities have been provided for. The amount is in the neighbourhood of thirty thousand dollars.

Work For Unemployed.

The appropriation for the Board of Works Department represents the largest payroll of any department in the city. It means that nearly the whole amount will be spent in wages. An effort will be made to have civic work open up as early as circumstances will permit.

More Poles.

Permission has been granted to the Bell Telephone Company to erect seven poles on Bolivar Street. The street is already favoured with two lines of poles, namely, those of the Otonabee Power Company and the line formerly owned by the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

Kingston, London, Berlin and Waterloo sent peace centenary greetings to many points in the United States.

Estimates Reduced.

The Hamilton Board of Education yesterday decided to cut $7,200 off the school estimates for the year.

PETERBOROUGH FAMILY DOING ITS SHARE FOR THE EMPIRE

PTE. HEBER ROGERS, With the Machine Gun Section, 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, First Contingent.

The above photographs show the two soldier sons of Mr. R. B. Rogers, Hunter Street east. Lieut. Rogers was on the engineering staff of the C.P.R. and Pte. Rogers a student at the local Collegiate.

THE FIRST CONTINGENT

Lieut. C. H. Ackerman, with the First Canadian Overseas Contingent, writing from Salisbury Plain to his parents here, encloses some very interesting poetry. Lieut. Ackerman says:

I am enclosing some poetry that Sir Kanneth McKenzie wrote and gave to me while I was at Wishford. I have the original, and the other day he mailed me a copy of a Salisbury paper all neatly printed. I gave him the nick-names of the different regiments and he wrote it up after the style of Kipling."

(Copyright. All Rights Reserved.

I wonder what our mothers would say if they could see us now
Covered with mud from head to foot, wallowing through the slough;
Up to our knees in the slime and slush on the roads of Salisbury Plain.
We used to be Stratheonas once,
Argylls, Seaforths, and Gordons once,
Lisgar Rifles, and Queen's Own once,
Now we're labelled "Canadian."

We volunteered for the C.O.E.F. directly the war began
Chucked our billets in works and stores, off to enlist we ran;
Left our life on the plains and wood, the trails of Saskatchewan.
We used to belong to the "Mounties" (1) once,
Northumberland Rifles (Cobourg), and Royal Scots once,
The R.C.D.'s (2) and the Nineteenth (3) once,
Now we're simply "Canadian."

They sent us straight to Valcartier Camp where all the Brigades were formed,
Met the men from East and West, who in their thousands swarmed;
All of them filled with one desire to go to Old England's aid.
Men who were Simcoe Foresters once,
Peterborough Rangers and Light Horse once,
Montreal Heavies (4) and Grenadiers (5) once;
Battalions to form a Brigade.

Men in all walks of life met there, millionaires, "stony-brokes," clerks,
Merchants, shopmen, lawyers, and some ministers straight from their kirks;
Ranchers, pressmen, doctors, and all to King George's call not deaf.
Men who had been York Rangers once,
Fort Garrys, Borderers, Ninetieths (6) once,
The "Hunger and Thirst Boosiliers" (7) once,
To join in the C.O.E.F.

Though thousands had served as soldiers before, many had not had that boon;
We taught them their drill from "Right about face!" to—"At the halt on the left—form platoon!"
And those who could not a commission get fell right into place in the ranks;

Men who'd been heads of departments once,
Sons of the wealthy and pottent once,
Sinking all social positions at once,
For Duty's sake, asking no thanks.

We trained in camp, then sailed in the fleet to England's shores,
Horse and Foot, with guns complete, some thirty-three thousand or more;
Keen for the work that lies ahead, eager to do our share.
To scrap with the German bullies once,
Help to avenge the Belgians once,
Join the Imperial forces at once
And show what for death we care!

But K. of K. keeps us on Salisbury Plain, and we're getting all slack and stale
Though "we lack the discipline Regulars have," this idleness we bewail;
The months pass by, and we'll lose the zest that we had for a trench to man.
To join the Allies in France at once,
To try our "Rosses" on Germans once,
Flesh our blades in the bounders once,
For aren't we Canadian?

THE CITY HAS A MANDATORY ORDER FROM THE BOARD

Authorizing the Construction of the Outfall Sewer as Far as the Intersection of Lock and King George Streets.

ALL DOUBT REMOVED

That the city is in receipt of the mandatory order from the Provincial Board of Health authorizing the construction of the outfall sewer as outlined by City Engineer Parsons, was brought out at last night's meeting of the Board of Works. This order confirms what Ald. Green previously stated, regarding the construction of the sewer up to the point where the collecting station will be located, namely, at the intersection of Lock and King George Street. The order referred to above removes any doubt as to where the pumping station will be located, and paves the way for the continuance of the work, such as the city is pursuing at the present time.

Dissenting Members Absent.

Ald. Green regretted the absence of Aldermen Johnston and McIntyre as they had seen fit to question the advisability of the city continuing the work on King George Street until such time as a site for the pumping or collecting station had been decided upon. At that time, Ald. Green, as chairman of the Board of Works, assured the Council that the city was working hand in hand with the Provincial Board of Health and nothing would be undertaken without the official confirmation of the Board. This statement was supplemented at last night's meeting of the Board of Works by the following, which was received from Dr. W. S. McCullough of the Provincial Board of Health.

The Cheapest Route.

The communication reads as follows:

"Pursuant to our conference this morning re sewer extension work which is proceeded with on King George Street, I beg to officially inform you that the question of sewage collection was considered and a mandatory order issued by the Board on September 4th, 1914, advising the municipality to proceed with the work as outlined by your engineer, the sewage to be collected at a point being the intersection of Lock and King George Street. At this point the erection of a pumping station was to be required for the purpose of conveying the sewage by a force main to a sewage disposal site in Otonabee; naturally, the river would be crossed in the neighbourhood of the pumping station.

For your information I may say that at the time this matter was discussed it was the unanimous opinion of ourselves and your Engineer that this was the most convenient point for collection and that it would be cheaper to construct a force main from this point than to construct a gravity sewer to any other point, such as the foot of Park Street, for the purpose of shortening the force main."

Ald. Green further stated that formal application had not been made for the location of the sewage disposal plant. It is not definitely known just where the plant will be located.

A FINE TRIBUTE TO THE MEN OF 8TH C. M. R.

Lt.-Col. Miller Eulogizes the Appearance and Good Conduct of the Rank and File of B Squadron

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Lt.-Col. Miller, former commanding officer of the 57th Regiment in conversation with The Examiner this morning, paid a fine tribute to the men of the 8th Mounted Rifles. "They are the smartest, cleanest, brightest bunch of men I have ever seen in one squadron," remarked Lt.-Col. Miller enthusiastically. "Their conduct on the street since organization begun has been exemplary and the golden opinion I formed of them was augmented last night by their behaviour and appearance at the concert in the Armouries. Peterborough should be proud of B Squadron."

Lt.-Col. Preston, of the 8th Battalion paid a visit to the local company this morning. The members of the 89th are being fitted out in uniforms, although the service uniforms will not be given out until the company arrives in Belleville. The 89th men are making rapid progress in their training, and will not need to fear comparison with other units at the mobilization centre.

The 8th Mounted Rifles had another long route march this morning, taking a two-hour tramp. Major Medd complimented the men on their marching and on their appearance after the test.

Pte. Hodge, of the 8th Mounted Rifles, has been appointed to act as sergeant provisionally.

A squad of the 89th Battalion were vaccinated yesterday.

The health of the men of both local units has been very good. Only a few have been off on sick leave, colds being the chief cause of complaint.

Damaging Chair Cost Him $11.75

Frank Faux Was Assessed That Amount For His Fun in King George Hotel

It cost Frank Faux $11.75 for his few minutes of fun in the King George Hotel on Tuesday evening. He paid that much into police court this morning on a charge of "unlawfully and wilfully committing damage upon the property of Dennis Corkery, by breaking a chair in the King George hotel, the said damage amounting to $8.50, contrary to the criminal code."

Magistrate Dumble allowed $6.00 as compensation for the chair, $2 fine and $3.75 costs, amounting in all to $11.75, to be paid forthwith and in default of payment 15 days in gaol. The amount was paid.

Faux thought he should now be the owner of the chair, but it was ruled that he had only paid enough for repairs.

Daniel Cushing, who was remanded a few days ago on a charge of being drunk in a public place, was fined $2.00 this morning. He was able to pay the fine.

THE BREAD WAR.

Though the belligerent nations are not moved by religious motives, they are actively concerned in enforcing a strict observance of Lent. Germany has declared that all food in, or coming into, that country, shall be under military control and management for military purposes. This leads Great Britain and the Allies to enforce as far as possible the entire exclusion of food supplies from Germany; and Germany will try to starve out Great Britain by rtying to sink all ships carrying food supplies to that country. Germany can't do this by above-water craft, for the above-water craft of Britain and the Allies have paralyzed the German fleet. The war takes on, in this regard, a new phase. Britain and the allies will seek, and with success, it is pretty certain, a complete blockade of German coasts by above-water and under-water craft, in which Germany is hopelessly outnumbered. Supplies will also be cut off from neutral European countries, which will not undertake, as Holland and Italy have done, to refrain from forwarding food supplies to Germany, and the British and French ships are establishing a blockade in southern Europe to prevent foodstuffs from passing through Bulgaria to Austria and Germany. Germany has only her submarine campaign to effect the power of blockading of British ports, and we shall see what we shall see. A few days' development will let light in upon the situation; but there is not much fear that the German submarine blockade, while it may be destructive and partially successful, will be more successful than her many plans and tricks that have failed.

SOME MISTAKE.

We receive to-day news that show failure of foresight somewhere. We learn that some of the Canadian expeditionery forces are suffering from frost bite. Some members of the Princess Patricias, in hospital at peditionery forces are suffering from frostbite. Some members of the the same regiment are similarly suffering. Is this not something that could have been guarded against? We in Canada are always ready for winter; and should we have not provided that the soldiers we sent to the battle front should have been protected from this form of disablement and suffering? With only 30,000 soldiers at the front could not the government have provided that Canadian soldiers should not be sent abroad from a rigorous climate to suffer from frost? The Red Cross and similar agencies have done nobly in this regard; but, obviously, not quite enough. Our government authorities have done well in many respects, but they apparently have not done as much as could have been done to protect our soldiers from the effects of cold weather. It might have been difficult to provide suitable boots at short notice; but in six months after enlistment, something more might have been done to avert the peril of incapacitating our fighting men from frost. This suggests that there is much work to be done to provide for the comfort of our soldiers, to the end that their health and fighting efficiency may be maintained. We may call upon the Red Cross agencies and other similar organizations to come to the rescue; but is it not permissable for the government to take greater interest in equipping our soldiers and providing for contingencies that arise in actual service? Funds for private Red Cross work are limited; but the government has no lack of funds. We have voted one hundred and fifty millions for war purposes; and it would be no waste to devote a considerable proportion to providing for the comfort of our soldiers, and the means of maintaining them in health and consequent fighting efficiency. We have no doubt of the courage of our soldiers; but courage that does not flinch from the enemy, becomes ineffective with crippled feet from frostbite or bad boots; for, literally, the fighting heart of a soldier is in his boots.

FASTING AND ABSTINENCE.

It is not for the layman to dogmatize upon, or even discuss, the religious aspect of the observance of the Lenten fast, but an examination of the physical and material aspects of it may be made with advantage. Without entering at all into the religious or spiritual side of fasting at the Lenten season, it can be asserted that there is great physical and material advantage to derived from a reasonable curtailment or abstinence from food, or change from the menu of our normal or every-day diet. It is an admitted fact that the mass of mankind does not know how to eat scientifically, that is with the most wholesome regard to the promotion and maintenance of bodily health. We, as a rule, all eat too much, and with so little discretion that digestion suffers, and with impaired digestion comes or follows impaired health. Observation and the professional experience of medical men, will bear out the statement that if statistics could be compiled, and were available, it would be shown that in the year, and from year to year, far more persons die from the direct and indirect effects of overeating than die from starvation. This emphasizes the benefit of moderate eating which is a form of fasting. A citizen, who at a somewhat advanced age, has, and has had all his life, robust health and an unimpaired digestion, ascribes these conditions to the fact that he never eats at table what he can eat, that is never thoroughly satisfies the full demand of appetite. Thus the digestive machinery is not overworked nor clogged, nor the nutritive processes interfered with, or deranged. The benefits of change of diet are admitted, and recognized in the presentation of the ordinary domestic bill of fare. In the winter there is, obviously less opportunity for this change, and at the end of winter the necessity of a more or less radical change of diet is greater. The physical forces, and the general health are impaired by the enforced confinement of the mass of the people in the vitiated atmosphere of overheated, and imperfectly ventilated houses. The digestive functions impaired, the vitality lowered, the general health affected by the use of nitrogenous heat producing diet, suggest change of diet. Apart entirely from the religious aspect, the abstinence and dietetic changes of Lent coming at the opening of spring, tend to have a most beneficial effect, involving the benefits of almost complete change of diet, and of beneficial abstinence. There can be no doubt that we all, or nearly all of us can, and will be benefitted, if we so chose, by a judicious observance of the Lenten fast. Unfortunately, in the physical sense, there are too many that do not need the fast—too many to whom life from day to day, and from month to month, is virtually a continuous fast. We can fulfil the Lenten fast, even in the material point of view, in the higher spirit if we employ our abstinence from food, to turn over the food we abstain from, or the remnant of what we use more sparingly, to the relief of those who spend a life, or much of a life, of enforced and continuous fast. Thus in both the neighbourly and purely material sense, we can defer to the demands of the Lenten fast with advantage to ourselves and our neighbours. No man liveth, or should live, solely to himself.

PARCELING OUT THE THRONES.

A story from Germany says that in the event of German victory in the war the Kaiser has offered the British throne to Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria. He is the direct descendant of Henrietta Maria, a daughter of Charles I., and thus represents the Stuarts.

It may seem rather generous of the Kaiser to make so handsome a promise to a young prince of Bavaria, when he has so many younger sons of his own in need of thrones. We had supposed that he would give the Crown Prince the enlarged Germany that would result from the war—that is to say, the German Empire of today, with Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, and part of France, including Calais. That is the way we figured he would, as a generous father, provide for his oldest son in the event of winning in this great war. What we fancied was that he would place his second son on the British throne, his third son on the throne of France, while for the fourth he would set up a new throne at Washington, where he could rule over the United States, Canada and Mexico.

The Kaiser has the name of being a good husband and a devoted father, and he would wish to do well by his boys. This story from Germany that he would pass over his own sons in favour of young Rupprecht of Bavaria, we are inclined to think, must be an unfounded rumour, unless, of course, the Kaiser foresees that he will not have any thrones to give away except his own, and would rather make empty promises to outsiders than to members of his own household.

What a fine little time young Rupprecht would have on the British throne! But since he has been promised preferment, how would he like to be chosen by the powers of Europe to succeed the present unsuitable King of Prussia?—Toronto Star.

LARGE SHIPMENT OF RED CROSS SUPPLIES LEAVE YET LARGE NEEDS

TORONTO, Feb. 16. — The largest consignment of supplies that has left this city since the outbreak of war, was shipped from the headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society on Friday, February 5th, to Halifax, en route to England, where they will be distributed by the Red Cross officials. The total number of cases that went from this office amounted to five hundred.

Two weeks ago another consignment, amounting to 445 cases, was shipped from headquarters, and 42 cases are now on the way from the provincial headquarters of Alberta in Calgary. When this latter shipment has been sent away the grand total of cases sent to the offices of the society in London, will reach 987, since the beginning of the year.

This is a splendid record and shows clearly that the people of Canada are continuing to support the Society in a generous manner. The Province of Alberta is doing a noble work as will be seen from the fact that one shipment alone amounted to over forty cases, no small amount from the youngest Province in the Dominion.

Although one thousand cases sounds a very large number the needs of the wounded soldiers are so great that it will be impossible to send sufficient to supply the demand. That is why the work has to be carried on without ceasing and with even greater energy. It is a source of satisfaction to the Society that the supplies are coming in, in so splendid a manner, for thus it will be possible to send a continuous stream of goods to the soldiers.

Through the Canadian Red Cross Society the wounded soldiers are being provided with every comfort and assistance from the time that they are carried away from the trenches to the moment they enter the hospitals. Directly they are taken from the trenches or from any part of the field of battle where they have been wounded they are carried by the ambulance to the nearest base hospital where their wounds are immediately attended to. In many cases, more especially during the past few weeks, the men have been wounded while fighting in mud-filled trenches, and dry clothes are needed directly they leave the trenches. These are supplied by the Red Cross workers.

While the Red Cross looks after the wounded soldiers and those incapacitated through sickness, the men who are well looked after by the National Committee of Women for Patriotic Services, of which Mrs. Plumptre of Toronto is Secretary. This society is doing a splendid work among thousands of unwounded soldiers and large consignments of comforts are being sent to them continually. The field comforts are supplementary supplies for well men in camp. As the government fully equips every man accepted for service with his uniform, two suits of underclothing, two pairs of socks, two flannel shirts, Balaclava cap, sweater coat, gloves, cholera belt and house-wife, there is no need to give the men large quantities of supplies.

Acceptable gifts are Kharki handkerchiefs, 24 x 24 inches; wristlets, either full length thumb or only a hole for the thumb; mufflers 12 inches wide, 2 1-2 to 3 yards long, and an extra pair of socks. Also chocolate, candies, tobacco in all forms, foot powder, boracic ointment for sore feet, etc. A constant supply of newspapers, magazines and, above all, of home letters, sent direct by post to individual officers and men are always in demand.

All field comforts sent to 77 King Street, East, Toronto, will be forwarded to England to the Canadian War Contingent Association, of which the Hon. Sir George Perley, K.C.G.M., acting High Commissioner for Canada, is President.

Early in October last, the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario opened a fund to be known at the Dairymen's Patriotic Fund, identified with the dairy products of the western part of this Province. A circular letter sent out by the Secretary of the fund to the officers of all dairy manufacturing plants suggested that the patrons be requested to voluntarily contribute the proceeds from one day's milk or cream or any portion thereof and that employees subscribe one day's pay or any portion of it.

From the total amount received to date (Feb. 3), one thousand dollars has been set aside for the Canadian Red Cross Society and a cheque for this amount has been received by Mr. Noel Marshall, Chairman of the Executive committee. The society is grateful to the Dairymen for this patriotic example which it trusts will be followed by other such associations throughout the country.

The sum of $4,000 has been cabled to Colonel Hodgetts, the Canadian Commissioner for the Red Cross in London, by the Ottawa branch of the Society, for the purchase of two motor ambulances. A further sum of four thousand dollars will be sent by the same Branch for the purchase of two other ambulances. It has been pointed out before that these field ambulances are one of the most necessary things in the work of the Red Cross at the front, and in the general hospital work, and other gifts of a like nature will be warmly welcomed by the society.

The Province of Alberta has the honour of sending the largest one consignment in any part of the West. A few days ago a letter was received at Headquarters from Miss Pinkham, Secretary of the Alberta Provincial Branch, saying that forty-two cases were on the way. These cases contained socks, pyjamas, night shirts, day shirts, bandages, etc., and were sent in from the following places: Alix, Athabasca, Banff Barons, Bashaw, Blairemore, Bow Island, Garmangay, Cayley, Carlstadt, Coleman, Cochran, Crossfield, Didsbury, Eagle Hill Fishburn, Gleichen, Grassy Lake High River, Hillstown, Lacombe, Lougheed, Millet, Nanton, Penhold, Red Deer, Seven Persons, Staveley, and Vegreville.

All supplies should be sent to the Provincial headquarters of the Red Cross Society in the different provinces or to 77 King Street East, Toronto. It is essential, however, that the provincial offices or he local depots receive the goods.

WHAT LENT IS IN LETTER AND SPIRIT

The word Lent is derived from an old English word "lencten," which means the spring and has probably some association with the lengthening of the days. Ash Wednesday takes its name from the ancient custom of blessing the ashes made from the palms distributed on Palm Sunday of the preceding year and signing the cross with them on the heads of those who kneel before the officiating minister for the purpose, while he says, "Remember, man, that thou art dust and unto dust thou shalt return." The Commination service of the Church of England is an adaptation of this rite. The period immediately preceding Easter has always been marked as a season of abstinence. In the Greek Church the rule is very rigorously observed, being relaxed only very slightly even on Sunday. Lent begins on the Monday following Quinquagesima Sunday. Climatic and other conditions may affect our capacity for lasting but modern conditions have also increased our opportunities to sacrifice our pleasure by abstinence from luxuries. "Theatres, balls, private parties, novel reading, merely ornamental pursuits, unnecessary delicacies, sumptuous costumes — these are things which may well be selected as the subjects of our abstinence," but it may be well to remember that the time so saved should be otherwise profitably employed attending the services of the Church or in extra private devotions and in works of charity. As for abstinence from food the following general rules will apply to most of us:

1. It is possible to diminish in some degree the quantity of food on fasting days without injury to health.

2. Many can safely abstain altogether from animal food for some days in the week.

3. Food should be taken on fasting days as a necessity and its quality so regulated that it should not be a luxury.

4. All can deny themselves delicacies on fasting days which may very profitably be used at other times.

In one of the Homilies the objects of fasting are well stated—the first "to chastise the flesh that it be not too wanton but tamed and brought in subjection to the spirit; second, that the spirit may be more fervent and earnest in prayer; third, that our fast be a testimony and witness with us before God of our humble submission to His Divine Majesty"—Church Life.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—Misgivings over the shipping crisis brought about by the attempted starvation duel between Germany and Great Britain had a demoralizing effect today on the wheat trade here. An extreme break of 6 1-8c to 6 1-4c resulted and the market closed unsettled at 2 3-4c to 4 1-4c under last night. Other net losses were: Corn 1 1-2c to 1 3-8c, oats 1c to 1 1-4c and provisions 10c to 37 1-2c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 17.—After an active opening and wide fluctuations, wheat closed 1¼c lower for May. The feature of the market was the acute demand for cash, especially No. 1 and 2 northern, with very light offerings.

Export trade was dead for the moment, the Liverpool spot was half to 1d higher.

Receipts were 401 cars with 135 in sight for today.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 17.—Cable advices on Manitoba spring wheat came strong this morning, at an advance of 1s per quarter, with a fair demand from foreign buyers for supplies and sales of a few loads were made, but owing to the weakness in the Winnipeg market today, late cables were easier, with bids 9d per quarter lower. The local market for oats is firm with demand steady. Corn in good demand. Ontario malting barley in fair demand, with sales at $1 per bushel. Demand for spring wheat flour good, with bids lower. Millfeed is active. Butter stronger and higher. Cheese is stronger at an advance of ½c per pound. Eggs easy at the recent decline, with a fair trade passing.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

WILL ENDEAVOUR TO SECURE $2,500 TO FINANCE THE TEAM

At a meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Ball Club and a number of fans, held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers last night, a report was received from the committee which had been appointed to go into the question of ways and means for having a team this year. The committee reported that they had been unable to secure any individual or syndicate who would take over the ball club. The meeting discussed the question for some time and finally a committee was appointed to arrange for subscriptions. It was decided to make an effort to secure $2,500 by next Wednesday night. If the effort is successful Peterborough will have a Canadian League club—if not there will be nothing doing this year. It is entirely up to the people of Peterborough; if they want baseball they have a chance to say so during the coming week. Unless the entire sum is forthcoming the matter will be

NEW BASKETBALL LEAGUE AT THE Y. M. C. A.

The new basketball league at the Y.M.C.A. will open on Saturday night with two games. This is the second league of the season, the first early in the fall proving most successful. Two more teams have been included in the new league, making ten in all, and as the teams appear to be well matched, especially on paper, there should be some keen competition. Following are the teams:

A. Division.

Cressmans—F. Cressman, V. Lewis, C. Bartlett, E. Raynor, H. Cressman, D. Carlisle.

Unknowns—M. McCarrell, G. Robertson, L. Smyth, E. Brown, B. Mullins, F. Douglas.

Jr. Business Men—M. Metheral, C. Sisson, —. Johnson, F. Turner, Jackson, H. Cranfield.

De Laval—Bill English, P. Spratt, G. Taylor, B. Hamilton, Downing.

Excelsiors—Alex. Darling, C. Stuart, C. Nichols, H. Knapman, H. Long.

B. Division.

Beavers—Ross Dobbin, H. Lees, H. Weller, T. Gilchirst, Waters, Thackeray.

Hustlers—W. Heaslip, N. Laing, W. Carruthers, V. Lewis, Jones, J. Davidson.

Collegiate— Hunter Lewis, D. Canniff, A. Austin, V. Eastwood, H. Stuart, R. Stevenson.

Maple Leaves — W. Richardson, Horsefield, P. Dunsford, H. Taylor, E. Smythe, H. B. Cowan.

Boosters—R. Best, J. Kerr, H. Mulhern, J. Munro, F. Preston.

Rules.

All games played on Wednesday and Saturday nights. First game starting 7.30.

All games must be played per schedule. If only one team is present, that team will win the game by default.

If neither team is present, each will be credited with a loss.

Ladies' Tankard Commenced This Morning

The Peterborough lady curlers were ten up at the close of the first round of the Ladies' Tankard games, which commenced this morning, with ten rinks in attendance. Two rinks were from Belleville, two from Kingston, and four from Toronto. Two of the Toronto rinks represented the Granites and the other two the Victorias. The two Peterborough rinks completed the number.

The ice is in first-class condition, and some good curling is being accomplished. With Kingston reserved for the consolation, the semi-finals, which are being played this afternoon, include the following rinks:

Peterborough ..... Toronto Victorias
Belleville ..... Toronto Granites

The finals will be played off tomorrow morning. This evening will be reserved for a bridge party.

The Scores.

HOCKEY

Last night between seven and eight the Quaker Oats staff met the Toronto Savings and Loan in what proved to be the most exciting and hard-fought game of the season. At half time the score was 0-0, and at full time the score was 2-2.

The line-up was as follows:

Q. O. Co. — Goal, Elcombe; right defence, Morphet; left defence, Butcher; centre, Pidgeon; rover, Moore; wings, Jones and Carruthers.

T. S. & L. Co. — Goal, Mahood; right defence, Hardill; left defence, Heaslip; centre, Gardiner; rover, Heard; wings, Davis and Crowe.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In view of the fact that certain false notions are extant in this city concerning the second coming of Christ, I wish to offer the following from God's word to prove that the Lord's soon coming will be a real, literal, and visible appearance in the clouds of heaven with all the holy angels. We have the testimony of the highest authority upon this point. Jesus Christ himself declared in John 14:3 "I will come again." The angel said to the disciples in Acts 1:11 "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go." Next we have the third authority "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven." This proves conclusively that Christ's second coming will be personal.

It will also be visible. It says in Rev. 1.7 "Behold He cometh with clouds and every eye shall see Him," and again in Matt. 24:27 "For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west even so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

What folly, therefore, for some in this city to be saying that Christ's second coming is when He comes in the hearts of men. Christ does not come bodily in men's hearts. Christ is in heaven mediating for sinners and will stay there until His work is completed. He is a real individual. Now the only way, spiritually speaking, that Christ can be manifested in our lives now is by having the character of Christ wrought in us by the Holy Spirit. But this is not Christ's second coming spoken of in the Bible; for Christ has come millions of times if these ideas be true—yes every time a person gets converted. What absurdity. Let us not listen to any theory that destroys faith in Christ's soon coming, but let us like all of God's people in the past believe in it and prepare for that time.

Cartridges For "Kultur"

Germany is not content to be on the Continent of Europe "first among equals," but rather than that she should be "everything" there is not a Briton who will not lay down his life gladly. She will never be "everything" while there is one cartridge left.—Mr. A. J. Balfour.

Belgium's Pride

Tears dishonor us. Let us rather be thankful that Belgium, of all the countries, was privileged to be the first and most vital rampart of modern civilization against savagery and brutal aggression, and that her name in future will be joined to those few small nations whose fame is immortal. —M. Emil Verhaeren, Belgium's greatest author.

Jellicoe's Tribute

I feel prouder each day to have the privilege of commanding men of such splendid calibre. The same spirit which prevailed with their forbears dominates the actions of our sailors to-day.—Admiral Jellicoe.

The Braggarts

It is simply absurd, if not absolutely insane, for the Germans now to make use believe that they were not the aggressors, when even to-day in every line which they publish they assert that they are the strongest race in the world, and that it is for the world's benefit that they should rule it.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Never Again

British business men were mistaken in employing Germans. They are cheapest, but they are paid spies, and in no manner must we ever employ Germans again.—Admiral Sturdee.

BALE OF COMFORTS FOR MILITARY HOSPITAL

The bale of comforts made by the local ladies to be sent to the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, Shorncliffe, Kent, Eng., was on view in the recreation room at the armouries yesterday afternoon, and many citizens called to inspect the pile of socks, night shirts and other hospital comforts prepared. Interested visitors during the afternoon were the members of the 3rd contingent, who examined the articles with great interest. Mayor Buller and Ald. Edgar gave short addresses, praising the ladies for the work they had done.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Feb. 15.—Business now has another factor to which it must adjust itself—new taxation. Adjustment to tariff changes will be easy. It is merely a matter of advancing prices on imported goods in proportion to the tariff increase. A similar advance will, of course, be made on goods of home manufacture. The special taxes, if they receive the endorsement of Parliament, will be more difficult of adjustment. There is, however, a general disposition in the business world to make sacrifices at the present time, but in many quarters there is a belief that the methods adopted will not produce anything like the revenue expected. Merchants who in the past have paid exclusively by cheque, will from now on pay all small amounts in cash. This is but one evidence of the economies that will be made to evade the special taxes. The general result will be a further increase in the cost of living.

A review of the markets of the week shows a general steadiness, with no marked increases or declines in quotations on farm produce.

WHEAT

More caution is being shown by speculators and wheat quotations have stepped at the level reached last week. One result of wheat gambling has been the consideration by the government of the advisability of prohibiting export. The fact that Russia may have as much as 200,000,000 bushels of wheat for export has also tended to check speculation. No. 1 Northern, $1.66½; No. 2, $1.63½; No. 3, $1.48¾; Ontario wheat, $1.39 to $1.55.

COARSE GRAINS

There have been somewhat heavier deliveries of Ontario oats, farmers fearing a break-up of the roads. Malting barley has advanced slightly: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 44c; No. 3, 73½c; No. 1 feed, 68c; Ontario oats, 43c to 45c; corn, 85½c; peas, $2 to $2.05; rye, $1.20 to $1.25; buckwheat, 85c to 87c; malting barley, 52c to 57c. Montreal quotes as follows: Oats C.W. No. 2, 74c; No. 3, 71c; extra No. 1 feed, 71c; local white, 43½c to 45c; corn, 86c to 88c; barley, 78½c; malting, 95c; buckwheat, $1.

MILL FEEDS

Quotations here are steady: Bran, $26; shorts, $28; middlings, $33 to $35; feed flour, $40 to $44. At Montreal quotations are up: Bran, $25; shorts, $29; middlings, $33; moullie, $36 to $37.

EGGS

Eggs show a tendency towards seasonable declines, the drop in the past week being about 1c. Here they are quoted new laid in cartons, 35c to 40c; selects, 30c to 32c; storage, 25c to 28c. The retail price is 35c to 40c. The Montreal market, too, tends to weaken. New laids, 29c to 30c; No. 1 storage, 26c; selects, 30c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

People are not using butter in the same old way. This is the only explanation of the decreased demand from our larger centres. Stocks, however, are comparatively small and prices will be firmly maintained until the opening of the new season. On the Montreal market 200 packages of the finest creamery recently sold at 31c and other lots have sold from 30c to 31½c. Some of the cheaper grades of dairy butter have been shipped to England for re-mixing. On this market fresh creamery prints are quoted 32c to 34c; creamery solids, 30c to 32c; dairy prints, 28c to 29c; bakers, 25c to 26c.

Never in the history of the cheese industry has there been so little cheese available on either side of the Atlantic. This would seem to indicate that all Canadian cheese in England this coming year will be picked up at long prices. The quotations here is 18c for large and 18½c on twins.

LIVE STOCK

The week has been marked by light deliveries and firm quotations. Canners are probably in keenest demand. Well finished beasts are said to be wanted and stockers are off a trifle. Shipping steers are quoted $7.40 to $8.25; handy choice, $7.40 to $7.60; butchers' steers, $6.25 to $7.00; heifers, $6.75 to $7.65; choice cows, $6 to $6.90; com. to good, $4.75 to $5; butcher bulls, $4.90 to $7; feeders, $6.50 to $7; stockers, $4.75 to $6.65; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $5.

Milch cows are in firm demand: Choice, $75 to $100; com. to med., $40 to $70; springers, $50 to $100. Calves range from $4.25 to $11.

Mutton animals are firm: Light lambs, $6.50 to $8.25; med. to heavy, $7.50 to $8.00; culls, $6.00 to $7; light ewes, $5.25 to $6.25; heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $5.25; culls, $2.50 to $4.

Hogs are a trifle down, but still in good demand at $7.90 f.o.b. country points.

CAPTURED IN MID-AIR

Lieutenant Spratt, of the British Royal Flying Corps, was stationed at Montmorency. A German airman appeared, and Spratt went up in pursuit of him. After some manoeuvring, he managed to get above the German, and trained his gun on him. The German airman made vain efforts to escape, but finding he was "out-flown" signalled that he would surrender.

He commenced to descend, but suddenly altered his tactics and tried to escape. But he wasn't sharp enough for Spratt! The English lieutenant was after him like a hawk after a sparrow. The machines collied, and crashed to the ground together.

Neither of the men was killed, but the German was severely injured. Lieutenant Spratt is a Hendon airman, and was one of the first to volunteer for the war.

Military Fashions

In a number of interesting directions the war is having its effect on present day fashions in dress. Amongst young men khaki shirts and ties have become popular, whilst Union Jack handkerchiefs are all the rage. Ties with pictures of soldiers worked on to them are appearing in England, and socks on which little flags take the place of the usual "clock" are enjoying a run of popularity. Ties bearing the colors of famous regiments are selling in hundreds.

KINGS ON THE BATTLEFIELD

From earliest times English kings have loomed large in the military history of their country. William III., at the end of the seventeenth century, was perhaps the greatest military genius that has ever occupied the English throne. The historic and noble defence of the Netherlands which occupied his life is now only threatened with comparison by King Albert's heroism.

The Hanoverians saw this change in kingship firmly established. Yet in 1743 George II. accompanied his army in the field, and was the last reigning King of England to do so. Then, at Dettingen in Bavaria, he personally led an army of English, Hanoverians, and Austrians to victory against the French, who were in superior force under the Duc de Noailles.

This was in the war of the Austrian succession—when Europe was plunged into war by Frederick the Great of Prussia breaking his word, pledged in a treaty to help Maria Theresa to succeed to the Austrian throne.

Since then no reigning monarch has accompanied his troops in the field, though William IV., the sailor King, saw active service as a Prince, and served under Admiral Rodney in 1782 in the naval battle off Cape St. Vincent.

Now, after a lapse of 101 years, George V., a reigning King, has been with his army in the field.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

Many villages in the Friuli region of the Italian Alps have disappeared from sight under a snowfall of almost unprecedented extent for that locality.

Frank Reti, cashier of the Western Savings Bank in Western avenue, Chicago, was held up and bound by four auto bandits yesterday, who escaped with $2,000.

Major E. C. Noswerthy, manager of the Dominion Securities, now of the 5th Royal Highlanders in France, has been transferred to Sir Max Aitken's eye-witness staff.

Dr. C. Connell has announced that in the coming calendar of Queen's a new combined arts-medical course has been arranged, and it will be more literary in character than the one in the past.

Louis Berger, a German subject, wanted in Toronto, Ont., to answer to a charge of larceny, will be deported to Germany, by reason of an order entered yesterday by Federal Judge Landis in Chicago.

Six Winnipeg men are lost on the Churchill Barren lands. They left Port Nelson Jan. 21, and ran into a blizzard this side of the Limestone Cache. The mounted police are searching for them.

V. H. Veardon, the young architect, found guilty some weeks ago on five charges of obtaining money by false pretences, was sentenced to one year in the Ontario Reformatory by Judge Winchester in Toronto yesterday.

DIRIGIBLE WRECKED.

Malmed German Craft Is Taken In Charge By Danish Troops.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A big airship, believed to be of the Parseval type, apparently damaged by gunfire, flew over Amsterdam yesterday morning, says a despatch from that city to the Reuter's Telegram Co.

A despatch from Copenhagen to the Exchange Telegraph Co. tells of the destruction of a big dirigible of the Parseval type on Fano Island, and the arrest of its crew of two officers and 14 men by Danish troops.

The airship was flying at a height of about 600 feet and its crew was unable to keep the vessel in a horizontal position.

Assuming a vertical position, the aircraft drifted in the direction of the Zuyred Zee, an arm of the North Sea, carrying with it telegraph wires with which a dangling rope had become entangled.

The air vessel later was sighted minus its gondola.

Keep Brass From Germans.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—An official notice, just issued, warns the public that in sending clothing to French prisoners in Germany all buttons especially brass ones, must be cut off.

Orders have been issued that hereafter all soldiers of France shall receive half a litre of wine each day.

This order follows the announcement that there is double the quantity of wine on hand that was believed in storage.

Young Officers In Favor.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—Gen. Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, continues to carry out his settled policy of weeding out the higher ranks of the army in favor of younger and more active men. Yesterday's appointment list, made public by Gen. Joffre, contains the names of nine generals of divisions who have been placed on the reserve list and succeeded by men promoted to brigadier-generalships.

TO BRING IN DRAFT.

Moratorium Proposals Will Be Introduced In Legislature To-day.

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—The Ontario Government will bring in a draft bill of a moratorium to-day, and it will likely be given first reading at once. The outlines of it will be given, but details will be added later, after committee discussion has been allowed.

The aim of the bill is to give judges on the bench the discretionary right to allow or refuse the foreclosure of mortgages during war time. If evidence shows a man is against the wall and cannot pay, pressure will be forbidden.

On the other hand, restrictions will prevent any one unfairly seeking a refuge from legitimate settlements. This is the first war measure of the Government, and it will be made retroactive, dating back to the beginning of war. Hon. I. B. Lucas will sponsor it.

Bulgar Port Blockaded.

BERLIN, Feb. 18. — (By wireless to Sayville.) — British and French warships are blockading the Bulgarian port at Dedeagatch, to prevent the importation through it of foodstuffs destined for Germany and Austria, according to a Constantinople despatch, made public by the Overseas News Agency yesterday.

TORPEDO WAR BEGINS.

French and British Ship Destroyed by German Submarine.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—An official communication, issued by the Ministry of Marine, tells of the sinking yesterday by the German submarine U16, of the French steamer Ville de Lille off the Barfleur lighthouse, a short distance east of Cherbourg, after the submarine had ordered the crew to leave the steamer. The statement follows:

"The French steamer Ville de Lille, belonging to the Compagnie Navigation des Bateaux à Vapeur du Nord, sailing from Cherbourg to Dunkirk, sighted the German submarine U16 near the lighthouse at Barfleur at 1.30 o'clock Tuesday.

"The Ville de Lille endeavored to escape, but was outspeeded by the submarine, men from which boarded her and gave the crew ten minutes to leave in the ships' boats. They then sank the Ville de Lille by bombs placed in her interior.

"The U16 headed for a Norwegian steamer, but sank out of sight when a division of French torpedo boats from Cherbourg appeared on the horizon."

The Ville de Lille was a small steamer of 997 tons.

The British steam collier Dulwich, bound from Hull to Rouen, was torpedoed by a German submarine twenty miles northwest of Cape De la Heve at six o'clock Tuesday night. The torpedo struck the middle starboard side.

CANADIAN WINS PRAISE.

Col. J. E. Duffus Mentioned by Sir John French In Despatches.

LONDON, Feb. 18. — Amongst those mentioned in Sir John French's despatch for gallant and distinguished conduct in the field is Lt.-Col. J. E. Duffus of the 5th Brigade, Royal Artillery. He is a native of Halifax and a graduate of the Royal Military College at Kingston.

Col. Duffus was born in 1866, and graduated from Kingston in 1885, when he was gazetted a lieutenant in the Royal Artillery. He became captain in 1895 and major in 1900. He served in the Nile expedition of 1898 and the South African war. Previous to the present war he was commander of the 61st Howitzer Battery, R.F.A., at Bulford Camp, Salisbury, England.

"Most Beautiful" Woman Dead.

FORT WILLIAM, Feb. 18. — The death occurred yesterday after a short illness of the wife of Dan McKay, superintendent of the N. M. Patterson Grain Co. elevators here. Mrs. McKay was formerly Miss Margaret McDonald, who was judged to be the most beautiful Scotch Canadian girl in Canada, by judges appointed by The Montreal Herald a few years ago in a contest held by that paper.

Burrell to Represent Canada.

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, will open the Canadian Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition on Feb. 25. He leaves for San Francisco today.

KAISER A SHOCKING SIGHT.

Correspondent Says He Is Under a Constant Depression.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, who has recently had exceptional opportunity for close personal observation of the Kaiser, writes:

"His physical appearance shocked and almost frightened me. He has aged terribly. His hair is grey and he has an air of fixed depression. He speaks little, and his articulation is abnormally slow.

"I was convinced that he at last recognizes what the future has in store for him and his people and that he sees little brightness in the prospect.

"The officers of the general staff share his downcast mien and are apparently filled with similar misgivings."

Mobilizing Against Italy.

GENEVA, Feb. 18.—(Via Paris.) —Austria has been concentrating troops for the last ten days on her Italian frontier. The men are chiefly artillery men and their guns have been emplaced at favorable positions dominating the Tyrolese passes.

Swiss, Italian and Austrian soldiers are close on one another on the lonely three-cornered frontier of the Alps at a height of from 5,000 to 8,000 feet, and frequently fraternize in the deep snow.

The Swiss soldiers usually act as the interpreters between the Austrians and Italians.

To Pay Damages To Widow.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 18. — The Grand Trunk Railway Co. has agreed to pay Mrs. Josie Savage, widow of Arthur Savage, who was killed at the railway crossing near Kingston Mills last December, $3,000. Damages for the death of his brother have not yet been arranged.

A new cooking utensil that can be used on top of a stove will serve as roaster, steamer, broiler or toaster.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

MR. TILLEY ASKED CITY'S WITNESS TO PRODUCE BOOK WITH ORIGINAL INVENTORY

"We Want Your Unbiased Opinion" the Company's Lawyer Said—Mr. Jeffrey Replied That it is the Property of the Hydro-Electric Commission and He Would Have to Get Permission to Submit It.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

Who of the employees of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. checked over Mr. Jeffrey's first inventory of the plant made in July, 1913, was one of the questions which Mr. Jeffrey did not answer for Mr. W. N. Tilley, the company's chief counsel, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Jeffrey had explained in his cross-examination by Mr. Tilley how he had made his first inspection of the company's distributing system and entered his observations in a note book. He had entered the number of poles, number of cross arms on each pole, length of each pole, average age of the poles in each City block, the number of private services. He estimated the average length of each service, the number and size of the primary and secondary wires. From these he could estimate the quantity of wire in use.

Mr. Tilley asked Mr. Jeffrey how he had ascertained the size of the primary and secondary wires.

Primary wires are understood to be those carrying the main current. The secondaries are those strung from the transformer to houses and carry the current after it has been stepped down.

Mr. Jeffrey replied that he could tell by looking at them. Afterwards, his figures were checked over, he said, and found to be substantially correct.

Who checked them over? Mr. Tilley asked.

At my request they were checked over by a person in the employ of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, replied Mr. Jeffrey.

Did you ask an officer of the company to have it done for you?

Jeffrey—"I do not care to speak of that."

Mr. Tilley—"Was permission granted or refused by the officer?"

Mr. Cowan interposed at this point. Mr. Tilley did not insinuate that any wrong had been done, he asked.

"If my learned friend will wait a moment he will find out whether I insinuate anything or not," Mr. Tilley observed.

Mr. Jeffrey declined to name the person who had checked his inventory.

"I know all the men with the Peterborough Light and Power Company," he said. "They are all friends of mine and did everything to help me make the valuation. I would rather disqualify my evidence than implicate that person."

Mr. Jeffrey said the checking up had been made in July or August, 1913, and before he had presented the results of his inspection to the City Council.

Mr. Tilley stated that there was a strange sameness of prices.

"Is there anything wrong with this inventory?" Mr. Cowan asked.

Mr. Tilley—"Yes there is. You don't want to show the things you have higher than ours."

ASKED FOR NOTE BOOK.

Mr. Tilley also raised the point that Mr. Jeffrey's note book in which he made his original entries should be produced.

Mr. Jeffrey said it was not available, that he had left it in Toronto in the Hydro-Electric Office.

Mr. Cowan—"Mr. Jeffrey made his inspection for the Hydro-Electric Commission. The report is their property, not his."

Mr. Tilley—"Is it the commission's stand not to produce the book?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"I can't produce it without authority from the commission."

Mr. Tilley asked Mr. Jeffrey if the book had been discussed with the commission.

Mr. Jeffrey replied that the Chief Engineer said the book might tend to confuse the Board, putting it in with the other inventories. It was decided to leave it in Toronto.

"The Hydro-Electric Commission had no power to send a witness here," Mr. Cowan remarked.

Mr. Tilley—"He was subpoenaed to give evidence. He tells us our figures are too high. We want his figures."

Mr. Cowan—"He is here as a witness for the City of Peterborough, not for the Hydro-Electric Commission. It is a serious matter for the Board to order a document of the Hydro-Electric Commission to be brought here."

Mr. Nesbitt—"You might ask the secretary of the commission that it be brought here. Mr. Jeffrey might send up for it."

Mr. Tilley—"This witness condemns poles and does so on notes he took at that time. This is an important matter."

Judge Huycke—"I think the Board is unanimous that if the book is in the custody of the witness he should produce it; but if it is in the control of the Hydro-Electric Commission that requires further consideration."

Mr. Jeffrey—"I cannot produce it without the consent of the commission."

Mr. Tilley—"Will you ask for it?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"I'll ask the secretary if he wishes it produced."

Mr. Tilley—"Oh!"

Continuing, Mr. Jeffrey said that his note book contained all his records of the apparent age of the company's poles.

Mr. Tilley—"Had you talked with Mr. Fiske about the age of the poles?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"I talked to Fife and Fiske regarding the age of the poles."

Mr. Tilley—"You put your own opinion in your book and got specific information regarding the age of the poles from Mr. Fiske at a later date?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"Yes."

Mr. Tilley—"We want your own unbiased view as set down in your note book. When did you make a report to the City?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"In the fall of 1913."

Mr. Tilley—"Was that as to the value of the system?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"Yes."

Mr. Tilley—"Do you draw a distinction between that value and this valuation for the arbitration?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"Yes. There is no relation whatever between the two. This is an entirely new valuation for this arbitration."

It might be mentioned that this latter valuation was contined in the 150-page encyclopaedia of details of the company's system referred to on Wednesday.

Mr. Tilley—"When did you make this valuation?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"Just a week ago, when we got your inventory."

THE SCRAP VALUATION.

"When did you make the scrap valuation?"

"The other night."

"On your own initiative?"

Mr. Cowan said, laughingly—"You may answer that."

Mr. Jeffrey—"At the request of Mr. Cowan."

Mr. Tilley—"Was that valuation what you thought the City should pay for the plant?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"I did not say that."

Mr. Tilley—"It was a scrap estimate; not for a connected up lighting plant."

Mr. Jeffrey—"Yes."

Mr. Tilley—"That sum was what you estimated you could get for it if it were taken down, if the poles were taken down? Not for the system as it exists?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"Yes."

Mr. Tilley—"It represents the value of the plant torn to pieces and sold for scrap?"

Mr. Jeffrey—"Yes."

It might be added that the general talk regarding the poles with Mr. Fife and Mr. Fiske was not the incident of checking his inventory which Mr. Jeffrey refused to disclose.

Earlier in his cross-examination Mr. Jeffrey said he had spent eight days in making his first inventory. He examined about 40 or 50 poles at the ground line with an iron bar to test their condition, and had climbed six or seven to observe transformers and equipment. He had walked or driven over the entire distribution system.

MANY FRENCH AUTHORS ARE IN THE ARMY

PARIS, Feb. 18. — Many French authors, poets and dramatists are serving in the army in various capacities. Mr. Henry Bornstein, the dramatist, is serving as a runner at Port Havre; Mr. Marcel Prevost, the poet and author, is a captain of artillery in the intrenched camp of Paris; Mr. Actienne Rey, the writer, and Mr. Robert de Flers, the playwright, are serving at the front, as also is Mr. Reynaldo Hahn, the latter as a simple soldier in the trenches in the Argonne.

Mr. Marcel Boulenger, the writer, has been taken half frozen from the trenches near Nancy and placed in a hospital. Mr. Francois de Tessan, the journalist and secretary general of the French Commission to the San Francisco Exposition, was wounded some time ago, but has recovered and is ready to return to the front.

B Squadron Hold Successful Concert

One of the Most Enjoyable Events of its Kind Ever Held in Peterboro—Mounted Rifles Make Merry in the Recreation Room of the Armouries

The concert given by "B" Squadron of the 36th Mounted Rifles in the recreation room of the Armouries, last evening was one of the most successful and certainly the most enjoyable events of its kind ever held in Peterborough. The rank and file of the squadron and the officers were in attendance in a body, while a few invited guests were fortunate enough to be present and to share in the festivities which lasted until the midnight hour.

The concert unmistakably proved two things—that "B" Squadron has a wealth of musical talent among its members, and that there has already sprung into existence a remarkable bond of comradeship and fellowship between officers and men. The former was shown in the splendid programme provided and the latter, in the spontaneous reception that was given each officer when he was called upon to speak. As Lt.-Col. Miller, the able chairman for the evening, expressed it: "I know that your officers feel that they have one of the finest bodies of men that could be gathered together in the Province of Ontario, and I can see that you men believe that you have the best possible officers."

This feeling of mutual admiration and of comradeship was the key-note of the speeches of the evening, and the spirit that was shown is of the kind that will make "B" Squadron a unit of which Peterborough and Canada will be proud later on.

As to the programme, it was long and varied. There were patriotic songs, sentimental ballads and the inevitable parodies, Scotch songs and Irish songs, songs comic and grave, recitations, some clever stories, and altogether a programme of unflagging interest and real merit. The greater part of the concert was provided by talent from "B" Squadron, although the artists were given able and ready assistance by a number not connected with the Regiment, including Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Fenwick of the Royal Theatre Orchestra, who contributed a splendid violin and piano duet, Sergt. Major Harry Wilford of the 39th Battalion, who sang several songs that made a big hit, Pte. Gummer of the 39th, whose solo was greatly enjoyed; Mr. Chas. Coleman, who rendered a couple of comic songs in his own inimitable fashion, and Mr. B. Satz, the vaudeville entertainer at the Royal, who was a host in himself. All the outside artists were received in a manner that left no doubt as to the feelings of the members of the Mounted Rifles.

Space will not permit any lengthy reference to the individual numbers. It is sufficient to say that all were splendidly given and enthusiastically received. Lieut. Rogers proved a very versatile entertainer, and his songs, banjo numbers and dances were among the best of the many good things of the evening. Many of the choruses of the different songs were familiar to the audience and the gathering joined heartily in singing, a feature that added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

Mr. Satz's specialties, funny parodies and equally funny stories made a great hit and the Squadron left no doubt as to their appreciation of his visit to the Armouries.

The programme was as follows:

Chorus—"O Canada"—audience.

Quartette—"The Soldiers' Farewell"—Squadron Quartette — Ptes. Harris, Flowers, Theobald and Eldred.

Song—"Tipperary" — Pte. J. Ludyard.

Song — "I'm a Rajah" — Sergt.-Major Wilford, 39th Battalion.

Recreation—"The Raw Recruit" — Lt.-Col. Miller.

Song—"My Ain Folk" — Pte. R. Rollo.

Song—"Kaiser Bill" — Pte. J. C. Blake.

Song—"Your King and Country Needs You"—Lieut. Rogers.

Song—"When You're a Long, Long Way from Home" — Pte. Gummer, 39th Battalion.

Song — "Where the River Shannon Flows"—Sergt. Major Biggs.

Intermission.

Song and Chorus—"The Best old Flag on Earth" and "The Maple Leaf"—Pte. E. Skilleter.

Song specialty—Mr. B. Satz.

Song—"The Deathless Army"—Pte. W. Flowers.

Violin and piano duet—Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Fenwick.

Song—"The Bandelero" — Pte. G. Harris.

Banjo selection and dance—Lieut. Rogers.

Song—"Sister Susie's Sewing Shirts for Soldiers"—Pte. H. Farr.

Song—"Tommy Atkins" — Sergt.-Major Wilford.

Comic song—Mr. C. Coleman.

Specialty—Mr. Satz.

Banjo solo—Lieut. Rogers.

In the interval between the two parts of the programme speeches were made by Lt.-Col. Miller, Capt. Spencer and Lieut. Eastwood of the 39th Battalion, Major Medd, Capt. Nelson, Lieuts. Sneath and Rogers, and Sergt.-Major Biggs of the 36th C. M. R. and Mr. C. N. Meserve, the General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A.

In his address, Lt.-Col. Miller reminded the men that they were "chips of the old block" — descendants from sires who had worthily fought for the Empire in her earlier days of trouble. He complimented them most sincerely on the excellent conduct they had shown in Peterborough, about which he had heard nothing but words of praise.

Lieut. Rogers struck a responsive note when he remarked that gatherings such as last night's were golden links that bound officers and men closer together in comradeship.

Refreshments were then served, Coleman Bros. catering most acceptably for the occasion.

At the end of the second part of the programme Sergts. Patterson, Farrance, Mitchell, Portsmith and Hodge were called for addresses, and the Non-Coms. got a big reception when they took the platform.

The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King," followed by rousing cheers for the officers, brought the most enjoyable event to a close.

Pte. Follis of the 39th Battalion had a lion's share in the success of the programme. He was the accompanist throughout and merited the vote of thanks that was tendered him.

The non-coms and men of the squadron are to be congratulated upon the success of the affair. Pte. Geo. Harris, who was head of the committee on arrangements, was untiring in his efforts and deserves every credit.

The thanks of the squadron is due to all who contributed to the success of the evening while the men wish to express their appreciation of the cigars provided by the officers of the squadron.

Youths Accused of Robbing the London Armoury Visited Here

Special Wire to The Examiner:

BUFFALO, N.Y., Feb. 18.—Charged with the theft of $250 from the officers' quarters at the Armouries, Richmond street, London, Ont., Geo. Garden, aged 17, of London, and Charles Madill, 16, 362 Davenport Road, Toronto, were arrested last midnight at Buffalo on charges of larceny. When searched Gardan had $75, and Madill $35. Garden told the police he met Madell in Toronto, divided the money with him and then the pair went to Peterborough, and afterward to Montreal. They came to Buffalo early Wednesday. The arrest quickly followed.

"THE PIT"

The Story

The scenes of the drama are laid in Chicago during a period of speculation in the wheat pit, and intimate pictures of society life form the prologue of the play. Cressler, a victim of rash speculation in "The Pit," commits suicide just as Curtis Jadwin, a prosperous young broker, wins the heart and hand of Laura Dearborn, a rich and lovely society girl. Their marriage happiness is menaced by Jadwin's infatuation for wheat speculation, which leads him to neglect his young wife. Corthell, a former lover, appears to her, charms her with music, and almost wins her away from her huband. The latter is temporarily won from his passion for moneymaking, but succumbs to it again and leaves the path open for Corthell to make further onslaughts on Laura's heart.

Jadwin now plans a great wheat corner, and starts in by winning back a fortune, of which his friends deprived him years before. The market recedes and Jadwin quarrels with his partner, accusing him of trying to sell him out. Jadwin thereupon plunges into the market, but failing in his frantic efforts to corner it, hears the name of his firm 'read out' by the secretary. The corner has been prevented; he is ruined.

Quitting the tumult of the Board of Trade, he makes his way home, a beaten man. His wife is on the point of eloping with Corthell, but when she sees her unhappy husband her heart is touched. Dismissing her lover, she turns to Jadwin and promises to help him commence life afresh far from the feverish temptations of speculative business life. He has lost a fortune, but has a devoted wife, whose love has returned to him. Grand Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 22nd and 23rd.

FIGHTING DOGS INJURED A LADY

Mrs. Heffernan, 640 Reid Street, had the misfortune to sustain a fall yesterday evening which caused a dislocation of her knee. Two dogs were fighting on the sidewalk and ran against her. She fell on the icy walk with the above result.

The injury was very painful and Comstock's Private Ambulance was called to remove her to St. Joseph's Hospital. Dr. J. B. Mann attended her and reports that she is getting along as well as could be expected.

CITY ENGINEER PARSONS' REPORT ON PAVEMENTS

Recommends the Limited Use of Certain Classes of Pavement as An Experiment—Matter Was Discussed at Last Night's Meeting of the Board of Works—Committee Will Make Further Enquiries.

At a meeting of the Board of Works that was held last evening, the question of street paving was discussed. Paving materials of many forms and of many doubtful qualities were thrust into the limelight of aldermanic investigation. The net result is that further investigations will be conducted and an effort made to obtain information from other towns and cities in Ontario, in respect to the cheapest and most durable form of street paving. Representatives from two paving manufacturing concerns were present. They were introduced to the committee one at a time, and needless to say each of them lost no time in proclaiming the merits of paving manufactured by each of their respective companies. They concluded their audience with the committee by inviting one or more of the aldermen to visit cities in Ontario where the paving in which they were interested, is said to be in use.

The Engineer's Report.

In accordance with the request of the Board of Works, City Engineer Parsons submitted the following report re paving:

The problem of securing a low priced, durable pavement for streets with light traffic is one which city officials and engineers all over the country are trying to solve. The types which I will describe comprise the latest efforts toward the solution of the problem. They are as follows:

1. Concrete pavements.

This is a class of pavement that has been experimented with for many years, but has only been used extensively for the last five or six years. Its principal advantages are low price and the need of a very simple plant to lay it, so that it can easily be laid by day labour. Its disadvantages, in my opinion, are as follows:

1. Doubt as to its length of life. In some cases concrete pavements have worn well under quite heavy traffic; in others, they have gone to pieces under light traffic in two or three years.
2. They are noisy.
3. They are hard on horses on account of their being unyielding.
4. They are dusty.
5. They reflect a large amount of heat.

Prices Vary.

The prices of concrete pavements vary greatly running from 95c. to $1.90 per square yard depending on prices of material and labour and the quality of the pavement and the care used in constructing it.

Concrete pavements are built in either one of two courses. In the one course pavement the concrete is of the same proportions and richness throughout. In the two course pavement the lower four or five inches are of a leaner mixture than the top two or three inches. In other words the construction is like that of a sidewalk.

We use gravel just as it comes from the pit for concrete, which is all right for rough work such as the base of a pavement, but would not do for a wearing surface. I would not, in any case, advise the use of gravel for a wearing surface on a street with any traffic. In my opinion the best concrete pavement we could lay would be one with a gravel concrete base and a wearing surface composed of a rich, dense mixture of trap rock, granite or lime stone with sand and Portland cement. This if laid on a fairly level street should be float finished and on grades should be marked off into squares.

Concrete pavements require joints about every 25 feet in order to take care of contraction and expansion in the concrete. These joints are a source of weakness and in modern concrete pavements are generally protected by strips of steel embedded and held in the concrete with a layer of tarred felt between them. This of course, increases the cost of the pavement, but is necessary as otherwise the edges of the concrete at the joint wear very badly.

I estimate that a concrete pavement built of first class materials, with protected joints will cost at least $1.70 per square yard, built by day labour and without guarantee.

Bituminous Pavements.

Under this heading come pavements of several different types. The simplest type is based on the old macadam idea. A foundation is prepared by grading and rolling. On this foundation a macadam base is laid and well rolled. From this point on details vary. Usually the macadam base is covered by a two inch layer of crushed stone coated with tar preparation or asphalt and compacted by rolling; on this layer a wearing surface of smaller hard stone, also coated with tar or asphalt is laid to a depth of from 3-4 to 1 1-2 inches and rolled. On the top of this, fine stone and dust is spread thinly and rolled in.

Another type is built in practically the same way as our present asphaltic concrete pavement. A concrete base is laid, and a coating of bituminous material spread over it; on this a layer of fine stone and dust is laid; and on this coarse stone to form the wearing surface. Before rolling a certain amount per square yard of hot tar or asphalt is sprayed over the coarse stone. The surface is then well rolled. After rolling a seal coat of tar or asphalt is sprayed over the surface and fine stone spread over it. This is again rolled until perfectly compact. This is what is called the penetration method.

The surface may also be mixed with the tar or asphalt in a mixer and laid on the concrete base in a manner similar to an ordinary asphalt pavement and rolled. This is a little more expensive but in my opinion makes a better job, as each particle of stone is sure to be well coated.

These pavements have the advantage of being fairly quiet, easy on horses, fairly easy to clean, are not slippery, are of good colour and are easy to repair. They can be built by the penetration method without an expensive plant.

They will not last as long as the higher priced pavements, as the materials used and the method of construction are not of the same quality.

Patented Brands.

There are a number of patented bituminous mixtures on the market such as "Tarvia," "Pioneer Brand," etc., which can be bought at a reasonable price and are far superior to ordinary tar for the construction of these pavements.

The estimated cost of this type of pavement is about $1.55 per square yard, built by day labour, without guarantee.

3. Roemac Pavement.

This is a type of pavement of which the principle is entirely different from the foregoing. It is a macadam road with a special surface. This surface is constructed as follows:

On the macadam base, fine limestone dust and screenings mixed with the Roemac solution is laid to the depth of about 1-4 inch for each inch of depth of the wearing surface.

For a three inch surface this cost is 3-4 inch. The stone comprising the wearing surface is then laid on this coat to the desired thickness and rolled into the mixture of Roemac and dust flushes up to the surface. The surface is then dusted over with fine limestone and dust and rolled again.

The Roemac solution is composed largely of a silicate which unites with the carbonate of lime in the limestone dust, forming in time an artificial stone.

This pavement has been laid in a number of Canadian cities in the last five years, and is still in a rather experimental stage. I have not seen it myself, but judge that its life is comparatively short. It should make a pleasing and satisfactory road while it lasts. It can be laid by day labour without any plant except such as we t would probably cost about $1.35 per square yard by day labour, without guarantee.

There are numerous variations on the above types of pavements, some of which are patented, but the principle is the same in all.

It seems to me that the only real way to judge these pavements is to try them. I would recommend that a section of some street be selected where the traffic is uniform and conditions as to foundation, etc., as near alike as possible. On this street lay trial sections of the different types of pavement of not less than 750 square yards area. In this way an idea can be formed as to the comparative first cost at once, and later an opinion formed as to the merits of the respective types.

All these pavements can be laid by day labour without any great expense for plant.

In concluding his report, City Engineer Parsons say: I have not considered or discussed the more expensive forms of pavement such as asphalt, brick, stone ,wood-block, etc.

SOUGHT TO STOP WAR.

Turkish Officers In Conspiracy at Erzerum Were Arrested.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 18.—A special correspondent of The Bourse Gazette reports from Tiflis that after Enver Pasha left Erzerum for Constantinople following the defeat of the Turkish armies, a military conspiracy was discovered and a number of officers were arrested.

Meetings had been held secretly with the object of stopping the war. Fifteen officers were handed over to a court-martial.

In the recent fighting in the Trans-Cherok region the Turks used exclusively either nondescript slugs of lead or German dumdum bullets.

In their retreat before the Russian troops in that region the Turks are carrying off all the women and children.

BRITAIN WILL TAKE DRASTIC STEPS TO STARVE GERMANY

In Reply to Protest British Foreign Secretary Refers to Retaliatory Actions Against Germany But Does Not Reveal Their Nature

LONDON, Feb. 18. — Sir Edward Grey, in a statement issued here last night, intimates that owing to the German submarine campaign against merchant shipping, Great Britain in reprisal will take drastic action that will eclipse any previous doings with neutral commerce directed to Germany. Owing to the breach of all previous rules of warfare, openly proclaimed in the Berlin decree concerning the torpedoing of neutral vessels in British waters, Britain will probably retaliate by cutting off all commerce from Germany. This will be done even at the risk of alienating neutral sentiment, Britain determines.

On the eve of the threatened German blockade, British shipping men have assumed a watchful, waiting policy, though waiting in this instance means not cancellation of sailings, but waiting to see if the Germans pull off their well-advertised show. Some continental ferry services have been temporarily suspended, including the Dutch mail boat from Flushing to England to-day. At the continental offices of the South Eastern, Great Eastern, South Western and London & Brighton Railways, no changes of cross-channel services are announced. In the last few days a large number of vessels cleared from ports in Great Britain, but whether the work was rushed to get them away from home waters before Thursday is a matter of speculation.

An official of one transatlantic line said yesterday; "It is my personal opinion that Germany is not intending to sink Atlantic liners with Americans aboard, despite all their bluster. What I think they hope to do is to sink a number of smaller British craft, believing that by so doing they will demoralize shipping entirely. If that is their belief, it is doomed to disappointment. So far as I know, not a single sailing of any regular liners has been cancelled. We are doing some watchful waiting to see what turns up."

Will Keep Up Blockade.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Great Britain's second and complete reply to the American note of protest, which on Dec. 28 last asked for an early improvement in the treatment of American commerce by the British fleet, was made public last night by mutual agreement between the State Department and the British Foreign Office.

The note, addressed to Ambassador Page by Sir Edward Grey under date of Feb. 10, denies that the depression in American industries is due to the activity of the British fleet, and suggests among other causes the shortage of shipping facilities, the consequent diminution of the cotter trade and destruction by submarine mines, "laid by the enemy indiscriminately," of many neutral vessels.

After giving a lengthy and detailed answer to the charge that American ships and cargoes were being unduly detained, the communication contains in its concluding paragraph the announcement that Great Britain intends to take retaliatory measures against the German submarine campaign against enemy ships, but does not reveal their nature.

Conceding that foodstuffs intended for the civil population of a country are not contraband, the British Government point out that "in any country in which there exists such tremendous organization for war as now obtains in Germany there is no clear division between those whom the Government are responsible for feeding and those whom they are not."

"It will still be our endeavor," says the final paragraph, "to avoid injury and loss to neutrals, but the announcement by the German Government of their intention to sink merchant vessels and their cargoes without verification of their nationality or character, and without making any provision for the safety of non-combatant crews or giving them a chance of saving their lives, has made it necessary for his Majesty's Government to consider what measures they should adopt to protect their interests. It is impossible for one belligerent to depart from rule and precedents and for the other remain bound by them."

LATE FANNIE CROSBY—Well known hymn writer author of 6,000 hymns, who died at her home in Bridgeport, Conn., on Feb. 12th in her 95th year. She was unable to read by the letter system, having to get all her knowledge from her remarkable memory. She has been blind since birth.

RUSSIAN ARMIES AWAIT HUGE GERMAN ONSLAUGHT

With Eight to Ten More Army Corps the Teutonic Forces Are Preparing an Offensive Over a Front of Seven Hundred Miles

LONDON, Feb. 18. — The Daily News has the following from its correspondent in Petrograd:

"I now have received information which tends to clear up a situation hitherto rather difficult to understand. The Germans are preparing a general attack along the whole Russian strategic front, more than seven hundred miles in extent. The enormous power developed by Germany in this attempt is eloquent of long years of preparation. After a mad attempt to break through the Russian defence at a salient point of the line at Borzimoff, the Germans advanced in East Prussia in overwhelming strength. I am informed they were ten to one against the Russian force, which for months past quietly pushed forward to this region. The Russians were fully aware of this movement and made no serious attempt to check it. On the contrary, they moved forward a strong cavalry screen through the region on right bank of the lower Vistula, which at one time penetrated into German territory, and at the same time developed a sudden activity in the region of the Masurian Lakes, with the object of fixing the Germans in their determination to attack in this direction. Apparently the Germans originally estimated the force necessary for their purpose here at four new army corps, in addition to the men already holdings positions in East Prussia at Cadres, for these four corps were quietly withdrawn from the armies on the western front and the numbers filled up from new levies in the interior of Germany.

"When, however, the Russians began making a show of renewed activity over the wide front, extending from the Lower Vistula to Tilsit, the Germans doubled this original estimate.

From eight to ten German army corps now are believed to have been concentrated in East Prussia and launched upon the region north of the Vistula and eastward towards Niemen. They came on like an avalanche, a veritable German lightning stroke. But the Russians foresaw the entire manoeuvre. They retired betimes, leaving adequate forces of admirable light horse to carry on a running fight along the line of the advance of the Germans.

"The position at the present moment is that fighting has already taken place around Augustovo, while the German line north of the lower Vistula has reached Plock and Racionez, about a couple of marches from the fortress of Novo Georgievik.

"Northwest of Warsaw between the lower and upper reaches of the Vistula, the front remains where it was three months ago, and the situation here is briefly: The Germans cannot and the Russians will not advance to the main battlefield.

"The present campaign, however, is now in the Carpathians, where matters appear entirely in Russia's hands. Their right is steadily advancing there, while the centre and left continue to crush every German attack. In Bukowina, the enemies' forces have occupied Nadvorna and crossed the River Sereth. Germanic armies are thus attempting to turn both flanks of the Russians' seven-hundred mile front, which is now almost in the shape of a parabola, with Borzimoff, indicating the apex. Its sides extend to infinity, while all points on its line are equadistant from certain points. The inexhaustible supply of Russia's splendid fighting material, presents an infinity for all practical purposes, while the convenience for a front for those inside the curve is obvious. Germanic armies are outside."

Warring On The Snipers

Patricias Made Special Foes of Murderous Sharpshooters

NORTHERN FRANCE, Feb. 18.—(Canadian Associated Press Cable.)—The Canadian contingent, the safe arrival of which in France has just been announced by the Colonial Secretary, would in any case have met with a great reception at the front, but after what has been accomplished by the Princess Patricia's Regiment, they were certain to be received with more than ordinary enthusiasm.

Nothing but praise is heard concerning the achievements of the Princess Pats. Reports of their splendid work are just filtering through from the trenches and in the severe fighting in which they have been engaged, they have made for themselves a high reputation.

Not only have they won distinction for what they have accomplished as a combined force, acting in concert with the English army, but they have achieved fame for the manner in which they have carried out duties requiring not only courage, but individual resourcefulness.

German snipers were very active in the section where the Canadians were engaged. "So the Pats got busy," remarked the officer who had just returned from their quarters. "The men from the west include many excellent shots, and from their work one would almost conclude they have that intuition which enables them to scent the location of snipers. Be that as it may, the pests were given a bad time.

"A number of officers and men of the Canadian regiment undertook the task of discovering snipers who were harassing their movements. In this they achieved a remarkable measure of success, especially as the snipers found themselves sniped."

Maximum Sentence Imposed.

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—Chief Justice Mulock, presiding judge at the criminal assizes in the City Hall, sentenced Robert Brown to life imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiary yesterday morning. Brown was found not guilty of murdering his wife, but guilty of attempting to murder Norman Smith by shooting him on Nov. 19 last.

The prisoner's counsel, R. H. Holmes, made application for a stated case but it was refused.

Mr. Jeffrey Unaware That Head Office Sanctioned Checking of His Inventory

The incident at yesterday's session of the Arbitration Board arising out of Mr. Jeffrey's refusal to divulge the name of the employee of the Peterborough Light & Power Co. who checked over his first inventory of the expropriated system, collapsed system, collapsed this morning as completely and suddenly as the recent overnight aeroplane episode at Brockville.

Mr. Jeffrey stated this morning that his figures pertaining to size and quantity of wire, particularly, had been checked over by Mr. W. H. Munro and as a personal favour. Mr. Jeffrey did not know yesterday when he was giving his evidence that Mr. Munro had first obtained permission from the head office of the company in Toronto to give him this information.. Hence, remembering that the checking had been a personal favour and not a concession to the Hydro-Electric Commission, Mr. Jeffrey refused to tell Mr. Tilley who had assisted him.

The point was altogether cleared up and yesterday's deletion by Mr. Jeffrey was found unnecessary.

Last night when members of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. met, the question arose as to whet Jeffrey was beclouding in his evidence. The president remarked that surely no employee had been bribed, and in order to clear up the matter Mr. Jeffrey was approached. It was then found that the information he had withheld not only completely known to the company, but also that Mr. Munro had received the full consent of the company to help Mr. Jeffrey. The latter doubtless did not know that Mr. Munro had first approached the Toronto office before he looked over the inventory.

Mr. Jeffrey was well known to the local company's employees, and his work here was facilitated rather than hampered by them, although his commission to Petterborough was known to them.

Presented With Watch

Friends Say Good-bye to Pte. Wm. McLaughlin of the 8th C.M.R.

A most enjoyable affair was held at the residence of Mr. Robert McLaughlin, 235 Concession street, when some one hundred friends of Mr. McLaughlin's brother, Pte. Wm. McLaughlin of "B" Squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles, gathered to wish him Godspeed. The evening was a great success, the guests spending a thoroughly enjoyable time in dancing and music. Supper was served at midnight. During the evening Pte. McLaughlin was presented with a handsome wrist-watch. He is a member of L.O.L. No. 90, and the County Lecturer, Bro. Jas. Davis, wished him every success on behalf of the Orangemen of Peterborough.

Indians on the War Path.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 18. — Fifty heavily-armed men headed by U. S. Marshal Mebeker, set out at daybreak to give battle to fifty Piute Indians from the reservation in Southwestern Utah, who went upon the war path.

The Indians, equipped with plenty of provisions and ammunition, are entrenched in the mountains. A number of whites who attempted to approach the Indians' stronghold to open a parley, were driven off and a desperate fight between Marshal Mebeker's posse and the Piutes seemed inevitable.

German Submarines Instructed to Make a Clean Job

LONDON, Feb. 18. — The Copenhagen correspondent of The London Daily News wires: From Hamburg it is learned that the German submarines which are to engage in the blockade of the English coast have received detailed instructions how to act. These instructions state that the blockade of Britain gives the submarines the right to regard all merchantmen found within the blockaded area for the purpose of conveying anything to Britain as enemy ships engaged in illegal operations. The submarines are to approach the merchantmen, if possible, without being seen and torpedo them immediately without the slightest examination regarding their nationality or in any way concerning themselves as to the fate of the crew.

Neutral vessels which break a blockade have no rights at all, according to international law, and it is understood the desire is that the crews of the torpedoed ships shall perish, so there may be left no evidence regarding the fate of the ships. The German authorities believe the disappearance, with all hands, of many merchantmen will produce a most terrorizing effect.

It is reported the Kaiser will arrive at Wilhelmshaven to-day. The general belief is that he is going to Heligoland to direct the blockade personally. In a few weeks, the rumor adds, he may even go farther than Heligoland.

FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF THE INCANDESCENT STREET LIGHTING

Mr. Tilley continued the cross-examination of the city's witness, Mr. R. T. Jeffrey, this morning raking his estimates at different points along the line. Whenever he showed signs of running short of ammunition, his corps of experts usually had full magazine cases.

Mr. Almert and Mr. Sayce, the Chicago experts, follow the proceedings closely, and Mr. A. B. Colville, assistant counsel for the company, is also in the Tilley ranks with other experts guarding the lines of communication and materially assisting in preparing figures and engaged in divers duties arising out of the evidence.

Reverting to Mr. Jeffrey's criticism of the incandescent lighting of some streets, Mr. Tilley asked Mr. Jeffrey if there was anything serious regarding the lamps burning all day.

It takes more power and you lose on the cost of operating and maintenance, the witness replied.

Against that you have a good deal of extra sawing in plant, Mr. Tilley observed.

You have the extra wire and cost of relays, Mr. Jeffrey answered. He admitted that the features mentioned did not depreciate the particular plant. But to arrange the system so as to cut off the power in the day time would be like putting new wine in old bottles. It would be connecting up the new part with the older part of the system.

Mr. Jeffrey claimed that the power used for the incandescent lamp could be sold during the day. But, he stated to Mr. Tilley, not unless there was a demand for the power.

Wilhelmina's Fate In Balance.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A. G. Hays, representing the owners of the Wilhelmina and cargo, returned yesterday from inspecting the ship at Falmouth and called on the American Ambassador and consul-general for information concerning the status of the Wilhelmina.

The British Foreign Office has made no reply to Ambassador Page's representation that the cargo was destined for civilians in Germany. Additional evidence respecting the cargo is on the way from the United States. It is not likely that there will be a decision until this arrives.

Song Recital By Former Local Boy

Sudbury Star Refers to Singing of Mr. Joseph L. Mercier

Referring to a song recital given in Sudbury, recently, by Mr. Joseph L. Mercier, a former Peterborough boy, the Sudbury News has the following to say:

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. Joseph Mercier held a song recital at Mrs. Edward L. Casey's studio, in the Morin Block. Mr. Mercier was in splendid voice and the guests, who had the pleasure of hearing him, were delighted with his rich, musical voice. Mrs. Casey sang two very charmig songs, and it is unnecessary to mention that a hearty encore was accorded in both cases. Mr. E. A. Hill, as accompanist, assisted materially towards the success of the afternoon. A delicious tea was served by the senior pupils at the conclusion of the recital. The following is the song cycle splendidly rendered by Mr. Mercier:

Indian Love Lyrics, by Laurence Hope, from the Garden of Kama, music by Amy Woodforde Finden.
1—The Temple Bells.
2—Less Than the Dust.
3—Kashmuri Song.
4—Till I Wake.

Innegriomo, from Cavaliera Rusticana (Mascagni).
Le Rossire (Nevin).
Il Balen Del Suo Sorriso (Verdi).

A Difficult Feat.

Of the many wonderful feats performed by Hindu jugglers, one of the most remarkable is the egg dance. Usually it is executed by a girl, fantastically dressed. She makes use of a willow wheel, around which at equal distances are threads, and, at the end of each thread there is a noose, held open by a bead.

This wheel the girl places on her head, while she carries a basket of eggs on her arm. When the music strikes up she begins to dance, and the wheel begins to spin round. She then takes an egg from the basket, places it in one of the thread nooses, and throws it from her with sufficient force to draw the knot tight. The spinning of the wheel keeps the thread stretched, with the egg at the end of it.

She then takes another egg from the basket, places it in another noose, and repeats this until there is an egg in every noose. Her fantastic costume, her perfect motion, and all the eggs swinging on stretched threads at once, present a curious sight.

It requires much art to execute the dance, for one false step would cause the eggs to be dashed together and the dancer to be disgraced.

After dancing for some time with all the eggs swinging round her head, she takes them out of the nooses one by one, all the time keeping the wheel balanced and in motion, and again places them in the basket on her arm. After the performance the spectators are allowed to examine the eggs to see that they are real.

The Talkative Husband.

The Petit Parisien has a curious and rather amusing instance of the discretion of the military authorities at the present moment. A young Parisian woman received at her house a letter, on the envelope of which she recognized the handwriting of her husband now serving at the front. She eagerly tore open the envelope, only to find that it was empty, but in the corner of the envelope, in a hand quite unfamiliar to her, was written the laconic message, "Madame, your husband is quite well, but he is too communicative." The young wife understood that her husband's letter must have been intercepted by the military authorities.

His Honour Judge Huycke Entertained to Visiting Lawyers and Members of Arbitration Board

His Honour Judge Huycke entertained the members of the Arbitration Board and the different lawyers who are in the city in connection with the arbitration proceedings of the City versus Peterborough Light and Power Company, as well as a couple of local friends of some of the visitors, to an informal dinner at his home in East City on Tuesday evening last. His Honour Judge Huyce is chairman of the Board of Arbitrators.

Those present were, Mr. D. A. Ross, Montreal, arbitrator for the City, Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., of Toronto, for the Company, Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., of Toronto, representing the City, Mr. Wm. Tilley of Toronto, and Mr. A. B. Colville, of Campbellford, representing the Company, Mr. Strachan Johnston, of Toronto, the bond-holders, City Solicitor G. N. Gordon, former City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, Messrs. W. G. Morrow, R. W. Travers and P. Campbell.

Mr. R. A. Ross, of Montreal, who is arbitrator for the City, is a son-in-law of Dr. J. T. S. Halliday, 457 Water Street, and while in the city is a guest at his home. Dr. Halliday was invited to be present at His Honour Judge Huycke's on Tuesday evening, but was unable to do so.

Underground Postmen.

Parliament recently gave permission to the postoffice authorities to construct a miniature underground tube railway for the purpose of conveying letters and parcels across London in half the time formerly taken. In two tubes, nine feet in diameter, little, electrically-propelled trucks will run and parcels and mail-bags will be stacked on them. The first postal tube is to be constructed between Paddington and the Eastern District Office at Whitechapel.

Driven by electric current, controlled by switches at intermediate stations, the mail trains will not need drivers. The will hurtle through the tubes at about twenty miles an hour, carrying the mails from point to point in half the time that motor-vans threading their way through traffic in the streets above would take.

New Taxation—A Summary of the Dominion Budget

The budget speech of the Hon. W. T. White at the opening of Parliament and the new taxes for which it provides, will bring home to the people of Canada something of the cost of the war and that that cost must be borne by the common people of the land. First and foremost there is an all-round increase of 7 1-2 per cent. in the general and 5 per cent. in the British preferential tariff, while the free list is abolished save for certain specified articles, among which are five specific agricultural implements,—reapers, binders, mowers, harvesters and ditching machines. It is estimated that these tariff increases will yield an increase in revenue of $20,000,000 to $25,000,000.

AN INNOVATION—DIRECT TAXES

Special direct taxes are provided for as follows:

1 per cent. on the note circulation of all banks.

1 per cent. of the gross revenue of every trust and loan company doing business in Canada.

1 per cent. of all the premiums paid to insurance companies, other than life, fraternal, benefit and marine insurance.

1 cent on each cable or telegraph despatch or message originating in Canada, on which the charge is 15c. or more. Companies are authorized to collect from the sender of the message.

5 cents on every railway or steamship ticket costing over $1 and up to $5 and five cents for each additional $5 of cost.

10 cents on parlour car seats and sleeping car berths. Again the companies will collect the additional tell from the travelling public.

$1 on steamship tickets, costing up to $10 to all points other than in Canada or the West Indies.

$2 for steamship berths costing up to $30 and $5 for berths over that amount.

STAMP TAXES ON CHEQUES, LETTERS, ETC.

2 cents stamp tax on all cheques, receipts to banks by depositors and upon bills of exchange passing through a bank.

2 cents upon all Express and Postoffice Money Orders; 1 cent on postal notes.

1 cent war stamp tax on every letter and postal card posted in Canada.

2 cent stamp on every bill of lading.

1 cent on each 10 cents of the selling price of proprietary or patent medicines and perfumery sold in Canada.

Special taxes are imposed on wines and champagnes. Upon wine, non-sparkling, for every bottle or package containing one quart or less, 5 cents, and each additional quart 5 cents. Upon champagne or sparkling wine sold in Canada upon every bottle containing one quart or less 5 cents and each additional quart 5 cents.

These special direct taxes are estimated to produce $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 of revenue.

WHOOPING COUGH KILLS 10,000 CHILDREN ANNUALLY IN AMERICA

Whooping cough kills 10,000 children in the United States each year.

If these children were cremated in school fires a wave of horror would spread over the country.

And yet, whooping cough may be counted among the diseases which are preventable — more preventable than fires.

And if bubonic plague instead of whooping cough should kill 10,000 of our children in any one year the whole world would quarantine against the United States.

Whooping cough is what is known as a communicable disease. It is transferred from the child who whoops to the child who is too weak to resist it. The sputum of the person having the disease in any stage is its chief means of communication. Therefore, any action which will tend to inhale or imbibe this sputum in any quantity whatever should be eliminated.

Under proper treatment the course of whooping cough may be abortened and the suffering reduced. Also proper care greatly reduces the chance for complications ensuing.

No "whooping cough germ" has been isolated though many have claimed to have discovered the bacteria which causes it. For the reason that whooping cough and measles have a tendency to appear coincidentally, it has always been thought that the two are co-related.

It is likely, however, that the only relationship between the two lies in their habit of breeding in unhygienic condition which predispose to their spread.

Do not let a child go near a case of whooping cough.

This is especially important to be observed. Children are in much greater danger of death from whooping cough than are adults; but persons often get and spread the disease and sometimes die from it.

Mild cases in adults may cause fatal cases among children. Unless your services are needed, keep away from the disease yourself. If you do visit a case bathe yourself and change and disinfect your clothing, hair and hands before you go where there is a child.

Do not permit any person or thing, or a dog, cat or other animal to come from a case of whooping cough to a child. No cat or dog should be permitted to enter a sick room.

Beware of any person who has a sore throat.

Do not kiss or come near to such a person. Do not drink from the same cup, blow the same whistle, or put his pencil in your mouth.

Some folks call it hives, others call it "winter itch," but, call it what you will, that itching, smarting sensation so many people feel in cold weather is decidedly irritating. Hot dry air causes the trouble. Raise the humidity of the living rooms and the itching will soon disappear. Frequent baths — say three times a week in warm water — will help, and a light smear of some grease—cold cream or vaseline—will relieve the itching sensation—Erie Despatch.

AT AGE OF 70 WOMAN WANTS A POSITION

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—"Well, I'm not as smart as I thought I was," said an aged woman with a pleasant grandmother face, addressing Lieutenant Frye at the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station, last night. She said she was seventy, and despite the fact that she was footsore from tramping two days and a night and wet through with the rain, she was smiling and cordial.

"I'll have to give up, I guess, at least for a while," she continued. "I've been walking up and down this wonderful city, asking everybody if they had some work for me. But they all seem to think I'm too old a lady to do much. They're wrong, for I can work and do lots of it, but I haven't been able to make them think so.

"Now I'm tired and I haven't money and I wonder if you can let me sleep in a chair here so I can be fresh to start out again in the morning. I don't want to walk all night again."

She said she was Mrs. Agnes Coleman and that her niece, Mrs. H. H. Small, lived at No. 53 Passaic Avenue, Clifton, N.J. The police there were notified and she was sent to the Municipal Lodging House. She had a book showing a deposit of $100 in the Bowery Savings Bank made twenty years ago.

"Yes, I put that there so there would be something to pay my funeral expenses," she said. "That must not be touched. I don't want to be a burden to any one."

Clifton, N.J., and it's a shame the way I've been imposing on the poor girl. So, I decided I would just strike out for myself and find something.

"So, ever since yesterday morning

Weighing Words.

An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."

Good advice and fortunately followed by nearly all our local advertisers.

THE ENEMY ENDEAVOURS TO REGAIN LOST GROUND

There Are No Reports of Losses to Merchant Fleet as Yet

BELIEVE GERMANY WILL STRIKE FOR BIG CARGOES

At Least 100 Vessels Due Within "Prohibited Zone" Between Now and Monday Morning---Channel Traffic as Usual

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 19.—(Special cable).—England still waits for the first report of losses to her merchant fleet through German submarine activity. With a proclaimed blockade already in existence for 36 hours, Lloyds has no record of any steamers overdue.

The Admiralty professes to have no report of any attacks on any vessels anywhere. And it is announced to-day at noon that up to the present, gone of the fleet of guardships, which present an iron ring around the British Isles, has "been engaged." But there is no way of ascertaining whether the presence of hostile submarines has been reported in British waters. The government has prohibited the publication of any reports dealing with the presence of submarines or their activity, "except as is announced in official statements of the Admiralty," and the British Press is rigidly adhering to that rule.

The channel traffic continues as usual. The regular boats are making their trips on schedule, although some of them have slightly changed their [illegible] not expected that they will be attacked for the present. There is not the slightest doubt in the minds of the leaders of Britain's sea traffic that the Germans intend to confine their activities to big cargo carrying liners, now en route to various British ports carrying thousands of tons of foodstuffs. At least 100 vessels of all descriptions are due within what the Germans have termed the "prohibited zone" between now and Monday morning, and that some of them are to fall victims to a hostile torpedo is believed certain.

WAITING DEVELOPMENTS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—"Watchful waiting" was this government's policy to-day towards its international problems, particularly towards Germany's "death zone decree." "We want to wait a little to see how that plan develops," said one official. The administration did not regard the relations between the United States and Germany as ominous as previously. Yet some officials admitted that there is still much gravity to the situation.

Germany's profession of friendship led authorities to believe that that nation will exercise every precaution not to sink American merchantmen.

Still, they admitted that with British ships flying the stars and stripes some vessels may easily be mistaken.

The strong point on which this government rested its securer feeling, was the belief that German submarines cannot operate as far as the Irish Sea, which Liverpool-bound shipping must navigate, and that they must confine their activities against England's "hunger ally" solely to commerce and troop ships across the English Channel.

Judge Whips Wife-Beater

Left Bench and Thrashes Accused Before Sending Him to Jail

WILKESBARRF, Pa., Feb. 19. — After Mrs. John Kotch had testified that her husband had blackened her eyes Justice of the Peace Miller left his bench at Swoyersville and attacked the husband. He thrashed Kotch so soundly that both his eyes were discoloured, his nose broken and his body bruised.

Resuming his position on the bench, the Justice of the Peace said:

"Now that I have given to you a dose of your own medicine, I order you locked up until you give a pledge not to beat your wife again."

Kotch, however, was sullen and was locked in a cell. He insisted that this was a free country and that his citizenship papers gave to him the right to beat his wife if he so desired.

Charts of Submarines

British Skippers Informed as to Distinguishing Signs

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Just as the countryside was pracarded with descriptions and cuts of the British and German air craft when air raids were uppermost in the public mind, illustrations showing British and German submarines are now being distributed to acquaint the skippers of merchant vessels with the appearance of their own and hostile undersea vessels, so that they will not fire on or ram a British submersible by mistake.

In many quarters the demand is increasing that masters of ships held up or threatened by submarines should be allowed to use offensive measures, and various private rewards, totalling several thousand pounds, still stand to be taken down by the first British skipper destroying one.

It is not known what the Admiralty instructions to skippers are, although a hint of what is expected of them was found in the recent decoration of the captain of the British steamer Laertes, who refused to surrender to a German submarine.

Process For Making Gasoline

New Chemical Find by Pittsburg Chemist an Achievement

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—A process for making gasoline out of "synthetic crude oil has been discovered by Dr. Walter O. Snelling, a research chemist of Pittsburg, who was for many years in charge of explosive experiments for the United States Government, according to an announcement he made at the one hundred and tenth meeting of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, in the Engineering Building.

The discovery, made after five years of constant experiment, was discussed with interest by members of the institute, most of whom said it was important because they regarded the discoverer's claims as worthy.

The details of the new method were not explained fully enough to show whether gasoline can be produced more cheaply. Dr. Snelling resigned his Government position to conduct his experiments, and for two years has been employed and financed by John T. Millikin, a rich oil man of St. Louis.

OPERATIONS IN BUKOWINA

Conflicting Reports Regarding Successes--One Report Says Russians Have Been Forced to Abandon Austrian Crown Lands

MENACE WARSAW

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Conflicting reports are received to-day regarding Russian operations in Bukowina. The correspondents of the Daily Mail and Times in Bucharest confirm Austrian claims that Russians have been forced to abandon all Austrian Crown land. Both say Russians found themselves not only confronted by an overwhelming force on their front, but also in dangar of a flank attack and that "successful strategic retreat" was put into effect. On the other hand Martin Donohue, correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, telegraphing from Marmornitza, on the Russian frontier, claims that the Russians have beaten off an attack by a combined Austro-German army and have successfully held Czernowitz, the Bukowina capital. He declares that the region is now clear of the enemy.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 19.—The fighting in Northern Poland has attained to a "climax of stubbornness," in the words of last night's official statement from the Russian general staff. The most intense engagements now proceeding in this section of the eastern war theatre are at the two extremities of the front, in the region of Augustowo, Suwalki Province, and on the right bank of the Vistula along the roads from Sierpec to Plonsk. The last mentioned place is about 15 miles from the fortress of Nowo Georgiewsk, nad less than 40 miles to the northwest of Warsaw.

The new German advance towards the Polish capital appears to be directed wholly on the Vistula's right bank. On the left bank, west and southwest of Warsaw, the scene of the enemy's furious onslaughts against the Bzura-Rawka defences last month, the Russian commander-in-chief announces last night that there has been "no fighting."

In the Carpathians heavy fighting continues, and the Russian staff claims to have repulsed all the Austro-German attacks, especially on the upper courses of the San River, and to have made a number of successful counter-attacks in the mountain passes.

Last Night's Bulletins on The War

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 18.— Another Zeppelin was wrecked in the storm off here this afternoon. It fell into the sea. Four of the crew were drowned and eleven were saved and interned. This is the third German Zeppelin destroyed in two days.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Up till nine p.m., London time, there have been no reports of ships sunk by German submarines.

ROME, Feb. 18.—Parliament reconvened to-day, accompanied by pro-war riots at many points. Troops had to be ordered out to disperse the crowds and there were several fatalities.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(Midnight.) — Vast crowds thronged the vicinity of the War Office and Admiralty to-night to get fresh news of German submarine raids. Two rumours that three submarines had been sunk and one capture trying to torpedo lines in the Irish Sea had no confirmation at this hour.
